Ice hockey in 1st season

by Craig Corey

The Maryville College Ice Hockey team will begin its first season this year with a two game stand against the Jniversity of Tennessee, at the Ice Chalet in Knoxville Friday and Saturday Nights at midnight.

Maryville College hockey was the idea of sophomores Greg Hosler, Craig Corey, and Maryville College alumni player-coach Jim Dewhurst.

The team has been diligently working since after Christmas break every Thursday night with scrimmage games against the Knoxville City Mens League. The team looks for strong defensive play from Yoh Yamazaki and Jim Dewhurst along with Kevin Reiley, and a solid forward line of sophomores Greg Hosler, and Craig Corey and Freshman Greg Howells. The much improved goaltending of freshman Bob Steinback will help the team a great deal, and will also make for a good game.

To help pay for the ice time, the team is sponsoring a fan caravan to the Friday night game at $2.00 per ticket. The Caravan will leave school Friday at aproximately 10:30 p.m.

The team wants and truly needs the student support at the game, and hooters will be greatly appreciated.

Three grapplers participate

Three Maryville grapplers John Lacava, Kelly Beninger, and Dan Hayes participated in the South East Intercollegiate University Wrestling Association (S.E.I.W.A.) last Thursday at the University of the South.

The tough competition included Auburn, Alabama, Florida, and Middle Tennessee State University.

Lacava (134lb.) finished with a 2-2 record, Hayes (167lb.) 1-2, and Beninger (142 lb.) 0-2. The Scot's next encounter is this Friday at Tennessee Tech University.

dle East, and Southeast Asia. His clinics, which he presents to students and teachers of the saxophone, are considered innovative for their use of audio-visual materials.

Two longtime interests of Dr. Wyman are research on acoustics of the saxophone and the application of laser optics to the visualization of music. He has developed a laser tonoscope which is useful in teaching the tuning of harmonic intervals.

Scots bow to St. Andrews

The Maryville College men's basketball squad lost a 74-64 decision to Saint Andrews College, North Carolina last Saturday night. Byrd's squad will entertain the Washington and Lee Generals this afternoon at 3:00 p.m.

"They outrebounded us and really hurt us on the offensive boards," commented head coach Rick Byrd. "The first half they really did a good defensive job."

The Scots trailed by a 24-21 tally at half-time but later got into trouble as three starters fouled out and M.C. committed 27 fouls. The Knights connected on 20 of 27 free throws for the game.

Senior co-captain Wayne Emme ledall scorers as he hooped 27 points for Maryville. Wade Edmond added 13, Rich Suttle 8, and Rodney Nelson 8 to Maryville's cause. The Scots dropped to 6-15.

of Copeland and Carnegie residents.

Despite what they may say or admit, Maryville men do like air-headed or spacy girls. Seriously! Dating was up 50% between Davis and Carnegie after Davis girls began advertising their spaciness on their new tee-shirts. Want a Carnegie man? Act or be spacy. Most guys at MC are on ego trips and spacy girls really help the ego.

As for the actual dating – well, that's another matter altogether. Many Maryville men are "poor college boys". So don't complain when they take you to Burger King after the Valentine's Dance. Also, chances are that the dateable-type guy is afraid of rejection. Maryville men are terribly peer-oriented and try very hard to be cool and laid-back and to be turned down would really blow their cool!

All in all it's a risky business girls. Just stick it out and hope for the best. Good Hunting!

Q. What is the difference between a High School Sophomore and a Maryville man?

A. The high school sophomore doesn't dip Copenhagen on the first date.

All suggestions for a Part II will be seriously considered. Please submit all suggestions to box 1774. Thanks.

school that neglects what he sees as law schools' most important task: cultivating a sense of injustice in their students. Without that sense, Nader believes, lawyers will now know how to seek justice. Law professors are bright, but terribly narrow and conservative. He places the blame on the profession's "insensitivity" directly on their shoulders. "There is no such thing", Nader counsels, "as a no-fault professor."

Attitudes Change

As a result, as law professor Roger Fisher once wrote in a famous critique of legal education, a change in students' attitudes becomes apparent as they progress through law school. "I would guess," Fisher wrote, "that among entering first-year students, a high percentage would express interest in public service, in politics . . . in making the world a better place. I would venture . . . that among the third-year graduating students this percentage is far less . . .Is the law school also a school in cynicism?"

Nader abviously thinks so , and is asking those same third-year students to enlist in the Equal Justice Foundation. To join, they must pledge one percent of their salary for at least a year.

Once they do, they'll draft and lobby for legislation, work on "critical" law suits, and research various p ublic interest law issues. They will, Nader promises, be a force against the legal profession's dominant orientation toward corporate power.

No Names lead girls v-ball

The Lady Scots along with the Tusculum women practice tumbling exercises in a recent game.

Girls' intramural volleyball is off to a fast and flying start as seven teams vie for top ranking. As of February 10th., most teams had played six matches. The No Names are in first place with a 5-0 record, despite some lack of hustle and teamwork. Dorm 1 Radicals and the Davis Crew almost successfully capitalized on these faults as they gave the No Names a tough run for the money. However, the No Names were able to pull out wins with some outstanding individual effort. Don't think that the championship is decided yet because all teams play each other twice. There is still time for an upset. Some exciting competition is due in the next few weeks, so come on over to the gym on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights and watch the fun.

In past,girls' intramural competition, Las Conquistadoras won the soccer championship with a 4-1-1 record. In basketball, a tough team of Cowgirl topped the list.

As examples of possible projects, the consumer advocate mentioned the selection of judges, expanding the domain of consumer class action suits, and fighting secrecy in regulatory agencies.

He claims more than 160 students from 17 law schools have already joined the foundation, but makes no secret of having bigger things in mind. He envisions a national organization with local chapters all over the country. A few years ago in a similar vein, Nader traveled campuses proposing college-based public interest research groups (PIRGs). There are now PIRGs in 23 states. The largest is New York's group, which employs 100 full-time professionals, mainly scientists and lawyers.

Vol. 64 No. 16 | February 22, 1979 Thursday Evening | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee

Close to 700 participants ran in the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times Road Race last Sat. at MC. The money raised will be used to support minor sports at Maryville College.

Threepenny opens at theatre tonight

"The Three Penny Opera" opens tonight at 8:15 p.m. in the MC Theater. The Maryville College Playhouse will continue their performance of this hit musical thru Saturday, Feb. 24th.

This opera is set in the underworld of early Victorian London. It is a satirical, rambunctious tale of theives, beggars, loose ladies, informers, fences, and corrupt police officials. The main character is MacHeath, also known as "Mack the Knife."

Junior Wayne Arrants will play the lead role of MacHeath. Other cast members will include students and community members who have appeared in previous MC productions.

"The Threepenny Opera" was the longest-running musical show in American theater history. Its six-year run ended in New York in 1961.

Tickets are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students. They will be available at the door.

The plot tells how MacHeath's fickleness with a succession of ladies finally sends him to the gallows. His first mistake is to marry a girl named Polly Peachum in a grotesque ceremony in a stable. Her parents, the slaternly Peachum whose shop of fake beggars' props is an enterprise as black hearted as MacHeath's, conspire with one of his jilted loves, a tart named Jenny and reveal his hiding place to police.

Even jail can't stop MacHeath's seductions which include the jailer's daughter, Lucy Locket. The gallows awaits the conscienceless MacHeath, but, even as he ascend its steps, plans are underway for his escape.

Saga's seasick ship slowly starts sinking

by Wendy Magee

After four years of Saga, could this be the last? Rumor has it that MC might dispose of Saga and initiate a new food service program. This possibility, however, is not just a rumor, according to Dr. Larry Mangus.

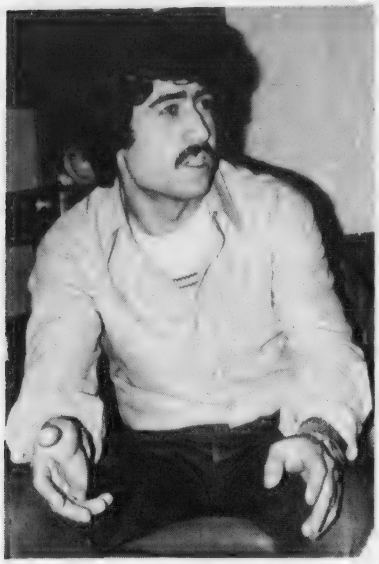
Dr. Anderson, Dr. Mangus and Jane Richardson were alarmed at the tremendous number of complaints they received concerning the present food service in their recent meetings with dorm residents. A list of the most common complaints were compiled and submitted to Carol Hows, who is in charge of MC's cafeteria, in hopes Saga would take the suggestions into consideration. In response, Saga presented Dean Mangus with a detailed proposal for changes and improvements in their program. It is this miraculous change that the administration is waiting to see take place in Saga before any final decision is made.

It is not as though Saga is the only food service willing to operate in our size school. MC has received a number of offers from various food service agencies. The most promising food service on the list is ARA—Slater. If Saga is to be disposed of, ARA will most probably take its place.

About two weeks ago, newly appointed food committee chairman Kevin Reilly, Dr. Mangus, S.M. Atchley, Jane Richardson and MC's business administrator Pete Thompson went to Carson-Newman College to observe the ARA food service that was installed there last year. They made no prior arrangements, so it was a surprise visit.

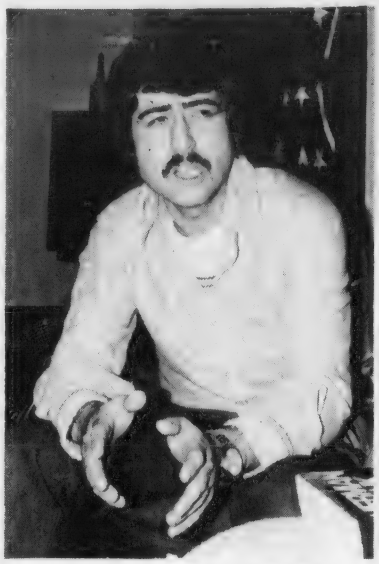
In talking with students at Carson-Newman, Reilly found them to be very pleased with the ARA system. He noticed very little waste on the plates, which indicated students like the food. Reilly stated, "I thought the food and facilities were excellent. The food was of better quality, was well prepared, it looked good, and was hot." Reilly also described the ARA system as very well organized. After the visit Dr. Mangus states, "I was very impressed with Carson-Newman's food service program."

Middle Tennessee State, East Tennessee State University, and Tennessee Wesleyan all use ARA and find it favorable. ARA also provided the food for the 1976 summer olympics in Montreal. ARA submitted a proposal to MC last year, but Saga was already under contract.



Cost is very comparable between Saga and ARA. If ARA were to be installed at MC it would not necessarily mean an increase in room and board fee; there is a possibility it might even be less. Right now the administration is interested in a quality food program for the students. Although money is important, a few pennies difference is not a major consideration.

There are a number of differences between the two food services. For instance, ARA operates on a five week menu cycle; so the same meals are not served so frequently. Saga just recently instituted a four week cycle here. They have supplied Dean Mangus with two planned out four week menu cycles. Now that the administration has a sample of the cycles, they have a basis for evaluation.



The proposal from ARA was designed specifically for MC. ARA's main objectives are to introduce greater variety into the menu, relieve monotony, satisfy student's differences in tastes and food preferences, initiate and maintain a strict sanitation program, put new life into the dining service so students will regard it

Interview: Iranian's view of the revolution

"Iran may have a lot of restrictions but behind these restrictions there is philosophy."

"I think the U.S. government has tried to raise the youngsters with what they think is freedom - - - happy with their smoking, happy with their girls, most U.S. people think of these: sexual relations and having something to smoke. They are happy; they can enjoy life."

"Khomeini has promised religious groups that they can be saved under his government."

Majid Yazdi is a freshman from Tehran, Iran. He is an engineer major and has studied two years in England. He is one of 50,000 Iranian students who have watched their revolution from this country. Many of these students face deportation as they are unable to get money from Iran to stay in school. The Echo decided to interview Majid to get his views on the situation in Iran. He wished to say that in this discussion he is representing all the Iranian students in Maryville. The interview took place on Feb. 15.

Echo: We'll open with some general questions first, Majid. Why did you leave Iran?

Majid: If you want to continue studying you must go to some other university or school. The day before I was 18 I left the country because, if I were to stay in the country, I had to join the army for the national service for two years and that would be a waste of life.

Echo: Are most Iranian students here because they were sent here to go to school, or did they leave Iran to stay out the army?

Majid: Both reasons. Mainly because we wanted an education.

Echo: Is service mandatory?

Majid: It depends. There are entrance exams to the universities. If you fail them more than twice you [males] must join the army.

Echo: Is there a real threat that you will have to leave the U.S. because of lack of funds?

Majid: It depends if my father will be able to run his job. The government is not against students that are over seas. The revolution appreciates the help of Iranian students outside of the country

Echo: We know this is vague, but what is the problem in Iran?

Majid: The problem is a long story with lots of things involved. Where do I start?

Echo: How about with the civil crisis of the last two months. If you need to go back a decade of two, go ahead.

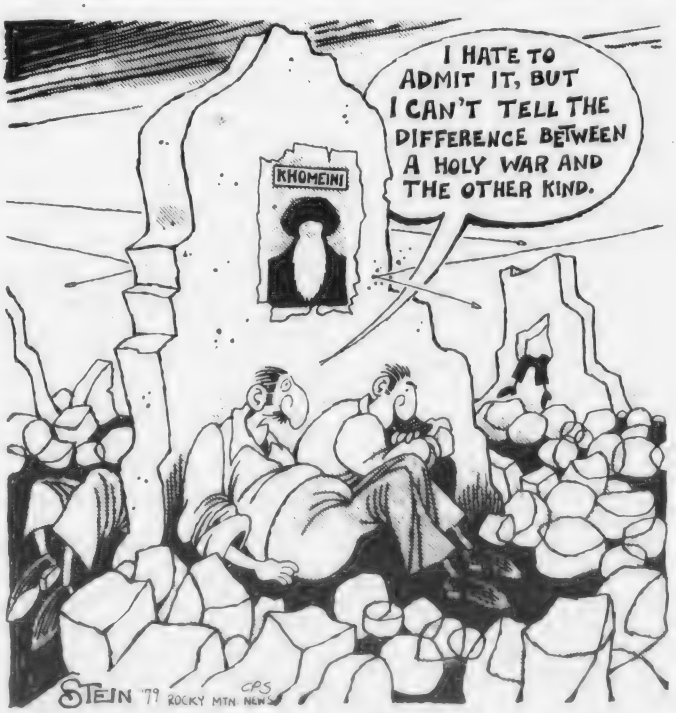
Majid: Yes, I think we need to go back. The political problem in Iran is because of the Shah family. The Shah came to power 50 years ago after his father. After World War 11, the Shah's power was threatened by the Prime Minister. He made the Shah leave the country. It was the CIA that brought the Shah back to power. That was the point at which the United States started imposing the Shah on the people. People think that the Shah modernized Iran. The fact is he helped foreign imperialists. He would buy goods from the foreigners. There is a car manufactured in Iran called the Iranian Chevrolet. The engine is imported from the United States, and the body is a German Opel; Iranians only put them together. That is the kind of industry we have. The Shah has hurt our agriculture. Iranian agriculture used to be enough for domestic needs, and we could export some. Last year 93% of our food supply was imported.

Echo: When did your struggle for freedom actually begin?

Majid: The struggle in Iran has been going on for fifteen years. There were many political prisoners. The prisoners were tortured by orders from the Shah. People say the CIA used to tell the Shah what kind of torturing equipment to buy. The people of Iran hated each other during the fifteen years of their struggle. They couldn't trust each other because the Shah made a secret police called the Savak. The Savak's membership is 5,000 or more. The Shah made the people hate each other. I couldn't trust my friends because they may have been in the Savak. Much of our struggle was discovered by the Savak, and the leaders were placed in political prisons. Today, which is a day of freedom, these prisons are opened to the public.

Echo: When did this fifteen year struggle erupt?

Majid: In Oct. 1978, the Iranian oil workers started a strike. Their demand was that the Shah leave the country.



Echo: Why did it start with the oil workers?

Majid: The people knew that the government could only survive on the oil money. Therefore, if they go to an oil strike, it would destroy the economy. This oil strike was serious. Production dropped from 6 million barrels a day to 1.5 million barrels a day, and marshall law was imposed.

Echo: Where does Khomeini fit in the picture?

Majid: Before Khoneini's exile he was against the Shah. This frightened the Shah and he forced Khoneini out of the country. After 14 years the people came back to him. This is because an Islamic organization outside of Iran went to him. Also, students outside of Iran rose up. When they returned to Iran, they talked to the people. Iranian students saw freedom and how others were living. Therefore,

Echo reviews local chain restaurants

by Shelley Ballenger

The Echo is beginning a new series of reviews on local restaurants. This preliminary article deals with chain operations of the sit-down, waitress/hostess type. The hours of operation and prices of various selections are listed for each restaurant, followed by comments on service, decor, and food quality. A 4-star rating system has been employed to indicate comparative overall quality.

JERRY'S
HOURS: Sun-Thurs. 6-9, Fri-Sat. 6-10
SELECTIONS: Hamburger platters $2.10-2.60, Steak $5.35-5.95, Sandwich and dinner features $1.75-3.85, Spaghetti, chicken. Entrees include french fries and cole slaw. Breakfast egg/meat combos $1.90-3.75, omlettes.
COMMENTS: Service O.K. Food nothing spectacular, typical large chain-type. Prices a bit too high. Decor rather dull; place is easy to overlook, as it usually is. *

Mr. STEAK
HOURS: Sun-Thurs. 11-9, Fri-Sat. 11-10
SELECTIONS: LUNCH: Steaks (roll, potato, choice of juice, salad, soup) $2.59-3.50, Sandwiches (choice of salad, soup, french fries) $1.79-2.25. International features and seafood $2.49-3.50, Chef's salad $2.69. DINNER: steaks $3.99-7.95, Seafood and features $3.49-7.95, Prime rib $6.99, Steak/seafood combos. All dinners include roll, potato, and choice of juice, soup, or salad.
COMMENTS: Extra friendly service. Separate lunch and dinner menus. Relatively low prices. Food excellent. Any mode of dress is acceptable, but generally dressier than the other places ****

SAMBO'S
HOURS: 24 hrs. every day
SELECTIONS: Hamburger and sandwich platters (french fries) $1.65=3.65, Steaks and seafood (soup or salad, vegetable, roll, potato) $3.15-4.75, chicken, ham steak. Breakfast egg/meat combos $2.30-3.70, pancakes, omelets.
COMMENTS: Service slow. Decor geared toward children. Prices a little high. Breakfast served anytime. Food is not that good, but tolerable in the middle of the night when no place else is open. *

SHONEY'S
HOURS: Sun-Thurs. 6-12, Fri-Sat, 6-2 a.m.
SELECTIONS: Hamburgers $1.05-1.49, Steak and seafood platters (potato, salad) $3.09-4.79, spaghetti, salad bar. Breakfast egg/meat combos $1.30-2.15.
COMMENTS: Service relatively fast, food decent. Strawberry pie and hot fudge cake deserts excellent. Prices reasonable. Worth the extra drive **

WESTERN SIZZLIN'
SELECTIONS: Hamburgers $.99-1.99, Steak platters (roll, potato) $2.49-4.89, Salad bar $.99 with dinner.
COMMENTS: Decor not deluxe, but comfortable. Served cafeteria style; order is brought to table when ready. Free refills on drinks. Food dependably good. Makes you wonder what the stuff Saga calls "steak" really is. ***

CATALOGUES GIVE FALSE IMPRESSION OF COLLEGE

CHICAGO,IL (CPS)—Most college catalogues seem to favor artful photo essays of pastoral campus scenes, coupled with encyclopedic listings of courses offered at least once a century. Their object, of course, is to lure high school seniors into the schools. But in truth not much of the information in the catalogues helps in choosing a college, or planning an education.

Those catalogues have, since the beginning of the decade, been the focus of a gathering protest by education activists who want colleges to provide information in their publications that might actually be useful to their students. Much of the protest, though, has been in sedate conference talk. Now, however, the federal government and student lobby groups have imposed a dead-line of sorts of the schools. The "movement" has suddenly gained some power. And, later this month, a major report from a conference on catalogue information promises to cause great commotion among college administrators.

In December, Ted Marchese of Barat College in Illinois coordinated a federally-sponsored conference, called Improving Information For Student Choice, which, for the first time, brought together a broad range of studnt consumerists. They drew yo a report, and will release it to the public in last February.

A copy of the draft report released to CPS details strategies for improving the

by Chris Cervenka

Amid protest on both ends of the spectrum, the United States is being sharply criticized for breaking the treaty with Taiwan. Taiwanese demonstrators and native opponents such as Senator Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) have openly expressed their sentiments.

The 1954 U.S. agreement with Taiwan said that either party could teminate the treaty one year after giving notice to the other party. Jimmy Carter intends to nullify the treaty as of December 31, 1979.

Senator Goldwater and 5 other lawmakers filed suit on December 22 stating that because this country's mutual-security treaty with Taiwan needed approval before being ratified, it could be terminated only with the Senate's approval. The Constitution is clear on the ratification of a treaty (approval by 2/3 of the Senate), but there is no procedure for termination of a treaty.

The State Department argues that the Chief Executive, the nation's top foreign policy maker, has the power to act alone in these matters.

Carter's decision to terminate the treaty is the first of its kind to be carried out since 1798 (when a military treaty with France was severed).

Reasons behind the complex Sino-American relationship have developed since Richard Nixon's trip to China in the early '70's. China fears Soviet expansion. Although the Sino-American relationship is not an alliance, certain terms have been laid out. 1) The Chinese want to see the U.S. become more actively engaged in countering the Soviet Union's efforts to expand its sphere of hegemony. 2) The Chinese want the U.S. to accept three conditions for "normalization" of relationships; the U.S. must a)withdraw all forces from Taiwan, b) sever diplomatic recognition of the Republic of China, and c) dissolve the Mutual Defense Treaty. These two terms are politically incompatible. If the U.S. accedes to these terms without guaranteeing Taiwan's security, it will destroy the credibility of American security commitments in South Asia.

The Soviets are troubled by all of this, too. Three major aspects are: military dimension, as a threat to strengthen China's military forces; anti-Soviet alliance, The U.S., Japan, and China exerting pressure on the Soviet Union; and trade, which is viewed as putting " 'anit-Soviet filling into the American-Chinese pie.'..

Taiwan's last Ambassador to the United States, James C.H. Shen, commented on the situation in an interview with U.S. News and World Report (January 8, 1979). Mr. Shen believes that his nation's security is jeopardized by the termination of the treaty. He recognizes the promise of continued security from President Carter but feels that Peking will pressure the U.S. into cutting off arms supplies to Taiwan. Speaking for Chiang Ching-kuo, Shen says he distrusts all Communist regimes and will have nothing to do with them.

The feeling between the U.S. and Taiwan is changed. Will Taiwan sink or swim in this change of political tides? Shen says his country will swim. What will take place after Chiang steps down from power?

"Trial by Jury" auditions

Auditions for the spring production are set for March 12 at 7:30 in the MC theater. If you like to sing and act, there is a part for you in the MC upcoming production of "Trial by Jury." Rehearsals will be conducted two nights per week, except for the last two weeks which will require more extensive rehearsals. A description of the roles are on the bulletin boards in both the FAC and the MC Theatre. Any further questions should be directed to Mr. Ketcherside, director.

Weight Room

The weight Room is also open 7-9 p.m. Mon.—Fri.

Look it up

Pearsons Operates Temerariously

You didn't hear too much about Pearsons last year. Rumors of wild parties were linked immediately with Carnegie. The smoke got so bad one time that they called in the fire marshal and ended up condemming the fourth floor; it's been relatively quiet since then. MC's favorite partying grounds, and the sore spot of administrative authority, is now more centrally located. Pearsons reigns supreme.

Pearsons doesn't have a resident director this year. It does, however, have a favorite person: Mangus. Ironically, Dr. Mangus (alias Laughing Larry) was the very person who initiated the idea of a self-governing dorm. That's why the project can't be abandoned; it's just got to work. Most of Pearsons like it this way anyhow; the idea of having a resident head instead of a head resident is rather attractive.

Take your typical Pearsons resident. First of all, there isn't one. Ah, the infinite variety of human nature. There's the druggies. There's the alkies. And then there's the straights - - - both of them. The basic categories of student life forms. It's no wonder they all get along so well.

Rumors run hot and heavy through the halls. They race down the stairs and spread to the entire campus in the course of one meal. "They've got search warrants out on our rooms - - -they're going to bust in and dig through our stuff!" No, false alarm. Sigh of relief. "After all," gripe students, "what we do is only illegal."

Other things tend to run through the halls as well - - -parties. You'd think people would know by now that sitting on the floor in the hallway is against the law. After all, how dumb can a person be? And Pearsons has such nice facilities for throwing parties - - - biggest lounges on campus. What sort of get-together could possibly need so much room to have that problem. This is due to a secret administrative tactic: the halls of Lloyd and Carnegie are so dark and uncomfortable that nobody wants to stand in them, much less sit down. The days of light bulbs in the halls of Pearsons may well be numbered.

Seven years ago, Pearson's literally went up in smoke. As a result, it no longer has a fourth floor. Is it any coincidence that the fourth floor at that time had a reputation for being a little too wild and crazy? Pearsons residents, take heed. If things keep building up, you better start taking your fire drills pretty seriously.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

As you may or may not know, on the 19th. of February the ACC judicial board met concerning a case of alleged "use and possession" of marijuana in a college residence hall.

Dean Mangus (LL) was the person who came in search of the "Big Drug Deal" but found nothing incriminating. So he charged those involved with "possession and use" of marijuana without catching any of the three students smoking the "heathen devil weed." One of the students was in a special studies meeting, another was out in the dorm hallway, and the third was asleep in his room.

Thirteen days after the "bust" was made, the judicial board met, and, to the surprise of all, Dean Mangus failed to appear. He left the prosecution's presentation to Jane Richardson. The Dean was busy at the high school basketball tournament.

The question is, where do Dean Mangus's priorities lie? Do they lie with college students or the high school basketball game? After all, he is Dean of Students.

To all those who appeared at the trial, thanks for the support. To the members of the ACC judicial board and Jane Richardson, we thank you for a fair and just hearing.

Sincerely,
Tony Norris

the compleat reporter

A Few Ways of Looking at the Rain

by Tim Rahn

Finally, I am back at Maryville. Finally, I will complete my degree requirements. Knock on wood. Cross your fingers,Miss Hess, it ain't gonna be easy, cuz a lot can happen in a little time.

I did not really feel at home until last Wednesday morning when I strolled into the Echo room. Everybody was doing something, and naturally I felt a little out of place. I was saved. David Boyd looked up at me and a curious dialogue began.

"Why don't you write something for us about what its like to be back in the pits?" he asked.

"Huh?" I said. "Oh, you mean Maryville."

"Yeah," David said with a smile that spread across his face and erupted briefly into laughter.

"Well, I've been thinking about doing a complete reporter, but I'm not sure it'll be about the pits."

"Well, whatever."

"Okay David, I'll see what I can do," I said as the conversation became more topical and finally tapered off to small talk. I forgot about that request until the next morning when I was walking my dog in the college woods. I remembered that the first day I had walked back the road a couple of days earlier, I had heard a pileated woodpecker.

The observant birdwatcher knows that there are two times when you are most likely to hear the pileated. The first is when the large bird is pecking loudly for for insects that hide under the bark of tree limbs. The second occurs when the bird is flushed and flying, then a terrifying, jungle-like call is left in his wake. This is what I had heard that morning, a scared bird calling a warning above the trees, but most importantly a bird running ahead of the trouble he senses.

When I remembered both incidents, I felt quite akin to the fleeing bird. My first days at Maryville have been full of akward movements forced upon me in situations of reacquaintance and recollection and festered by the frustrations of beinga second or two late in every job and apartment opportunity that has come my way. I felt and fought an urge those first days to take flight like the woodpecker to a safer place.

Presently I find myself winning my fight against akwardness and frustration.

I imagine my thoughts are not unique; they have been the same thoughts of anyone who takes time off from an institution and returns. A place as transient and small as Maryville seems to multiply these feelings. The people I entered Maryville with for the most part have vanished, having completed their education. Familiar faces are almost everywhere, but they are busy with the new and pressing.

This may seem a forlorn plea from a lost soul, but it is not. I know what I have to do, and my mind is set on doing that and graduating. The bird that flies cries a warning and not a plea.

One time my father and I watched a pileated woodpecker that rapped at a dead stump five feet from the side of a busy park road. It was incredible, how oblivious the bird was to the passing motorists (most where oblivious of him) content to eat his fill and move along when he pleased. I guess he felt at home.

On Saturday someone asked me a question I could not properly answer. I made flakey excuses for not knowing. This person persisted and tried by example to answer the question. After listening I said, "That's easy. When you're walking in the rain you should put up your umbrella. Sometimes, however, you're content to walk in the rain without it -- that's when you ought to put it up."

As I walked away I felt pretty pleased -- I was going to walk in the rain. I guess I felt at home.

Another weekend is practically here at wonderful MC! Yeah, I know, "So what?" Hey, it's that time of year, huh? The MC mid-Winter Blues. Freshmen don't know what it is, Sophomores and juniors dread it, and seniors just smile and say it doesn't bother them because it's their last year anyway. Now we're smack dab in the middle of winter, and the freshmen dread Winter Term just as much as the sophs and juniors, and seniors don't smile near as much as they did.

Any way you look at it, Winter Term is the pits as far as social activities and things to do go. February Meetings were one big snore, and March looks equally dismal. Still, life and MC are as much as you make of it, so here's a list of things to do to keep yourself occupied the rest of Winter Term.

DESPERATELY BORING SITUATION NO' 1 Sitting in Class

Conditions: Boring, dry speeches. Missing class would probably cause failure.

Entertainment

1. Count the number of times your teacher says"um" or "uh"
2. See how long you can hold your breath during lectures and then let it out without the teacher noticing.
3. Pop every joint in your hand and then count the people who noticed.
4. Recall every sexual experience you ever had and rate according to quality (or quantity).
5. Clean everything on your body without arousing attention.
6. Push fingers in and out of you ears to distort teacher's words.
7. Try to go to sleep with your eyes open.

DESPERATELY BORING SITUATION NO. 2 Shopping with girlfriend

Conditions: Long hikes through stores and malls. No bathrooms; girlfriend cannot be persuaded to leave.

Entertainment

1. Unscrew mannequins' hands.
2. Locate clothes with large plastic tags on them. Find wood or plastic pillars on either side of doors. Toss clothes out the door and set off the shoplifter alarm.
3. Unpeel Master Charge and Visa stickers off the store windows.
4. Go into the dressing room and switch everyone's clothes around while they're out.
5. Complain to your girlfriend (or anyone within earshot) of hunger, thirst, sore feet, earache, diarrhea, fever, blood in urine, etc.

DESPERATELY BORING SITUATION No.3 Nothing to do.

Conditions: Snow day all activities for the day cancelled, along with all your classes. All out-of-class work finished and caught up.

Entertainment

1. Attempt to read all the articles in Penthouse, Playboy, or Playgirl (according to sexual preference) without looking at the pictures.
2. Do a nude interpretive dance. Put on shoes; do a tap dance.
3. Clean out everything you can clean out.
4. Buy a hammer and chisel at the hardware store. Chisel through closet wall into the next room.
5. Try to remember elementary school grades.
6. Connect fly specks on the ceiling with invisible lines and see what shapes they make.
7. Go through all your roommate's drawers.
8. Pick off all your scabs or callouses.
9. Try to throw up just by thinking about it.

Well, you get the general idea, don't you? Good. Now make up some of your own. Now you got the idea. Make the best of it, and have a good winter.

Next Week: Is there life after Research Papers?

Profs attend meeting

Maryville College English and foreign language professors will participate in the 74th annual meeting of the Tennessee Philological Association at Carson-Newman College this weekend, February 22-24.

Dr. Charlotte H. Beck will read a paper on Saturday morning at the Modern Literature section. Entitled "Strategies for Distance; The Eliot-Laforgian Element in the Poetry of Randall Jarrell," Dr. Beck's paper is the result of her extensive research at Berkeley and at Princeton.

Dr. Elizabeth T. Fowler will be chairman of the Southern Literature section on Friday afternoon.

Others from Maryville planning to attend include Mr. Arthur S. Bushing, Mrs. Herma R. Cate, Dr. Carolyn Blair, and Miss Kathryn Martin.

The Tennessee Philological Association is composed of college and university professors organized to encourage the study of literature and language and the publication of research.

Dr. Jacqueline C. Elliott of the University of Tennessee Romance Language Department is president of the Tennessee Philological Association.

as a plus to campus life, and to keep all costs at a minimum. They have placed special emphasis on greater variety.

A typical breakfast on ARA's plan includes such items as eggs to order, omelettes, bacon, ham, or sausage everyday, danish pastry and donuts, English muffins, hot chocolate and other various beverages. Lunches and dinners offer main entrees, hot sandwiches, salads, deserts, a deli bar where students can make their own sandwiches, a wide selection of freshly baked breads, and rolls, and a wide choice of beverages.

ARA allows unlimited quantities of food and beverages, as does Saga. On Premium Night (similar to Steak Night), a student may choose only one premium entree; however, two additional hot entrees are available in unlimited quantities.

Other highlights include a salad bar with cheese bits, meats, sliced egg, and pickle chips. They offer a calorie counted slim line platter. Fresh fruit is available at every meal. Hand-dipped and soft ice cream is also available. An Early Bird Breakfast. continental style, is available for students between 7:00 and 7:30 a.m.

Daily conveniences such as a separate seconds line are installed so that those students desiring seconds will not have to wait in line with normal traffic.

Of course Saga is disturbed by the fact that they may possibly lose MC as a client. Therefore, they are desperately trying to come up with some alternatives to help improve their present program.

One of their proposals is to offer nine special surprise events and several monotony breakers. Special holiday dinners are planned such as a Haloween Costume dinner. An April Fools Day Switch where they would offer lunch for breakfast, dinner for lunch, and breakfact for dinner is planned. On Mothers' Day, they will supply a carnation for every visiting mother. Candy canes at Christmas, green milk on St. Patricks Day, and live animals at Thanksgiving and Easter are several suggested monotony breakers.

Saga's improvements are gimmick oriented with no provisions for improving the quality of the food. The point is that the administration and students want tasty, hot, and well prepared food. There is good reason to believe that the ARA food service is superior to Saga.

Dr. Mangus revelaed that at least one thousand hours in the last two months have been spent working on this problem, and no decision has been made as of yet. He stressed the fact that he needs to know the students' feelings on the matter. After all, it is the students they are trying to satisfy. If anyone has any comments on the matter, they may direct them to Kevin Reilly or Dean Mangus himself.

they went back and said, "This is not life; the freedom you see is not true freedom."

Echo: Do you think there is a "silent majority" for the Shah?

Majid: No. This silent majority is the Savak family and the Shah's friends. There are 340,000 people in the army and each of these families is supporting the Shah.

Echo: That's hardly a majority, is it?

Majid: No, not a majority.

Echo: An American columnist, Jack Anderson, states that the CIA may be behind Khomeini and arranged for the Shah to be ditched. Do you think this is a valid thought?

Majid: I don't think so.

Echo: You talked about industry. What will the new government do with industry; will it attempt to turn it inward?

Majid: That's right, that's right. That is the main thing we are doing. I think we are going to start with the agriculture program and then move towards industry. We will get help from the United States.

Echo: Will Iran export to the U.S.?

Majid: Yes, Iran will being exporting some oil to the U.S.

Echo: What does the Islamic government plan to do regarding foreign relations?

Majid: It will not have relations with racist countries like South Africa or oppressors like Israel. This is by not exporting them any oil.

Echo: Have you had much contact with your family?

Majid: Every two weeks I call home. They are O.K, But I don't know about my friends, and home won't tell me.

X-RATED MOVIES BANNED BY ADMINISTRATIONS

(CPS) – Teachers are usually given a free rein in selecting materials for instruction – unless, of course, the instructional material turns out to be X-rated films.

In two recent cases, professors were denied further use of the dirty movies—which were of necessity part of the curriculum—by school or local authorities. At the University of West Florida, Professor Churchill Roberts showed "Deep Throat" in the course of teaching obscenity law. Students were to decide if the film was obscene. Apparently, Pensacola law had already decided it was. Local police confiscated the film, and a judge ordered it destroyed.

CORRECTION

Last week's article on the ACC meeting should have mentioned that the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors over-ruled the ACC and allowed ROTC to become a part of the College's curriculum .

Scots grab home finale

MC 80—W & L 68

The Maryville College men's basketball team settled two important matters in last Saturday's impressive win over Washington and Lee College, VA. For the first time ever they defeated ODAC power house Washington and Lee and secondly, the Scots went out victoriously winning their final home game. In the process, MC may have secured their chances of being selected as a new member of the Old Dominion Athletic Conference.

The Scots' record improved to 7-15 and W&L dropped their slate to 16-8. The Scots travel to Millsaps MS this weekend for the Millsaps' Invitational and the conclusion of the season.

Playing their best games for the Scots, senior starters Wade Edmond and Wayne Emme teamed up for the game's most exciting plays. Co-captain Emme and junior Rick Becker were the standouts in perhaps the greatest victory of the season. With 5:39 remaining in the fame the Scots' lead had dwindled to 60-56, but Emme pulled off some magical tricks. Six straight points were reeled off by the court magician, including a 30 foot jumper that spurred a thrust that put MC up 68-57. Becker's conversion of two free throws with 1:41 left in the game was a second turning point. Several clutch free throws (8 for8) and three crucial steals by Becker further doomed the Generals come-back hopes.

Emme was high scorer with 25 points. Rod Nelson bagged 13, Edmond and Rick Suttle pumped in 12, and Becker added 10.

Despite having a below par season, the never-say-die Scots have seen some sun light through the rain clouds, and more bright spots are ahead for the team in future years. Best of luck to the seniors, Emme, Edmond, and Derrick Smith.

Emme concludes MC career

by Robert Boone

He crouches into shooting position; he quickly springs into the air; he flicks his wrist; and, then, swish, nothing but the nylon -- two points for Emme. The bushy-headed kid (number 20 in your program, number 1 in your heart) has exercised this smooth shooting motion countless times as cheering Maryville fans urged him on.

Maryville's star senior, co-captain Wayne Emme, went out a winner last Saturday by heading his squad to one of its biggest home triumphs after playing four years of consistent string music for the Scots.

The wins have been outnumbered by the losses in the past four seasons at Maryville, but Wayne never really knew much about losing before coming to MC. "At Medill Bair Junior High School, we finished 15-0 and were ranked in the state's top five, and later under head mentor Ed Cochran at Pennsburg High School, we were 50-19 in my three years there."

Wayne reflected, "It's been tough at Maryville because all along we knew we had the ability; yet we just could not put it all together for a winning season." Although frustrating at times, his career has its achievements.

Emme attributes much of his success to his former coach Billy Henry. "Coach Henry gave me a lot of confidence. He told me to put it up and make some things happen. He really allowed me to do my own thing." Wayne has been making exciting things happen ever since. Under Henry, the sharp-shooter quickly moved from a bench warmer to a 32.6 point-per-game performer and was honored on the Division III All-District team his sophomore year. As a junior Wayne again acheived All-District status and was ranked in the Division III scoring race again with a 20.6 average per outing.

In evaluating the present season Wayne stated, "This year has been a tough season because we were all new to each other except for Wade and myself, and much of the competition has consisted of scholarship clubs."

Standing in the same shoes as Wayne is senior co-captain and another three-year starter, Wade Edmond. While praising his three year sidekick, Wayne said, "Wade has been a tremendous asset to the team with his desire. He is my closest friend, and I rely on him for support while on the floor."

Maintaining a positive attitude, Wayne believes you have to have that inner drive that makes a winner. "We're all winners here in lots of ways, and we always keep our heads high no matter what."

When asked to recall his fondest memory of MC basketball, a beaming Emme didn't have to think long. "The Washington and Lee victory had to be the happiest moment of my life. Before the game there was lots of pressure, the crowd was big, but the cheerleaders were great, and it was like a release of pressure as we finally put it all together." Emme's birthday was the following Monday, and he agreed that the W & L victory was the best birthday present he could hope for.

During the past three seasons the Scots have relied heavily upon Wayne's potent scoring sprints, and Coach Byrd will have a long search trying to replace the scoring ace. Wayne could speculate and say "What if I'd gone to . . . ?" But why speculate when he has all those cherishable memories and good times of the playing days at Maryville College to keep him content now and pacify him later as an old man.

Scotties tromp Bryan

Bobbie Jo Sallade goes for a lay up as the Lady Scots went on to defeat Byron College 82-42.

Sparked by a great performance by freshman Donna Owens and the final appearance of senior co-captain Blinky Hinds, the Maryville College Lady Scots rolled over visiting Bryan College 82–42 Tues. night in the final home game of the season.

The talented Owens was awesome on the defensive and offensive end of the court as she pumped in 26 points, grabbed 16 rebounds, and blocked numerous shots in the best game of her MC career.

Starting off quickly the Scotties jumped to a 30–12 lead when Kathy Spurlock sank a 20 foot shot with 7:01 remaining in the first half. Eventually the Scotties lead increased to 42–27 at half.

While the Lionettes were unable to penetrate MC's tenacious defense and were forced to take outside shots, Maryville successfully went inside to Sandy Rabun and Owens for close buckets.

Rounding out the Scotties scoring attack was Rabun with 16 points, Dee Dee Chapman with 10, and Hinds with 9. Chapman also added 8 rebounds. The Lady Scots are 11–8 for the season.

flow of information to students. Ken Fischer, a higher education consultant says the conference partipants went "beyond the point of merely developing a plan to the point where names, dates, and tasks – who'll do what, when, and where – were identified. Commitments were made to (implement) the plan."

The report includes a draft list of steps colleges can take without performing a major overhaul of the current publications. This core list of important information includes 19 topic areas ranging from financial aid and job prospects for certain kinds of majors to grievance procedures and how credits earned at the school will transfer to another school.

The report also calls for legislation requiring schools to publicize "significant" changes in admissions policies, and the names of courses that may prove hard to get because of staff shortages.

Those latter two items alone would be a major reform that could end cases of students enrolling in a college only to find their majors are being phased out, or prerequisite courses with severely limited enrollments.

Such reforms are especially threatening to colleges because they stand a very good chance of passage. As the report is released, conference participants will be testifying at congressional hearings on the Higher Education Act of 1976. That act is up for renewal this year, and is the umbrella legislation that makes all federal funding of education possible. Congress' self-imposed deadling for renewing the act is this October. In the meantime, several key congressional staff members involved in drafting the renewal have already expressed concern over colleges' compliance with current federal laws dictating what kinds of information the schools must provide their students.

Vol. 64 No. 17 March 1, 1979 Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee

Faculty views Saga, I.S.

Saga, continuing education, independent study, and attendance regulations were four of several topics discussed during the faculty meeting held on Feb. 21.

The matter of installing a new food service was brought up by Dr. Anderson who stressed the fact that no definite decision has been made.

Dr. Anderson asked the faculty for their cooperation with the continuing education program. The program pays for use of rooms in MC's buildings. Usage of the rooms can sometimes inconvenience the faculty and he asked that they bear with it. Dr. Anderson also asked for more cooperation in conserving energy. It seems the budget is being eaten up by electric and heating bills.

Dr. Charlotte Beck brought recent independent study problems to the attention of faculty members. It was made very clear that independent study is valuable to MC and that it is important that it stay in the curriculum. There will be a meeting for students who are to begin working on their independent study. Beck stressed the importance of students and faculty attending the meeting.

The dominant topic of the meeting was attendance regulation, part of the new academic proposal that will be reviewed by the ACC in the near future. Several faculty members voiced their opinion but no conclusion was drawn.

Track still running scared

The Athletic Committee (AC) met Wed. night, Feb. 21 to discuss the racquetball court issue and the possibility of dropping the spring track program.

Coach Henry and Dean Mangus agreed that a mistake had been made in not seeking student opinion before making the decision concerning the rental of the racquetball courts. It was agreed that in the future decisions which deal with athletics and which affect the entire campus will proceed in the following manner: the proposed policy change will be presented to the AC, which will publicize the proposal and discuss it in an open meeting. The administration will use the student-faculty input from this meeting to make its decision.

Regarding the spring track program, it was made clear that the decision to drop the track program had not been made. Dean Mangus stated that due to inflation, unforseen expenses in the fall and winter sports, and small budgets to begin with, that a shortage of funds in the athletic budget could develop by the spring term.

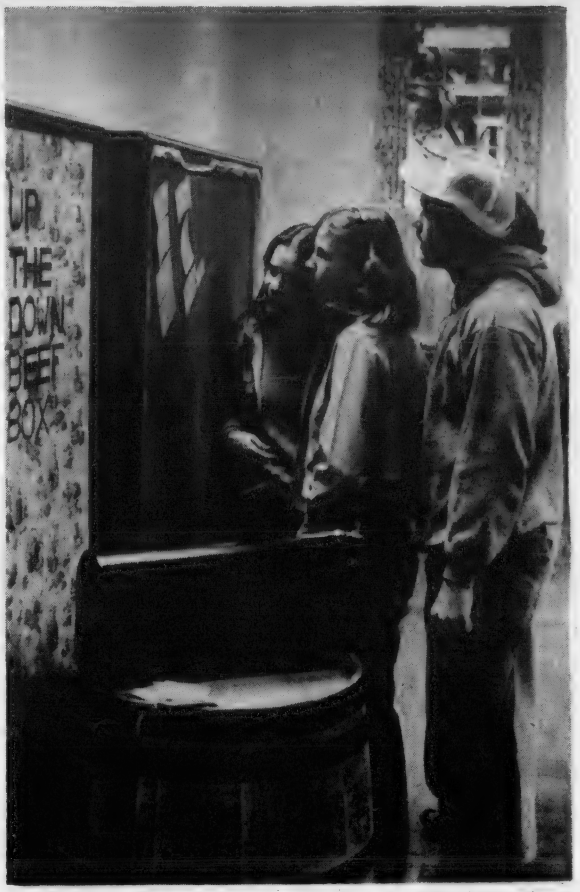
The issue was extensively discussed and it was generally felt by the AC and the students that MC is obligated to fund the track program this spring. The students and faculty at the meeting expressed serious concern for the athletic budget. The facts that (1) no one could pinpoint specific areas where over spending had occurred, (2) no one knew whether over spending had even occurred or not, and (3) no one seems to be watching the budget closely enough to guarantee funds for spring sports were strongly criticized by persons attending. Some students felt that they should be able to see the athletic budget or at least the AC should be allowed to.

It was also mentioned by Dean Mangus that consideration was being given to dropping the track program because the track schedule had not been developed. This led some students to believe that the decision to drop track had been made last year since most athletic schedules are made out at least one year in advance.

The AC recommends that the administration re-evaluate its methods and monitoring and controlling the athletic budget.

Athletic priorities?

PHILADELPHIA, PA (CPS)



As college and university budgets tighten, and tuition and students fees rates rise, resentment over the funding of intercollegiate athletics departments seems to be growing around the country. Student and faculty reports critical of athletic departments' relatively large budgets have surfaced on at least 14 campuses this academic year. The most recent report released was here at the University of Pennsylvania, and, as has happened at the other schools, widespread controversy has followed.

Penn's Faculty Senate Advisory Committee (SAC) which is the guiding body for the Faculty Senate, issued a report last month as part of a university-wide review of athletic policy.

It states that "continued participation in the Ivy League does not require that the present scope of Penn's program of intercollegiate athletics be maintained." The report recommends that the athletic budget be frozen for a three-year period, that the number of coaches be reduced, and that special athletic admissions be permitted only for the spectator sports of football, basketball, and soccer.

SAC said its proposal would save money, and improve the quality of the student body.

Five percent of Penn's student body can, under present rules, be admitted under a special admissions procedure for athletes.

Saga's reaction to student gripes draws student attention at every meal. It is, to say the least, the most interesting thing in the cafeteria.

Orchestra performs

The Maryville-Alcoa College -Community Orchestra will perform tonight at 8:15 in the Wilson Chapel. The Concert is free and open to the public.

The orchestra, conducted by Mr. Gene Taliaferro-Jones of the MC music faculty, will perform music from two popular operas and will feature four MC music students in solo performances.

The concert will open with two dances from the comic opera "The Bartered Bride"; a rousing polka and the Dance of the Comedians. This will be followed by scene 1 from Gian Carlo Menotti's opera "The Old Maid and the Thief" which will feature a duet by MC sophomores Lesa Payne of St. Petersburg FL and Peggy Stewart of Piney Flats, TN. Both singers are education majors in voice.

Following the two operatic selections, the orchestra will perform the "Concerto for Flute, Strings, and Cembalo, Op. 10, No. 3" by Antonio Vivaldi; "Concerto No. 2 in G Minor, Op. 22 " by Camille Saint-Saens; and "Overture to 'Rienzi " by Richard Wagner.

Flutist Mary MacPhee, MC junior from Colts Neck, NJ will be the featured soloist for the Vivaldi Concerto. MC freshman Kazuro Ohi of Shinjuku-ku Japan will perform a piano solo accompanied by the orchestra for the Saint-Saens concerto.

Continuing Ed. to offer B.A. degree

Beginning this Spring Term, Continuing Education will offer courses in four areas which will allow people to pursue a B.A. degree part-time, it has been announced.

The four major areas of study are economics and business administration, natural sciences, social sciences, and humanities. The core curriculum will be different from that for regular students. Enrollment will be mostly community people.

The courses will be offered on Sat. and weekday nights. They will be taught by the MC faculty and faculty from surrounding colleges and universities..

Case with no evidence?

"No decision" breeds mistrust

Last week, the Judicial Board was called upon to decide two cases involving the alleged use of marijuana by MC students. A decision was reached in one case. The other was delared inconclusive and a "no decision" ruling rendered.

In the undecided case, paraphernalia had been confiscated and held in Dean Mangus' office for about a week. The Dean's office was then broken into and the evidence stolen. As nothing else in the office was bothered, it is obvious that the paraphenalia was the only thing desired. It was not hard to obtain. For some unexplained reason, the evidence had not been locked up or secured in a filing cabinet. During the time in which the deans did have the evidence, they failed to get the residue officially tested. Thus, the Judicial Board had no written document stating that marijuana was actually involved.

We are of the opinion that at this time, with the evidence gone, the whole trial should have been called off. The Judicial Board's official decision stated; "Because of the theft and lack of previous examination of the evidence, your guilt or innocence cannot be established and therefore the Board declares no decision in this case." This decision could have just as easily been reached the morning that the evidence was discovered missing. The motions of the trial were not necessary merely to confirm common sense.

Instead, the Board was put through a rather degrading exercise. As a final insult, Dean Mangus did not attend the hearing. True, only one dean is officially required to attend Judicial Board meetings, and Dean Richardson handled the prosecuting side quite well. However, we feel that considering the nature of the case and the circumstances leading to it, Dean Mangus should have made a point to be there. His absence is discouraging and seems to signify a lack of interest.

We hope that in the future the Dean's office will execute greater responsibility and common sense in such matters. What sort of prosecution goes into a case with no evidence? Why wasn't the evidence handled more carefully to begin with? And why did the one person who should have been there by all means fail to show up? We do not like to see the Judicial Board forced into a tight spot for no reason. The net result of this trial appears to be a further deterioration of the student/dean relationship, which is already poor enough.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

This past weekend's performance of "The Threepenny Opera" was yet another indication that theatre has become unimportant at Maryville College. The lack of interest is evident in the administration, faculty, and students. Special thanks must be given to those who went out of their way to try and make it a good production. If not for the efforts of Michael Ketcherside, Sharon Crane, Don Barnard, and lots of individual work by some of the cast, the show would not have gone on the stage. Complaints about lack of direction were voiced loud and often during rehearsals, and it took rumors to fire some people enough to even want to do a good job.

The lack of motivation by the director is sad, but perhaps it isn't much different than the attitude of the administration. It seems to have all started when the administration brilliantly decided that theatre was not a performing or fine art, but rather just part of the English department. Why is theatre taught in Interdisciplinary Fine Arts 201 when it is not a fine art in the opinion of this school? This asinine move led to the decision to eliminate the speech/theatre major at Maryville, which is supposed to be a Liberal Arts school. Unfortunately, the administration sometimes forgets to tell incoming freshmen that they are unable to get a degree in speech/theatre, and they are left to discover this for themselves.

The days when most everyone on the MC stage was a theatre major and very experienced are over. In order to make money and influence friends, many townspeople are given parts and talented students are often overlooked. Those people that do receive roles, students and townies, need direction and help on stage. Lately, they have not been receiving much direction or help. These facts, among others, have turned many talented students away from the main stage.

The productions are still worth seeing and provide good times and good friends for those involved. Thank you to all who have supported MC theatre, and thank you Sharon and Mike, for returning some excitement and professionalism to theatre productions at Maryville.

Sincerely and respectfully,
John Morton

Dear Editor:

Why do certain individuals insist upon infringing upon other peoples' rights? We are referring of course to the smoking situation in Pearsons' Dining Hall.

We are appalled at the continuous lack of adherence to the "NO SMOKING" regulation, a regulation which has recently been re emphasized. In total contempt for this regulation certain individuals continue to smoke at their own discretion. It's not only a great annoyance when attempting to eat but a potential hazard to all in the vicinity.

Infractions of this rule have originated not only with students but employees of Saga, as well as prominent members of the faculty! We feel that these members of the faculty are not setting the proper example for the student body. We also feel that the employees of Saga are aware of this rule and should therefore abide by it.

Stricter enforcement of this policy is possible, but we feel that a better demonstration of common courtesy by the offending individuals would solve the problem.

Sincerely,
Gerald A. Burnette,
Carrie Y. Hendricks,
Angela P. Murphy,
E.J. Venditti,

Dear Editor,

This letter deals with Saga and ARA; This is not a letter defending SAGA, rather it is one defending the interest of the students. The article in the last issue of the Echo pointed out what ARA has promised. My question is, what can they deliver?

The article states, "A typical breakfast on ARA's plan . . . ." My question is, a typical breakfast where? Without a raise in the cost to students, plus the addition of several thousand dollars worth of equipment, this food program is highly unfeasible! Any food program such as the one implied in last week's article is not possible without this additional cost and equipment. At the present time MC does not seem able to absorb these costs without passing it on to the students. It is a very mistaken idea to believe that ARA will come into MC and create a miracle.

Let's not cut Saga short. Some of you remember how Saga was run a few years ago and you have to admit that it has improved 300%. I hope some of you take this to heart and stop asking for overnight answers.

I hope I have enlightened you to some of the problems which could be faced by just listening to promises. I would also encourage everyone to let the Administration know of your feelings, wherever they lie, about this matter. After all it affects you!

Sincerely,
(JP) Pritchard

Dear Editor,

I would like to compliment the person responsible for writing the article concerning Saga on last week. The article opened the eyes of many students on campus.

Although numerous changes have been developed in Saga's program, I do not feel that they should remain employed at Maryville College. Saga was previously aware of the fact that the students were not satisfied with the service; however, nothing was done. Now they are threatened by ARA, and suddenly they are concerned. I feel that Saga brought about the changes for their benefit more so than ours. This is not right. This is why I say "Let Saga go!"

Yours truly,
Bonita G. Terry

Lately a lot of talk has been going about renting out the racquetball courts to the public. Right now no one is really sure what's going on, but when did anybody at MC ever know what's going on and who really wants to? After all, it's always fun to spread rumors!

Seriously, though, can you imagine if things really got out of hand? Wow. Could get interesting! Something maybe like this:

Sam sat on the steps at the side of the library and smoked a cigarette. He looked toward the dorm and then at his watch. It was one-twenty. "Hell," he muttered, "an hour and forty more minutes."

Finishing his cigarette, he crushed it out and got up slowly. "Maybe," he thought, "they left early." He walked toward the gym. Maybe he could reserve a racquetball court. He walked down the halls towards the equipment room.

"Hey Chief!" he called out. Chief shuffled up and looked at him, "Yeah, waddya want?"

"I want to reserve a racquetball court."

"What month ya' want?"

"Oh-March would be good."

"No can do. March is full up. 'Fact it was full by the middle of last month."

Sam rolled his eyes around in disgust. "Damn! What month do you have open?"

"Well," Chief drawled "How's middle of May?"

"May?!"

"That's the best I can do, kid. Take it or leave it."

"Well how 'bout the basketball courts?"

"Booked through April."

"B-but-" Sam stammered.

"Hey, that's the way it is. You know good as I do that since the administration opened the facilities to the public, it's been hard to rent a court out."

"Yeah, yeah. Forget it."

Sam shuffled on out of the building and headed for the dorm. The door to the Resident Director's apartment, long since changed to the Dorm Administrator's live-in office, was open and the Dorm Administrator sat at her desk in the open door.

As Sam walked by, the D.A. looked up, sneering at him. "Witch," he thought and walked up the stairs. Things had changed since they started renting out the dorms to the community.

Saga anxious to hold MC

by Anne Gilliland

Ed Smith, district manager for Saga Food Service in Tennessee, has been visiting MC often during the past few weeks.

"Our first concern is to satisfy the students," he said " We want to get on the same wavelength."

Saga is presently implementing new guidelines for all the institutions it serves through-out the country. Saga at MC is currently getting into compliance with these guidelines.

The goal of these guidelines, according to Smith, is the "full-quality meal." This includes the little extras which Smith says are not gimmicks, but "necessary monotony breakers."

Another goal is more attractive presentation of food and better decor in the dining room.

Smith believes that good communication between Saga and students is the most important factor in improving the quality of the food at MC.

He points to a lack of continuity, since there have been different groups of students at different times who have been concerned about the food. He believes that Carol Hows should be a member of the present food committee.

"We want to be the food service at Maryville College," Smith said. "We want to make the students happy."

Smith urges any students with a complaint or suggestion about the food to put a note in the suggestion box. "We want students to believe Saga is sincere and will respond to the students' needs," he added.

Scots split in tourney

Coach Rick Byrd and his fighting Scot basketball squad traveled to Jackson, MS last weekend for the Millsaps Invitational Tournament to conclude the 1978-79 season.

Millsaps 87—Maryville 78

In the first round of the Millsaps Tournament Fri. night Maryville squared off with the host Millsaps College, but the Majors outlasted the Scots 87-78. The Scots were up 37-35 at halftime.

Doug Tutin led Maryville in scoring with 22 points, Wayne Emme added 18, Wade Edmond 17, Rich Suttle 12, and Rodney Nelson 8. The Scot's committed 18 fouls which further blemished their chance for victory.

Maryville 69—Tougaloo 65

The consolation game pitted the Scots against Tougaloo College MS whom Byrd termed as "one of the best teams we've faced this year." The Scots were down 43-25 at halftime but rallied from the 18 point deficit to take third place.

MC's clutch foul-shooting, 21 of 31, proved the winning edge. With 0:05 left Doug Tutin sank two free throws to insure Maryville's victory bid. Senior co-captain Wade Edmond paced the Scots with 17 points and 11 rebounds, and was the only Scot named to the All-Tournament team. Wayne Emme threw in 16 and Doug Tutin 13 to help boost the Maryville triumph.

Belhaven College and Millsaps College, both out of Jackson MS finished first and second respectively in the tournament.

Reflecting back on his first year as the Scots' head mentor Byrd stated, "This season has been disappointing in terms of wins and losses, 8-16, but not in terms of progress as we won 6 of our last 9 games."

Morristown 70-MC 53

Coach Sharon Brown's Maryville College Lady Scots bowed, 70-53, Tues. night to the visiting Morristown College Lady Knights in a game played at Maryville High School.

The Knights only led Maryville 32-28 after one half of play as shooting whiz Sandy Rabun kept MC within fighting range with 16 first half points. But the second half proved disastrous for the fumbling Scots, who were guilty of seven turn-overs after only 6:00 minutes of play. Morristown's full court press baffled the Lady Scots and the Knight lead quickly hiked to 52-38 with 8:53 still showing on the clock.

Sandy Rabun with 26 points carried the scoring load for Maryville. Donna Owens and Carol Neal also added 8 points apiece. The loss dropped the Scots to a 11-10 record while Morristown's victory improved their season tally to 22-6.

MC 63—Sewanee 51

The Lady Scots basketball team ended their season with a 12-10 record. In their last game they defeated Sewanee 63-51, Coach Sharon Brown stated, "The girls had a slow first half." Sandy Rabun was high scorer with 20 points, Dee Dee Chapman put in 15.

Starting tonight through Sat. night MC will host the Small College State Basketball Tournament for Women. It will be a single elimination tournament consisting of eleven teams.

The Lady Scots will play Thur. night at 7:00. Students must pay $1.00 with their college I.D.

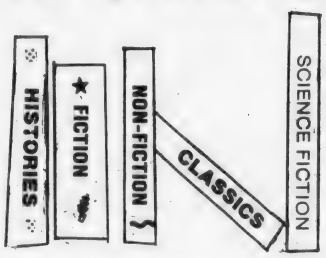
From the noise issuing from the room, he judged that they were still in. As he hesitated at the door, he could hear the soaps on the T.V. and one of the kids crying. He wondered to himself how he ever got into such messes. Here he was-a college freshman rooming with a thirty-five year old divorcee and her three brats. "Why me?" he thought.



"Maybe I'll just go to Pearsons and get a bite to eat," he thought. Then he remembered that it was Community Day in the Dining hall and it was closed to the students, so they had to eat in the Student Center. Forget that. The Student Center was always packed solid on Community Day.

A loud crash inside the room jarred his thoughts. Through the door he could hear cursing and then a slap. Another one of the kids started crying, almost drowning out the blare of the soap opera.

He looked at his watch again. Twenty more minutes, then it would be his turn to use the room.

"Well," he thought and sighed, "Maybe I'll go for a walk."

Vol. 64 No. 18 March 8, 1979 Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee

Jun Kasuya celebrates the beginning of spring with a game of tennis.

ALCOA grants $65,000

Maryville College is the recipient of a grant totaling $65,000 from Alcoa Foundation. $50,000 is to be used to finance a Community Outreach Program for residents of Maryville, Alcoa, Knoxville, and surrounding areas.

Alcoa will present $40,000 of the grant to the college by June of this year and the remaining $25,000 by June 1980.

The $50,000 portion of the grant designated for the outreach program will provide funds for underwriting key programs to enchance the cultural and educational development of school classes, civic clubs, businesses and individuals.

In addition to the $50,000 for this program, the Foundation is giving MC $10,000 for its operation of the Tremont Education Center. This gift is to partially compensate for the substantial loss incurred by the College as a result of the facility being closed to overnight activities this year. The MC scholarship program will receive $3,000 and $2,000 is for unrestricted funds.

MC will receive $25,000 a year for two years for establishment of the Community Outreach Program. Additional funding for continuation of this program is subject to reevaluation of the program by the Foundation at the end of the two year period.

Commenting on the grants, Dr. Anderson said, "We are exceedingly grateful to the ALCOA Foundation for this generous grant which will allow us to make a first-class effort in developing a Community Outreach Program while providing support for other vital programs at the College."

"It will enable us to become an even better good neighbor to the community," he added.

Dr. Anderson also said that MC is committed to making the outreach effort one that will bring credit to the community and Maryville College.

Some programs designated for enrichment under this grant include CIV; the Maryville College Concert Choir; the Maryville-Alcoa College Community Orchestra; the MC playhouse; MC Opera Workshop; and the Preparatory School for the Arts, which is located on the MC campus with a branch in Knoxville.

As part of this program, the College plans to prepare and distribute a cultural newsletter promoting and describing events on and off campus. The newsletter will also invite residents to try out for parts in musical and theatrical productions.

Seeking editors

The communications committee, which acts as publisher of all student publications, will select during spring term new editors to serve for the following academic year.

Editors selected for the Highland Echo, campus newspaper, Chilhowean, the yearbook, and Impressions, literary magazine, will assume their duties at the beginning of fall term.

Applicants for editorship of the newspaper must be a rising junior or senior with a GPA of at least 2.0 for all college work, have at least three terms' experience on the staff of a college newspaper, and have completed the journalism interim.

Students interested in this position must complete an application form and submit a trial issue of the Echo. Following the trial issue, the committee will interview each applicant. Trial issues are done during spring term according to a schedule set up with the current editor.

The yearbook and literary magazine editors must be of sophomore or higher class standing and have at least a 2.0 GPA. Interested students must complete application forms for these positions.

Those interested in the Chilhowean editorship must have some experience on the staff of a college yearbook or similar publication and must complete an interview with the communications committee.

Impressions applicants also are interviewed by the committee and must have some experience on the staff of a newspaper or literary magazine.

Applications for all three positions are available from the communications office, Anderson Hall 212B, and should be completed and returned to that office by April 9.

Davis fund established

A memorial fund in honor of long-time coach "J.D." Davis '30 who died in August in Tampa, Fla., has been established at Maryville College.

The John A. "J.D." Davis Memorial Athletic Fund is being established with the endorsement of Davis' widow, Mrs. Margaret Davis, and their son, Dillon, an MC senior, who began the fund with an initial contribution.

The memorial fund will be used as an on-going fund to advance the athletic program, according to Athletic Director Billy Henry.

"J.D. was an outstanding MC athlete, and, as a coach, he was a real inspiration to young men and women and contributed so much to the college." Henry said.

"The memorial fund established in his honor is an opportunity for people to recognize his contributions and to continue to promote the development of a quality athletic program at MC for which J.D. worked so hard," he added.

Visitation okayed

A special meeting of the ACC was held Wednesday, February 28, to discuss lobby visitation hours in all residence halls. A request for 24 hour visitation in the lobby areas of all dorms was made at a previous meeting. The ACC granted the request on the condition that it is now each individual dorm's decision whether or not to install the privilege.

Johnson warns of possible future Vietnams

by David Boyd

"There may be more Vietnams if present conditions continue," warned Russell Johnson in a CIV Monday night. Johnson, a member of the American Friends Service Committee and a specialist in South and Southeast Asian affairs spoke on human rights in Thailand, Indonesia, South Korea, Singapare , and the Philippines.

Comparing conditions which existed in Vietnam in the early sixties and more recently in Iran with the conditions now existing in Southern Asia, Johnson points to possible trouble in these countries due to the lack of human rights. Human rights are subverted in these countries by military regimes and dictatorships which remain in power because of U.S. support.

The U.S. supports these governments because we need the energy and nonrenewable resources which these countries can provide and because the current governments tend to keep conditions within their countries stable. Strikes are outlawed and most activists are labled as communists and imprisoned; thus with guaranteed cheap labor, U.S. and Japanese multi-national firms are enticed to move to those countries. Once in these countries they apply more force on the U.S. government to continue support of the existing governments.

Johnson pointed to three main groups which are fighting for human rights in these countries, the Christians, the Muslims, and the communists. He said that all would like to see a nonviolent solution to the problem but unless something is done violence may be the only method available to these people.

With anti-American sentiment rising daily, Johnson urged those in attendence to inform themselves of the conditions within these countries, write to their congressmen, and to begin to live a simpler lifestyle. Johnson pointed out that as only 5.5% of the world's population, we Americans consume 35-40% of the world's nonrenewable and energy resources annually. He stated that we could not hope to maintain this lifestyle because other countries are growing tired of our exploitation.

In closing, Johnson stressed that "if our children are going to be free to travel in the world we must take action now."

What's next to be "phased out"?

Athletic policy needs policing

The recent controversy over the apparent phasing out of the wrestling and track programs has generated speculation as to how our school's athletic policy is being handled. At issue here is not only the fate of these two programs but the principle of what a small liberal arts college is about.

The Echo learned that there is a distinct possibility that the future athletic policy would concentrate on four major sports as to allow MC to put on a good show in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference (ODAC). Comments by Dr. Anderson and Dr. Mangus were all general, saying that the policy at MC is to achieve quality in all aspects of Maryville athletics. Coach Bill Henry went a little further by saying that preparation of four major sports (football, basketball, baseball, and tennis) for ODAC competition might result in the slighting of the so-called "minor sports."

It's common knowledge that the major sports have been overeating their budgets. The result, as Henry suggested, has been the virtual starvation of the minor sports. Upcoming meetings to decide the allotment of the proceeds from the Scot's Road Race should prove interesting, especially since Henry does not have a concrete definition for "minor sports."

What is causing the apparent downfall of these sports? Is it a well thought-out plan or pure apathy and neglect? Coaching apathy does seem one obvious reason. Track coach John Shannon failed to notify the track team when U.T. staged an "all-comers" meet in Feb. Furthermore, when the Athletic Committee met recently to discuss the track problem Shannon did not even make an appearance. Is this a tactic to purposely phase out the program or pure apathy?

The demise of the wrestling program began with the departure of Don Elia. Coach Elia left MC because of financial disputes with the administration. Today's coach, Mike O'Brien is probably well qualified as a football instructor, but in the field of wrestling he apparently cannot cut the grade. Could the transformation of the wrestling room into a weight room be another signal that wrestling is quietly being shelved?

The obvious fiscal limitations of the Maryville College athletic program cannot be denied, but these limitations are not an excuse for the lack of integrity and openness which currently surrounds the athletic department

Is this not a small liberal arts college? Is it not the purpose of this school to offer as wide an education as possible? It would seem to us that we are selling ourselves short by limiting the opportunities that one may encounter while a student here.

In the future, an ACC sub-committee will draw up an athletic policy for MC. It is essential that we speak now to undermine the quiet manipulations which appear to be taking their toll on the athletic program of this College. We would like to see this new policy publicly state the budget and policy for the athletic department, so that we whom this concerns will have more knowledge of the program and its potential changes.

It is not so much the apparent phasing out of certain sports that we object to as much as the under-the-table and dishonest way in which this phasing out is being handled.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,

We are writing this letter in hope that some very needed and constructive changes will take place here at Maryville College.

It is not our intention to degrade or embarrass any individual. The goal of this letter is to shed light on what we as students of good standing, feel is a very distressing situation. The situation we speak of is the recent course of events that has led to the dismissal of one of our fellow students from this college. The student is David Shankle and the situation is the decision by the Judicial Board to suspend him from Spring Term 79.

This is not a debate of guilt or innocence, nor is it a value judgement on our part. We feel the entire case from start to finish and the decisions and events in between were handled very poorly by certain individuals who were in charge of the matter.

This case along with other similar cases and recent developments on campus have led to a decline of respect and confidence students have for the office of the Dean of Students.

Having been students at Maryville College for the past four years, these developments are extremely disturbing to us, and we feel they are equally disturbing to the great majority of our fellow students.

In the past the relationship between the Dean of Students and the student body has been one of confidence, respect, and an understanding of mutual needs. It is important to note that this is not the prevailing attitude on campus today. Students feel intimidated, somewhat harassed, and mighty fed up with the vibes coming from the southwest corner of Anderson Hall. It seems to us that a few individuals have suffered more than their share at the hands of the administration.

Again, it is these attitudes that has many students wondering where he/she stands under the hulking eye of the Dean of Students. We feel if we cannot experience the freedom and the spirit this college should provide then what is the meaning of an education here at Maryville College. . . .

We hope this letter will enlighten many members of this small community as to the problems this type of student/Dean relationship creates, as well as force certain administrators to proceed in their positions of POWER with care and caution before the entire student body is alienated. And that, sir, is not far away!

Sincerely,
Keith Williams

Dear Editor,

We don't usually like to make known our problems, but this seems to be one of great concern.

We, Kathi, Lokken and Nancy were "caught" in a Carnegie room after hours. We had our "trial" and this is what occurred. We were first told that we had to pick up GARBAGE for six hours. When one of us responded that she didn't wish to do that, she was called a bitch by a member of the judicial council. Then another alternative was given which was to pay $20 per person. The girls were asked to leave and then Mr. Coach O'Brien proceeded to tell one of the male victims that if he knew we were that rich he would have "soaked" us. This was our first offense in Carnegie. Not all of the "jury" was even present.

We left when we were told to leave that night. We didn't really do anything wrong. Other girls have been fined an average of $2.00 per person and countless other girls have not even been caught. Well, Coach O'Brien, you told us that you wanted to set an example. Here you are. We hope you're happy.

Sincerely,
Lokken Liane
Kathi Hamory
Nancy Freudenthal

Editor's note: The judicial board mentioned in the above is the Carnegie Hall board.

Ernie Farr

Farr on grounds 28 yrs.

by Anne Gilliland

Ernie Farr started working for Maryville College in July, 1951.

Over the years, he has worked as a security man and repairman. He has worked at the steam plant. He now helps maintain the campus' building and grounds.

He says the college has changed a great deal since 1951, "but then the whole world has changed, too. Prices have gone up and so on. I make a lot more money now, but it takes a lot more to buy things."

Students have changed, too. Farr says, "Thev're not as friendly, but I'm not around them as much as I used to be when I worked in the dorms. But I think they're pretty good. They could be a lot worse."

Physically, he says the campus has changed quite a bit. Old buildings have been torn down and new buildings built. The college has gotten quite a bit of new equipment,-- for example, power lawn mowers.

But perhaps the biggest change for Ernie Farr has been a change in working hours. "Sometimes I would work all day, then go home and eat and come back and work all night."

He would work 75 to 90 hours a week. It was only a few years ago that he went on a 40 hour work week.

"I've worked under three presidents," he comments. "Dr. Lloyd, Dr. Copeland, and Dr. Anderson. They've all had their good points."

Farr and his family live in Blount County. He has three boys and one girl.

"My children grew up here," he says. "They've made a lot of friends."

"I've enjoyed working at Maryville College," he continues. "You can get a good education here if you desire. If you want to flunk out, well, you can do that too."

"I haven't got anything bad to say," he concludes. "Everybody has different ways, but it doesn't matter to me."

"It doesn't matter whether you're from the south or north, white or black, Catholic or Methodist -- I treat them all the same "

Dean Mangus walked down the hall toward his office. Stopping at the door, he smoothed the wrinkles from his suit, smoothed his hair back, put on his best smile and briskly walked in. His secretary looked up, forced a smile and purred a greeting, "Hello Larry."

Dean Mangus stopped, "Good morning. Look, how many times do I have to tell you, it's Dean Mangus not Larry! Let's be formal around the office, Terry - I mean Ms Boyd."

"Whatever you say, Larry."

The Dean decided to ignore her last statement and move along. "Any calls for me today?"

"Yes," she answered, without looking up from her hunt and peck on the typewriter.

"Well," Mangus pressed, "who was it?"

"Oh, I thought you just wanted to know if anyone called." Mangus cringed. "It was the publicity company you were consulting."

"What did they have to say?"

"They think that it would help your image greatly if you'd have shirts printed up like the ones President Anderson had printed up. You know the ones that say Wonderful Wayne? Something like that, only with your name on it. They suggested "Laughing Larry."

" No, no, no! The students already call me that, and I hate it." The Dean plopped into his chair and slumped down, sulking.

As if on cue his secretary slid out from behind her desk and walked over to the Dean's desk, sitting down on the arm of his chair. Putting on her best pout, she purred, "Gee Larry, what's the matter, hmmm?"

"Oh I don' know," Mangus shifted his weight around in his chair and resting his head against her. "I guess I'm just depressed."

"Why?" she purred.

"Well," he sighed "things haven't been going too well. I don' think anybody likes me. Everything I do seems to go haywire. I just got to get rid of my negative image."

"Really?" she said, trying to sound sympathetic, "I didn't think things were that bad. Richard Nixon had image problems, but he managed to rise above them."

"Well, they are. Hardly anybody likes me or what I do. I try to make friends by sponsoring that high school basketball tournament and students call me irresponsible for not being at that Pearsons pot trial. I offered to rent out all of the racquetball courts to the community and the students got real mad about that. Fortunately I got things changed and told them that only one was to be rented out. It was good thing nobody got a hold of that paper saying we really were going to rent out all three courts."

"I sponsored the Scots Road Race. I initiated the Pearsons self governing

Allen-Reynolds senior art show

Laurie Allen-Reynolds will open her senior art show March 27 at 7:30 p.m. with a reception in the Fine Arts Center gallery.

The exhibit will run through April 6. It represents the artist's interest and development in illustration and will contain oils, watercolors, drawings, prints, and ornaments.

The main part of the exhibit is a series of illustrations from The Dispossessed by Ursula K. LeGuin.

Gallery hours will be 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"Muscle Beach" hits MC

A winter Carnival has been scheduled for Friday, March 9th. and will take place in the gym.

The pool will be open for swimming and will feature some special items such as under water lighting, music by the Beach Boys, and a movie "Muscle Beach Party" starring Franki Avalon and Annette Funicello. The final activity of the evening will be a Hamburger Cook out.

Scotties go 1-1 in tourney

by Robert Boone

MC 48—TWC 47

Sharon Brown's Maryville College Lady Scots' nipped the Tennessee Wesleyan Lady Bulldogs 48-47 last Thursday in a thrilling first round game of the State Small College Championships.

Playing host to the tournament this year, Maryville was vying a field of competitors including the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga, Carson Newman, Tennessee Wesleyan, Tusculum, Covenant College, Milligan College, David Lipscomb, Lambuth, Union University, and Austin Peay State University.

Starting off quickly, the Scots skipped to an early 10-2 lead with the clock inside fifteen minutes in the first half but were only up by a 27-26 count at the half.

In the second half, buckets by Holly Harton and Dee Dee Chapman helped Maryville rebuild its lead to 37-31, but an injury temporarily knocked high scoring Sandy Rabun out of action, and then Donna Owens fouled out. Wesleyan's excellent free throw shooting, 9-11, got them back in the game. With 2:15 left, Wesleyan stormed down the stretch to tie the game 43-43. Then Rabun re-entered the lineup and promptly responded by connecting with both ends of a one and one with :09 remaining and put Maryville ahead to stay 48-45. The Scots then surrendered the easy bucket and let time run out. Sandy Rabun turned in a good night's work with 14 points to lead the Lady Scot's scoring.

In a quarter final game Friday against the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga, the Lady Scots were overpowered by the Lady Mocs 85-61. The loss eliminated Maryville from the tournament and ended their season with a 13-11 mark.

MC only trailed 20-16 with less than fourteen minutes remaining in the first half, but a quick Moc scoring flurry of 16 unanswered points opposed to MC's 4 popped UTC up by 34-28, and Maryville was never really in the contest.

Gilmore promoted, serves as liaison for campus

Eleanor C. Gilmore, secretary to Maryville College President Wayne Anderson, has been promoted to administrative assistant to the president, effective since March 1.

Mrs. Gilmore joined the College staff as Dr. Anderson's secretary in July 1977.

In this new capacity she will serve as liaison with students, administrators and faculty; staff aide to the Board of Directors and the community advisory committee; office manager; and advisor and general assistant to the president.

Mrs. Gilmore moved to Maryville in July 1976 from New Jersey where she had served as executive secretary to the president and vice president of Mazda Motors of America (East) Inc. in Piscataway.

Prior to that she was secretary to the chief executive officers for three other New Jersey firms and held other secretarial positions in California and Florida. She has also served as a substitute high school teacher and director of Christian Education for the First Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Gilmore received a Bachelor of Arts degree in education in 1971 from Montclair State College, Upper Montclair, N.J. In addition she has attended Columbia University in New York City, Silliman University in the Phillippines and the University of California at Berkeley.

She is also a graduate of Jones Business College, Orlando, FL . and Electronic Computer Programming Institute, Seattle, Washington.

Hearings held on new draft

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS)

On February 9, Sen. John Stennis (D-MS) rose in the U.S. Senate to call for a "fair and equitable" military draft. Chairman of the powerful Senate Armed Forces Committee, Stennis complained the volunteer recruitment system – in effect since the Selective Service structure was disbanded in 1972 – wasn't working; "We're simply not getting the manpower."

Now a month later, hearings on the new draft, which would affect 11 million college students as well as the other 36 million Americans between the ages of 18-29, have begun before the House Armed Services Committee. Though there are now several bills that would revivify the draft, most would offer some variations on the draft that ended seven years ago.

The impetus behind the calls for conscription is the Pentagon's worry about declining enlistment. Dept. of Defense studies released last December show what the volunteerism that helded the armed forces fill 105 percent of its manpower requirements in 1975 fell to 90 percent in 1978. The Navy and the Marines filled only 85 percent of their 1978 quotas. The Army's Ready Reserve units, used for quick insertion into front lines if there is a military emergency, have only 180,000 of 730,000 places filled. Defense thinks it would take 250 days to mobilize the 650,000 recruits needed to meet an emergency.

Draft advocates don't think even slicker advertising for the volunteer army will help, either. Like colleges, the armed forces face a drop in the number of eligible candidates. The 2.2 million people eligible for the military this year will fall to 1.7 million by 1985.

Reality in near future

Les Aspin, (D-WI) of the House Armed Services Committee, still doesn't like the idea of a new draft. Peacetime conscription, he says, "is essentially unfair. To say we ought to overthrow or change the all-volunteer force just because you have a problem with the reserves is to change 90 percent be-

Biden voices problems

by Wendy Magee

Senator Joseph Biden of Delaware spoke to a large number of MC students and faculty at the CIV on Friday, March 30. "America in the 1980's: What lies ahead in international relations," was the title presented.

Biden's speech focused on what is in store for the U.S. in the next ten years. The military, economy, foreign and domestic relations of the U.S. were all discussed. Many references were made to our government not giving Americans credit for their intelligence. He stressed the idea that often U.S. citizens are not fully aware about what is going on. According to Biden, this is because the government has a tendency to reveal only part of certain information rather than the whole story.

In conclusion, Biden stated that the U.S. will be going through some very troubling times in the next ten years. He directed his attention on the students and stressed the fact that it was the generation of the students that will make the difference. He stated that good leadership is vital in the next generation of government, and that the future of U.S. largely depends on the students of today.

Task forces formed to evaluate sore spots

Task Forces have been formed to evaluate three areas of Maryville College which serious questions have been raised about pertaining to their functioning ability and purpose, President Wayne Anderson has announced. The three areas to be investigated are the ACC, judicial process, and intercollegiate athletics.

Each Task Force will be headed by a chairman and will comprise members of the student body and faculty who volunteered for the specific Task Forces last term. The meetings of each Task Force is open to the public and the public is encouraged to attend and participate.

The decisions and thoughts of the Task Forces will be submitted to the ACC.

The Task Forces studying the ACC is chaired by Dr. Russell Parker. This Task Force will analyze the ACC's structure and function on the campus. They will discuss the limitations of the ACC, its strengths and weaknesses, the validity of its representation and structure, and what alternative systems could be considered.

Ed Herbert is the chairman of the Task Force formed to evaluate the judicial process. Some of the questions which will be discussed are the selection of individuals for judicial boards, how a person's rights can be protected, the function of the appeals process, and the role of the Dean of Students's office in hearing cases.

The Task Force to evaluate intercollegiate athletics is chaired by Sharon Youngs. The duty of this Force is to establish priorities among the intercollegiate sports which the College will offer during the 1979-80 academic year. The committee will take special notice of student interest, the impact of various sports on the campus community as well as the outside community, and the necessity to improve the athletic program for women. The Task Force will also consider the placement of "minor sports" in the sports cirriculum.

Nuclear power knowledge marred by leaks

This past week in Harrisburg, Pa., the worst fears of an energy-concious nation have been realized. Opponents of nuclear power have always protested that not enough is known about radioactivity and its affect on the environment to justify wholesale nuclear operations. And, even worse, no thoroughly safe method for the disposal of nuclear waste has been discovered. But America demands staggering amounts of energy to keep it running, and it has already learned that oil, natural gas, and even electricity are in short supply. Nuclear energy at first seemed like a miracle, capable of making America independent of foreign fuel. Politicians and financiers quickly jumped at this thread of promise, and the public was assurred that nuclear power was the one thing that could solve our energy worries.

And now it appears we have jumped the gun. We do lack the necessary research and safety controls. Things are beyond man's control; the "hydrogen bubble" that might lead to a suddenly-infamous "melt-down" in the Harrisburg plant is moving regardless of man's wishes. We have purposely created a monster, who possesses the potential ability to contaminate our water, cause human genetic disruptions, stimulate the growth of cancer, and seep through our soil into our food supply.

It's time to take the blinders off our eyes. There is no such thing as a miracle fuel source. Nuclear energy still contains too many unknowns, too many unanswered questions. We were wrong to ever believe that it could meet all our energy demands. We are toying with vast destruction, not to mention possible extermination. Scientists tell us we have other alternatives: solar, wind, and geothermal power, along with increased dependency upon coal and hydro-electricity. Think of the advances that might have been made in solar energy, an infinitely safer and cheaper source, if only a fraction of the money lavished upon nuclear development had been bestowed upon it.

There are no easy answers to our present situation. To abandon development of nuclear energy would damage prides and disappoint bank accounts of high-ranking advocates. But blind continuation may wound the physical and mental capabilities of our unborn and may create wastelands out of our fertile countryside. Other energy sources should immediately be further researched, explored, and adopted.

The American public could soon be required to make some important ethical decisions concerning energy. For once, we should consider long-term effects rather than immediate benefits. We are not playing a game of chance, but of skill. And the prize is survival.

Campus participation urged

As the dust settles we are able to gain perspective on the events which exploded on this campus last term. Out of the storm of distrust and loose emotions has emerged some real problems which this College must properly deal with if it is to adopt to change in its efforts to maintain fair policy.

Fortunately, the administration's responses are all one could hope for.

The Task Forces, set up to evaluate the problem areas which last term's cleaning house period has left us, are well intented and designed. The complaints about the judicial process, the ACC, and the off-beat athletic policy (or lack of one) are being delt with in a realistic manner. Through proper channels, these areas can be evaluated and corrected.

But we cannot let the enthusiasm and involvment of last term die.

Like all worthwhile changes, these evaluations and potential changes will take time and hard work. We encourage students and faculty to participate in the Task Force meetings. It will be dissapointing to experience student apathy after so many students seemed to be interested and know what was going on during last term's debates. If apathy strikes, much faith will be rightly lost in a student body which challenges an administration for change but cannot return the challenge when the administration responses with enthusiasm and viable means to accomplish such changes.

Senator Joseph Biden

Biden chats with students

by Anne Gilliland

Senator Joseph Biden, a Democrat from Delaware, spoke at CIV last Friday.

After his speech, he answered questions on a variety of topics, from who writes his speeches to the draft.

"I write my own speeches," the Senator said. "I've hired speechwriters, but I can't read a speech convincingly." Instead, he has a written outline and enlarges on it as he speaks.

The Senator then spoke on the situation in the Middle East. "There is only a possibility of a conflict in the Middle East. But if there is a conflict, there is a probability of U.S. involvement," he commented. Although he stressed that he is not predicting such a conflict, he added that " The use of U.S. forces is not discounted by anyone. The disruption of energy supplies could have a "catastrophic affect" on this country."

Biden does predict the formation of a new alliance in the Middle East, comprised of Israel, Saudi Arabia and Egypt, in spite of the little that these three countries have in common.

Biden also believes that the isolation of radical Arab elements would have the greatest affect in stabalizing the Middle Eastern situation.

Biden pointed out that in many international situations, the morally right thing to do and the thing that best serves our self-interest are often the same.

He used the situation in Iran as an example of this, saying "The United States never questioned support of Iran because we had set up the Shah's government."

According to Biden, it would have been both morally right and in America's self-interest not to support such a repressive regime.

The Senator noted that politician's appeals to ethical behavior in the areas of both foreign and domestic policy seldom are effective today. He attributed this to "constant political rhetoric" and the fact that "self interest motivates people."

However, he added that self interest "does not require us to be less humane, giving or patient."

The subject of the re-institution of the draft was then raised. "The volunteer army is not working," said Biden. "Some believe we must change the volunteer army. Others believe that the draft must be re-instituted."

Biden himself believes that the volunteer army should be improved. However, he says the draft would

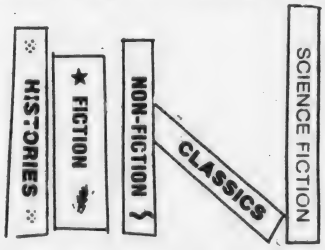
Ah, spring term. I betcha thought it would never get here, huh? Go ahead and admit it-it is kind of nice to be back at ole MC.

Spring term is the season for all kinds of things. Intramural softball, frisbee on the lawns, baseball games to watch on weekends, and sitting on the front steps of Pearsons after lunch and dinner, just to name a few. Then there are the sunny days, warmer weather and all the fun things they bring, like short-shorts showing off shapely legs and spring break tans. The first spring flowers come up and blossom and the trees put on their first hesitant buds.

Of course, some things don't change from winter to spring terms-Saga is just as tasteless and weekends are just as hopelessly boring as before. Such is Maryville, Notice, though, that in their infinite thoughtfullness and wisdom, maintenance has cold water in the showers every morning to keep us from getting too hot in spring's warmer weather. Yes sir, they really watch over us, don't they?

Returning this spring for another exciting season is the always popular Beached Whale Society (BWS). Every state in the union produces beached whales in varying amounts. Ask anyone who went to Florida for break. Florida produces exceptionally good beached whales. Their '79 model year beached whales were on show over the break, and their new models were really nice - - -slick, streamlined, and well-tanned.

Many colleges and universities produce their own beached whales, and MC is no exception. Just look out in the field behind Lloyd on any sunny day. Major beached whales producers in this college community are, in order of beached whales produced: Lloyd Inc., Davis Amalgamated, and Dorm 1 limited. Briefly now, let's review their products quality and performance.



Lloyd Inc., the major beached whale exporter and producer has a firm grip on the market. They put more whales in the field than the other two dorms combined. Their '79 selection is worth looking at.

Davis Amalgamated, a close second behind Lloyd Inc., also has some very nice new '79 models, as does Dorm I Ltd., the third major producer of beached whales. They are all there for the watching.

If you are really into watching beached whales, why not join the Beached Whale Watchers Society (BWWS). This group of dedicated individuals are always on the watch for beached whales. One can often see spotters on the balconies of Copeland and Dorm I on a sunny day. When their diligence pays off, the spotters will alert the others on the dorm with cries of "There she blows! There she blows!"

Most BWWS members watch from the safety of their balconies or front yards, but some actually risk life and limb by going right up to the beached whale or whales for a close-up look, and some join the beached whales themselves. Either way, whether you're a beached whale yourself or just a spectator, have a fun spring and hope to hell it quits raining.

Tony Ierulli reaches for home during the first game against Warren Wilson. Ierulli was safe, and the Scots went on to win the opener, 6-4.

Scots jump to 4-1 start

by Robert Boone

Sporting a 4-1 record Coach Billy Henry's baseball team appears to have jumped the season off on the right foot. Tony Ierulli, Dave Osborne and Johnny Walker have been strong performers on the diamond to ignite the Scot's early surge.

MC 10 UTC 6

Powered by Tony Ierulli's fourth inning three run homer, Maryville knocked off the University of Tenn. at Chatt. 10-6 in the Scot's season opener. Larry Sheeley got the mound decision for Maryville, but needed some relief from Mike Boring in the sixth inning.

The hot bats of Johnny Walker, Dave Osborne, and Tony Ierulli collected 9 of Maryville's 13 hits. Walker went 4 for 5, Ierulli was 3 for 4 at the plate and knocked in 5 RBI's, and Osborne was 2 for 3 and added 2 stolen bases to the big MC win.

MC 5 Tennessee Tech 8

Maryville's only loss of the season occurred at Cookeville, TN at the hands of Tennessee Tech 8-5, Mar. 26. Larry Sheeley was tagged with the loss for MC. Maryville was up 5-3 after three inning but failed to get any more runs across the plate. Maryville mustered 6 hits with Dave Osborne going 2 for 4 and Mark Talley chipping in 2 RBI's.

MC 3 Tennessee Tech 2

In the nightcap of the twin bill with Tech the Scots prevailed in extra innings to nab another victory. With the score deadlocked in the ninth inning 1-1, Andy Limone walked, Osborne singled, and Ierulli singled to load the bases for Maryville. Limone scored on Walker's ground out to the pitcher to up the score 2-1 in favor of the Scots. Tutin walked and Osborne scored on a fielder's choice by Jim Rhyne and Maryville was up 3-1. In the bottom of the ninth Tech could only score one run and the triumph went to the Scots. Barry Mathis was the winning pitcher for Maryville after he replaced Mike Boring in the sixth inning. Boring struck out 5 batters and gave up just 2 hits.

MC 6 Warren Wilson 4

Shortstop Jim Reese went 2 for 3, stole 4 bases, and scored 3 runs to lead Maryville past Warren Wilson College in the first game of a doubleheader Mar. 31. Two RBI's by Tony Ierulli and Dave Osborne insured the home team's triumph. Barry Mathis hurled the mound decision after relieving Mike Boring in the fourth inning.

MC 12 Warren Wilson 0

In a lop-sided affair Maryville blasted Warren Wilson 12-0 to capture the twinbill. Big fourth and sixth inning saw a total of 9 runs scored for the Scots. Centerfielder Lance Osborne needed only a homerun to have a perfect afternoon. The hard swinging outfielder slashed a single in the third inning, batted a double in the fifth, and hammered out a triple in the sixth to lead the Maryville batting parade. Ronnie Wyche was 2 for 4 and swatted 3 RBI's. Sandy Mathis was impressive on the mound for Maryville giving up no runs, three hits, and fanning six batters in route to the fourth MC win.

Men drop opener, 7-2

The Maryville College Men's tennis team dropped the season opener Sat. March 31, to Emory and Henry, 7-2 on the Scot's home court and failed to revenge last season's 9-0 loss to the Wasps. It was the eighth match for the more experienced Virginians. Two performers, Ran Massey and Larry Durand, collected Maryville's only match wins, however, two other matches needed a tie-breaker set.

Results:

Singles: Mike Blackburn (E&H) over Alfonso Granato (MC) 6-2,6-2; Randy Massey (MC) over Mike Robinson (E&H) 7-6,5-3, 6-1; Nile Testerman (E&H) over Kelly Knox (MC)6-3, 6-1; Dave Charlton (E&H) over Robert McCulloch (MC) 6-1,6-2; Steve Carver (E&H) over Steve Arnold (MC) 2-6,6-2,7-6; Larry Durand (MC) over Mark Hall (E&H) 6-3,6-3.

Doubles:

Blackburn and Tewksbury (E&H) over Granato and Knox (MC) 5-7,6-4,7-6; Testerman and Robinson (E&H) over Massey and Byrd (MC) 4-6,6-0, 6-3; Charlton and Carver (E&H) over Kasuya and Hill (MC) 6-1,6-0.

According to Biden, there would be no college defer ments and women would be drafted. Service would be for a shorter period of time. Those drafted would have the option of serving in VISTA, a government anti-poverty program, or some other type of alternative service.

Biden, who was the second youngest man ever elected to the Senate, also gave some practical advice to students interested in going into politics.

But a staffer with the House committee told CPS that "enough people are thinking about a draft right now" to make it a reality in the near future. Passage this year seems slight, since Stennis' Senate Armed Services Committee already has a heavy workload this session, and is not expected to vote it onto the Senate floor.

ACC tackles absenteeism

by Bill Thomas

Various topics affecting MC campus life were discussed at the All College Council meeting on Wednesday, April 4. The meeting began with a heated debate over the new MC absentee policy. Reports were then heard from the following ACC committees: Social, CIV, and Food and World Concerns.

The meeting began with Jim Engel, sophomore representative, commenting negatively toward Proposal II of the Absentee Policy. The policy was formed by the Instructional Program Committee, and it was approved as a college policy in the last ACC meeting.

Student representatives to the ACC , including Jim Engel, Chris Rigell, and Cathy Angell, stated that the clause in Proposal II, which says that after 4 absences in a class a student's name should be given to the Dean of Students for further enquiry and a possible failing grade by a teacher, is unnecessary.

Jim Engel stated that this rule in effect " is treating students like children." Dr. Lewis then pointed out that the new policy is not compulsory. The new policy will be a supplement to the old policy which leaves absenteeism up to the teacher's discretion. He noted that "an instructor is not 'required' to turn in a student to the Dean of Students" or to fail a student after 4 absences.

Spring '79: What's going on

by Linda Wiley

Spring term, thanks to the Social Committee, promises to be filled with numerous entertaining activities. Many events have been scheduled and more are being planned.

Easter weekend begins on April 13th with SAGA sponsoring two showings of the movie Choir Boys in The Dining Room at 8:00 and 11:30 p.m. It will be free, and there will be snacks provided. Make plans to attend.

Saturday, the 14th, Copeland Hall is sponsoring an Easter Egg Hunt for handicapped children; and Sunday, April 15th, at 6:15 a.m., the traditional Easter Sunrise Service will be held in the College Woods Amphitheatre. The MC Brass Band and Choir will accompany the service.

A Coffee House in Lloyd Lobby is scheduled for Friday, April 29th, from 9-12 p.m. There will once again be drinks and ten-cent pretzels, along with good entertainment. Anyone wishing to perform should contact Cathy Angell, Linda Crozier, or Genie Varker.

April 22-28, Black Culture Week, will culminate on April 28 with a full schedule of activities sponsored by the B.S.A. and the Social Committee. The activities will include a film, a CIV with Olympic Gold Medal Winner, Ralph Boston, a Fashion Show featuring MC students, and a semi-formal dance in Pearsons with the band, Third World Generation. Tickets for the dance will be $3.50 for a couple, $2.00 for a single in advance, and $4.00 and $2.50 at the door.

May opens with a picnic at Cades Cove on Saturday, the 5th. There will be food, tubing, and other activities sponsored by the Junior Class and Social Committee.

Sunday, May 6th., the MC Playmakers will perform A Thurber Carnival in the Theatre Colonnade at 6:00 p.m. It will be a Costume Party filled with surprises. Afterwards, at 7:00 in the Greenbelt Park, the MC Choir will have its Spring Concert.

Saturday will include a Mini-Olympics in the morning and late-night movies and a midnight pancake cook in FAC Lounge at night.

May Madness will end Sunday afternoon with "Pink Sunday." A carnival-like atmosphere in "Gay Nineties" style, Sunday will feature games, ice cream, cotton candy, and other food booths.

With these and other activities in store, the term will be an action-packed one, so be marking your calendars and watching for details.

Lewis named first Ombudsman

Dr. Wallace L. Lewis, associate professor of history at Maryville College, has been named to the newly created position of College Ombudsman, MC President Wayne Anderson announced today.

The appointment, effective immediately, is for two years. Purpose of the new position, Dr. Anderson explained, is to improve communication on campus by providing someone to whom students, faculty and staff can go if they have any questions or concerns.

The role of the Ombudsman is to facilitate, act as a broker or mediator and serve as an information gatherer in order to ensure prompt and useful response to all questions and concerns of both an academic and non-academic nature, he added.

The MC Ombudsman will have authority to ask questions and to receive immediate and helpful responses, the president noted. He further explained that while the Ombudsman will not be a substitute for the final decision-makers on campus and will not disrupt normal channels of communication on campus, he will serve to see that decisions are made promptly and are communicated to the relevant sectors of the campus community.

"I'm exceedingly grateful to Wally Lewis for accepting this important position," Dr. Anderson said. "He is held in high esteem on campus, is knowledgeable about the traditions and workings of the College and is readily accessible. Moreover, he is committed to the concept of an Ombudsman and I'm sure he will perform effectively in this role."

As Ombudsman, Dr. Lewis will schedule times for personal discussions each week and will have a special post office box for written communication.

Faculty discuss task forces

Several topics were discussed at the faculty meeting held Thursday, April 5. Dr. Anderson discussed the task forces that were formed from the results of the meetings held in the beginning of March between students and faculty. He thanked the faculty for their help in the meetings and for the reports written from the results of the meetings. Dr. Anderson thinks that many of the issues in the reports are legitimate. He stressed that the administration is trying to respond to the issues one by one. There is, however, priority to the task force formed for intercollegiate athletics. Anderson also revealed that the responsibilities of the office of the Dean of Students are being evaluated; this is to determine who has what responsibilities in the Dean of Students office.

The budget was another main topic of discussion. Anderson talked of reallocating priorities in the budget. He would prefer more percentage of the budget to go to instruction. It seems that right now MC is well behind other institutions in the percent of budget allocated to instruction. Anderson hopes to bring up the percentage by 1983.

A new academic proposal was reviewed by the faculty. The proposal states that a student will be allowed to drop a course between the third and sixth week of a term without receiving a WF (withdrawal failing). He will instead receive a W up to the sixth week of the term.

Ms. S.M. Atchley gave a report on the continuing education program. She stated that enrollment was up and that MC is not losing any money from it.

Food Comm. debates smoking

The Food Committee, formed in the middle of winter term, is still going strong. The major concern of this committee is to keep the students happy with the present food service. The committee is also responsible for keeping students informed on any actions taken with different food services.

The committee, working with Dr. Mangus, has obviously improved the quality of Saga's food. Their major concern is to keep the quality service recently gained.

Several issues were discussed at the most recent meeting held Friday, April 6, in Pearsons. There was a complaint that orange juice was again disappearing from many meals. Saga has promised to serve it more regularly. The idea of a smoking section was was discussed. There is a possibility that smoking will be allowed in the back section of the dining hall where the trays are emptied. The rest of the dining ahll will still remain designated non-smoking. Another item discussed

Use force to fill quotas?

Draft proposals not justifiable

We've heard some frightening things about the draft lately. Is it true that young men and women alike stand to be called forth by the Selective Service in the near future? And if so, why? Is there a war somewhere that we know nothing about? Is there going to be one?

Actually, the main reason behind proposals to reinstate the draft seem to stem from the Army's recent difficulty in filling its quotas for the all-volunteer forces. Recruiting efforts, despite slick advertising, have been only 90% effective. And that has led some officials, namely Sen. John Stennis, to come to the conclusion that the quotas should be filled by force.

But take heart. Many other officials, even in the Defense Dept., feel that a peacetime draft is essentially unfair, that it would create discipline problems in the Army, and that it might meet with resistance from young people. They claim --as does the Pentagon--that the all-volunteer Army is still viable.Many have proposed that recruiting more women and lowering some admission standards would swell numbers above target levels. One fact worth noting is that failure to fulfill recruiting quotas has not resulted in failure to maintain the Armed Forces at the desired level of two million enlistees. Fewer men are withdrawing from service than were anticipated, thereby making up for the lack of recruits.

Senator Stennis is concerned that time will run out and we will suddenly regret not having reinstated the draft. He believes the all-volunteer Army has actually weakened our defenses, and that it is not possible to get "sufficient numbers" of recruits through volunteer methods. The Pentagon believes the opposite. When the all-volunteer Army was begun in 1972, its aim was to "streamline" the Army by attracting bright, responsible men and training them to build a skilled, professional force. This, they claim, has been accomplished; the quality of today's Army is equal or superior to that under the draft. So why the sudden emphasis on quantity?

Draft advocates and opponents may reach a compromise of sorts in the form of mandatory registration of 18-year-olds. This would facilitate rapid induction if a crisis situation arose. A highly laudable alternative to registration would involve drawing up a computerized list to be kept on hand until needed, of all eligible young people. This would save taxpayers approximately $8 million over the cost of actual registration.

It is our opinion that every possible alternative to imposing a peacetime draft should be explored. The all-volunteer Army is still secure and operable; if it needs boosting in the form of higher benefits, more women, and lower standards, then perhaps we should consider these methods. Then again, perhaps the recruiting targets have been set just a little too high. The number of 18-year-olds in America is declining, and is expected to fall even more rapidly in the coming years. In 1972, the Army aimed for one volunteer out of four eligibles; the ratio is now nearly 1:3, and may reach 1:2 within a decade if present quotas and standards remain intact. Expecting to recruit a third of all young Americans seems a bit unreasonable, and we can't help but wonder if it is really necessary. Although we may be in no position to judge if current quotas are excessive, this concern cannot be ignored. After all, we are the people who are expected to fulfill these quotas.

In short, it is difficult to justify the reasoning behind draft proposals at the present time. Even the idea of registration is distasteful. The seriousness of reinstating compulsory military service cannot be overestimated. War is one thing; quotas are another. We should not be required to serve simply for the sake of numbers.

Dialogue of Heart and Mind

Heart
Love is a many splendored thing. . . .
Mind
Yeah, when it goes right. I mean, what do you expect from human emotions?
Heart
Don't interupt me.
Don't corrupt me.
Feign your rational thoughts somewhere else. I tire of your cataloging everything; besides, why can't love be like Shakespeare makes it? After all, how many rational people do you meet in a week- - -and how many of them are sane?
Huh?
HUH?
Mind
(Takes a long pull on his cigar, looks at the heart and lightly tips the ash from the cigar.)
When are you going to realize that the game we play is as silly as the game you play, romantically, that is? I make no claims for rational thought, or even wanting it, but at least give me credit for coordinating everything.
Heart
Game? GAME! you call this a game? Human love, interraction, creativeness. . . .
Mind
Oh, can the shit, will you? For once in your life try to be human. Think about things for once.
Heart
If only you had a heart.
Mind
If only you had a mind.

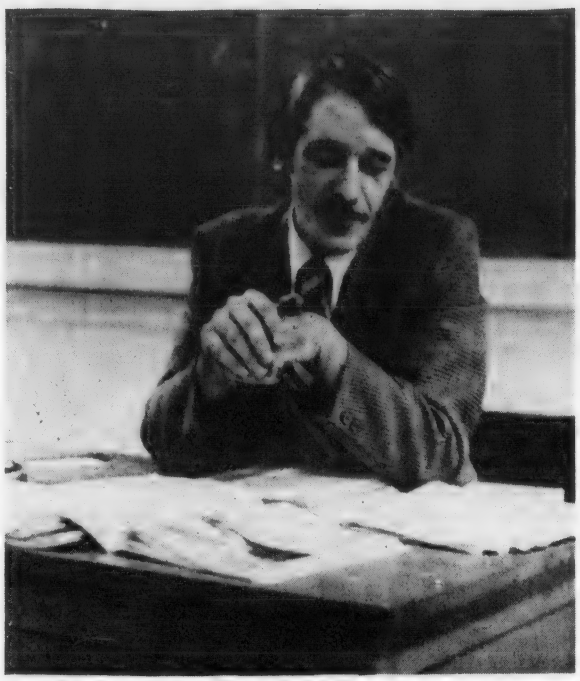
Holy Week services start tonight.

Several different Holy Week religious services in observance of Easter will be held at Maryville College.

The first service is the Maundy Thursday communion which will be conducted by Chaplain James Stewart in the Little Chapel on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. A service of readings, meditations, and prayers will be held on Good Friday from noon to 1:30 p.m. in the Little Chapel. The service is arranged in such a way that people will be free to come and go as their schedule permits.



The traditional Easter sunrise service will be at the natural amphitheatre in the College Woods at 6:15 a.m. on April 15. It will be led by Chaplain Stewart, the College choir, and the College band. This is the 42nd year that the College has observed Easter with a sunrise service.

Following the sunrise service, communion will be held in the "loop" above the amphitheatre.

In case of rain the sunrise service will be held in the Wilson Chapel.

It's softball season again at big MC! Intramural competition was never so fierce as it gets in the softball leagues. Teams with colorful names-such as the Muff Divers, Panda Thigh, The Excitable Boys, Fat is Sensuous, S.O.M.F., Sultans of Swing, and the Bad Guys slug it out for the championship.

All the teams are made up of students with the exception of the Bad Guys, a team made up of MC's finest-the faculty. This could be the dark team of the season.

A typical pregame meeting and game goes something like this:

Coach Stinnett is lecturing to the team, which today consists of Drs. Cartlidge, Bunde, Naylor, Yeager, Ramger, Dean Mangus and son, and the team captain, Joe Rigell.

"Awright boys, now if we get with it here, we kin beat this team and. . .hey Cartlidge, what you reading that's more important than our team meeting? Dr. Cartlidge looks up and smiles.

"Zen and the Art of Softball," he says, still smiling.

"It figures. You're always reading some religious junk of some kind," cracks Dr. Bunde.

"Aw, go comb your beard, you. . . ."

"O.K., knock it off,you two guys. Lissen up," commands Rigell. "Who's getting the equipment here?"

"I think Chief was," replies Mangus.

"Where is Chief anyway?" asks Dr. Yeager, looking anxiously. "Anybody seen him?"

"No. He's never around when you want him or need him," complains Dr. Ramger.

"Forget him. Who's playing what position?" asks Dr. Cartlidge.

"O.K." Rigell runs down the list. "Stinnett's pitching, Mangus on first, Cartlidge on second, Ramger at shortstop, Bunde on third, Little Mangus in right field, Yeager in left, I'm playing center and Chief's gonna catch. Naylor's designated hitter and subbing for me at center."

Chief's gonna catch? He can't even catch his own breath, much less a softball," laughs Naylor.

Chief, who had just arrived, retorts, "Hell, with you as designated hitter; the opposition won't even need an outfield."

Exchanges fly back and forth as the team takes the field. By the end of the first inning, they are down 21-0 with only one out. Then an amazing play happens. A high fly is popped to right field and Dr. Naylor runs across for the catch.

"Otta the way, kid," he yells at Little Larry Mangus Jr. who is playing right field.

The ball misses Naylor's glove and bounces with a nice thump off his head into the glove of Little Larry Mangus, who immediately throws to third base to make a double play on a stunned student.

"Sorry,kid, my hair got in my eyes," explains Naylor.

"Wow. He's got an arm just like his mother's," shrills an excited Dean Mangus.

Batting proves to be even worse than their fielding as the Bad Guys take the plate, and the games goes quickly through the remaining innings. The final score is 56-3.

The Bad Guys trudge slowly off the field with the bitter taste of defeat in their mouths.

"Well," offers Rigell, "there's always next week."

Ceraolo emphasizes man

by Anne Gilliland

Lisa Ceraolo, a senior from Clearwater, Fla., opened her senior art exhibit Monday. The show and sale will be on display until April 20 in the FAC gallery.

The exhibit consists of paintings, drawings, pastels, and water-colors. Most of the work was done this year.

Some of the work was inspired by Ceraolo's independent study on Degas, the French Impressionist painter. Like Degas, Ceraolo has used unusual perspectives, compositions, and viewpoints.

Other paintings have a three-dimensional quality. A self-portrait wears a pair of real overalls and has cardboard arms which come out from the canvas.

Another favorite device is sunglasses. In one painting of a group of people at the beach, plastic sunglasses and bathing suit material are used.

Next year, Ceraolo plans to study at the Art Students League in New York. Although anyone may study there, artists' work is reviewed after a period.

"I like abstract work, but I do realistic work best," she said.

"Right now it's more of a challenge. But I don't like it to look photographic, though," she continued.

Ceraolo commented that she likes to work by herself and added, "In a way, I don't even like to see other peoples' work because it influences me."

When asked how she expected her work to change in the next few years, she replied "I really don't know. I expect to be very poor for a while, though."

She did talk about ways that her work has changed in the past few years. "I'm beginning to work from life now, where before I worked from photographs," Ceraolo commented.

She said she has also started to work more with paint instead of pastels and with the full figure instead of with portraits.

Several of Ceraolo's paintings are of ballerinas. Almost all are of people in various settings.

"I got interested in ballerinas because of my work with Degas (who was known for his paintings of the ballet) and because I've taken ballet," she said.

"In just about all of Western art, the emphasis is on man, not on nature," she said. "Well,my show is just like that,"

"I don't have the same interest in landscape as I do in people," Ceraolo continued. "It's not as challenging to me."

" I feel I'm too young to know what I want my work to say," she concluded. "But I do know that I want to say more. A lot of things about my work are going to change."

was a food preference survey that will soon be distributed to students. This will help to choose the most popular entrees for meals.

Although students are the biggest complainers, Saga also has some gripes. It seems as though a number of trays, silverware, and glasses are missing from the dining hall. More items are being taken everyday such as candle sticks that were used on the tables on the last special events' night. Saga is asking for more cooperation from the students in this area. If anyone has any of these items, Saga would greatly appreciate having them returned.

Action in last week's game against Carson-Newman.

C-N squeezes win from Scot

by Robert Boone

Arch rival Carson-Newman has always been a fierce competitor of Maryville College, and last Saturday's baseball game was no exception. The Eagles, now 14-6, nipped Maryville 8-7 in a wild and wooly 9-inning game that came down to the wire.

The big difference was a long C-N second inning in which the visitors scored 7 runs on 6 hits. Maryville jumped to an early 3-0 lead in the first inning. Jim Reese walked, Andy Limone singled, and then Dave Osborne singled to load the bases for the Scots. Reese and Limone were plated on Tony Ierulli's line drive single, and Osborne later scored on a wild pitch.

In the next inning, Carson-Newman jumped out to a 7-3 lead, but Maryville bounced back with 3 more runs in the third to narrow the gap to 7-6. Limone walked, Osborne singled, and then Tony Ierulli singled to left field to score Limone. A bad throw and another C-N error brought Osborne and Ierulli home.

The Scots fought back to tie the score in the seventh inning. Limone singled, advanced to second on Osborne's single, and scored on a sharp single to right field by Mark Talley to tie the score 7-7.

The Scots failed to match C-N's final run in the eighth inning and the Eagles went home victorious, 8-7. Mike Boring pitched all nine innings for MC and suffered the loss. Maryville's bat power came from Tony Ierulli, 2 for 5 with 3 RBI's, and Osborne and Limone who both went 2 for 4. The Scots had 9 hits opposed to 13 for the Eagles. Maryville travels to Knoxville next Tues. to take on the UT Vols. The Scots' next home game is April 30 against the University of the South.

Tennis team drops 2

The Maryville College men's tennis team is still looking for a win after having dropped two matches earlier this week. Tennessee Wesleyan College beat Maryville 6-3, and Hope College trounced the Scots 8-1.

Mr. Howard said that the new policy will give the college a guideline toward absenteeism which is in concrete form instead of the old existing policy which Dr. Lewis termed "wishy-washy."

Proposal II of the absentee policy finally reached approval by concensus with one added provision-- that Dr. Perkins write a clarifying statement of the new policy to college community members by May 3.

The Social Committee's annual report and planned activities for spring '79 were then given by Social Committee chairman Genie Varker. The committee's success in meeting students' social needs over the past year was praised by ACC members.

Varker then suggested that future Social Committee chairmen by reimbursed in some fashion for the great deal of time needed to plan and carry out social functions adequately.

The co-chairman of the CIV Committee, Mr. Howard, reported that the CIV program has gone well in '78-'79. He went on to say that the next year's program is currently being planned.

Food Committee Chairman Kevin Reilly noted his committee's major concern-- "to keep students happy with the present food service and to keep them (students) informed on any further action taken by MC administrators in replacing Saga." He said that the committee will be directly involved with the upcoming Saga menu structure.

The ACC will meet again on Wed., May 2, at 2:30.

Black Culture Week aims to stimulate awareness

by Wendy Magee

The Black Student Association (BSA) of MC will be actively participating in Black Culture Week that will run April 22 through the 28th. The objective of Black Culture Week is to stimulate awareness of black culture and its importance in America and the world. Black Culture Week seeks to expose MC to the aesthetic awareness of black roots. Purposes of this special week are to bring together different segments of the black community, and to bring better understanding between white and black people.

There are several activities planned throughout the week. Rick Mosley, member of MC's admissions staff and coordinator of the program, stressed the importance of student participation in the activities. He revealed the necessity for not only black student participation, but white students also.

The weeks' activities begin on Monday, April 23, with speaker Gerald Hendley. Hendley is the vice-president of the NAACP (National Advancement Association of Colored People) in Knoxville. At 8:00 p.m. in Fayerweather, he will speak on minority groups.

On Tuesday, April 24, at 8:00 p.m., in room 113 of Sutton, a Heritage Bowl will be held. This will be a version of the old College Bowl series. MC's BSA will compete against UT's AALSF (Afro-American Liberation Student Force) and the subject will be black history.

Thursday the UT Black Cultural Repertory Company will present the play "Black Men on Black Women, Black Women on Black Men." Excerpts from the broadway play "For Colored Girls Whoever Considered Suicide" will also be presented.

A pool party is planned for Friday night, April 27, with the help of the Social Committee.

ACC elections are Monday

The ACC All-Campus election will be held Mon., April 23. The results from this election will determine the composition of the ACC for 1979-1980, with the freshman representative being elected in the Fall.

The rising senior nominee is Mike Cherskov. He is running unopposed.

Lois Boney and Gary Lankford are vying for the rising junior position on the council.

The campus will also vote on the faculty, staff, and administration members on the ACC. From each category, one representative will be elected, with the exception of the administration category. There will be two representatives from it.

In the over 15 years of teaching division, Bill Dent and Jerry Waters are the nominees. In the 6-15 years catagory, Charlotte Beck and John Nichols are the choices. For 1-5 years of teaching Terry Bunde and Robert Naylor are the faculty candidates.

The staff nominees are Ruth Martin and Leslie Nier.

From the administration category two representatives will serve. The choices are Brick Brahams, Larry Mangus, and Jane Richardson.

These people are the candidates for the ACC election to be held on April 23. The entire campus is involved in this election.

Lundell operates P.O.

by Laura Ives

For those of you that haven't noticed, there is a new staff member on campus. He is David Lundell, the head of the Post Office and Print Shop. He has been here since the beginning of Spring Term and plans to stay indefinitely.

Lundell, a business major, graduated from Maryville College in 1976, as did his wife, Laura Dance. After graduating he worked as an assistant manager of K-Mart stores in Knoxville and Chattanooga and managed a World Bazaar in Houston. Lundell said that he and his wife returned because they love the mountains.

Blount exceeds goal

A total of $192,431 in gifts from Blount County has pushed the 1978-79 Maryville Campaign over its stated goal of $175,000. Bob Sullivan, general chairman of the campaign announced.

With four months left in the fiscal year the total funds raised represent a 30 percent increase over the $149,000 given by the Blount County area last year.

"We have made a concentrated effort in this year's campaign to remind residents of how reliant Maryville College and the local community are on each other," Sullivan said. "This substantial increase in the financial support from the community demonstrates an awareness of this reliance and for that, and the many generous gifts to the College, we are extremely grateful," he added.

Wisconsin pale about "Pail and Shovel"

(CPS) -- " It's a sweep for insanity. Now we can do anything we want," said a jubliant Leon Varijian upon his election to vice-president of the University of Wisconsin—Madison student government last fall. Newly elected Wisconsin Student Association (WSA) president Jim Mallon added, "The biggest joke of all is that we control $80,000 in student fees."

Since their victory on the "Pail and Shovel:: (P & S) platform, the pair have garnered national attention by such diversions as spending $4000 on an ice sculpture of the Statue of Liberty ("if the University can't go to the east coast, we'll bring the east coast here," went the reasoning), and $1700 issued for clown and University of New Jersey tee-shirts (so UW students could say they graduated from a prestigious eastern university).

Now, after six months of steering WSA into similar projects "dedicated to the four-year-old in all of us," the two are getting a different kind of attention from the UW student body.

" dedicated to the four-year-oid in all of us"

The same voters who turned out in record numbers to elect a majority of P & S senators have more recently turned to impeachment and recall efforts. A lawsuit was filed earlier this month that would have forced Mallon and Varijian to account for alleged overspending and affect a restraining order on further use of funds.

Circuit Judge P. Charles Jones, however, instructed the plaintiffs -- the Coalition to End Graft in Student Government -- to first pursue such actions through student government

No cure for dreaded disease

Seniors stricken by compensitis

Noticed that the seniors seem to be a bit on edge lately? It's not just the end of the year jitters of graduating and job hunting but the fear of comps. Say this word to a senior and he will wince and cringe. Comps are coming up on May 3 and 4 and seniors are getting worried.

Just what are comps or rather comprehensives? Why would such a thing throw seniors into such a state of panic?

Comps were instituted by Dr. Hunter and consist of two days of intensive testing. The first day is usually taken up with U.R.E.'s or the Undergraduate Records Examination in your area of expertise. The second day it taken up with the departmental exams. Here essay type questions and/or oral questions are given concerning the course you have taken.

Comps, it has been found, varies from department to department. For example, art majors aren't taking the standard U.R.E. exam this year but are having a special one made up. In the past, art majors always flunked U.R.E.'s because Maryville just doesn't offer the course. Chemistry and P.E. majors have oral exams. English majors have the U.R.E. and the departmental scores averaged together for a grade while the Political Science department goes by just the departmental score. Individualized majors have a problem with comps because their major may encompass many departments. Why is there so much diversity between the majors? There is so much confusion that most seniors really don't know what type of departmentals they will be taking and worse yet, how they will be graded.

The next question is-are comps really necessary? Are they worth all the pain and work done by the professors and students? The U.R.E.'s can be justified to show how well Maryville rates with other schools its size but why average that in with the departmentals when there is little chance of being able to ace the test? Departmentals are a good gauge of how well the student has learned and how efficiently the department is working. But why throw people into a panic by grading them? Why can't departmentals be pass/fail? The pressure would ease up and most students would probably do better. Graduating is hard enough without having to worry about failing comps.

Most seniors view comps as valuable because they can see how much they have retained by always add that they don't like begin graded on them. Some seniors feel that the whole idea of comps is a farce and should be abolished. Comps are very disturbing because seniors have been hearing about them for four years and now it is their turn to face them. Perhaps the good thing about comps is that it brings the senior class together through the emotion of panic. So, if you run into a senior who's crabby and complaining, remember, your time will come.

That was thirty years ago and now with a minor nuclear accident at least once a year and a major one every three years, the public doesn't even raise an eyebrow. They made the decision to live with these incidents when they failed to reduce their energy consumption in the late seventies. Harrisburg, PA, had waged a lonely war after Three Mile Island, but the country had refused to listen. They needed the energy. Clinch River in the late eighties had almost made them change their minds, but it is too late. The U.S. would have had to close down. Millions more would have died in addition to the million or so that died in relation to the accident. . .they weren't even sure if it was an accident. . .we were the first team in and we couldn't tell . . .no one will ever know I guess.

The media doesn't even carry much on the accidents anymore. With so many people around human life is cheap. "Two more died today at the L.A. Nuclear Reservation following radiation exposure during shut down procedures." They used to show us photographs of the mutants the Oak Ridge area produced after the Clinch River accident, but now even the mutants are old hat. They say that the mothers don't cry as their new born monsters are taken to the incinerators. They're better off.

I'm dying myself now. Year after year the maximum rad doses were increased so as not to excite the public much; as the old pollution indices were changed as the air pollution worsened prior to the big nuclear shift. We have fresh air and blue skies but the animals left years ago. . .insecticides you know. . .only those blasted insects survive our assaults. I'm ready to leave myself; leukemia has left me pale and weak. I've lost my taste. . .not that that highly processed food had any taste to begin with. This is my last day; death comes tomorrow at 5:30. They call it A.S., which means "approved suicide." I presented my case three days ago and the board gave final approval today. It doesn't usually take this long but there has been an awful lot of appeals lately. They say it's quick and painless; I don't care. It'll all be finished tomorrow morning and then I'll have the peace, the quiet, and the beauty the world never afforded. Maybe in another world sometime life can be again, but never here again. That's for damn sure. The earth died years ago. . .it's too bad they didn't approve euthanasia for whole planets.

Coalition member and law student Tom Bilodeau says the group will present their documentation of alleged graft to the WSA Student Law Board, but expects that they'll soon be back at circuit court. "Student court essentially has no enforcement powers," Bilodeau said. "But what we hope to accomplish there is to at least put the facts in front of the students" before next election.

The May 1 election for next year's senate is a major frustration to the Coalition, Bilodeau says. Any successful legal action would not be enacted before then. The Coalition believes, though, that by clarifying and publicizing the alleged abuses in student government, sutdents would be less likely to elect a group similar to P & S, or to reinstate Mallon and Varijian (Neither incumbent has announced his intentions yet).

Disgruntled students' efforts to counter what Bilodeau calls the pair's "anarchistic and totalitarian moves to promote things not socially valuable" started soon after the pair took office.

Bob Ostrowski (alias rabbit) talks to a friend during Saturday's Easter egg hunt.

Copeland lays Easter eggs

by Anne Gilliland

About 20 handicapped children participated in an Easter egg hunt held by Copeland Hall on the front lawn of the Fine Arts Center April 14.

The hunt was sponsored and directed by residents of Copeland Hall. A special attraction was Bob Ostrowski, who dressed as a rabbit.

The children ranged in age from 2 to 14 years. All are either members of Everett School's special education class or attend Blount County preschool.

"It was very successful," said Susan Miller, resident director of Copeland. "We had a little basket for everyone. We also had big silver eggs, and the children who found those got special prizes."

Each child received individual attention and help from a Copeland resident. "Everybody had a kid to carry around," commented Paul Canon.

The children seemed enthusiastic, happy with their candy and especially pleased with the life-sized rabbit.

"We had a good time," commented Jan Beamis, a special education teacher at Everett, as she summed up the hunt. "I only wish we could have gotten more children here. The weather was good; it couldn't have been nicer."

Well folks, it was bound to happen sometime. Disco has become a religion. Yes folks, today's newest, fastest-growing pop/cult religion is disco.

The Temple of Our Lady of Copacobana recently opened new churches in Atlanta, San Francisco, Miami, and Nashville. Based in New York City, Our Lady of Copacabana was founded by the Right Reverend Morris Salinez, a part-time actor and dancer who was in one of the crowd scenes in Saturday Night Fever.

In an exclusive interview with the Founder, current high priest of "Discotheology," and as he puts it, "the keeper of the dancing millions," Animal Crackers found out many interesting and many not-so-interesting facts about the pop culture's newest addition.

Animal Crackers: Mr. Salinez, how did you come to found such a ridiculous religion?

Salinez: Oh it wasn't hard really. One night when I was in bed, the great disco deity Atlovart Nhoj appeared to me in a vision. He said to go out and gather all his people together and praise Him with songs of praise. Then a heavenly host appeared, singing "Macho Man."

A.C.: You've got to be kidding. Do you expect anyone to believe that?

Salinez: Sure – and I'm willing to bet people will pay good money to buy our new religious medallions with real 3-d pictures of our saints.

A.C.: Saints? You've got saints already?

Salinez: Oh yes! Unlike the other major religions, we at Our Lady of Copacobana don't feel like we have to wait for somebody to die or be martyred to become a saint. We even. . . . .

A.C.: Who have you canonized so far?

Salinez: Well, there's Donna Summer, she was our first, and then there's Grace Jones, and then moving up onto the canonization charts in the group category are the Village People (heaven be praised!), Chic, The Bee Gees, and a few others.

A.C.: Good grief, you'll take anybody, won't you? Speaking of you, who is the 'we' you keep talking about?

Salinez: The 'we' I'm talking about is me and the high priests of the faith.

A.C.: High priests? Where do you get your priests? Where do they come from – who would want to be a priest?

Salinez: I'll ignore that last comment. Most of our priests are disillusioned AM rock station deejays who have seen the light and gone disco. (Our Lord Atlovart Nhoj bless and preserve us!)

A.C.: What kind of people do you get joining the uh – faith?

Salinez: Oh, all types. Mostly those who have wanted to find themselves. Disco was only the beginning for our members. For them, the faith of The Temple of Our Lady of Copacobana is the next logical step.

A.C.: I see. Do you have any members at Maryville College?

Salinez: Oh yes, quite a few. Very devoted members, too. I won't name their names for fear of their persecution, but I assure you they are working hard to show others the true way to happiness.

A.C.: About the churches or temples you've already established. . . . .

Salinez: Yes, well everybody comes dressed in their disco finest, wearing a saint's medallion or the Temple's symbol.

A.C.: Which is?

Salinez: The Temple's symbol? Crossed coke spoons, with a capital D at the cross. Most everybody buys the silver or gold plated ones.

A.C.: Do you make money off your members?

Salinez: Of course. We also sell disco clothes and have a cover charge to get in.

A.C.: Who gets the money?

Salinez: Me, of course! Who'd you think should get it?

A.C.: I can't believe this! You're no better than –than any of the other disco stars. You're only in this for the money like everybody else.

Salinez: Sure, but who cares? All the members are happy. They feel like they're part of something.

A.C.: You're despicable! Get outta here.

Salinez: All right. Just one last thing, though. All you readers out there, do you want to be part of the country's fastest growing religion? Well join the happy throngs of the Temple of Our Lady of Copacobana and be a part! Write Box 2774 for more information.

A.C.: AARGH!

Reefer madness nets $

HUMBOLDT COUNTY' CA (CPS) – This is redwood country. The hashmarks left by loggers are still visible as is the depression that came to these sleepy towns with names like Weott, Pepperwood and Garberville when the logging industry moved north. An economic desert of unparalleled beauty, Humboldt County is now experiencing a renaissance, an organic El Dorado sparked by a new cash crop: marijuana.

Last year, the local constabulary harvested 15 tons of pot and estimated they missed another 50 tons – a figure local growers amend upwards to 150 tons. What is being grown is 'sinsemella' literally spanish for "without seeds." Produced by practicing a form of botanical victorianism – all male plants are removed and the unfertilized females sublimate their sexual energy into THC – sinsemilla is plupotent and sells for about $150-250 an ounce. A healthy plant yields a pound. A farmer with 50 plants can bank close to $50,000.

With figures like that, it's not surprising that reefer madness is now retail madness. Southwestern Oregon estimated marijuana revenues at $70 million. Farther south, Santa Barbara harvested six tons of sinsemilla last year.

"Local economies are already being propped up by marijuana cultivation," says NORML's Frank Fioramonti. "They're places of marginal agricultural importance, like Humboldt County, (or) an area in Ohio where five years ago people were shooting hippies."

THE SHADOW INDUSTRY

Marijuana is a multi-billion dollar shadow industry, and a tax-free one, too. The National Institute of Drug Abuse estimates that 15 million Americans smoke the weed regularly.

Scots whipped 7-5, 14-0

by Robert Boone

Tusculum College stopped the Maryville Scots 7-5 and 14-0 at Maryville in last week's only baseball action- as raining weather cancelled the other scheduled games.

Maryville's lack of practice was apparent as 10 errors were committed on the defensive end of the field while offensively the Scots managed only 10 hits opposed to the slugging 24 hits which Tusculum produced.

In the first game, Tusculum scored 3 runs in both the second and fourth innings and went on to out blast the Scots 7-5. Jim Reese's 2 hits on three trips to the plate was tops for the struggling Scots.

The nightcap of the twinbill was all Tusculum as the error-ridden Scots were jumped for 7 runs in the first inning and 5 more in the fourth. The Scots could not light up the scoreboard at all and the nightmare ended after 5 innings. Ronnie Wyche's 2 hits on 2 batting attempts was Maryville's lone bright spot.

The Scots travel to Williamsburg KY Thur. to play Cumberland College in a 1:0 game and then take on arch-rival Carson-Newman Sat. in Jefferson City at 1:00

Vol. 64 No. 22 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | April 26, 1979

Board members met with faculty and staff at a reception last Friday. Here, Dr. Perkins and Marie Gadsten get acquainted.

Board approves increases

At their semi-annual meeting last Friday and Saturday, the MC Board of Directors acted to approve the 1979-80 budget and endorse faculty salary raises and promotions. The Board also adopted an affirmative action/equal employment opportunity policy for the College.

Next year's budget of $4,287,572 represents a 12% increase over this year's budget. The new fiscal plan includes a 7.5% average increase in faculty and staff salaries. This is the first faculty pay raise since 1977, when a 2.8% increase was granted.

Another facet of the approved budget is a tuition increase of approximately 10% over the current year. Fees for a 1979-80 MC student living on campus will be $4,245; commuting students will pay $2,853 for the year. The Board was informed that a "sizeable amount" of the tuition increase will go toward additional financial aid. Inflation is the other major reason behind increased expenses.

Five faculty members were approved for promotion by the board. Dr. Russell Parker was promoted to the rank of professor, while Dr. Robert Naylor was raised to that of associate professor. Dr. James Pickens, Mrs. Choi Park, and Mrs. Irma K. Young were all elevated to the rank of assistant professor.

In other action, the MC directors endorsed tuition exchanges with other United Presbyterian colleges for faculty and staff dependents.

PROFFITT NAMED TO BOARD

Attending the Board meetings for the first time was newly-elected director Harwell W. Proffitt, president of Proffitt's department stores. Proffitt was recently appointed to the Board by the General Mission Council of the Synod of the South of the United Presbyterian Church.

Although originally from Cleveland, Tennessee, Proffitt was raised in Maryville and is a 1940 graduate of MC. He received his B.S. degree in engineering from the University of Tennessee.

Five top sports announced

The Intercollegiate Athletic Task Force has recently come to some conclusions concerning MC's athletic program.

In the past two weeks students were asked to fill out surveys concerning MC sports. The survey asked for an indication of the sports that generate the most interest at MC. The surveys were then used by the task force to evaluate the situation.

Each sport on the survey accumulated a number of points according to how students ranked it. It was the total of points each sport accumulated which determined rankings of the sports.

In women's athletics the greatest interest was in basketball. Volleyball ranked second, tennis third, softball fourth, and swimming fifth.

The five men's sports that generated the most interest were, in order of highest to lowest rank: football, basketball, baseball, wrestling, and soccer.

In combining both women's and men's athletics, the committee came up with the overall five highest ranked sports. Women's basketball is the top contender of the five. Men's football follows in second place, men's basketball third, women's volleyball fourth, and men's baseball fifth. These five sports will definitely be continued next year. They are considered a must by the committee based on availability of schedule, coaches, and finances.

Women's softball, men's soccer, wrestling are considered desirable sports to have at MC. The committee thinks that these sports should be next in line to receive proper funding. They are considered minor sports at MC. It is the committee's concern that if MC is not careful these minor sports will completely disappear from MC's athletic program. This is why the committee feels that allocating money to these sports is important.

As the weather gets better, studying moves outside. Devout MC sun bathers know how to combine homework and tanning.

Judicial Advisors prepared

MC Students who are charged by the Dean of Students office for campus violations will have the right to seek advice from 6 newly appointed judicial advisors.

The Advisors group consists of Dave Ierulli, David Franssen, Jim Engle, Judy Corliss, Sandra Son and Craig Corey. It has been formed as part of a program to sustain and uphold student rights.

The creation of a judicial advisor program is a direct result of the campus-wide meeting held at the end of winter term. At that time it was decided that the campus was in need of a program to direct students in MC judicial matters.

An advisor will be offered to any MC student whom the Dean of Students office is taking action against. The purpose of the advisors will then be to see that the student presents his case, either to the ACC judicial board or the Dean of Students office, in the best possible way.

Dean Mangus met with the six student advisors for the two one-hour sessions in explaining their active role as advisors.

The six judicial advisors are enthusiastic and knowledgeable about their new positions. They are well-read on MC judicial procedures and the student handbook.

Five of the six advisors are either studying law now or are planning to attend law school in the future.

Playmakers to perform

The Maryville College Playmakers will hold a dinner theater this Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in the Proffitt Dining Hall. The evening includes beef sishkabobs and entertainment by the Playmakers. Tickets are $8 per person and can be acquired by contacting Sharon Crane or a member of the Playmakers.

9 tapped for society

Nine Maryville College students have been tapped for membership in Alpha Gamma Sigma, the senior scholastic honorary. They were recognized at the CIV on Wednesday morning.

Membership in Alpha Gamma Sigma is limited to the top ten percent of the College's graduating senior class.

The students named to the honorary include Priscilla Book, an interpreting and psychology major from Metairie, LA; James Campbell, a history major from Maryville; Elaine Dorward, a chemistry major from Etowah, TN; Glenda McGill, an elementary education major from Maryville; Melinda O'Connor, also an elementary education major from Maryville; Caryn Olsen, an English major from Piscataway, NJ; Chris Rigell, a chemistry and math major from Baltimore, MD; Anne Van Pelt, an elementary education major from Denver, CO; and Kathy Whitt, a chemistry major from Kingsport, TN.

Credit where credit is due....

Over the past four years we have heard many students complaining about different aspects of the academic structure of Maryville College. Some of these complaints have been petty, but many have been justified. We on the Echo staff feel that it is time for the administration, specifically Dr. Perkins and the members of the appropriate ACC committees, to look into some basic changes in the academic policies of the College. Concerning this we are going to propose some possibilities.

In this age where the G.P.A. is all important, especially to pre-med and pre-law students, why is it necessary to take every course for a grade? Students are under enough pressure in their major field of study. We would suggest that a limited number of courses, five perhaps, could be taken on a pass-fail basis. This would allow students to concentrate on the courses in their major while at the same time getting a well rounded liberal arts education. Only electives and core courses would come under these guidelines. All courses in the major field of study would still be taken for a grade.

We would also like to question why an athlete is not given credit for the many hours of preparation he or she is required to do each week. Perhaps ½ credit activities course could be given to anyone who participates in a varsity sport. In most sports the athletes are given more instruction than they receive in a regular HPER course. They could be given credit for their efforts.

Similarly, it seems that credit should be given to students actively involved in campus publications. A number of people put many long hours into the Highland Echo and the Chilhowean with no financial or academic reward. If ½ credit per year were given for selected top positions, we believe the quality of these publications would be greatly enhanced. The experience gained through working on these publications is just as valid, or possibly more valid, than classroom learning. We feel the administration should recognize this by granting credit to those people who are in positions requiring considerable time and effort week after week.

Another area that should be explored and updated is Independent Study. Many students get a great deal of value out of their IS. However, there are some students who do not put the effort and time into their Study to make it worth the time they have to spend on it. We suggest that Independent Study be made optional. We would also extend the time period for completion of the Study from two terms to three. This would allow for more research time and more time to put together a quality IS. The Independent Study is an important course offering by the College and should be retained, but the emphasis should be on quality -- not quantity. By making Independent Study an elective and extending the time period maybe this could become a reality.

There are many other items that could be brought up in this editorial. Almost everyone has some complaint about the courses they take or are forced to take. The important thing to think about on this subject is what can be done to make Maryville College a superior academic institution. Every step toward this goal that can be taken should be taken. A diploma from MC should mean something after graduation. It should show that its bearer has received the best education possible. To this end, we should strive for improvement all the time. Our suggestions may not adhere to the present thinking but we challenge the administration to continually strive for academic improvements.

This weekend promises to be a busy one as Black Culture Week concludes with a bang. Tonight at 9:00 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall, the UT Black Cultural Repertory Company will present the theatre production entitled Black Men/Black Women. It deals with the myths and ideas that black men have about black women and vice-versa. There will be a reception following the play to talk with the cast members.

Friday night, April 27, plans are being made for a swimming party and cook-out at the gym. All students are encouraged to attend. Announcements concerning the details will be forthcoming.

Umja (Unite) Day is Saturday April 28, and the schedule is a full one. At 10:00, MC professors will discuss with students the academic programs offered here; at 10:40, Dan Perkins, director of financial aid, will help students with their financial aid problems. All three of the morning activities will take place in Sutton Science room 113.

A CIV at 2:00 p.m. in the FAC music hall will feature Ralph Boston, a three-time participant in the Olympic games and winner of gold, silver, and bronze medals. He will discuss the topic, "In Pursuit of the 1980 Olympic Games." His discussion will focus on the political, social, educational, and athletic problems that face America before the Olympic Games.

The evening's activities will begin at 8:00 p.m. in Pearsons Dining Hall with a fashion fair. Entitled "FASHION IS IN - Spring is it!" the show will feature MC students modeling the latest in disco wear, sportswear, and evening garments. Later, at 9:00 p.m. the BSA's semi-formal Spring Dance will begin in Pearsons. "Third World Creations" from Atlanta, GA will provide the music. Tickets are $3.50 per couple/$2.00 per single in advance and $4.00/$2.50 at the door.

Simon's "Plaza Suite" opens May 4

"Plaza Suite," the triumphant comedy success by Neil Simon will be the Maryville College Theatre's red-letter presentation May 4 and 5 at 8:15 p.m. Tickets are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students.

The play is directed by Mr. Thomas E. Jones. Eliza Nickels, Mark Koerber, Dan Cragan, Marianne Sawdon, Angela Murphy and Charles Caldwell are the leading actors.

They will enact three sets of characters in three separate light-hearted fables, all connected by the fact that the action takes place at successive times in the same suite of New York's grande dame of fashionable hotels, the Plaza.

In the first of the playlets, the occupants of the suite are a husband (Mark Koerber) and wife (Eliza Nickels) who have come from their suburban home to celebrate a wedding anniversary, which turns out to be a wry rather than joyful occasion.

In the second section, the occupant of the suite is a celebrated movie producer (Dan Cragan) who invites an old flame of his school days (Marianne Sawdon) to visit him, with the hope of accomplishing a seduction he had postponed for fifteen years.

The third playlet reveals the parents of a bride whose wedding ceremony is about to take place in the ballroom of the hotel. Their plans run into a snag as the bride to-be suddenly panics and locks herself in the bathroom while her frantic parents (Angela Murphy and Charles Caldwell) try one strategy after another to convince her to come out.

The combination of these three riotous romps was described in Time Magazine as "an avalanche of hilarity," and by John Chapman in the N.Y. Daily News as " a triple-barrelled explosion of comedy wonderfully funny."

Director Tom Jones savs it is a "fun play" and he hopes everyone comes and enjoys.

Library forced to close

With more books out of place than in place, the library closed for rearranging on Monday due to weekend vandalism. Student assistants and staff members began reordering the library facilities – a job which took all day.

A few hundred books were picked up from the floor and steps inside, and several thousand volumes had to be reordered one by one on the shelves. After inspection of the situation, Dr. Alfred Perkins approved the closing.

It appears that there was more than one individual involved in the vandalism. Some clues have been found, but no suspects have been apprehended.

Batters get battered

The Fighting Scots baseball team lost a doubleheader to Cumberland College 15-1 and 9-4 on Thursday. Then on Saturday the Scots dropped a game to Carson-Newman 23-8.

Against Cumberland the opposition put together 15 hits to the Scots' 2 hits by Dave Osborne and Andy Limone. Mike Boring was credited with the loss.

The second game was also a high scoring contest of 9-4. Dave Ierulli was the starting pitcher who went the distance giving up 7 hits. Johnny Walker was the leading hitter of that game with two singles in two at bats.

On Saturday the Scots visited Carson-Newman and were out-hit by the Eagles 19-3. Sandy Mathes was the starting pitcher of that contest and was given the loss. Doug Tutin hit a homerun for the Scots.

The Scots' next game is Sa turday when they play Warren-Wilson away.

The MC Soccer Scots remained unbeaten last week after shading Harrison-Chilhowee 2-1 in overtime. Maryville took a 1-0 lead in the first half on a picturesque goal by Mark Soloninka, who slammed home a cross from Tim Farrell. Shortly thereafter, the predominately foreign visitors drew even on a penalty shot. The Scots unleashed shot after shot on the visiting goalkeeper, but could not find the net until the first overtime, when Soloninka got his second goal of the day on a breakaway.

The win left Maryville's spring record at 3-0-1 under new coach Rev. Randy Pasqua. The Scots opened the season with an impressive 3-0 victory over Johnson Bible College. They then travelled to Bristol and nipped Graham Bible College 4-3, before drawing with Carson-Newman 1-1 in the home opener. The MC booters own a six game unbeaten string extending back to the fall season.

May Madness about to strike

Prospective students have been visiting MC the past few weeks. Our ace photographer (Yogi Bear) caught these prospectives as they were about to enter Saga.

Cruel Maryville students making fun of a lost prospective student.

by Cutes Wiley

Have you been ill lately? Feeling rundown. . .gloomy . . .gray? Do you long for excitement and yearn for activities? You must be mad! Well folks, you have the symptoms of a blight known at Maryville College as May Madness. The treatment for this common ailment has been graciously devised by the Social Committee.

Activity, food, and lots of fun are what the doctor prescribes, so to start things off we'll take a little visit. No, not to the shrink or the funny funny farm but to the mountains. Saturday, May 5, the social committee and the junior class will sponsor a "crazy" day in Cades Cove. Cars will leave from behind Pearsons at 10:00 a.m. to take everyone to a picnic in the Cove. You must sign up and pay 50 cents for this trip in order to "reap the benefits." This will pay for fried chicken, deviled eggs, and other surprises. The sign-up sheet will be in Pearsons at meals,so by sure to make your reservations.

The picnic is only the beginning of the treatment for the winter term monsoon season sickness. Following this warm-up are four days of extensive activities guaranteed to cure you of all evils. Thursday night, May 10, there will be a raffle and a large can of beer party for the entire campus. A 25 cent raffle ticket will give you a chance to win one of 75 T-shirts that proudly proclaim that your May Madness has been treated.

May 11 is Alcohol Awareness day,and all afternoon you will get a chance to be made aware. Don't moan. . . don't groan. . .just relax and let the Social Committee update you on liquor and its laws. Representatives from Coca Cola, Mello-Yellow, a beer company, and the sheriff's department will be available for tasting and testing. There will also be a wine and cheese tasting booth, a food booth, a movie, and speakers. The "whole show" starts at 2:30 p.m. outside Pearsons, so by sure to "come to the treatment."

Dinner on Friday, May 11 will be called "New Year's Eve at MC" and will be a real "blast." It will be an extravagant affair, complete with good food, noisemakers, and costumes. Each dorm will come dressed representing a certain theme and ready to celebrate the New Year of Madness. Following dinner, at 7:00 p.m., jog, walk, or drive down to the Greenbelt Park behind the courthouse and hear the MC concert choir perform. The program will include a sing-along, a Fiddler on the Roof medley, and other songs. From 9-12 p.m. will be a Dance outside Pearsons. There will be food, a live band, and free admission so "rock out and bop" with all your friends on Friday night.

More activities are plan-

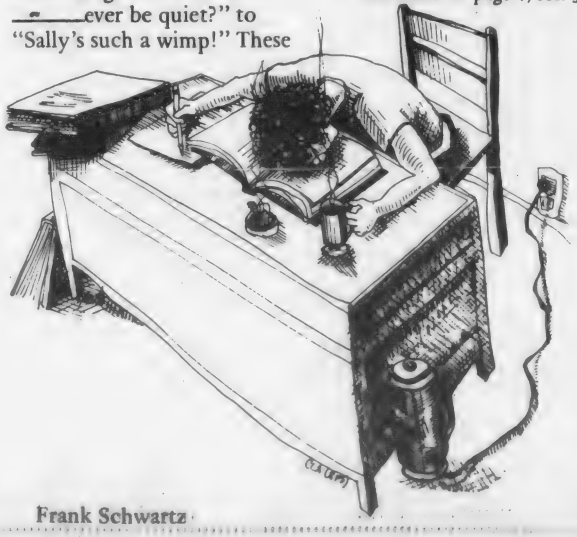
One down...one to go



by Wilma Flinstone

Well, the seniors have survived one day of the dreaded comps. After tomorrow seniors will be through showing how much they have retained academically. Hopefully it will be a lot more than they thought. There will be a lot of tired and burnt-out seniors Friday night when the whole ordeal of comps is over. Four years of fearing and worrying about an exam will be over. Amen.

For most seniors it has been interesting dragging out all the old notebooks of classes past. Not only did information about the subject come flooding back, but also the memories of how the class had been conducted. Editorial comments found in the margins of these notebooks brought a smile and an occasional chuckle. Comments ranges from "Will Dr. _____ever be quiet?" to "Sally's such a wimp!" These are only a few examples of the comments found; some notes are too obscene to be reprinted here.

Quite a few seniors didn't start studying for comps until last Sunday night. Four years of study into four

New courses approved for MC

Contrary to last week's editorial, here are some courses we would really like to see MC offer.

Foundations of Sun-Bathing 101: an elementary course designed to help the student who has not yet developed a chic Maryville tan. Classes will get progressively longer as tans improve. Featured : a special lecture on "How to Burn with Style." Suntain oil not included.

Mixology 405: an advanced-level course involving highly technical use of a blender. Special attention will be given to fresh frozen strawberry daquaris and Pina Coladas. Classes will meet on Friday afternoons; bring your own lawn chairs, stir sticks, and Jimmy Buffet tapes.

Survival Swimming 309: a last-chance class for those who have yet to complete their swimming requirements. Meetings will be held alternately at the Townsend "Y"and the Sinks. Everyone is required to enter the water. Guaranteed the quickest way to learn to swim.

Pointless Public Speaking 201: an introductory course designed for the student who has always secretly longed to make an announcement in dining hall. Discussions will include attention-getting tactics,use of a microphone, and special-effects accents.

How to Study 451: a graduate-level counterpart to Freshman Orientation. Highlighting the course will be a series of lectures on "Studying in the Mountains." Prior reading of the text Understanding Other States is expected of all students.

In keeping with the satirical tone of this May Madness Issue, the Desert Kids this week deals with the so-called "academics" of this college. The following is an excerpt from the the editor's class notes, used with Ms. Flintstone's permission.

Why don't modernists write about love instead of dealing with abstract terms and ideas? Love may be an abstract term but there are many concrete examples of love. Love is shown through a look, a flower, a hug, a smile, and many other small things. Love is small and works up to bigger things; but without the little things which are the foundation, idea, or or dream, love cannot exist. Spring then young men's fantasies turn to lust.

O spring! oh spring you're good for me

by Someone

Anne Gilliland, a senior from Tulahoma, TN, opened her art exhibit Sunday, April 22. The show,entitled "Habitual Attachments" is on display through May 4 in the FAC gallery.

The exhibit consists of oils, water colors, drawings, weavings, prints, and ceramics. Several weavings are displayed,including pillows and a colorful wall-hanging entitled "Touchy Feely, Feely Touchy."

The artwork displayed is a mixture of Anne's work from her sophomore year to the present. Her work is dated to show progression and change in styles. Her idea is to have assorted pieces from different time periods of her college career.

"My work has changed a lot in that I have moved from being interested in crafts to being interested in fine arts. My primary interest was with fiber and now it is with painting," says Anne.

Next year Anne plans on working with Vista, a government-run anti-poverty program. Her plans, however, are not definite at present. For the summer she is planning on getting a temporary job, perhaps with a newspaper.

Anne has plans for graduate studies in art therapy which she hopes to begin a year from this fall.

"A painting entitled "A Map if the World" shows where my painting is heading. It has various techniques which I feel I will be developing later on," Anne added."I always enjoyed the process of doing art. Although the outcome is important, to me the process is more important," she concluded

Soccer grabs a piece of grass

The MC soccer club's hopes of an undefeated season were dashed last week with heartbreaking losses to Carson-Newman, 1-0, and Johnson Bible College, 4-3.

The Carson-Newman match was very physical, and several Scots complained of the lack of competent officiating. The rainsoaked contest was deadlocked 0-0 at halftime. Early in the second half C-N slipped the ball past goalkeeper Tim Fitzgerald, and that proved to be the margin of victory for the Eagles.

The Scots came home for a Saturday afternoon match with J.B.C., and opened up an an impressive 2-0 lead early in the first half on goals by Mark Soloninka and Tim Fitzgerald. Maryville defensive lapses allowed the visitors to tie the score 2-2, but Gabriel Thorpe's goal left the Scots with a 3-2 halftime lead. Defensive errors returned to haunt Maryville in the second half and J.B.C. put two shots past keeper Andy Steinbeck. MC was forced to play shorthanded in the last 10 minutes after Soloninka was ejected for "unsportsmanlike conduct" and could not generate an attack. The game ended in a bitter 4-3 loss for Maryville.

The Scots' record now stands at 4 wins, 2 losses, and 1 tie.

days was a tough assignment. Some people claimed that the pressure spurred them on to do well. Aspirin and coffee also aided in their cause. Some people have been studying for months. The English majors are a prime example of this. They have had the fear of comps put into them ever since fall term. Their senior interim was lovingly entitled "Studying for Comps." It was a real sleeper.

Hopefully the sneiors will get back to their normal strange selves after tomorrow. Such bizarre behavior as going to the library and actually studying will come to an end. The librarians will be glad when comps are over because they are tired of having to type new cards for the Masterplots series. (How many times did you check them out, Caryn?) Hysterical questions of "Have you been studying?" and "I'm going to flunk" will cease.

Seniors, after tomorrow you can sit back and enjoy the rest of your academic ca career and not worry about comps. All that's left to survive is the three classes you are in.

ned for your growing spirit as the social/recreation class devotes Saturday, May 12 to "getting you going." There will be races and other sports, including tennis and team sports, so put on your running shoes and check out the action Saturday morning and afternoon. Watch for further announcements about time and place.

Saturday night will give you a chance to relax and stuff yourself with mad movies and a midnight pancake breakfast. The films will include The Hunchback of Notre Dame, the Three Stooges, and Mr. Magoo.

"Pink Sunday," with its carnival-like madness, is guaranteed to end the blahs and keep you going. The day will include crazy games, such as pie throws, egg tossing, and booths with food and other treats, such as ice cream sundaes, cotton candy, and kisses.

Unless you follow the suggested treatment closely and attend the Mad Events, your winter doldrums will hang around and you will have missed MC's May Madness. So watch for details and get rid of those winter term and comps blues by being a crazy part of May Madness.

Who cares?

Joel Flint, an art therapy major from Prattsburg, N.Y., will open his senior art exhibit and sale May 7 with a reception from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the fine arts gallery.

The show is entitled "Experiences in the Now" and will consist of drawings, paintings, prints, ceramics, and weavings.

Gallery hours will be 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 1 to 3 p.m. on Sunday. The exhibit will be on display until May 18

ACC hears reports

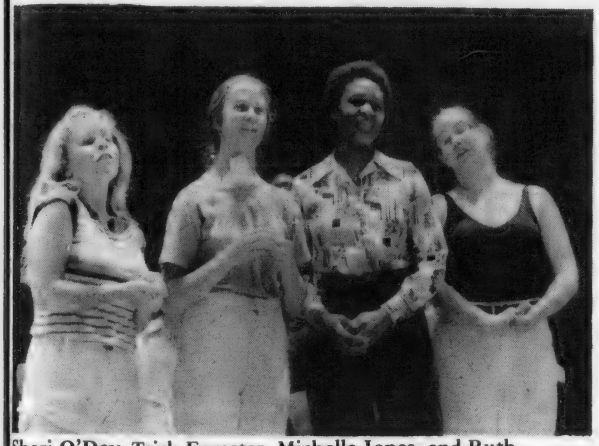
Reports of eight ACC Committee were presented to the All College Council last Wednesday, May 2. This year's newly elected members were also introduced to the council.

The first annual report was given by Hugh Crawford of the Ways and Means Committee. He announced that the only activity of his committee was the activation of the newly formed Outdoor Club.

Judy Mizell (Communications Committee) stated that all MC campus publications are on schedule and within their budgets. She pointed out a need for improved communications work facilities in Fayerweather Hall.

Speaking for the Academic Standards Committee, Dr. Waters suggested that the ACC's objectives should be modified or that the committee should be terminated because its function is overlapping with the IPC. The ACC passed the proposal to the task force on governance for consideration.

Dr. Lewis (Elections Committee) announced the winners of the recent ACC elections. The senior co-chairman for the next year is Kevin Reilly. Lois Boney will serve a 2 year term as the junior representative and Page Harris will serve one year as sophomore representative to the ACC.



The following staff, administration and faculty members will serve on the council: Ruth Martin (Staff), Jane Richardson (Administration, 2-year term) Brick Brahams (administration), Terry Bunde (faculty), Charlotte Beck (faculty) and William Dent (faculty).

Madness filled with action

May Madness has struck the Maryville campus and below is a listing of this weekend's events and times.

Thursday

6:00 p.m.-Large container of beer party outside Pearson's in the courtyard. You MUST bring your own mug. Beer will be served only to those with mugs; no other container will be filled. During the party, there will be a raffle held to give away May Madness T-shirts. Tickets are 25 cents each.

Friday—Alcohol Awareness Day

2:30 p.m.- Alcohol Awareness Afternoon. Representatives from Coke, Mello-Yello, Pabst, and Budweiser, along with other speakers will be in the area beside Pearsons to discuss and let you sample their products. There will also be food tasting booths and speakers.

5:00 p.m.- New Year's Dinner and Celebration. Come wearing a costume and ready to party.

7:00 p.m.- Choir Concert in Greenbelt Park. The choir will be performing selections from Fiddler on the Roof, leading a sing-along, and singing other songs.

9:00 p.m.- Dance outside Pearson's in the courtyard. Free admission and refreshments.

Saturday

10:00 a.m.- 1 and 5 Mile Race followed by New Games.

1:00 p.m.- Sports Events sponsored by the Health and Recreation class. All those who signed up as contestants should be there by 1:00.

10:00 p.m.- Movies in the FAC featuring horror and comedy.

12:00 midnight-Midnight Pancake Breakfast in the FAC.

Pink and White Sunday

1:00 p.m.- Carnival in the courtyard of Pearson's. Featured will be games, food, and other surprises.

This year's May Madness promises to be one of the school's biggest events, so be sure to keep this schedule and join in the "madness."

Herpes Simplex II hits estimated 5 million

(CPS)—John McGuire's first clue was the feeling he was getting the flu. McGuire (not his real name), a student at a small community college in Denver, felt achey, slightly feverish, and his glands were swollen.

About the same time, he discovered what looked like a cluster of whiteheads on his scrotum. He immediately went to the school clinic.

There, tests confirmed what McGuire hoped wasn't true: he became one of an estimated five million Americans with Herpes Simplex (HSII).

HSII is a virus, most often transmitted sexually, for which there is currently no cure. Well on its way to being the most frequent sexually transmitted disease (it's already the most common venereal disease of college students), HSII has serious effects.

The virus causes infections that can be painful enough to require hospitalization. The omipresent fear of passing on the disease can trigger severe psychological problems.

And it can kill. Women who contract HSII have a five-to-eight times greater chance of developing cervical cancer, a cancer that attacks 16,000 women annually, almost half of whom will die.

Also, if a pregnant woman has an active case of HSII at delivery, there's a five-to-50 percent chance the infant will contract it. More than half of these babies will die or have brain damage.

Further, the link between HSII and penile and oral cancers is being investigated. "It may be a decade or more before we see the full extent of this disease's potential

"It may be a decade or more before we see the full extent of this disease's potential danger."

danger," says Dr. Paul Wiesner of the National Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Georgia.

For most HSII victims, though, the most pressing problems are the recurrent infections. They may occur only once, but most often are recurrent, sometimes very frequent.

During an infection, which lasts two to three weeks, whitish fluid-filled blisters will appear in the genital areas (including the cervix and urethra), or on thighs, buttocks, mouth and throat. They resemble the blisters of their relative, Herpes Simplex I, commonly known as cold sores. In 10-20 percent of cases, suspected cold sores turn out to be HSII. Conversely, 10-20 percent of HSII sores are really cold sores.

The sores can appear in clusters of small blisters or larger single blisters. They not only can be transmitted to another person, but also to other parts of the body. Especially during the initial bout, the infection can spread by touching a sore and then another part of the body.

Past the point of tolerance

No excuse for poor Chilhowean

This year's Chilhowean has many of us feeling that we have been too tolerant of the yearbooks which this College has habitually produced. In the past four years there has been one, or maybe two, which has been acceptable, but even these left much room for improvement.

This year's yearbook has passed the point of tolerance.

We are fully aware that the staff operated under a limited budget, but the budget is not the main problem. The overall layout, organization, and coherence of the book is sadly below par.

What is ice hockey doing under spring sports? Why does the Chi Beta trash pick-up get a full page while the Concert Choir does not rank a single picture? There are funny numbers on some pictures and then a name right underneath the picture. The Howard Hanger Jazz Fantasy is listed under Governor Alexander. We stop here, although we could easily continue. There are numerous technical and grammatical problems that could have been eliminated by simple proofreading. No publication is without errors, but such an absurd amount is inexcusable.

It is our opinion that this year's Chilhowean staff did not do the best job with the time and money they had. The yearbook states that the mistakes are "not intentional", no doubt this is true. But by being so, it leaves an incompetent staff as the only possible reason for the unacceptable result.

We would like to see the Communications Committee, who is in charge of all campus publications, take steps to upgrade the quality of the yearbook and strive to maintain a high quality. Last spring the Echo was non-existent. The Communications Committee had to struggle to get it on its feet again. It will be a shame if the Committee waits until there is no yearbook to decide to take action. We would like to see them get involved in training next year's editor and staff in an effort to improve the quality of next year's publication. If money is a serious problem, then advertising should be allowed in the Chilhowean, as it is in nearly all other year books in the country.

This is not the first Chilhowean that students are embarrassed to take home. There needs to be a lot of work done if it is to be the last.

Aspen boasts odd college

by Shelley Ballenger

Aspen State Teacher's College (ASTC) in Aspen, Colorado boasts one of the best faculty-student ratios in the entire country, with 4000 students and 2000 staff members. Its varsity football team, the Aspen "Brooms," has claimed victories over nearly every Big-Ten schoo. Furthermore, ASTC operates entirely in the black—no small fear for a college these days.

How can this be? It's very simple, actucally. Aspen State Teacher's College does not, as such, exist. The name was coined in 1975 by a group of people who decided that Aspen made a perfect college town, jammed as it is all winter long with ski bums and vacationing collegiates. The only thing lacking was the actual college, so they just made one. Aspen State Teacher's College has been a major success ever since, grossing thousands of dollars a year for the owners.

The school is based out of the Student Store, though the campus of ASTC is the entire town of Aspen. The Student Store resembles any small campus bookstore inside. You can buy ASTC t-shirts, gym shorts, parking decals, mugs, visors, pennants, bumper stickers, and nightshirts proclaiming, "Sleep with a Broom tonight." For $10 you can officially enroll as an ASTC student, receiving a variety of the above materials plus an official student handbook and a guide to freshman registration. Visitors can pick up a copy of the Broom's football schedule (they win by default—the other teams never show up) and the schooi magazine, The Clean Sweep. The Student Store operates under only one rule, posted on a large sign: "No Laughing Allowed."

Course offerings at ASTC this winter included Scotch 406, Advanced Love 305, Lift Riding 302, Panhandling 304, and Excess 425 (stressing the "too much, too soon, too early way of life"). Popular class sites were the "Study Hall" (a bar where "you can pick up an education or you can pick up Shirley"), McDonald's, and the Paragon (also site of the ASTC spring prom).

The Clean Sweep features advice columns, contests for "Student of the Month" and snapshot captions, pictures of students engaged in various antics, and classifieds ("Services: swimming lessons during the off season. Choice of chuck holes on Mill or Main St."). The ads, though, really do the trick. How about "Fresh fudge is good for fresh men and fresh women"? or "If you want to know how to get it up, come to Sunshine kites"? Or, one that's easy to relate to: "Let's face it—doing laundry's never fun, but when you've got to do it, our machines will get it done."
As they are, the ads are all for real businesses.

Aspen State Teacher's College would be enjoyable any time of year, but most sudents would especially appreciate its easy-going policies right now. A recent notice proclaims "Final exams have been cancelled due to lack of interest." That's something guaranteed to make any student pretty happy.

"Portrait of an Old Man"

Flint portrays his view

The senior art of Joel Flint opened May 7 in the FAC gallery. The show, entitled "Experiences in the Now," will be on display through May 18. It consists of weavings, drawings, ceramic pieces, prints, and paintings which are representative of work done in the last four years.

Regarding his progress, Joel sees his work as becoming more abstract and non-objective. He is more willing to try different things than previously. According to Joel, "I do my work to show other people how I view the world. Through this I hope that they can gain new insight and understanding of the way I see things." An example is his painting "The Sidewalk," which is a "condescending comment on American society."

Explaining his philosophy of art, Joel says that "Art is a blending of perceptual and psychological work, or emotions and feelings combined with visual experiences. Art is the creative experience of an encounter with one's own spheres of reality." Joel, who is from Prattsburg, NY, hopes to work for Vista this fall in the Southwest.

Perkins summarized the activity of the IPC in an annual report. He added several personal concerns about the IPC: 1. the committee seems too large to him. 2. the questions of whether the Academic Vice President whould chair the committee; 3. he questions the tendency to appoint a large number of department heads as faculty representatives on the committee. Perkins' report was also passed to the task force on governance for consideration.

Ed Herbert (Traffic Committee) asked for reaction to proposals to place all fines and fees in a maintenance and improvement fund for campus parking lots. Discussion followed about the actions that have already been taken, including open parking, effective fall 1979. (registered cars will be allowed to park in any student zone for the trial period of fall term), a $5 fine with up to $25 for reckless driving and Herbert's suggestion that registration fees would have to be hiked. The ACC suggested that the committee come back with recommendations after reviewing the varied reactions of ACC members.

Sarah Edris (Worship Committee) suggested that the February Meetings format be broken up to include a segment in each term. The ACC rejected the proposal however, there was no re-

Scots win doubleheaders

After an eight-game losing streak, the Maryville Fighting Scots won over Sewanee 6-1, and 5-4. The Scots then beat Emory & Henry on Wednesday by the score of 6-4, and 11-5.

Cricket Mobly started the first game pitching against Sewanee, allowing 7 hits and one unearned run as he went the distance for the Scots. In the bottom of the first inning Jimmy Reese led off the inning with a base on balls followed by Andy Limone's double. Tony Ierulli then doubled,scoring both Reese and Limone and the Scots never trailed. Andy Limone, Tony Ierulli, and Rich Sandberg all went 2 for 3 at the plate in that contest. Final Score: MC-6, Sewa

Senior Barry Mathis started the second game of the doubleheader against Sewanee giving up 7 hits and 4 runs. MC again started scoring runs in the first inning. Jimmy Reese once again led off the inning with a walk and then stole second base. After a ground out, Dave Osborne tripled, scoring Reese, followed by Tonly Ierulli's single which sent Osborne across the plate. The Scots then scored one run in the second and one run in the fourth inning to give them a 4-3 lead. However, Sewanee tied the game in the seventh inning,sending the game into extra innings. The score remained tied at four apiece until the tenth inning when Dave Osborne singled, stole second base and moved to third on a wild pitch. Tony Ierulli's sacrifice fly sent Osborne hone to score the winning run. Doug Tutin had a double and two singles as he went 3 for 3 at the plate. Tony Ierulli, Dave Osborne, and Jimmy Rhyne all had two hits for the day. Final Score: MC-5, Sewanee-4

On Wednesday, the Scots visited Emory & Henry for a doubleheader. Larry Sheely started the game for the Scots and went the distance. The turning point of the game came in the top of the fourth with the score E & H-2 and MC-1. Johnny Walker led off the inning with a base on balls. He moved to second on a ground out and to third on a wild pitch. Ronnie Wyche walked and then stole second,putting men on second and third. The next batter, Rich Sandberg, singled, scoring both Walker and Wyche. Bo Smith, the designated runner for Sandberg, scored on Jimmy Reese's double to end the scoring in that inning. Final Score: MC-6, EH-4.

The second game of the contest was a high-scoring game in which MC showed its power by beating Emory & Henry 11-5. Cricket Mobly was the starting pitcher,giving up only 5 hits as he was credited with the victory. With the score 1-0 in favor of E & H, the Scots exploded in the third inning. Jimmy Reese singled, followed by a single by Dave Osborne, a single by Tony Ierulli that sent Reese across the plate, a single by Johnny Walker that scored Osborne, a single by Mark Talley scoring Ierulli, an infield error and a double by Bo Smith scoring both Talley and Ronnie Wyche. The Scots sent 14 batters to the plate in the inning and scored 6 runs. In the sixth inning, once again the Scots exploded. With two outs and no one on, Andy Limone walked and then stole second base. Dave Osborne tripled, scoring Osborne. After a hit batter, Mark Talley came to the plate with men on first and third. Still with two outs, Mark greeted the first pitch to him with an opposite field homerun. Dave Osborne, Tony Ierulli, and Mark Talley all had two hits for the Scots. Final Score: MC-11, E & H-5.

Soccer claims 4-1 victory

The MC soccer team got back on the winning track last week with a 4-1 pasting of Harrison-Chilhowee. The match was never really in doubt as the Scots dominated with sound defense and controlled passing. Maryville took a 2-0 halftime lead on goals by striker Tim Fitzgerald.

H.-C. scored first in the second half, but the Scots quickly countered with goals by Tim Farrell and Greg Hosler, to end the scoring.

The soccer team's spring record stands at 6-2-1.

jection of spring and fall supplements to the traditional winter program. Edris requested a policy statement from the ACC to assure faculty cooperation. The council voiced its support and invited Edris to speak to the faculty in late fall.

In old business, Ed Herbert presented a report from the task force on judicial process. Proposed changes dealt with definition of authority in judicial council and judicial hearings, final appeal to the President, and orientation of new judicial council members.

Dr. Anderson reported for the Task Force on intercollegiate athletics. The President interpreted the results of two MC student polls. He stated that women's basketball, football, men's basketball, women's volleyball and men's baseball are "must sports at MC".

Reilly to head ACC

by Wendy Magee

Kevin Reilly, upcoming senior from Kenvil, New Jersey, will be next year's ACC co-chairman. In being chairman of the Food Committee this year, Reilly realized that complaints got taken care of when he made an effort to do something about them. This was a step in the right direction for Reilly. He claims he ran for ACC co-chairman because he wanted to see changes made in MC and he wanted to be a part of them.

Dr. Anderson and Reilly will be working closely together next year. They have even developed a theme, "Come Alive," which basically calls for student involvement.

Reilly is aware of the students' complaints about MC. Lack of things to do appears to be one of the biggest gripes. Many think that this problem stems from inappropriate funding. Reilly insists that money is not the problem. He suggests that the problems stem from the apathetic attitude of the entire campus.

When asked what he planned to do about the apathy, Reilly had several suggestions. His emphasis is on getting students actively involved at MC in all areas.

"People complain about things but don't do anything constructive about them," he stated.

He wants to turn the complainers into doers. He feels that there is no sense in just complaining; if people do not like something they should take action to try to change it.

Reilly does not blame the apathy only on the students. He feels that there is apathy on the faculty's part also. Many faculty members on the ACC do not really want to be there. Reilly strongly believes that only those faculty members who really

Editors selected

Highland Echo

Shelley Ballenger, a rising junior from Bexley, OH has been selected by consensus of the Communications Committee as editor of the Highland Echo for the 1979-80 year.

Ballenger is an individualized major in environmental journalism. She served as editor of Impressions for 1978-79 and was one of the Impressions staff during 1977-78.

Ballenger has served as editorial editor for the Echo during the past two terms. She has also participated in the journalism interim.

Walt Montgomery, a rising sophomore, has been selected by Ballenger as news editor. Betty Schuster and Gerry Reynolds, both rising sophomores have been selected by Ballenger as business manager and layout editor. Montgomery, Schuster, and Reynolds have worked on this year's Echo.

Dr. Fowler, current advisor for the Echo will continue in that post under Ballenger.

Chilhowean

Sarah Findlay, a rising sophomore from Columbus, OH has been selected by the Communications Committee to serve as editor of the Chilhowean for the upcoming year.

Findlay is in the Concert Choir, a member of the Social Committee, and Theta Epsilon. She is an individualized major in journalism.

Findlay was editor of her high school yearbook her senior year.

The orchestra, under direction of Mr. Gene Taliaferro- Jones, performed their spring concert last Thursday.

Ahmad directs joined choirs

Rosemary Barrett Ahmad, a 1961 Maryville College graduate, will conduct a joint spring concert featuring the MC Concert Choir, the Oak Ridge Chorus, and the Oak Ridge Symphony Orchestra. The concert will be held in Wilson Chapel on May 20 at 3 p.m. The concert is free and open to the public.

The concert will feature four noted area soloists in the program selections which include the "Spring" section of Franz Joseph Haydn's "The Seasons" and two romantic selections by Johannes Brahms, "Gypsy Songs" and "Alto Rhapsody."

Soloists for the Haydn work are Tony Deaton, bass; Elizabeth Farr, Soprano; and Michael Ketcherside, Tenor. Featured soloist for "Alto Rhapsody" will be Delores Ziegler, mezzo soprano.

The Oak Ridge Chorus and Symphony will perform the two Brahms works and the MC Concert Choir will join the orchestra and chorus for Haydn's "The Seasons."

Pianist Sallie Schoen, MC fine arts faculty member, will join the Oak Ridge groups for "Gypsy Songs", opus 103.

This is Ms. Ahmad's first year as conductor for the Oak Ridge Chorus. Ms. Ahmad has been an MC faculty member since 1974 and director of the College's Preparatory School for the Arts since 1976. In addition she serves as a piano soloist and accompanist and is currently serving as musical director for the West Side Dinner Theatre's production of "Shenandoah."

Formerly Ms. Ahmad has taught at Indiana University; Ashland College and College of Wooster in Ohio; School of Creative Arts, Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla.; and Blair Academy of Music, Nashville.

(CPS)—Both sides are preparing for the worst.

Ever since the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) announced last December that schools would have to spend about the same amount of money on women's athletics as on men's athletics, the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) and many of its 726 member schools have lobbied vigorously against the proposed regulations. The proposal is the latest addition to Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972, which prohibits schools from placing conditions on women's education that are not on men's.

Most recently, a Washington, DC public relations firm, de Harte Associates, has been hired by an informal coalition of 300-some schools to combat the equal spending proposal. The NCAA is

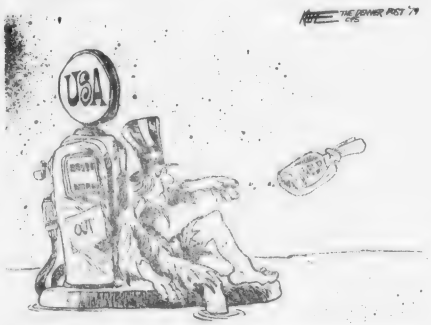
Who rules, government or industry?

Gas shortage breeds suspicion



The recent nationwide gasoline shortage has provoked anger and questions from the American public. American motorists, facing long lines, closed stations, and five-dollar limits, are bewildered as to why the pumps aren't pumping and why the price is so high.

Is there a shortage? President Carter's verbal assaults on American oil companies' indicate that he is suspicious of the companies hoarding oil supplies until the price regulation is lifted and they can make even bigger profits. It is not hard to see why this suspicion arises. The oil companies hardly seem to be suffering through the apparent shortage. Exxon reported an increase of 37% during the first quarter of this year. This, however, actually supports the OPEC claim that there is a viable shortage, for a shortage of a highly demanded product escalates the price of that product. Exxon brought suspicion upon themselves when two high-ranking Exxon officials conveniently disappeared when the report was released. Exxon also concelled their quarterly press conference and published their profits in a plain news release. This company certainly invites suspicion.

Actually OPEC production is down 7-10% from last December. Meanwhile U.S. consumption of gas has steadily risen. The high demand for unleaded gas adds to the difference between oil produced and oil demanded. It takes 10% more crude oil to produce one gallon of unleaded gas than it does to produce regular gas. Furthermore, U.S. oil companies simply do not posses the capacity to meet the demand for unleaded gas. We are feeling the government regulation that all American-made cars use unleaded gas by 1975.

The shortage is better understood when one realizes that the American motorist is not cutting back on his use of gas. Any cut back in this country of oil is made by industry. Also, Saudi Arabia, the world's largest producer of oil, is not producing as much as it was projected to a few years ago. The situation in Iran has injected a note of conservatism into the oil producing capital.

At best, the situation is complicated- a limited supply and growing demands. Solutions and options seem to be paved with corruption and self-interest.

Carter's windfall tax plan calls for a high tax on oil companies' profits. The taxed money would be used to investigate energy sources such as oil from shale, oil from coal, mass transportation, nuclear power, and solar energy. The oil companies want to be able to avoid the tax by spending the would-be taxed money on energy exploration. Carter condemns this as a loophole, and he may be right. Exxon spend 409 million dollars on off-shore drilling in the Atlantic because they thought it made sense to drill near the populated Eastern U.S. Unfortunately, the American public has no reason to believe that the bumbling government could do any better with the money.

Is there a quick answer to the problem? We hear stories of cars that get 50-100 miles per gallon but the stories die out when Detroit simultaneously decides to consider these inventions.

This brings us to the gloomy realization that OPEC, the Seven Sisters (Seven largest oil producing companies), Detroit, and the Uncle Sam complex are so interwoven and filled with collusion that it makes the cold war look boring.

Obviously no miracle will appear until Detroit is ready for it. One hundred miles per gallon will destroy OPEC power and drastically cut oil company profits. The first auto maker to produce such a car will have an instant monopoly.

Any solution to the oil problem will adhere to the money-making policies of Detroit, OPEC, and oil companies. We'll throw in Carter's Clowns for those who think that Uncle Sam can handle the company-countries which have developed. We doubt it can, as these companies have too much at stake. It takes one cent to drill and transport a gallon of gas in Saudi Arabia. By the time that gallon reaches the American pumps, the price has increased over 7,000%. No middle man will easily be talked into leaving such a lucrative operation.

President Carter recently said, "The average motorist is going to be faced with more shortages of gasoline in the future. We ought to be ready for it and we're not." It would be nice to face this problem without the interference of profit oriented corporations. Perhaps this will be a test as to who rules this country. . . government or industry.

Opera set for May 25-26

A cast largely comprised of MC students has been selected to present Gilbert and Sullivan's operetta "Trial by Jury" during an evening of opera on May 25 and 26. The performance will be at 8:15 in the MC Theatre and will be in conjuncture with Gian-Carlo Menotti's "The Old Maid and the Thief."

"Trial by Jury" was first performed in London in 1875. The story revolves around the British judicial system. A beautiful plaintiff is bringing suit against her fiancee for breach of promise. He tries many humorous ways of talking her out of the suit, but the judge and the jurymen take an immediate liking to the plaintiff. The plot thickens from here.

Michael Ketcherside of the MC music faculty is directing both productions, and MC student Judy Grahl is serving as vocal coach. Gene Taliaferro-Jones, also of the music faculty, will conduct the orchestra for the performance.

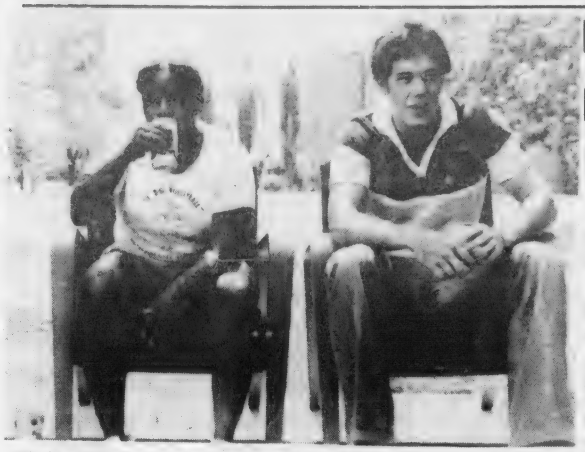
also favoring a procedure that would force congressional review of the proposed rules, a move that opponents claim will result in its veto.

Meanwhile, the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW), and a coalition of 56 organizations involved with women's sports has launched a "red-alert" letter-writing campaign. Earlier last week, they sponsored a demonstration in front of the White House. They're all for equal spending rules, but they're also concerned about another section of the regulations—that spending differences will be allowed if it's based on "non-discriminatory factors, such as cost of a particular sport, or the scope of competition." This section is seen by most as opening a possibility that the two big-time college sports, football and men's basketball, would be exempt from equal-spending requirements.



This possibility is what has the NCAA and many colleges lobbying so intensely.

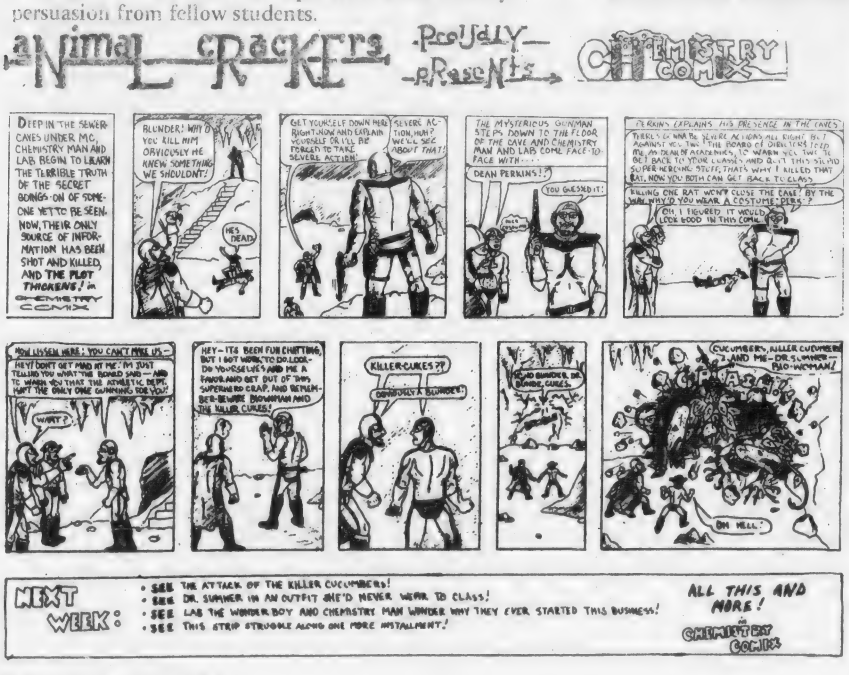
The Fayerweather committee is still without concrete results.



In a recent interview with Dean Mangus it was revealed that the original committee, consisting of Hugh Crawford, George Miller, Sharon Crane, Dean Mangus, Tony Norris, Larry Bidwell, Sabrina Rawls, Pam McCroskey, and Chris Cervenka, had submitted a list of recommendations to President Anderson.

These recommendations included renovating and developing a "comprehensive Student Center," a room for commuting students, and a campus pub.

President Anderson then submitted these recommendations to the ACC. Dean Mangus stated that "as soon as money becomes available" the priority will be given to the renovation of Fayerweather.

want to serve on the ACC should. The others are just wasting their time.

Reilly revealed that the main problem lies in the fact that students do not know the structure of the ACC and what goes on at meetings. He stressed that meetings are open to everyone and that students are more than welcome to attend. Another point made was the fact that a student does not have to be a member of the ACC to serve on a committee. More than anything Reilly wants to get students involved on the different committees. In fact, letters will be sent out this term informing students about the various committees and what students can do to become active in them.

Increased school spirit in all areas is what Reilly thinks MC needs.

"This institution can be a great place to be," he stated. "I'm not out to conquer the world; I just want to generate some enthusiasm."

As enthusiastic as he is, his hopes may well be answered.

Intramural Softball

Maryville College intramural softball is in full swing with eight leading teams vying for upcoming playoff spots.

Pacing the National League race is the 7-1 Elroy Face Crew, who chalked up a big 14-10 decision over the American League's most exciting team, The Excitable Boys. Charging right behind the Excitable bunch is the surprise team of the season, Panda Thigh, with a 5-3 record. But diving right into the heat of the battle is the "never say die –say dive" Muff Divers with a 6-2 worksheet. Also in the thick of things are P-Funk Plus, S.O.M.F., Bouyant, and Kill and the Gang, all who could cause some upsets during playoff competition. Wayne Emme, Keith Martin, Robert Boone, Dave Kibben, Steve Moffett, Rod Nelson, and Bill Seaton are some of the league's best long-ball hitters and talented consistent batters. The play of the week goes to The Excitable Boys' outfielder, Keith Martin, for his diving catch in the street, depriving Elroy Face's Paul Murphy of a homerun.

Soccer splits two

by Mike Weiss

The Soccer Scots were trounced 7-1 by the University of Tennessee last week, but bounced back to defeat Walters State 3-1.

The Scots were simply outclassed against U.T. Byron Finley gave MC a short-lived 1-0 lead early in the first half, but the Vols scored six unanswered goals before intermission. In the second half, a determined Scot defense coupled with gutsy goalkeeping by Andy Steinbeck held U.T. to one goal.

The victory over Walters State came despite a rather lackluster performance. Maryville had many excellent scoring opportunities in the first half but could only manage a 1-0 lead on Tim Fitzgerald's penalty shot.

The second half featured poor officiating and poor soccer. The Scots seemed content to sit on their lead and head back home when, to their surprise, Walters State tied the game late in the period. This helped to awaken the napping Scots, who netted two quick goals off the head of Fitzgerald and the foot of Mark Soloninka, to put the match away.

The victory clinched a winning season for Maryville, now 6-3-1 with two matches to go.

Union status questioned

WASHINGTON,D.C.(CPS)

Washington is now the scene of one battle over student membership in labor unions. Organizations that want Congress to ban mandatory membership in unions are gearing up for battle and, emboldened by what they see as a newly conservative electorate, will try to push Congress to action this year.

The idea has been around for several years, promoted by supporters of right-to-work laws. The concept,of course, has been a highly-controversial issue on the national political scene since the fifties, but students as such were not centrally involved.

But now a bill has been introduced in Congress that would exempt full-time students (including high-school and vocational-school students) from mandatory union membership, and would prohibit discrimination against those who chose not to join voluntarily.

Jonathan Petochowski, a George Washington University student feels that having to join a union in order to get work is unfair, and wants to see that students will be hired solely for their ability to do the job.

Joe Connelly teaches political science at Eastern Ukkubius University, and disagrees. He fears that unions would be jeopardized by "free rides," students who were workers, not in the union but receiving all benefits of membership like others on the job.

According to organizers, many students pay large amounts in union dues, even for short hours during summer vacation. A 1977 Roper poll found that 78 percent of the nation's 18-to-29 year-olds oppose mandatory union memberships.

Echo meeting tonight

All persons interested in working on the staff of the Highland Echo next year are encouraged to attend a meeting tonight (Thurs.) at 7:30 p.m. in the Echo room on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall. Everyone, whether experienced or not, is welcome, as staff opportunities remain in a variety of positions. If you cannot attend but are interested, contact Box 2820.

Good-Looking Students Get Better Grades

That, according to Zodiac News Service, was the conclusion of Indiana State University psychologist Michael Murphy's study of high school students.

Murphy compared students' grades with their appearances. Though scores on standardized tests, which are supposedly based on pure knowledge, were the same, the better-looking students got higher grades than other students.

Girls, moreover, tended to have higher grades than boys of equal ability.

Impressions applications

Applications for editor of the 1979-80 Impressions are now being accepted by the Communications Committee.

Applicants must have a grade point average of at least 2.0 for all college work, previous experience on the staff of a newspaper or literary magazine, and be of "rising sophomore" or higher standing.

Knowledge of literary forms by critical analysis, judgement and evaluation, skill in layout, and working knowledge of the MC campus are other criteria for selection. Interested students may obtain an application from the communications office, 212B Anderson Hall.

Correction

In the ACC article last week it was incorrectly stated that car registration fees will be raised for next year. The possibility of such an action was brought up at the meeting but no action was taken on it.

Judicial Task Force recommends changes

This year, there have been many questions revolving around the Judicial Process. For awhile, due to misunderstandings with the judicial process, emotions were running rampant during winter term. In response to the situation, the Judicial Task Force was created. The responsibility of the task Force has been to discover and to offer solutions to problems brought up by the Judicial Council and those found in the Judicial Manual.

Colleen Masterson, Chairperson of the Judicial Council, feels that "the Judicial Council worked well together. The problems seem to lie in the failure to define who has what powers, both in the Council and in the relationships of the Dean of Students Office, the Appeals Board, the Judicial Council, and the President of the College."

One of the problems worked on by the Task Force has been to better define the roles of those involved in the judicial meetings. Two new positions have been recommended. The first is that of a Presentor. This is a person, normally a member of the Dean of Students Office, who presents the case before the judicial body. In the past, the Presentor was also the Accusor. In some circumstances, the positions of Presentor and Accusor may be combined; however, this eliminates the right of appeal for the Accusor.

This right of appeal by the Accusor, in the event of a gross violation of the hearing procedure or the introduction of significant new evidence could be a new option in the MC Judicial Council. The final appeal of a student is the college president. This has not been previously stated in the Judicial Manual.

The second position recommended by the Task Force is that of an Ombudsman, an upperclass student independent of the Dean of Students Office and Judicial Council, who will observe all proceedings to see that due process is followed.

Another recommendation by the Task Force has been that the Judicial Council be selected in the spring and be prepared through an orientation.

There are many other subjects still in discussion. "All students are not only welcome, but encouraged to attent Task Force meetings," emphasized Ed Herbert, Chairperson of the Task Force. He continues, "This group is seriously interested in the problems of a fair and just judicial process at Maryville. The faculty, as well as the students, have come to the rescue many a time on sensitive issues, and this has assisted in bringing these issues to positive conclusions."

Anderson and students rap

President Anderson continued his efforts to communicate directly with students through an informal talk session in Lloyd lobby last week. The main subject of the discussion was MC's $5 million fund-raising campaign, which is currently underway. Many items of concern were linked to the success or failure of this campaign.

Weaknesses, particularly the need for more faculty members, were brought to Dr. Anderson's attention. An increase in pay for current faculty, as well as the hiring of more faculty, were determined to be of overriding importance by both students and administration at the meeting. Highest priority in the fund-raising campaign will thus be given to these matters.

Both Thaw Hall and Fayerweather Hall were mentioned as being in need of renovation. The degree of work done on these buildings depends upon the amount of money that can be raised for this purpose. The library, at least, will definitely receive some attention.

Dr. Anderson is also aware of the need for major renovation in the dorms. He is currently working to establish an endowment fund that can be drawn upon for major improvements for the housing facilities.

A discussion of heating and cooling problems in several buildings, especially Carnegie and Sutton, led to the subject of rising energy costs. The installation of the pyrolosis unit (a sawdust-burning generator) will theoretically bring relief from these costs; however, it is not yet known when the unit will be installed. The pyrolosis unit is an experimental energy producer being developed in a co-operative plan between TVA and Maryville College.

Not related to the budget, but of concern to many students at the meeting, was the new room registration policy. Several people objected to the fact that current residents are not being given priority for their present rooms. Even more expressed disagreement over

Faculty hold final meeting

The last faculty meeting of the 1978-79 academic year was held last Wednesday, May 16. Topics that were discussed by the MC faculty included policy on the bearing of the mace at Commencement; approval of the '79 graduate candidates; the formation of a new faculty committee to deal with personnel policies; vacancies in the political science and sociology departments.

The meeting began with the approval of the last faculty meeting minutes. The 1979 graduate candidates were then approved by the faculty. The question then arose as to the annual bearing of the mace at Commencement by a faculty member.

The main concern of the faculty dealt with whether or not the bearing of the mace should be continued as a tradition at MC. The faculty decided to pospone any definite decision on the bearing of the mace until a later date.

Dr. Perkins then suggested the approval of an elected faculty committee to deal with personnel policies of faculty promotion, tenure, and faculty appointment and re-appointments. The proposed committee would propose and formulate policy.

Faculty members then appointed the academic affairs committee to draw up specific plans for the new committee which, in turn, would be reviewed by the faculty in the early spring.

Dr. Perkins announced that MC was actively reviewing applications for sociology and political science positions on the MC faculty. These positions will most likely be filled by next fall.

The next MC faculty meeting will be in the fall of academic year 1979-80.

Fulfills inaugural ambitions

Anderson displays openness

This spring marks the end of Wayne Anderson's second year as president of Maryville College. At the time of his selection in February, 1977, Dr. Anderson announced that he had two major and immediate priorities for Maryville College. One was to attract new funds to the college. The other was to establish a more open presidency by encouraging interaction between his office and the students and faculty of MC. What can be said of Dr. Anderson cannot be said of most presidents. He has kept his promises to us.

During a period of intense antagonism between the Office of Student Services and the students this past winter, Dr. Anderson literally dropped everything and organized a series of meetings to enable students to voice their opinions and complaints directly to him. One such session lasted until nearly 1:00 a.m.; another resulted in class cancellations. This was not merely a placebo. Careful records of all complaints were taken down, and some changes have already taken place. It is a safe bet, for example, that students now know a great deal more about how the judicial process operates at MC than they did a few months ago.

Dr. Anderson's concern for harmonious relations on this campus is very real. When all lines of communication seemed to be down and all administrative doors sppeared closed to students, one--the one at the very top--remained open. What could have resulted in near-disaster if continued much further was halted by Dr. Anderson's timely effort to recognize the intensity, direction, and validity of student complaints in a rational and constructive manner. Those students who participated in the discussion-type meetings learned a valuable lesson in the effectiveness of listening and talking things out to obtain desired goals -- a tactic much more effective than destructive or abusive actions.

Dr. Anderson's efforts to deal openly and honestly with students did not start with the trouble this winter, nor have they stopped since then. One reason that the discussions were so successful is that students have come to expect fair and truthful treatment from their President. Many students feel that Dr. Anderson is the most accessible, helpful, and responsive administrator at MC, and that they would prefer to approach his office over any of the others on the first floor of Anderson Hall. This is in keeping with Anderson's expressed desire that he would "hope that people would come in for formal and informal meetings on a regular basis."

Dr. Anderson has used his abilities in public relations and fund-raising to good advantage. He realized before he took office that in order to attract money "you have to work." Maryville College has recently embarked on a $5 million fund-raising campaign. Considering Dr. Anderson's enthusiasm and determination, if the money is out there, he'll find it. And more than that, he will see that it is put to good use. A great deal of effort has gone into establishing budgetary priorities so that the money raised can be used to the best possible advantage.

We feel President Anderson is to be commended for his first two successful years at MC. He has accomplished a great deal in a short time. Dr. Anderson has already made a big difference to Maryville -- a very positive difference. The "new beginning" which he hoped to instigate has indeed come about.

Gasohol: future fuel?

by Rick Smith

"What'll it be, bub? Jack Daniels Hi-Test, or Old Barton Unleaded?"

One of the highly-touted solutions to the current gasoline crisis is the combination of gasoline with percentages of alcohol, creating a curious fuel known as gasohol. Ten years ago, automotive company officials and major oil companies would have little interest in alcohol as a gasoline additive; now, however, they are taking a long and serious look at it.

The concept of gasohol is simple. Ethanol (grain alcohol) or methanol (wood alcohol) may be mixed with conventional gasoline up to around 15 or 16 percent. Commercially available gasohol now consists of roughly 88% gasoline, 11% ethanol or methanol, and 1% other compounds such as nintrobenzole or other compounds which act as anti-knock additives or catalysts. Such gasohol may be used in any conventional gasoline-burning automobile without engine modifications.

What are the advantages of gasohol? Proponents claim that it is a "cleaner" fuel than straight gasoline, with fewer noxious air polluting emissions than conventional gasoline. Experiments at Stanford University, UCLA, Cornell, and other colleges indicate that gasohol does indeed produce fewer emissions. Gasohol has a higher octane rating than conventional gasoline; motorists using it report less spark plug fouling, less carbon formation, less engine wear in general, and peppier performance.

Perhaps the major advantage for gasohol is that the alcohol in it may be derived from most normal sources of carbon. Ethanol can be derived from corn, wheat, and other grains, as well as agricultural wastes; methanol can be derived from wood chips, sawdust, coal, and even raw sewage.

In Iowa and Nebraska, two states well known for their production of grain, major research projects have been conducted since 1974 on the production of gasohol and its use in conventional motor vehicles. When sold at prices comparable to conventional gasoline, gasohol met with good consumer acceptance. With the U.S. government already paying farmers to let their land lie fallow, this brings the possibility of a major new market for surplus agricultural products. In an age when farmers are experiencing fluctuations in prices for their products, many farmers are seriously considering large-scale production of grains for conversion into alcohol for motor-vehicle use.

If gasohol works, why not skip the gasoline entirely and run automobiles solely on alcohol?

Alcohol fuels differ significantly from gasoline in terms of chemical composition. Methanol, for example, actually has a BTU value of less than half that of gasoline. A motor vehicle using methanol would have to consume roughly 40 gallons of methanol to do the same work as 20 gallons of gasoline. To convert today's automobiles to ethanol or methanol would mean putting in fuel tanks twice as large, as well as redesigned carburetors to handle the greater volume of fuel to be pumped.

Sort of like consuming beer instead of wine.

Alcohol does have some good points, however. Its octane rating is higher than that of gasoline. It burns better in hot weather, and is much less susceptible to vapor lock. And, as stated before, it is a "cleaner" fuel.

The use of alcohol and gasohol is not new. Adolf Hitler in the 1930's poured millions of Third Reich deutschmarks into research with alcohol fuels. Nazi Germany did not have major reserves of oil, but they did have major supplies of coal which could easily be converted into methanol.

The American automobile racing fraternity has used methanol and methanol/gasoline blends in racing cars since the late 1920's.

Genie Varker

Varker's year successful

by Anne Gilliland

Genie Varker, co-chairman of the Social Committee, feels that the committee has had a successful year of planning and sponsoring activities.

"A lot of our success is due to the extra money we got this year," she says. "Last summer Dr. Anderson called me up in Texas and asked me what I could do with $7000."

"I had been in charge of the inaugural ball and that was a big success, so I guess he thought I knew how to throw a party."

Varker added that there have been both encouraging and discouraging elements to her job. She gets discouraged by complaining and apathy.

However, successful activities involving large numbers of people raise her spirits more. She feels that the coffeehouses have been the most successful events, with wide and enthusiastic response.

Other especially successful events include the 5-mile runs, the study breaks, and the homecoming activities.

"T-shirts and food always draw people," Varker comments.

The Social Committee also talks to the dormitory house councils before big events to get ideas and feedback. Costs are kept to a minimun, due to the students' lack of money and the activities fee which is paid along with tuition.

"In general, the reaction to our activities has been very positive," says Varker, "We try to make the students, faculty, and administration happy."

"Dr. Anderson has been very helpful," she adds. "Whenever there is an event, he attends, writes me a note, or has me come and talk to him about it."

Varker says that the Social Committee has been her top priority this year. "It's come before friends or grades, but it has made my senior year more exciting," she comments.

Next year the Social Committee co-chairman will be a paying student job, since it involves a great deal of time. Sharon Crane will return as the other co-chairman.

Varker believes next year's Social Committee will be an eager and interested group. "If people want to benefit from social activities, they should get involved," she says. "Lots of people want to join for next year."

Varker, who is a senior with a major in music with people, will spend the summer as head counselor at a camp in Texas. Next year she will work for the Volunteers in Missions program at a church in Arizona.

Second Woodstock planned

(CPS) — "It was a time of sharing — of cameraderie," recalls Jerry Moss. "A shyness went away."

For a half-million rock-n-roll fans, it was a muddy camp-out they'll never forget.

"But there's no point in doing a retrospective," Moss, stage manager of the original Woodstock Festival, adds. "That would be silly. Instead, the second Woodstock will be a deja vu version of something new, and not a recreation of something that cannot be recreated."

It won't be free, for example.

It won't dote on music of the sixties.

It won't be a sanitation or traffic engineer's nightmare.

It won't be a weekend picnic for East Coast urbanites.

It won't even be held at Woodstock.

As surely as the seventies are not the sixties, the ten-year reunion of the Woodstock Festival, to be held August 14-16 at a soon-to-be-announced site within

Ziegler to be honored

Ms. Delores Ziegler of Alcoa, a 1973 Maryville College graduate and recent finalist in the 1979 Metropolitan opera auditions in New York City, will be honored by Maryville College on Saturday, May 26, as part of the College's opera evening.

During the intermission of the two one-act operas, "Trial by Jury" and "The Old Maid and the Thief," President Wayne Anderson will introduce Ms. Ziegler and present a brief tribute to her.

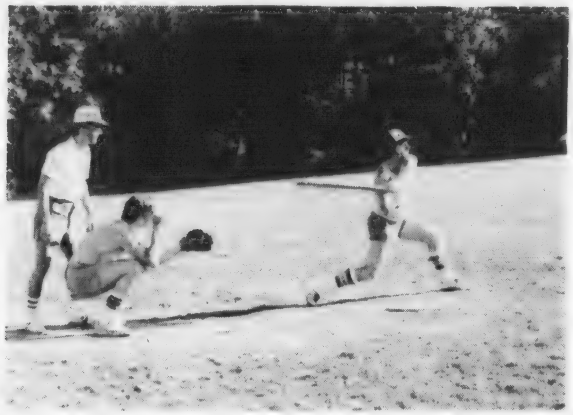
A reception honoring the mezzo soprano will be held in the Chapel/Theatre Courtyard following the opera.

Tickets for either the Friday or Saturday performances are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students.

What's going on

by Linda Wiley

As the summer gets closer and everyone prepares to "book down" and study, the Social Committee has planned a series of study breaks.



Starting Sunday night, May 27, there will be a study break in Lloyd lobby at 10:00 p.m. There will be doughnuts and various drinks provided, as well as entertainment. Julie Babb will be playing her guitar and singing.

Monday night, the 28th, in the dining hall at 10:00 p.m., there will be study break No. 2. There will be sundaes to eat and more entertainment. Rufus will be making his last appearance of this school year, and the interpreting majors will be performing "Macho Man."

Tuesday night will be left up to the students, as they plan to do their final stint at the Jailhouse Lounge.

Finally, Wednesday night will be the "Big Break." First, Dana Paul and Bryan McFarland will be performing in the FAC Lounge from 9:30 to 11:00 p.m. Then, at 11:00 p.m., Pearsons will open its doors for a "Late Night Breakfast." You must have your Maryville College I.D. or you will not be admitted.

Banquet honors athletes

The annual Maryville College Sports Banquet sponsored by the Honaker Club was held at the Green Meadow Country Club May 15 to honor 1979 Wall of Fame inductees and announce sports awards.

Six former "standout" athletes and the composer of the Maryville College fightsong were named to the elite group on the Wall. Weldon A. Baird, H.A. Callaway, Jr., S. Earle Crawford,Sr., William Owenby, W. Arthur Ruble, William M. DeLaney, and Charles H. Huffman received the honors of being the latest inductees.

A highlight of the banquet was the beginning of the J.D. Davis Outstanding Athlete Award named in honor of the great late coach J.D. Davis, one of the dominant figures in the athletic success at Maryville College. Receiving the first annual award as the college's outstanding athlete for the 1978-79 season was senior Wayne Emme in recognition of his achievements and contributions displayed on the basketball floor. Aside from being the Most Valuable Player the last two campaigns Wayne was also honored as a member on the NCAA Division III All South team the last three seasons, and ended his career with an 18 points per game average.

150 miles of Manhattan, will provide ample grist for the sociologist's mill.

"The real reason for Woodstock II is that there has been no cultural event during the 1970's that meant anything to anybody," modestly declares festival publicist, Michael Gershman.

For Gershman, along with Moss and "Woodstock" movie producer/director Michael Wadleigh, it's a $6 million gamble that youth culture hasn't changed as much as some social observers suggest.

"It's a risk," promoter Moss admits. "There isn't the challenge or the activism of ten years ago. To a great extent we're putting ourselves and everybody who attends on trial to see if we can pick up some energy from this event.

"I'd like to see some residual energy go into the alternate energy thing, for instance. There are lots of things we have been sloughing off on that this festival might help."

This summer's gathering, therefore, will not be limited to musical events. "We want to take advantage of this huge meeting of people to try and get a feel for what people think – where we have come in the last decade – and where we are going," Moss explains. "We're inviting ecology groups, solar energy groups, and multi-cultural organizations to participate, among others."

The ultimate fate of Woodstock II, then, lies with the fans.

"We want everyone to be able to sit out in the middle of a field and have the same feeling as was present ten years ago – that interchange and verbal dialogue not possible anywhere else. Will it happen? Everybody, I think, would like it to."

nesota, have designed small, do-it-yourself stills for production of alcohol for motor vehicle use. Crombie's device makes use of a conventional-design solar collector to produce 2 gallons of ethanol per day from corn mash, wheat mash or farm wastes and sewage. He averages about 1 gallon of burnable fuel for every three gallons of raw material. When processed, the remaining material is usable as high-protein cattle feed. Crombie has received legal permission from the government for his "moonshining," and he plans to build a scaled-up version of his prototype that would produce 2200 gallons daily for sale to farmers and motorists.

Will gasohol and alcohol fuels become viable options to a gas-hungry nation? Will we soon be buying automobile fuel by the fifth instead of by the gallon? Only time will tell.

Poetry reading on May 30

A joint poetry reading entitled "A Long Way Back" will be given by Dave Young and Tim Rahn on Wednesday, May 30, 8:30 p.m. in the House-in-the-Woods.

Both men have recently returned from lengthy stays in other lands or states. Young spent several years in the Phillipines as a curriculum advisor to a small college. Rahn worked as a volunteer at Ghost Ranch in New Mexico last summer and fall, and is currently a part-time student at MC.

Young, formerly a faculty member and administrator at the College, could not be reached at press time about the nature of his readings. Rahn, however, has announced that the title to his portion of the reading is "New Poems for Old Friends." They will be based on his New Mexico experiences and the bus ride he took when he returned east.

Young and Rahn have led and participated in many readings at Maryville in the past.

Commencement activities set

by Anne Gilliland

Activities planned for this weekend in connection with graduation include Alumni Day on Saturday, Baccalaureate on Sunday night and Commencement on Monday morning.

Luncheons for reunion classes will be held at noon on Saturday. The annual alumni dinner will be held in the dining room at 6:30 p.m. Graduating seniors are also invited to the dinner. Reservations may be made at the alumni office by Friday. Cost of the dinner is $5.25 per person. It will be followed at 7:30 p.m. by the annual Alumni Association meeting.

The Baccalaureate Service will be held at 8:00 p.m. on Sunday in the chapel. The service will be led by the MC choir, directed by Dr. Harry Harter. Organist will be Dr. James Bloy.

Dr. Carolyn Blair and Sharon Youngs will be the readers. The liturgist and preacher will be the Rev. James Stewart.

Dr. Marie Gadsden, vice president and director of the Washington, DC, Bureau of the Phelps-Stokes Fund and a member of MC's Board of Directors, will give the Commencement address at the 160th Commencement program Monday at 10:30 in the chapel.

Dr. Gadsden's address is entitled "Strategies for the 21st Century."

Her work involves curriculum development and international education in Africa, Asia, the Pacific, Latin America, and Europe. Prior to that she was in various positions directing and supervising work for the Peace Corps.

Dr. Gadsden holds a B.S. degree from Georgia (now Savannah) State College, an M.A. from Atlanta University and a Ph. D. from the University of Wisconsin. She has done post doctoral work at Oxford University in England and in Ireland.

Dr. Gadsden is a director for the Academy for Educational Development in New York, a public member of Board of first International Communication Agency, council member of the Overseas Liaison Committee, and American Council of Education and on the executive committee of TACTICS and Black Women's Community Development in Washington, DC.

At the Commencement program MC will award three honorary Doctor of Laws degrees to three prominent business leaders.

Arthur M. Doty, retired president of the Alcoa Foundation, John Mitchell Lambert, retired president of Vulcan Materials, and Richard B. Sellars, retired chairman of the board for Johnson and Johnson, will receive LL.D. degrees.

The Rev. James Stewart will give the prayer of invocation and the benediction. The Rev. William Varker of Westminster Presbyterian Church, Greensboro, NC, will give the commencement prayer.

The Effortless Runner

Goodbye Yellow Brick Road

Thumbing through past Echos, I notice that it is traditional for the editor to write the last editorial for the year. Some past editors have said that this place sucks. Others have said that they will chalk it up to experience. I, however, being a bit on the insane side (who isn't after four years here?) refuse to conclude such a period of life with such definite convictions. I mean, really, this place does suck and it is the best years of one's life, but the two work together; without hate there is no love, etc., etc. I'm sure we all know the philosophy.

Sitting alone on Pearsons balcony at 1:00 a.m. I am receptive to a great peace which fills the campus.

Quite simply, there is no time. The evening is quiet and warm with the smell of a distant ocean which this misplaced College often gets late at night. The only life is a runner. In the distance he is moving silently through the night with obvious ease and little exertion. An effortless runner running through a timeless night. What class is he from? What year is it? It could be 1979, 1967, 1846, 1938. . . . .The eternal campus captures all you have given it and keeps it as part of its memories. This is our greatest consolation—no one ever leaves where he has walked.

On the surface it is much less. Life brings us here, displays a gamut of scenes and emotions and snatches us out after four years, ready or not. Mother always told me not to build castles on the sand. Mother never told me the chameleon-like appearance of sand. I doubt if she knew.

And so. . .fare well to the timeless sandcastle of college. Like the effortless runner, part of me and of others I observe will remain here, chained to a place which holds more than memories but a refuge for the soul. The runner transcends the pain and reaches a peace which only the sufferer can know.

For those who are excited about getting out of this "hole," careful. . .only a fool rushes time; time moves fast enough by itself. For those who feel this place has screwed them to the wall, don't carry such unnecessary luggage. There is plenty of cruelty and inhumanities without contriving our own.

Instead, be like the runner who knows his exercise is not good unless he suffers. A runner is not mad at the hill, for he knows it is good for him. So be it with the College Experience. We have reached the top of the hill and we're tired as hell. Damn the hill! But when our breath returns, the hill will be the substance of life. A great effort for a great reward.

Many of us have already reached the peak and cherish the struggle. Others will find it in future years and some will never find it. Some live and others merely exist.

There is a greatness in this College, as there is anyplace where people meet and share life to its fullest. Let us take this greatness with us; let us support the hill so future runners will have the challenge. Transpire the past into the future, for this is the past's greatest gift.

1:30 a.m. on Pearsons balcony. The effortless runner is gone.

We are all gone.

Saga out, ARA in

The long debated decision over switching food services at MC has been made. Saga will terminate its service at MC on June 4. The newly chosen food service, ARA, will begin its contract with MC on June 10. ARA is to begin its services at MC this summer rather than fall term of 1979 to avoid confusion.

According to Dr. Larry Mangus, there were several reasons for the final decision. Cost was a large factor. Students will find no difference in the amount paid for board. In fact, the difference in the board fee is about one cent between Saga and ARA. There is a difference in costs as far as the institution goes. For instance, the cost of freshman orientation week is half the price with ARA than it is with Saga. Other lower costs are found in the prices that faculty members will pay for meals. Prices for meals for visiting guests are also considerably lower with ARA than with Saga, and MC will receive 10% of the gross from guest payments.

As far as the students go, they will be paying the same amount, but receiving more for their money. A few of the new assets will include a hot and cold buffet on Saturday from 10:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. and on Sundays from 9:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.; a slim-line menu; an early bird breakfast; fresh fruit at every meal; and a separate seconds line. These are just a few improvements on a list of many.

The decision was not an easy one. The administration was well aware of the fact that Saga improved this spring. Dr. Mangus stressed that a big problem with Saga lies in its ups and downs. What the administration is looking for is consistency in the quality of the food. Dr. Mangus also stressed that Carol Howe, present director of Saga, was not a deciding factor. MC was very pleased with Ms. Howe and considered her a real plus. In fact, they are in hopes of acquiring someone with similar qualities from ARA. This will be possible since the administration has the final approval of who the director and assistant director will be.

ARA is more than willing to cooperate with MC in any way possible. This includes dinner theatres, social committee activities, and any other services in which they might be needed.

In the final comparison ARA was found to be superior to Saga in almost every aspect. Dr. Mangus feels there will probably be a few difficulties at first, but he is confident of ARA's abilities to offer the students the best possible food service available

Echo winds down

It is with a strange reluctance that I surrender my post as editor of the Echo. The job has been, above and beyond everything else, an enjoyable task. Our staff has tried to compose an informative, entertaining, and thought-provoking paper. I have the utmost confidence that next year's staff under the capable leadership of Shelley Ballenger will improve the Echo and continue to work for those illusive goals which we have striven for.

It has been a full year at MC. During the course of events the Echo has tried to take an objectional stand. Looking back, I believe we have. Perhaps we should have been more conservative or liberal with certain issues, but for every paper published there have been people on either side of the fence. We have, for the most part, satisfied our own journalistic standards and remained impervious to the shouts of libel, boredom, faulty reporting, accurate reporting, sincere appreciation, and contemptuous hate for specific stories and editorials which have reached our ears. We believe we hit the nail on the head numerous times and have done our part to bring needed change at MC. We also believe that we have been snowed a few times.

Unlike many organizations, there is little recognition for those who work on the Echo, yet many students have contributed numerous hours every week in an effort to supply this College with a quality newspaper.

Special thanks goes to David Boyd and Joel Flint, who have spent over two years working under different editors for the Echo. Boyd has spent the year in the darkroom, behind the camera, and assigning stories. I have persuaded him to do everything but sweep the floor. Flint has spent endless Tuesday nights laying the paper out, emitting disrespectful groans every time I cut a picture. Their time has been generously offered and marked by quality work.

Sincere appreciation goes to Dr. Elizabeth Fowler who has proofed the copy every week and has added a note of journalistic experience to a young staff.

Shelley Ballenger deserves recognition for her unlimited variety of writing contributions and her many hours of work in every facet of the paper.

Most of all, thanks to the entire staff who have contributed and served the Echo during the past year.

The staff joins me in wishing all a happy summer.

Jim Stewart reflects on his chaplain years at MC

Chaplain Jim Stewart

by Tim Rahn

"I found that I've had to be more of a pastor at Maryville since it is a church-related college. I had to revise my model for the chaplaincy--that adjustment took a year, and only recently I've begun to get to the place where a structure is evolving."

This was Jim Stewart's response to a question concerning his original perception of the Maryville chaplaincy and how he views any changes in his role as campus minister. In an interview Tuesday morning, Stewart assessed his tenure as chaplain and teacher and looked ahead for both himself and the college chaplaincy.

Stewart said that initial model for the chaplaincy was based on his experiences with universities where the institution of the church is separate from the institution of learning.

The question of church-relatedness is one that is foremost in Stewart's mind.

"The major issue for Maryville College is what does it mean to be church related," Stewart said. He sees every facet of the institution revolving around this question from admissions to faculty and fund raising to religious consciousness. He stressed that he did not mean this in the "stodgy or old fashioned" sense, but rather an institution open to diversity and religious plurality.

"The problem is that both the college--and all church related colleges--together with the United Presbyterian Church are unclear about church-relatedness." It is this lack of clarity between the church and its factions and the college and its factions that has caused the most frustration for Stewart.

Similarly, Stewart stated that a lack of clarity of goals is Maryville's biggest problem. It is a problem, however, that everyone shares, he pointed out.

"We need institutional goals. Retention studies show that students with clear goals have a much higher retention rate. Institutions with clear goals should have a higher 'retention rate.' Yet we are all guilty of this lack of clarity--all have sinned and fallen short of the glory of God," Stewart said with a laugh.

Stewart sees the College and the Church making positive steps to answer the question of church-relatedness. He pointed to the fact that both have appointed

Teacher of the year

Harry Howard, instructor in political science at Maryville College, has been named the College's Most Outstanding Teacher for 1978-79. His selection was announced at Wednesday's faculty luncheon in Proffitt Dining Room on the MC campus.

Runners-up for the award were Dr. Terry A. Bunde, assistant professor of chemistry, and Dr. Russell D. Parker, associate professor of history and secretary of the faculty.

The winners were selected by decision of the student members of the College's Instructional Program Committee, based on nominations made by members of the senior class. Seniors were asked to take into account the teacher's ability to motivate learning, sensitivity to material, knowledge of subject matter, and involvement in student affairs.

Howard, who was a runner up in voting last year, has taught at Maryville since 1976. A graduate of Tennessee Wesleyan College, he has earned a master's degree in theology as well as in political science from Southern Methodist University in Dallas. He is currently working toward completion of his doctorate in political science at the University of Tennessee.

Dr. Bunde joined the MC faculty in 1977 and Dr. Parker in 1964.

Well. It's been a fun year. I would like to thank everyone for the favorable reaction to my contributions to the paper, Animal Crackers and Chemistry Comix. Thanks for the compliments and comments. It was fun writing. Walt Montgomery a road that is an ordered road, like a nun's evening prayer;

As seniors get ready to graduate, juniors are still playing peek-a-boo.

MC accepted in ODAC

Maryville College has been selected as the ninth and newest member of the Old Dominion Athletic Conference (ODAC), effective for the 1979-80 athletic year.

The announcement was made at the annual ODAC spring conference on May 21. MC is the only school in the conference which is not in the state of Virginia.

Concerning MC's acceptance, Athletic Director Billy Henry said, "We are tremendously excited for our student athletes because of the chance chance they will have to compete for conference championships and win individual recognition. In becoming a member of ODAC Maryville College will be affiliated with one of the most outstanding NCAA Division III conferences in the country."

President Anderson said, "In making application to a conference we were hopeful of finding one congenial to our educational philosophy and operating policies, and we are pleased that we have been successful in this effort. We are pleased to be associated with these institutions who share our admissions requirement and academic standards as well as our values regarding athletic competition at the NCAA Division III level."

The other members of the conference are Washington and Lee, Hampden-Sydney, Emory and Henry, Bridgewater, Randolph-Macon, Lynchburg, Roanoke, and Eastern Mennonite.

Fickert takes wrestling helm

Head football coach Steve Fickert will assume the additional duty of head wrestling coach, MC Athletic Director Billy Henry has announced.

Fickert replaces Mike O'Brien at the wrestling helm. O'Brien, who joined the football staff last year with Fickert, will continue his duties as offensive line coach for the football team. He and his wife, Susan, will remain as resident directors of Carnegie Hall.

Fickert, 29, wrestled all four years in high school and went undefeated his senior year. Although he was offered several wrestling scholarships he chose to attend the University of Miami in Ohio on a football scholarship. He continued to wrestle while attending Miami.

task forces to study the problem, a step he considers to be in the right direction.

When he was interviewed by the Echo after coming to MC, Stewart stated that one of his functions was "to discover and lead religious functions that are appropriate to the situation." Now Stewart believes that his success in this area has been "a mixed record of changes." He added that energies spent during the transition of administrations has detracted from the creative energy that could have followed up various projects such as February Meetings.

As a result, Stewart's creativity as a photographer has suffered. He is very pleased, however, with the courses he has taught in photography and the growth he has seen in his students.

Stewart takes great satisfaction in his personal growth since coming to Maryville, especially his ability to deal with divergent religious views. "I can be close to those in the conservative camp and we can be open about our differences. I had some anxiety about this when I took the job."

THE NEWS OF MARYVILLE COLLEGE, MARYVILLE, TN.

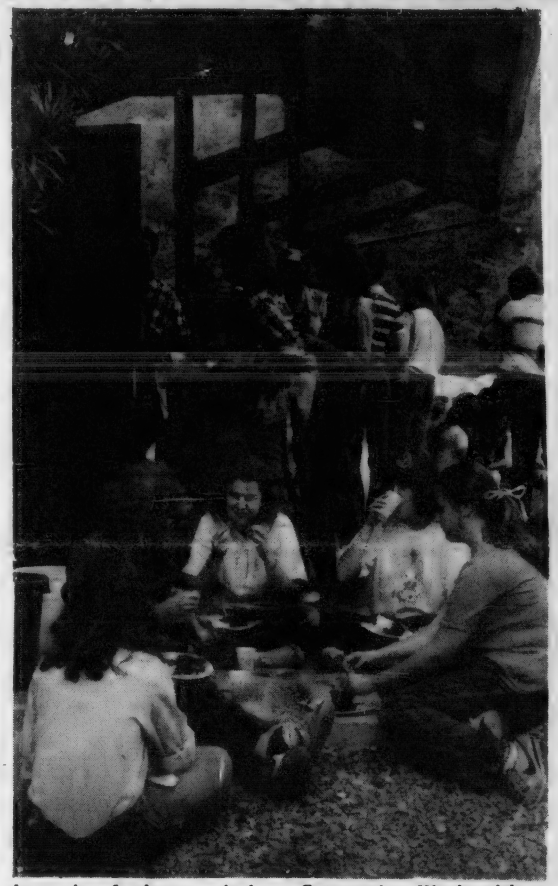
MC adds new faculty

Maryville College has added two new full-time faculty members and eight persons to fill part-time faculty positions for this academic year.

Full-time appointments include Dr. Young-Bae Kim who will join the faculty as a professor of political science and Dr. Dean A. Bolden as associate professor of sociology.

Dr. Kim, a native of Korea, received degrees from Yonsei University in Seoul, Indiana University, and the University of Kansas.

His publications and presentations have dealt with the Japanese Communist Party, Russo-Japanese relations, and north-south unification talks. Dr. Kim has researched and studied abroad in Japan, the Soviet Union, and Eastern Europe.



Dr. Boldon is joining the Maryville faculty after having taught at Damavand College, an American-curriculum, four-year liberal arts college for women in Tehran, Iran since 1976.

Dr. Boldon earned the B.A. degree in sociology from Hanover College and the M.Div. in religion and sociology from Princeton Theological Seminary. His Ph.D. work in sociology was done at Vanderbilt where he also served as teaching assistant and instructor in sociology. He had taught previously at The Community School in Tehran from 1969-1972.

Dr. Donald Thomas, who holds the B.S. and M.A.-CIT degrees from the University of Tennessee-Knoxville (UTK), will teach English and speech courses. He will also direct the College's theatre program.

Active in area theatrical work for the past 15 years, Thomas has been involved both on and off stage as an actor, director, techni-

Incoming freshmen wind up Orientation Week with a Sunday picnic at Waldon Camp.

ARA provides new tastes

ARA food service replaced Saga at MC in June. Mr. John Keefover began working as manager on July 4. Mr. Roger Brunson is the assistant manager.

ARA's proposal offers a few items that Saga did not. This was one of the reasons for changing food services.

ARA operates on a five week cycle. This means MC students will not get exactly the same meal within a five week period. Every week there is an unannounced Premium Night. Keefover explained that on this night a more expensive meal is served, sometimes steak but not always. There will be a special events night once a month similar to the disco night they had during orientation week.

According to Keefover, two items that are now missing will soon be available. One is the doughnut machine that has been ordered and will soon provide freshly baked doughnuts. Another is the soup kettle featuring soup-of-the-day.

Mr. Keefover's intention is to post a menu in advance. Here the calories for average size servings of the meal will be posted.

So far, Keefover is pleased with the way things are running. He is getting good feelings from the students. He is impressed with the amount of students that attend meals and feels that this is an indication that the food is good. Keefover stated, "We will be as cooperative as possible. Our only limitation is our budget, but we will be glad to do anything within that budget."

When asked about installing a suggestion box Keefover stated, "My door is open, not only for complaints, but for compliments too. Bring the suggestions to me rather than a suggestion box."

As for Keefover's main goal he stated, "We're looking for change and improvement."

Frosh class swells campus

Maryville College's freshmen class is bigger and brighter this year.

With an increase in size from 219 students in 1978 to 242 in 1979, freshmen are the largest class on campus. It also ranks as the largest entering class in seven years, with a 24 percent increase over the past four years (183 in 1976).

S.A.T. scores rate 461 Verbal and 481 Math, compared with the national average of 427 Verbal and 467 Math. The A.C.T. showed a composite of 20, compared to a national rate of 18. Forty-four percent of the entering class were in the top one-half of their graduating class, showing an increase from last year.

The new freshmen come from all over the U.S. and represent four other countries.. Tennessee contributed 80 new faces—an increase over last year—and is the largest state representation for entering students. Of the students, 53 come from Florida, 33 from Georgia, and the rest from fifteen other states.

New foreign students include a young woman from Iran, two students from India, two from Japan, and a young man from Lybia.

The entering students and transfers also come from a variety of religious backgrounds. There are 29 Roman Catholics, 75 Baptists, 51 Presbyterians, and many others representing various Protestant denominations and the Jewish, Islamic, and Buddhist faiths.

Bright as the newcomers may be, MC continues its search for students. Rick Ziegler, Director of Admissions, will put his counselors on the road at the end of the week to recruit for the class of 1984.

Don't sell yourself short

"Real World" here for the taking

It's hard to believe that we haven't been here two weeks yet. Maryville surrounds you, embraces you, makes you forget there's anything else outside. Where is the real world? One wonders if the graduated seniors, whose absence here seems so strange, have found it yet. After all, isn't that what comes after college? So it's been said, but I don't believe it. The real world, folks, is a myth. This is as real as it gets. You don't graduate into the real world, you're born into it. Yes, even here at Maryville College, isolated though it may seem at times, we are all living real lives in a very real world. There's no such thing as a practice round in life—and if you think this is one, you'd better think again. But these four college years do constitute a unique period of time and, as such, they deserve to be set apart as being especially valuable.

Freshmen, this is your chance to start over in a whole new place. Get involved, stretch out, don't be afraid to try new things. You can make something of yourself at this school if you just care enough to use a little energy and initiative. You might feel a little awkward now, but keep searching until you find a place here where you can feel comfortable. And then open yourself up and soak it all in—the classes, the parties, the mountains, the joys, the disappointments, the frustrations, and triumphs. They're all a part of it. You might find yourself pushed far beyond what you once considered to be your limits—so much the better. Change is not an enemy here. Just remember that now you're basically responsible only for and to yourself, and take care not to abuse or neglect that responsibility.

Sophomores and juniors always seem to get lumped together. The middle years, I guess. Years to start sorting out the things that really matter from the things that don't. Years to start accepting positions of responsibility. Years for changing—minds, majors, loves, tastes, opinions, hairstyles, attitudes, accents—whatever it seems you've outgrown. Years for gaining confidence, self-reliance, and independence. Hard years. Good years.

Seniors, you don't need anybody to tell you to make the most out of this year. You've seen how fast they go, and you know that next June is just around the corner. Do you remember your Freshman Orientation week? Well, that was three years ago, buddy. Don't sell yourself short on the one you've got left.

The real world isn't out there waiting to pounce on us when our time here is up. We need not fear it, need not even be concerned about preparing for it properly. We can prepare for the future, but not for life, because life is here and now. And that here and now life deserves to be valued in its own right. Our time here is short; enjoy it. Have a good year, everyone.

Watercolors on exhibition

The Knoxville Watercolor Society is exhibiting their work in the FAC Gallery. There are 64 paintings in various styles by over 30 Knoxville artists. The exhibit will be open until September 28 from 9 a.m. - 4 p.m. on weekdays.

Many of the Society's members are award-winning artists. Most of the works on display are for sale.

Mrs. Ruth Andrews is exhibiting her commercial art work in the MC Library during regular library hours throughout September. Mrs. Andrews resides in Maryville, but received her formal training at Harris Advertising Art School in Nashville. She has worked as a staff artist, free-lance artist, and part-time teacher for several organizations.

Echoes from the past...

In the olden days all freshmen entering Maryville were required to take an Intelligence Test—similar in purpose, we suppose, to current placement tests. The October 29, 1928 Highland Echo found the "mentality of freshmen . . . as usual, sadly wanting," and went on to give "a fair sample of the brilliance of Maryville's new students":

A poem is a native unskilled laborer of the Orient.

T.B. is a gradual recovery to health after sickness.

An alligator is any animal that devours its own kind.

A figure having six sides is a biplane.

Blount set for library

A half-million dollar grant to help Blount County build a new library has been awarded by the Appalachian Regional Commission (A.R.C.). The $500,000 from the A.R.C. will be matched by Maryville and Blount County.

The new library will offer a complete range of library services to the entire population of Blount County. The facilities will include a catalog section, reference section, periodicals, an adult area, a children's area, and a meeting room.

Property has already been acquired for a new library. It will be located on McGhee Avenue directly opposite from the Greenbelt Area.

Hess and Largen honored

Ms. Edith Largen and Ms. Martha Hess have recently been honored by Maryville College. Ms. Largen, associate professor of health and physical education at MC, has been appointed chairperson of the Dept. of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation. Ms. Hess, registrar, has been named recipient of the first Outstanding Administrator Award at Maryville.

Ms. Largen, a 1948 graduate, joined the college faculty in 1949 as an instructor in health and physical education. She was promoted to assistant professor in 1957 and to associate professor in 1970.

In addition to her teaching responsibilities at MC for the past 30 years, she has been active in professional health and physical education organizations in the state. This past summer she attended workshops and visited other colleges to discover ways to strengthen the recreational program at MC.

Ms. Largen succeeds Dr. Larry Broviak, who resigned last spring.

Ms. Hess, a 1967 MC graduate, joined the MC staff in 1974 and was named registrar in January 1975. Prior to that she taught in the Knox County School System.

The Outstanding Administrator Award, which the college hopes to present annually, commends Ms. Hess' performance as an administrator during the 1978-1979 academic year. Selection was made by President Anderson, based on recommendations made by a committee comprised of students, faculty, and staff representatives.

The award was made possible by a gift from Neil McDade, former MC administrative vice-president who is now with Morris Harvey College in West Virginia.

Frosh get orientated

An orientation week was held at Maryville College September 4-10. This served as a time for the incoming freshmen to get acquainted with the school and each other.

A bus tour showed the students and parents the important spots in the Maryville-Alcoa area, followed by a luncheon in Pearsons Hall. At 2:00 p.m. an assembly was held during which speeches were given by the President and various members of the faculty.

September 5-7 the freshmen were busy taking placement tests in reading, math, English, and foreign language. They also had to write two essays to help in placing them in the right English class.

Some recreational activities were attended by the students. These included a volleyball tournament, horror movies, and a dinner-dance.

The week ended with the academic convocation on Monday. Regularly scheduled classes began Tuesday.

Scots charged up; short out Eagles

Tailback Alvin Nance slashes across the goal line for the Scots' first touchdown .

The M C Scots opened the 1979 football season in grand style last Saturday, defeating arch-rival Carson-Newman, 15-7. The renewal of contests between the two old foes brought an enthusiastic capacity crowd of 4000 out to Honaker Field.

The most notable performers throughout much of the game were the officials, who threw their flags 14 times, ten of which penalized the Scots. The first half featured tough defense on both sides. The Scots started several drives off the running tailback Alvin Nance and his counterpart at fullback, Ken Adair, only to have them killed by penalties. The Ealges threatened when Mike Nelson blocked a Dave Kibben punt and C-N recovered on the MC 15-yard line. However, the Scots' Pete Barron recovered an Eagle fumble, and the half ended scoreless.

Carson-Newman drew first blood quickly in the second half when Scot freshman quarterback Mike Wortman fumbled and C-N recovered at the MC 27. It took three plays before Eagle quarterback Jay Andrews sprinted around for the touchdown. The conversion was kicked and the Scots fell behind, 7-0.

Late in the third quarter MC took the ball at midfield and drove goalward with Nance's running and a couple of key first down conversions on Kibben passes to Adair. Hopes of a Maryville score plummeted, however, when on fourth and goal Kibben's pass to Adair fell incomplete.

Then came the turning point of the game. On the very next play the Eagles fumbled and Keith Martin of the Scots recovered; first and goal once again for MC. That was all Alvin Nance needed, as he drove around the right side for the touchdown. The Scots went for 2, and Kibben hit a diving Craig Gentry in the endzone to make it MC 8, C-N 7.

In the fourth quarter Carson-Newman could do nothing against the fired-up Scot defense. The Eagles' inability to hold the football hurt them again when they fumbled at their 8 to the Scots. After 3 plays Ken Adair plunged over for paydirt, and Carey Starnes kicked the extra point to make it 15-7 with 1:54 minutes left. C.N. saw their last hopes die when Pete Barron intercepted a John Springer pass with 15 seconds left.

Scots coach Steve Fickert remarked after the game: "I wish I had one of their T-shirts." He was referring to the Carson-Newman fans and coaching staff who came adorned in shirts depicting an eagle destroying a Scot. The C-N cross-country team ran to Maryville from Jefferson City with the game ball. They wore shirts that proclaimed: "We'll be running while the Scots are walking."

One Scot who definitely did not walk was Alvin Nance, who gained 124 yards on 25 carries. Ken Adair did a fine job also with 68 yards on 13

The Scots face Bridgewater this Saturday at Honaker field.

Lady Scots spiked for season

The 1979 volleyball season promises to be a fine one for this year's squad. The Lady Scots will have 9 returning players, along with 3 freshman. The Lady Scots finished second in the state tournament last year, and are looking for a first place victory this year.

Coach Sharon Brown is very enthusiastic about the season, and she feels her team has a strong chance to "go all the way."

The volleyball season will open September 25 when the Lady Scots travel to Tennessee Temple.

Counselor lends an ear

"The Counseling Center here at Maryville is somewhat different than the counseling centers on most college campuses," says Bruce Guillaume, Director of the Center and 1976 graduate of Maryville College. Guillaume explained, "Our philosphy is that college students are in a different environment than most other people and therefore require different skills."

The Counseling Center has a completely qualified professional staff. Bruce Guillaume is a certified Rational Behavior Therapist and has published several papers about exercise therapy. He received his Master's Degree in Clinical Social Work from the University of Tennessee.

The Center is located in Room 208 in Fayerweather Hall. It is open 8:30 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, and by appointment only Wednesday - Friday. To make an appointment, contact Bruce Guillaume Box 2893, or the Career Planning and Placement Office.

THE NEWS OF MARYVILLE COLLEGE, MARYVILLE, TN.

Fayerweather rennovated

Fayerweather Hall has recently had some renovations made. Following up on last year's promise of construction of a new student center by the end of the 78-79 school year, renovation is well on its way.

The snack bar has had some noticeable work done in the form of a new floor, repair of the seat cushions, new drapes and wallpaper. The snack bar is being run by ARA and has beefed up the menu with a different lunch special every day and several new items on the menu. New pinball machines and a new jukebux finish the improvements to the snack bar.

Also on the first floor, the old pool room has been converted into a commuters' room complete with new carpet, furniture and lockers for commuting students. This is something the commuters have been requesting for several years.

New paint in the entrance hall and second floor are more improvements being made. The old Circle K clubroom has been completely remodeled. The ceiling has been lowered and the old lab furniture removed. Still to be put in are carpet and new furniture. The room will be used for meetings or parties and can be reserved through the Student Services Office.

Yet to come for Fayerweather are improvements to the Chilhowean and Echo offices and the possible addition of a Social Committee office. Plans have been made for the possible construction of a recreation room, committee club rooms, a large ballroom, and renovation of the third floor, truly making Fayerweather the campus student center.

Fayerweather Hall's newly renovated room has been designated as a meeting place for various MC groups.

THE MEN

This article represents the collective opinion of a great number of co-eds on "What's wrong with the men?"

The freshman girls seem to require a great deal of care about the minor details of your personal appearance. Fingernails must be cut and clean. Your shirt collar must be spotless; and why not the rest of your shirt? Your eyes must be clear. A stitch in time will save your holey socks and your freshman girl at the same time. Your unpolished shoes hurt our eyes.

The sophomores insist on clean teeth, clean hands, and a welcome smile. Your hair should always be neatly combed.

The juniors abhor moustaches. Hair tonics and

THE WOMEN

Apparently deeming discretion the better part of valor, the men on the campus were reluctant to answer the question, "What are your opinions concerning Maryville girls?" Undaunted, the intrepid reporter resorted to persuasion, reassurance, and all manner of guile; the result is this appraisal of our college lassies.

The boys appreciate your pleasing features, careful grooming, and neat clothes. No complaints there.

Plucked eyebrows are all right, say the men, provided a few are left unmolested. Paint your nails any color you choose, girls; the men resign to the inevitable. But if your hair isn't a fit frame for your face, get a

Draft bill defeated in House

Washington, D.C. (CPS) — "It was an important victory," Duane Shank notes warily, "but it could be that it's just the first victory in the first skirmish of the war."

Shank's conditional elation came the morning after the U. S. House of Representatives soundly rejected a measure that would have resumed Selective Service registration of 18-year-olds. It would have been the first variety of draft since 1972.

Shank, director of the Committee Against Registration and the Draft (CARD), says he expected the measure would be defeated, but was surprised at the margin of the vote. The House voted 259-155 to strip the registration measure from a $42 billion defense authorization bill.

There is still a similar registration measure awaiting action in the Senate. "I don't know if or when the Senate will vote on it," Shank says. "It could be that the overwhelming rejection of the draft in the House will convince the Senate that the American people just don't want the draft back." As a result, he hopes the Senate will simply let the measure die of inattention in committee.

Last April 30, a House committee voted down a bill that would have authorized the conscription of some 200,000 young people. But on the same day — the fourth anniversary of the U. S. evacuation from Saigon — the same committee approved a plan to register males who turn 18 on or after Jan. 1, 1981. The Pentagon argued the registration would enable the U. S. to respond rapidly to a military emergency. Without registration, the military said, it could take months to mobilize an effective fighting force.

The House committee then sent the proposal to the House floor, which didn't get around to voting on it until September 12.

Draft opponents reacted a lot faster. A group called Students for a Libertarian Society (SLS) took the lead in organizing anti-draft protests in the early spring, though it readily joined CARD, a larger coalition of 39 groups, when it was formed in April.

All told, the groups helped coordinate rallies, teach-ins, and petition drives on Economy crunches travel

Interim needs cheap creativity

A significant number of Maryville students found themselves very disappointed this past week over the cancellation of two more interim projects. The trip to England with Dr. Fowler and Mrs. Cate and Dr. Sumner's Hawaiian exploration have both fallen by the wayside. The reasons behind the cancellations are largely economic and in all fairness cannot be laid upon the shoulders of the students or staff involved. Many people sincerely wanted to go on those trips, and virtually every possibility was explored before they were finally laid to rest.

The primary reasons behind both cancellations included large unforeseen increases in cost and an apparant lack of interested students. The cost of the England interim jumped from $1,243 to $1,475, due to air fare hikes, devaluation of the dollar, and a virtual doubling of the value add tax (similar to our sales tax) in England. Further, those rates are based on a group of twenty persons, and only fourteen students originally enrolled. Fully half of these withdrew from the project when notified of the rate increase. Similarly, Dr. Sumner faced higher air, gasoline, food, and housing costs. Her estimates were based on a group of 10-12, and at the time of cancellation only five students were enrolled, even though she attempted to recruit more people this fall.

Two other interims, Ms. Schoen to Poland and Ms. Bianco/Savage to Washington, D.C. were cancelled last spring due to an apparant lack of interested students. With these two projects never even off the ground, plus the two recent cancellations, only two travel-oriented interims — both to New York City — remain viable, and one of these is still up in the air.

What does this have to say about the interim program at Maryville College? Certainly the economic problems of other countries are not our fault, and students who can't afford overseas travel can't be forced to go. But these problems can and should be recognized and taken into account when the faculty makes its plans concerning interim projects.

Basically, we believe the idea of an interim program is a good one. It gives students a chance to explore rather unusual areas of interest, and to develop skills and acquire knowledge usually considered outside that of the regular academic curriculum. Interim often provides the student's closest academic contact with current events. A lot of positive things can be accomplished through the interim arrangement. In no way do we wish to suggest that the idea of an interim period is invalid, meaningless, or outdated.

What we would like to suggest is a little more innovation in creating inexpensive interims. On-campus projects are, obviously, the least expensive, but they also require the greatest amount of imagination. Perhaps guest speakers could be used to greater advantage. Even students who have a certain amount of expertise in an area could be used to supplement, or perhaps actually assist in leading, an interim. Projects which involve actually doing or making something, rather than simply reading and writing, usually seem to be more popular with students. So are those which cater to hobbies, such as photography, since these skills are hard to pick up elsewhere. Then there are current areas of interest, like exploring alternative energy options. Does anyone know anything about carpentry? Students could have individual projects and/or group ones which could be used to improve the school (the Echo room, for instance, is in dire need of another layout table). How about a study of the ever-popular income-tax form? It seems like this is one thing which even well-educated Americans have trouble understanding. These are just two examples of practical skills which students might consider worth their while.

Travel, as this year has shown us, is going to be difficult from an economic standpoint. It's hard to discourage the offering of trips abroad, because they constitute such a unique and valuable opportunity. But nonetheless, it might be better to stick closer to home. How about a tour of various Civil War battlegrounds? Or a trip featuring visits to the Grand Old Opry? Some schools would give anything to have Oak Ridge practically in their backyard. The energy and economic crunch might just teach us not to overlook the obvious. Stretching a little farther afield, travel within the United States can usually be accomplished at a relatively moderate rate compared to international ventures.

Interim, if used properly, can provide students with an invaluable opportunity to discover things they always wanted to learn about. It may take some brainstorming to come up with appealing topics, but it can be done. Economic limitations are going to be an important factor not only this year but in the future; as we have seen, they can hinder even the best of plans. It would be gratifying to think, however, that impressive ideas don't depend upon impressive price tags.

Friday, Sept. 28

3:00-5:00 P.M.: — Paint-the-Bleachers-Afternoon. Meet at the football field to paint the student section orange.

9:00-12:00 P.M.: — Playmakers Night at the Movies. Psycho and Nosferatu will be shown in Lloyd basement. Asmission is 25 cents and meatball sandwiches will be sold. B.Y.O.B.

Saturday, Sept. 29

2:00 P.M.: — Bus to the Emory and Henry football game leaves from behind Pearsons. Total cost is $4.00 and there will be dinner. Sign up at meals Thursday and Friday.

Any club or organization which would like its activities listed in "What's Going On" should notify the Echo, Box 2820, of the activity and its vital information [time, place, cost] no later than Friday of the week before it's to be printed. Schedules are arranged on a one-week basis, beginning and ending on Thursdays.

Echoes from the past...

The September 26, 1936 Highland Echo reported on the first Social Committee meeting of the 1936-37 academic year. The first activity which the committee planned to organize was the sponsorship of community sings, to be held outdoors on Saturday nights. If these proved popular, the committee would then consider holding nightly sings in the Pearsons lobby after supper.

more than 60 campuses last spring, especially during the last week of April and first week of May.

College papers did vigorously editorialize against the new draft proposals, and some draft counselling centers even re-opened. In Oregon, the state legislature officially asked Congress not to reinstate the draft.

But most attempts at larger demonstrations proved disappointing. CARD drew 800 to Washington, D.C. last May, while 100 rallied at the University of Wisconsin, once a center of draft resistance.

Jay Hilgartner of the Young Libertarian Alliance said last May that the relatively small turnouts were the result of peace. "People don't go out and demonstrate until the threat (of being sent off to war) is immediate."

perfumes are taboo. The juniors plead that a little care be taken to match ties and shirts.

The dignified seniors say that if you present just a general neat appearance, have a haircut at least semi-annually, and wear a nice, sweet smile, they can endure you.

Under "personality" come the following suggestions from the freshman girls. You men must have high ideals, good manners, respect for all women. Don't be bashful. The sophomores say, "Be considerate, polite, and a gentleman." The juniors insist that you should not be jealous! Be sweet. In the dining hall, help the girl next to you to be seated; refrain from stuffing your mouth with food; help make conversation at your table. The juniors wish that more of you would date. All girls insist that you use more tact, especially in asking for dates. Never say, "Have you got a date tonight?"

The seniors have no use for men who are unthoughtful, bashful, sissies, or conceited. According to a vote taken in Pearsons Hall brunette boys are about twice as popular as blondes or redheads. However, the girls all say that any man who lives up to the following ideals will be popular with women anywhere: show intelligence; have manners; always be thoughtful, considerate, and polite; be a gentleman; don't be conceited; be neat in appearance at all times; have high ideals; cultivate a winning smile.

permanent, or a wig, or something. Some girls can chew gum and look like a million doing it, while others chew like cows. Don't take the chance.

The clinging vine is poison ivy to most men, and the super-sophisticated eyebrow-lifter is obnoxious. Be yourself! The boys say they don't like gushy sentimentality — in public. If you must flirt, however, practice on your boyfriend, not on someone else.

Some girls are overly cheerful. A boy coming to breakfast with a dandy grouch on a rainy morning doesn't like to be greeted too pleasantly — it hurts his conscience. Be tactful at such times, girls.

Lest you forget, the overtalkative girl is as much in demand as rowboats in the Sahara. The boys like compliments, but shy at effusive praise. The girl who sings, acts, plays the piano, or engages in athletics has an advantage over the sweet thing who does nothing but look pretty.

Boys are notoriously unversed in etiquette; nevertheless they resent a lack of good manners in girls.

Be neither hypocritical nor brutally frank. Don't regard as "queer" the fellow who likes classical music or literature. Acquaint yourself with current events. Don't gossip to extremes. Don't be afraid to drop a hint to a bashful boy. Be agreeable, modest, trustworthy, sympathetic, and loyal. Follow these suggestions, and on date nights the world will beat a path to your dorm.

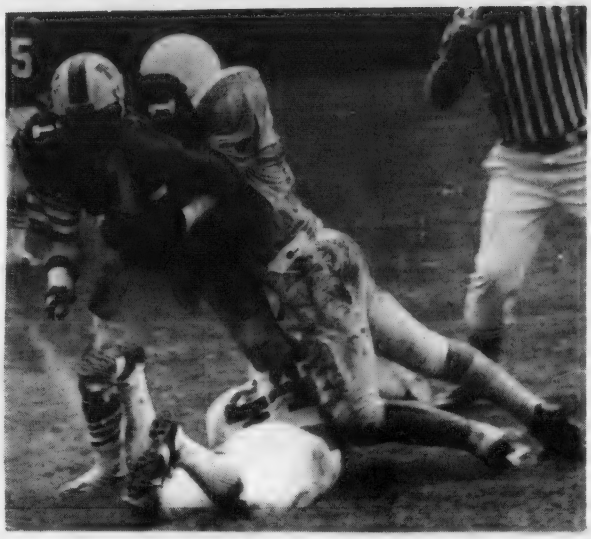
MC sinks Bridgewater

The Scots' 14 game winning streak at Honaker Field was kept intact as they scored a 28-15 victory last Saturday against Bridgewater College.



The first quarter was all Maryville. Carey Starnes opened the scoring with a tremendous 45-yard field goal and later in the quarter kicked one of 32 yards. Quarterback Dave Kibben threw a pass to Steve Moffet off a fake punt for a spectacular 94-yard touchdown play, making it 12-0 Maryville.

In the second quarter, Bridgewater came roaring back behind the outstanding arm of quarterback Duane Harrison, who threw two touchdown passes. The Eagle defense sacked Barry Mathis in the endzone for a safety, and the half ended 15-22 in favor of Bridgewater.

Carey Starnes tied it in [illegible] third field goal of the day, this one coming from 40 yards. The Eagles committed five turnovers in the final period, Ken Adair and Alvin Nance made touchdown runs of 11 and 1 yards, respectively.

MC quarterbacks Kibben and Mathis led an effective passing attack, accumulating 319 yards. The Scot defense held the Eagles to 78 yards rushing. Alvin Nance led the backs with 85 yards.

The Scots face Emory and Henry Saturday in Emory, VA.

Sideline action was plentiful in Saturday's battle between the Scots and Bridgewater. Here, Alvin Nance helps one of the exhausted Eagles off the field.

Volleyballers volley Vols

The Lady Scots' volleyball team opened their 1979 season when they traveled to the University of Tennessee to meet the Lady Vols. On Tuesday, they played Tennessee Temple and Covenant (scores for these games are not yet available).

The Lady Scots have a great deal of talent on the team this year, and it should prove to be a very exciting season. Coach Sharon Brown stated, "This year we are using a different offense — the 6-2, with two setters, as opposed to the 5-1 offense we ran last year. This way we will be able to utilize more people. I'm very positive about this new offense."

The volleyballers will be participating in the second Maryville Invitational Tournament, held here at MC. clude Carson-Newman Fisk, Montreat Anderson, Tusculum, and Tennessee Wesleyan. The Lady Scots' first game will be at 9:00 Saturday morning. They will also play at 10:30, and again later in the afternoon. The Lady Scots placed second last year, and are looking for first place this year. It will be a round robin tournament. Other participating schools in-

Soccer opens season

The Fall 1979 soccer season opened last weekend with the Scots losing a 6-2 decision to Lee College in Cleveland, Tennessee.

The young MC squad held its own against the talented Lee side, but several costly mistakes took the Scots out of the game. Lee opened the scoring early in the first half. Soon afterward, MC freshman Frank Burns drilled a Dave Franssen pass into the back of the net to make it 1-1. However, sloppy defensive play resulted in four Lee goals, and the half ended in a 5-1 disadvantage to the Scots.

Maryville came out quickly in the second half on a goal by captain Greg Hosler. The Scots defense tightened up and goalkeeper Andy Steinbeck made several key saves. Lee managed to get one final goal to end the game in a 6-2 score.

The Scots home opener is Saturday at 11:00 A.M. when they face bitter rival Carson-Newman.

Applications are now being accepted from all over the State of Tennessee for the annual Miss Tennessee USA Pageant to be staged at the Maxwell House Hotel, Nashville, Tennessee, December 29, 1979. The Miss Tennessee USA Pageant is the official preliminary to the Miss USA — Miss Universe contest.

There is "no talent" requirement. All judging is on the basis of poise, personality, swimsuit, and evening gown competition. Applicants must be between 18 and 28 years of age, never married and at least a six-months resident of Tennessee; thus college dorm students are eligible. All girls interested in competing for the title must apply to Mrs. Billie McLarty, State Director, 121 Boxwood Drive, Franklin, Tennessee 37064, or call (615) 373-8456.

The 1980 Miss Tennessee USA will be awarded a host of prizes including a round trip flight and 12 exciting days at the Miss USA Pageant. Other prizes include a scholarship, color portrait, jewelry, diamond pendant, formal, $100 cash, crown, banner, trophy, and many other gifts.

Books forced to relocate

Blount County is breaking ground for a new library. The million-and-a-half-dollar building will be ready for public use by the Christmas of 1980. The new library will be located on the corner of McGhee Street and Louisville Road in downtown Maryville.

The library is expected to receive $500,000 from both the federal and local governments. The additional $500,000 must come from donations by private individuals and industry before the building can be completed.

The campaign is headed by two co-chairmen who are in charge of overall planning. People are reached through four different committees representing either the residential areas, the professions, business, or industrial foundations. So far the campaign has received $303,482 in pledges since August.

Mrs. McDaniels, librarian for Blount County and an MC graduate, explained that the old library was out-of-date. The library opened at its present location in 1931 as a city library. It had 3,000 square feet to serve 7000 people. In 1968, it became a county library, and the same 3,000 square feet was serving 70,000 people.

Right now, the library only has room for 25,000 volumes. It would need 140,000 just to have two books per capita. Even if these books were purchased, there would be no place to put them.

The old library has other problems besides space, however. Handicapped people often have trouble climbing the stairs. The new library will be easier to use.

Included in the services the library will offer is an outreach program. Books and magazines will be left at nursing homes and senior citizen feeding stations. Magazines will be left at the jail and in unemployment offices. Reading programs will be provided for Head Start.

Students at MC are welcome to use both the old and new library at any time. To get a public library card, all you need is your student I.D.

A casual glance at the present Blount County Memorial Library reveals why the County is in need of a new building.

18 no longer legit

By David Mitchell

Over the summer the Tennessee State Legislature passed a new law raising the minimum age requirement for alcohol. The new law raises the age requirement from 18 years of age to 19. This change was discussed with Carl Koella, Jr., an attorney and representative to the State Legislature. Mr. Koella is Chairman of the State Judical Committee. Before it became a law, the Bill came through his committee for passage. Mr. Koella explained, "I was against the 18-year old age requirement." In fact he said he voted against that proposal when it came around. Mr. Koella said, "drinking is up the the individual but there must be a cutoff." I asked the legislator primarily what the law was going to do. His reply was, "to cut off the flow in the High Schools." He added that he expects the law to be "partially successful."

How effective the law is as a deterrent to High School students remains to be seen. Mr. Koella told me he has received no feedback whatsoever on the new law. He also told me I was the first person to come and talk to him about the law since its passage. Mr. Koella has been in the Tennessee State Legislature for seven years now. Mr. Koella's own preference for the drinking age is 21. Pressure from his colleagues persuaded him to vote for the new law. How well the new law works, depends upon the people who enforce it and drink by it.

Forum opens communication

Several members of the Maryville College administration met with interested students in an open forum last Thursday night, Sept. 27, in Lloyd lobby.

Representing the administration were President Anderson, Dean Richardson, Dean Mangus, Brick Brahms, Don Perkins, Al Perkins, and Dave Roberts. Approximately twenty students attended the forum, which lasted about two hours.

Dr. Anderson opened the meeting with a general invitation to the students to express what they felt was wrong with Maryville College. He returned to this question at various times during the evening.

One of the most important topics brought up for discussion at the forum was the matter of campus communications. Students and staff both felt that MC could benefit from increased efforts at communicating the activities and decisions of various groups, committees, and clubs. Both "On Campus Today" and the Highland Echo were felt to hold a high degree of potential for improving inter-campus communications.

Several topics of discussion had to do with the proposed change in the calendar at MC. The value of the course credit system vs. the credit hour system was debated. Interim was also discussed; most students expressed favorable views toward keeping this program.

Other key points of conversation centered around the budget. Questions were raised concerning funding for rennovations in the library, Willard House, and various dorms. The extent to which these rennovations can be made will be determined primarily by the success of the five million dollor fund-raising drive currently underway for MC.

CIV, the $50 dorm damage deposit, comprehensive exams, and campus security were all brought up during the meeting.

The administration hopes to hold similar open forums once each term.

Mismanagement mars Expo '82 planning

Last Friday, Sept. 28, the Knoxville City Council voted against putting a referendum concerning additional appropriations for Expo '82 on the Nov. 15 ballot. This means, basically, that the citizens of Knoxville will not be given an opportunity to vote on whether or not they want more money allocated for the massive world fair. Instead, the money will be appropriated regardless of public sentiment. Considering the controversy surrounding Expo, we feel that this was a regrettable decision.

It is obvious by now that the people of Knoxville and surrounding areas are not satisfied with the manner in which the Expo issue is being handled. Through a series of confusing motions, it appears as if Expo is being brought upon a people who do not want it. Last Friday's meeting is just one example of City Council's inability to place the issue in the voter's hands.

Expo will affect the Knoxville area in countless different ways. One of the most obvious problems that will affect all people is the tremendous increase in traffic. This will cause difficulties not only in Knoxville, whose freeway system is lamentably poor, but also in outlying cities like Maryville. Supporters of Expo expect approximately three million people to attend the fair. Even if only a fraction of these decide to visit the Smoky Mountains (and it's a safe bet it will be a substantial fraction), this will pose a tremendous hardship on both Rt. 129 and Rt. 73. It is hard to imagine even a semblance of everyday life continuing in this area with such a massive influx of people.

Can you imagine, for example, driving from Westown to Maryville and being caught in a huge traffic snarl caused by a hundred cars headed for the Smokies? Or how about that quiet picnic you planned in Cades Cove? The prospect of such scenarios has prompted many people, including ourselves, to say, "I'm glad I'm not going to be around here in '82."

It's not that we ourselves object to the whole concept of Expo. It's simply that we cannot understand how East Tennessee is going to handle the traffic, housing, and other problems associated with the fair. There has not been adequate planning and municipal development to make the whole thing look feasible.

True, some people will undoubtably benefit from Expo. Most businesses will enjoy a virtual Christmas in July. Perhaps Expo will, indeed, "put Knoxville on the map." Perhaps the city will benefit from the fair economically and politically. But it's hard to imagine how the people themselves are going to weather the storm.

No easy solution is going to be found for the Expo controversy. Perhaps the most we should hope for is that large-scale highway improvements will be undertaken. Besides the businessman who will benefit economically, it seems as though the people of Knoxville will be forced to face Expo with an exceptional amount of tolerance and patience. It is regrettable that city leaders cannot handle the Expo affair in such a way as to include the whole of the people. If they did give the voters some say, they might achieve a surprising turn-around from the "grin and bear it" attitude that most people presently harbor concerning Expo '82.

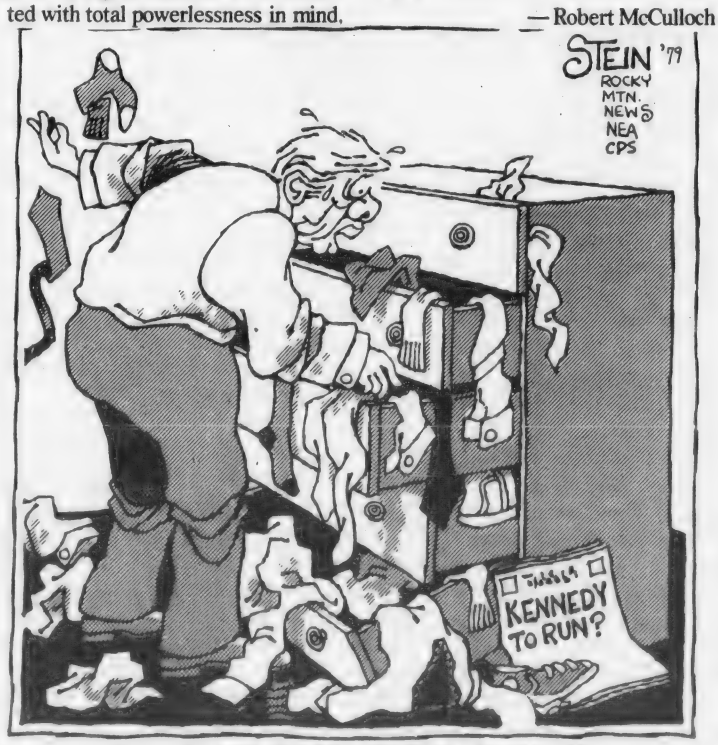
To the Editor,



Is Dr. Anderson's door really open all the time? Well, I for one found it a little hard to believe, so I took the precaution of going through Ms. Hess and Dr. Perkins before making any grand entrance. And when I got there, it was really standing wide open. No kidding! The problem is that his secretary's is too. So you end up going through all the typical appointment protocol, and then there are no guarantees. At least there weren't any in my case. He didn't want to see me. Maybe it's because I no longer have a positive attitude towards Maryville College. But that's just idle speculation; I'm sure Dr. Perkins told him everything I had to say about my problem.

What is my problem? You see, I'm a senior and I only need four courses to finish up. I'm taking two this term and two the next. It's the only way I could schedule them. When I registered, I was told that I would be charged by the course, but when I went to pay my fees, I was told that I would have to pay for three. There isn't any valid reason; it's just the school's policy (rule). They are just going to hit us up for as much as they can before we leave. And in my case, the rule was retroactive in nature. The Supreme Court would throw such a rule out the window immediately, but at Maryville College such things don't apply. And I think those of us who pay would agree that even if the rule isn't retroactive, it's still stealing.

You may not think so now, but every student here stands a good chance of having $280.00 (The '79-'80 involuntary contribution rate!) stolen from them by the administration. Even though the ACC was constructed with total powerlessness in mind, they can make a strong impression if they want to. This has been proven in the past. I think any rule that allows the school to steal the money of the students they supposedly serve should be discussed by the ACC, and condemned if need be.

And if such rules are necessary because of the school's expenses, I suggest that we quit hiring Ph.D.'s to repeat; "I'm sorry, but that is the school's policy, and we can't make any exceptions. It would be unfair." IBM makes machines that can do that now.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the staff, editor, and/or the college administration.

Dr. Terry Bunde, well known to Chemistry majors and Science thought takers, presented last week's CIV program on "Faith, Science, and the Future."

Bunde gives account

Dr. Terry Bunde, assistant professor of Chemistry at MC, presented a CIV program entitled "Faith, Science, and the Future" on Wednesday, Sept. 26. The program was based upon his experiences at a conference by the same name which he attended this past summer.

The conference was held at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (M.I.T.) from July 12 to July 25. Noted scientific and religious leaders from all over the world came to discuss their mutual concern for current world problems. Most of the days were spent in heated debates, although Dr. Bunde found mealtimes and informal discussions equally, if not more, informative. One of the most important topics dealt with at the seminar was the world energy situation. Other concerns included world hunger and questions of disarmament.

Dr. Bunde's review of the seminar was enhanced by slides depicting the M.I.T. campus and some of the world leaders that were in attendance there. Dr. Bunde was selected to attend the conference by the United Presbyterian Church.

The "Faith, Science, and the Future" conference was directed by Dr. Paul Albrect, who presented a CIV program at Maryville last spring.

Orchestra plucks strings

The Maryville-Alcoa College Community Orchestra (MACCO) under the direction of Mr. Gene Taliaferro-Jones will present a pops concert this evening, October 4, at 7:00. It will be held in the Springbrook Park Pavilion, unless it rains, in which case, the concert will be relocated to the Chapel on campus.

The 45 minute program features popular pieces which include highlights from Rocky a medley of Barry Manilow's songs, the theme from "Lord of the Rings, "Jazz Pizzicate" by Leroy Anderson, "You Light Up My Life," "Little Bit Country — Little Bit Rock and Roll," and "Tomorrow" from the broadway show, Annie. Admission is free.

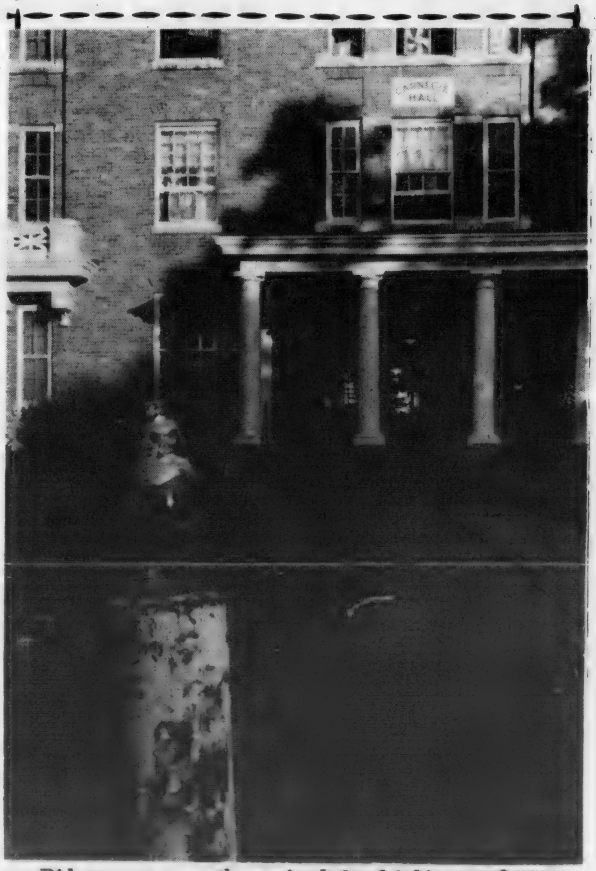
Although all 55 members are hard working dedicated musicians, the low brass is expected to be the strongest section this year because it is composed only of returning members who have had one year of experience with the MACCO. Mr. Taliaferro-Jones is still recruiting players — especially for the strings sections. College-owned instruments are available for use.

The MACCO has an exciting season planned for this coming year. A formal concert featuring William McDonald, tenor, from New York is set for late this fall. Other events include another pops concert during the Dogwood Arts Festival, a formal concert featuring all Russian music with Warren Rich, pianist, from New York, and a final pops concert in early May concludes the year.

The annual concerto concert will be presented on February 28. If you are enrolled at Maryville College or a member of MACCO, you are eligible to present a ten minute audition before the music faculty and a committee from the orchestra. Plans are now being considered to accept Blount County students also.

The administration will be holding the first annual concert season ticket sale this year for all of the orchestra's concerts after this first one.

Mr. Taliaferro-Jones displayed a great deal of enthusiasm and a positive outlook for the MACCO. He also has not ignored the greater possibilities of the orchestra in the future. He commented, "The greater Blount community has a tremendous potential of having one of the finer volunteer unpaid orchestras of the state. Some people in this orchestra are very talented, but we need more talented people to join them. For this reason, we are still accepting auditions for some vacancies," Mr. Taliaferro-Jones expressed concern over the lack of student support. He said, "I feel that the MC community should support the orchestra more. At present, there are only 12 of the 55 members who are a part of the College community."



Cars free to roam

A new "no zone" parking policy has been adopted by Maryville College for the fall term. This policy allows any student who has registered his or her motor vehicle to park in any of the student areas. These areas include the areas around the dorms, behind the Chapel-Theatre, Campus Center, and the area near the P.E. Building. The areas off limits to students are faculty parking areas and those otherwise posted as no parking zones.

Barring any major problems, this new system will become the permanent policy for the College. If too many complaints are voiced, the Traffic Committee will reinstate the old "assigned zones" policy during the Interim term. So far the Dean of Students Office has received no complaints.

Failure to comply with the new regulations carries fines from $1.00 for the first violation to $2.00 for the second and third. After three offenses a fine of $10.00 will be levied for each violation.

Soccer ties C-N's hands

The MC Soccer Club managed to hold their opponents from Carson-Newman to a 4-4 standoff last Saturday. Here, Mike Weiss, Greg Hosler, and Mongo watch the black and white ball carefully.

The soccer Scots met arch-rival Carson-Newman at Maryville last Saturday, and the two teams fought to a 4-4 draw in a dramatic, well-played match.

An enthusiastic crowd watched as freshman Carl Cunningham gave the Scots the lead early in the first half. C-N came back to tie, but mid-fielder Tim Fitzgerald fired a long shot over a bewildered Eagle goalkeeper to put MC in front at the half 2-1.

C-N scored first after the resumption of play, only to see Frank Burns net his second goal of the year, making it 3-2 for the Scots. The Eagles came back again after they were given a penalty shot off of a controversial hand-ball foul. Shortly thereafter Leo Sales volleyed in his first goal of the year. C-N got the final goal from an indirect kick, resulting from another disputed call against Maryville, ending it in a 4-4 kno

Scots steal Wasps' sting

The Fighting Scots of Maryville College have won their third game this season, and have a winning streak of nine straight victories, as Maryville trounced Emory & Henry by the score of 30-14.

In an action-packed game, the Scots saw a fired-up and revengeful Emory & Henry team score first on a 69-yard punt return. But a determined offense made that score short-lived as the Scots, sticking to the running game, drove the ball to the Wasps' 2-yard line where Alvin Nance scored the Scots' first touchdown.

With the score tied 7-7, the Wasps scored again after Maryville fumbled the ball deep in its own territory, making the score 14-7 in favor of the Wasps. Just before half-time the Scots again drove deep into Emory & Henry territory where the drive stalled at the Wasps' 6-yard line. Facing a 4th-and-goal situation, Coach Fickert elected to try for the field goal. Carey Starnes was called upon to make it 14-10. With seconds left before the half, a determined defense held the opposition and forced a punt. Again Carey Starnes was called upon to kick a 35-yard field goal to make the score 14-13 at half-time.

The second half was all Maryville as the defense shut out the Emory & Henry offense. The scoring started when Starnes again hit a field goal of 45-yards, making the score 16-14 Scots. Barry Mathis then threw two touchdown passes, the first of which was caught by Mark Parsons, making it 21-14. Mathis tossed another pass to Gene Wheatly to end the scoring.

Alvin Nance was the leading carrier, rushing for 144 yards in 27 attempts. Ken Adair and Barry Mathis rushed for 87 and 65 yards respectively, as Maryville rolled up 389 yards on the ground. Dave Kibben and Barry Mathis were both 3 for 3 in the passing department and contributed 51 yards in the air. Maryville had 440 total yards offensively.

The pride and leadership that is evident on MC's defense held the Wasps to 93 yards rushing and a total of 227 yards offensively. Steve Moffit ended the Wasps' last chance drive with an interception.

The Scots' next game is against the Lane College Dragons of Jackson, Tennessee. Game time is 1:30 P.M. Saturday at Honaker Field.

Check out coffeehouse

By Cathy Angell

One of the biggest social events of the term, the Coffee House, is happening this Saturday night at 9 P.M.

Lloyd lobby will be the stage for many students who want to share their musical and acting talents with the rest of the campus. Among the performers are Bryan McFarland, Dana Paul, and the members of the sign-language club — all favorites of past MC Coffee Houses.

Since the Coffee Houses last year were such big successes, they are making a comeback this year with the hope of attracting even greater crowds.

So for a casual atmosphere, a night of entertainment, and just a plain good time, make MC's Coffee House the place to be.

Echoes from the past...

The September 24, 1928 Highland Echo reported: "The Y. W. reading room makes a very pleasant place to spend the afternoon. It's just like home, with comfortable chairs, good books, current magazines, a piano, and a victrola." However, a later edition (November 12, 1928) commented: "The victrola's latest records were issued by Edison in 1912."

MC receives HEW grant

Maryville College has recently undertaken a campaign to raise $5 million by June 1981. The College has just learned that it will receive $500,000 during the next two years under the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare's Title III program for strengthening developing institutions. "This is a timely gift because of our campaign," stated President Wayne Anderson.

Three colleges in t.. second congressional district were approved as recipients of federal grants under Title III. Besides Maryville, there were Lincoln Memorial University in Harrogate, and Knoxville College in Knoxville.

Competition for these grants was extremely stiff. There were reportedly 1,500 r more applications, but only 395 schools were selected to enter the negotiation stage. "This points out the high quality of the program proposals submitted by the three colleges chosen," says Congressman John Duncan.

The grant will be divided so that the College will receive $253,286 during the first year of funding which began October 1, and $246,286 during the second year, according to Dr. James A. Bloy, a Maryville College faculty member and Title III director.

The funds will underwrite key programs in five general areas, Dr. Bloy explained. The Learning Center, the interpreting degree program, and the foreign language study program includes using native speakers to teach foreign language with emphasis on spoken instruction is an example of how the funds will be used.

Faculty development, and support for faculty positions in Political Science and Sociology for two years and business administration for one year are two other uses of the funds.

The Title III funds will also be used to support Maryville College's efforts to establish an efficient goal-oriented management system, which includes support to help the personnel office and the new computer center and for training and development for college administrative staff and directors.

Funds in the student services area for career counseling are also included.

"This support will contribute significantly to our ongoing efforts to strengthen the institution. We hope that this grant will influence others to give substantially to the college," stated President Wayne Anderson about the Title III grant.

The grant will enable the college to take a step closer to reaching the $5 million goal.

Construction on Tellico resumes

President Carter recently approved a bill appropriating 36 million dollars for the completion of Tellico Dam. The funds were part of a $10.6 billion water projects appropriations bill. Congress passed the bill late this summer after reviewing Tellico and various other projects.

TVA immediately resumed work on the dam. The project has lain dormant for three years due to a court injunction protecting the snail darter, a fish on the Endangered Species List. U. S. District Court Judge Robert Taylor refused to hold TVA in contempt of the injunction. Dam opponents felt TVA should have appeared in court to clear the injunction before resumi.. construction on the dam.

Of highest priority in co .pleting the project is the construction of a canal connecting Tellico and Ft. Loudon dams. Another major concern is the building of roads in the Tellico area. Loudon, Monroe, and Blount counties have completed their promised roadwork, as has TVA. The remaining road development is therefore considered to be the responsibility of the state.

The snail darter, whose only natural habitat and spawning grounds will be destroyed by the new reservoir, has been transplanted into the Hiwassee and Holston Rivers. 710 darters were moved to the Hiwassee River four years ago, and that population is considered to be reproducing, self-sustaining, and successful, according to TVA biologists. Transplantation into the Holston River near Mascot, Tennessee, began October 2, 1979. Only adult fish will be transplanted.

TVA officials have already approached President Carter for further appropriations. They are preparing an itemized cost list of what needs to be done to develop the Tellico area. The dam itself is currently 95% completed, at a cost of $116 million.

The Tellico reservoir should begin filling by the end of October.

On Thursday, October 4, the election for Freshmen class officers was held in Pearson Hall lobby during lunch and dinner. Ballots were also cast in front of the post office for commuting students.

The office of president was won by Jeff Nardo while Audrey Weisgerber took the office of vice-president and Colleen Lucas was voted in as secretary-treasurer. One common goal of the three to be unification of the freshman class. As Audrey states, "I plan on getting the freshman class involved and unite freshmen dorms, as they are too segregated." She also emphasizes that all freshmen should attend a class meeting on Thursday, October 11, at 6:30 p.m. in front of Pearsons Hall.

The newly-elected Freshman president has a past background as president of his junior class in Orange Park High School, FL., and also of the Florida State Spanish

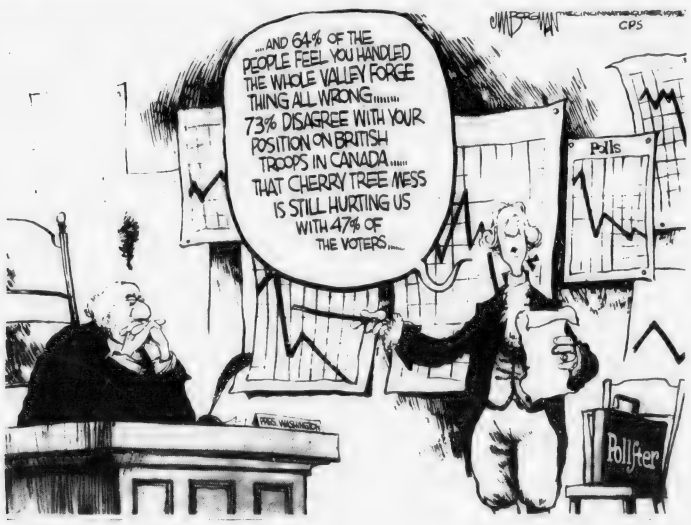
Team up for soccer

A coach isn't too much to ask for

The sport of soccer is booming in this country. In many cities, there are as many kids kicking soccer balls as there are catching footballs and baseballs. Attendance at professional games around the U.S. has reached an all-time high. Many colleges, especially small institutions, have adopted soccer as an intelligent alternative to more expensive sports. Yet the world's most popular sport remains in the Maryville College athletic doghouse.

At Maryville, soccer has offically been dubbed a "club" sport, which means that it does not have varsity status and is not fully sponsored by the school. Until this year, the soccer club was not even recognized as part of the college program (although it had been listed in recruiting brochures). Previously, club members were funding all expenses out of their own pockets.

This year, for the first time, the soccer club received partial financial help from the school. While not much, this action has prompted hope among MC soccer players that soon they will be considered a part of the Maryville College athletic program, with the full support of the school. The monetary concessions that have been given are greatly appreciated by the players, but what they need most of all is a full-time, knowledgeable coach.



The club has had coaches in the past. Some had the knowledge but did not have time to dedicate themselves to Maryville soccer as a coach should. Others barely knew the basics of the game. Maryville soccer has never had the leadership that it needs to become a team in the true sense of the word. Can you imagine Coach Fickert missing a football game because he had a more important engagement? The club's constitution calls for a full-time faculty member to serve as a coach, but this provision has yet to be fulfilled. Last year's captain was told that a search was being made, but apparently no one has been found. Meanwhile, coaching duties have been assumed part-time by a local clergyman, who happens to be a knowledgeable teacher of the game. Yet he does not have time to attend many games, which hurts the team tremendously.

It is a tribute to the team members that they field a competitive squad each time they step onto the playing area. Most of the time they face opponents who have the full support of their schools behind them. Amazingly, Maryville has had winning teams in soccer. Last year, soccer was the most successful spring sport at MC, gaining a 7-5-1 record. The opponents are worthy. Carson-Newman is the only team that MC faces that is not fully sponsored by the school. Come out some time and watch the soccer players practice. You will find that there is no athletic team at this school that works harder. One could certainly apply the "Rocky" theme to Maryville soccer — an undermanned, determined competitor versus a heavily favored opponent.

Possibly contrary to the beliefs of some members of the Athletic Department, soccer is not a threat to football or any other sport at MC, and soccer team members do not wish it to be. They are simply equally dedicated as athletes, and want to be treated as such. A poll taken last year by the Athletic Committee showed considerable interest among students about soccer. Certainly, a school-supported team would help attract prospective students, due to the rapid growth of American soccer. Several faculty members have expressed a desire for Maryville to have a soccer program.

Undoubtedly, a soccer program would be nothing but beneficial to the College. Expenses are tight nowadays, but the hiring of a soccer coach would be a giant leap for soccer at MC. It would provide the foundation that is presently lacking, and it would give the soccer players the leadership they deserve. In the meantime, you, the students, can help soccer at this school a great deal. Go to the games, support the team, cheer for them. On the field you will see eleven players that are playing their hearts out for Maryville College, while getting very little in return.

A note on our format...

The Highland Echo will be published in alternating four and eight page issues for the remainder of fall term.

... And on our editorial policy:

Uninitialed editorials are assumed to be the work of the editor. When someone other than the editor writes the editorial, his or her initials will follow it. The editor may be approached concerning subjects for possible editorials; guest editorials are welcome so long as the subject has sufficient merit.

Echoes from the past...

The Highland Echo of December 3, 1928, proudly announced that the Palace Theater was soon to receive pictures with syncronized music. Although the "quaint and different music of the Palace organ" was to be missed, the installation of an "Orchestraphone, a device which furnishes music to fit in with the action of each picture" was welcomed. The owner of the Palace, Mr. H. G. Judkins, was quoted as saying, "This is something that can hardly be bettered" and the Echo hailed the Palace as " movie house that is moving forward."

TISL delegates sought

Students are reminded that on November 8-11, the Tennessee Inter Collegiate State Legislature (TISL) convenes in Nashville. Maryville College is entitled to two delegates (last year these were David Widner and Larry Bidwell).

TISL passes to the General Assembly of Tennessee 10 priority items for their attention. This is an excellent training ground for students interested in government — and intermingling with other college representatives is an education in itself. If you are interested in serving as an MC delegate, register your interest by Monday, October 12, to Dr. Carolyn Blair (Box 2823) or to Dr. Russell Parker (Box 2863).

In addition to direct applications, faculty chairpersons will make recommendations to a TISL committee which will make the final selection of delegates.

International Club prompts "citizen of the world" concept

by Yok-Fan "Yogi" Yen

More than 40 American and foreign students attended the first meeting of the International Club in Thaw Hall last Friday. It was only a beginning, but it may be an important opportunity for students to learn about and discuss some important matters. There are always problems in the relationship between people of different cultures. Perhaps the International Club will provide a place where, together, we can do something about these problems.

One very important step for the "greenhorn" foreign students is this new sense of realization and actually wanting to do something about it. But the next step is just as crucial — the jump from wanting to actually doing something.

Either through a gradually increasing self-awareness or through interaction with other foreign and American students, we may begin to feel conscious of our own identities as products of the particular society and attempt to ask ourselves what it means when we tell others, "I am a Libyan, Japanese, Iranian, Saudi Arabian, Indian, Malaysian, etc."

An International Club can therefore provide a context where mutual understanding can be improved. Students may want to have international dinners or other similar activities, but far more important is the chance to learn from each other and to come to appreciate other cultures, customs, and how our fellow students feel about their countries and world issues.

Most of the foreign students have experienced quite a "culture shock." I had and still do have a hard time adjusting to the American culture. Many times I have been caught in what Americans consider a "social blunder," but often I am just doing what is perfectly normal in Oriental society.

In America we have so much more freedom then we ever had before — no school uniform (unless you consider blue jeans an uniform), few school rules, no monitors or prefects, and quite different standards of behavior. Maryville College is like a miniature United Nations and there is nowhere else that we could get so many varied experiences as in our "college in the foothills of the Smokies."

As we proceed to learn and absorb more information about different countries through meetings and discussions, and as we answer the question "What can be done?"...a day may dawn when we will ask "What can I do?" If coming to the States has not given me anything more than the realization of myself as a citizen of the world and not just a citizen of one country, it would still be worthwhile.

ACC aims for united MC

by Gracia Sugantharaj

What is the ACC? Its role? Its purpose? Its effectiveness?

The ACC (All College Council), the governing body on campus, formed in 1969, is here to represent the students, faculty, and administration collectively.

Dr. Parker, the secretary of the faculty, commented that the Council "has served to democratize the campus" in order to bring about a better understanding and reaction among students, administration, and faculty. Kevin Reilly, co-chairman, explained that the major function of the ACC is to "get students involved for direct input" into the governing body of the College.

The Council is composed of various committees which are the major life of the body. It is through the committees that students can strongly influence campus policies.

Some of the past ACC actions were the alcohol policy and the co-ed housing matter. Presently the Council is examining a proposal for a calendar change and a redesigning of the Interim program.

Both Dr. Parker and Kevin Reilly stressed the importance of student involvement especially through the committees. The ACC is here for students to constructively change the aspects of Maryville College that they feel are unsatisfactory.

All ACC meetings are open to students, who are encouraged to attend and become acquainted with the procedures of the Council.

B.T. and the Monotones were one of the many acts providing unusual entertainment at last Saturday's coffeehouse.

Campus applauds coffeehouse

by Diane Bonyadi

MC's "Coffee House" sparked the evening with an array of entertainment on Saturday, October 6. The show was held in Lloyd lobby from 9-12 p.m., and featured 16 acts ranging from comedy to singing songs.

Musical performances included "Hick Burnett and the Blue Grass Band," the "Youth for Moral Decency" band, and "B.T. and the Monotones," a 50's group with a comical air. Other performers were John Rhodes, Dana Paul, Cathy Angell and Linda Crozier, Steve Maggio, Kathy Wilson, Bryan McFarland, Dianne Bonyadi, Wayne Arrants, and Elizabeth Maclean and Jan. Three groups depicted songs in sign language and a comedy skit was done by Jean Plant and Vernon Rodgers. Tim Stuart officially announced the "Coffee House," adding a few jokes in between the acts. Others responsible for the show's success were Cathy Angell, Linda Wiley, and Sharon Crane.

The "Coffee House" received good response — from both participants and spectators.

Soccer gets kicked

The Scots' soccer club travelled to Chattanooga last Saturday, where they were beaten 2-0 by Tennessee Temple University. The home team dominated most of the game, yet Maryville missed several scoring opportunities. Key injuries to three starters hurt the Scots from the outset. Goalkeeper Tim Fitzgerald was the outstanding performer for MC, making several difficult saves, including a Temple penalty shot.

The Scots face Johnson Bible College next Wednesday at Maryville.

MC's first "Run for Fun" of the 1979-80 school year took off from the Post Office last Saturday morning. About 30 people participated in the run.

Choir begins on cue

by Julie Blonquist

The new members of the Maryville College Concert Choir for 1979-80 were selected during the first few weeks of school and the new choir is ready to start their busy year of singing. With the old and new combined the choir has 60 students.

A picnic-initiation began the year on a friendly note. The new members had to fill out two sheets of items, including unscrambling old members' names. They also had to sing an original song about themselves to help everyone get to know them better. After dinner the choir had a formal candlelight ceremony in the little chapel where they sang some of their new songs.

Practices are held three times a week for an hour and a half, so all the members were well prepared for their first public performance on October 7, at Highland Presbyterian Church in Maryville. The next concert will be at New Providence Church.

Though concerts are planned all year, the main event will be the spring tour. This year the choir will tour the states of Florida, Georgia, Alabama and North and South Carolina, singing for whatever churches or high schools can lodge, feed, and pay a small fee to hear the group. At the end of a hectic year the choir will sing for the Baccalaureate and Commencement services.

Bookstore states policy

The MC Bookstore has issued the following policy concerning returned checks:

1. The person who cashes the check is responsible if the check is returned from the bank.
2. A charge of $5 will be assessed for each returned check.
3. The amount of the check plus the $5 is due immediately upon notification.

The Bookstore management urges everyone to check their bank balances before writing checks at the Store. They are not interested in collecting penalties so much as in not having any returned checks.

1980 headcount in wings

By Wendy Magee

The 20th Decennial Census of Population and Housing will officially begin Tuesday, April 1, 1980. The Census Bureau is expected to count approximately 222 million residents of the U.S., Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and the Trust Territories of the Pacific Islands.

The constitutional purpose of the Census is to provide the basis for fair apportionment among the States for seats in the House of Representatives. In addition, census data are used to guide distribution of billions of dollars in Federal funds to State and Local governments. The distribution of additional billions of dollars in State funds will also occur.

Every household in the U. S. will receive a census questionnaire in the mail on March 28, 1980. About 90 percent of the households will be asked to mail back their completed questionnaires. The remaining 10 percent will be instructed to keep their completed questionnaires until census takers pick them up.

Those households that do not mail back the completed questionnaires as requested will be visited by census takers who will obtain the required information. Every one percent of the population that cooperates with the request to mail back the completed questionnaires will save taxpayers two million dollars in follow-up costs.

A temporary work force of approximately 270,000 persons must be hired to check the returned questionnaires for completeness, carry out door-to-door interviews where necessary, and handle office tasks. Some 1.3 million people are expected to be screened and tested during the hiring process. Census employees will work out of 409 temporary district offices across the country.

Approximately four out of five households will be asked to answer the 19 questions on the short version of the questionnaire. The remaining households will answer the longer version with 46 additional questions. Most questions will be answered by filling in the appropriate circle with a pencil.

After the questionnaires have been checked in the district offices, they will be shipped to three major processing centers in Indianna, Louisianna, and California. Data processing by Census Bureau computers will yield an estimated 300,000 pages of statistics. The information, which cannot be used to identify any individuals census answers, will also be available in microform and on computer tapes.

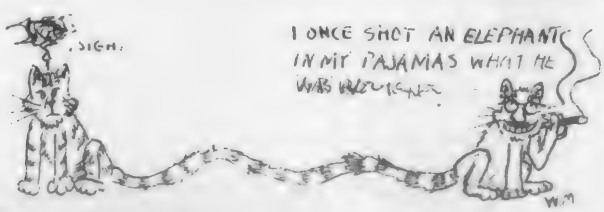
Most of the 1980 census questions were also asked during the 1970 census, including subjects such as age, race, sex, marital status, type of housing unit, education, and occupation. This census will gather more information about racial and ethnic origin, and national energy usage.

While Federal Law (Title 13 of the U. S. code) requires everyone to answer the census, the same law assures that every person's answers to the census are confidential. Only Census Bureau employees, sworn to secrecy, may see individual census answers, and there has never been a proven case of a census employee divulging personal information from a census.

The 1980 census will provide more statistical information about more geog- geographic areas than any prior census. The findings are necessary in addressing the needs of the nation's people, and in the planning and management of government at the Federal, State and Local levels.

Census data will directly influence decisions on matters of national and local importance, such as economics, education, employment, military manpower potential, Social Security, business cycles, highway use, the needs for health service, parks, water, energy, and international relations.

More than for any prior census, the Bureau is seeking to enlist widespread public, business, and news media support for the 1980 census. The objectives are the Nation's understanding of the value of census information and cooperation in achieving population and housing counts as completely and accurately as possible.



College tunes in to Rowe Quartet

The first Performing Artist Concert will feature the Rowe String Quartet this Friday, October 12, at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Music Hall. The program includes pieces by Haydn, Ginatera, and Ravel.

The musicians in the Rowe String Quartet are Patricio Cobos and Arlene DiCicco, violinists; Pamela Benjamin-Adelstein, viola; and Luca DiCicco, violoncello.

The Rowe String Quartet was formed at the University of North Carolina in 1973. They have toured the southeastern United States and also in Europe, Australia, South Africa, and South America.

Several honors have been bestowed upon the quartet, but the most prestigious for a string quartet in the United States was the appointment as Slee Quartet-in-Residence at the State University of New York in Buffalo. A television program, "The Rowe String Quartet Plays on Your Imagination" won four important television and industry awards in 1977 and 1978, including the George Foster Peabody Award for Programming Excellence.

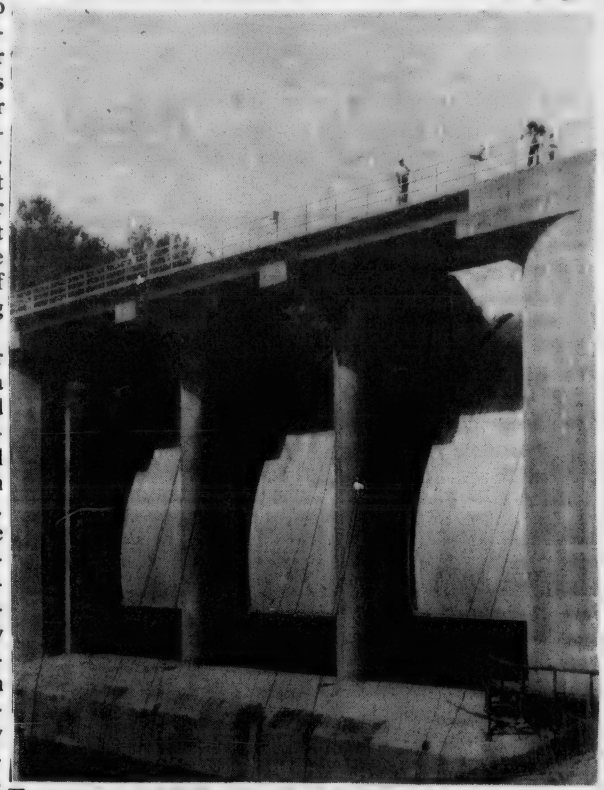
TVA: "building a better environment" with the dam Tellico project

The Tellico Dam controversy seems to be entering its final stages. The dam will be finished; the gates will close. Both those in favor and those opposed to the controversial structure can be grateful that a decision of some sort has been made at last. The dam has stood unfinished for nearly three years. Officials predict it will now be completed by the end of the month.

The history of Tellico Dam resembles some kind of political soap opera. The project was actually proposed in 1936. Congress allocated funds for its construction in 1942, but withdrew those allocations only months later because the money was needed more immediately for World War II. The project was then shelved for twenty-odd years.

Tellico was brought back to TVA's attention in the 1960's. Its stated purpose was to convert rich but essentially unused farmland into shoreline industrial developments. The idea was expected to produce jobs, increase commerce, and improve the economies of the three counties (Blount, Loudon, and Monroe) that it involves. This prospect, understandably popular with the local people, is still widely expounded. Mayor Charles Hall of Tellico Plains expects the dam and the industry it will spawn to create 10,000 new jobs within the next 20 years. The potential for prosperity has always been the main justification underlying the Tellico project.

Construction of the dam began in 1967. It progressed steadily for 10 years. Then, in January 1977, opponents of the dam won an injunction to halt construction from the U. S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals. Their weapon, so to speak, was the now-infamous snail darter, a tiny fish. The snail darter was discovered in 1973 by David Etnier, a professor of zoology at the University of Tennessee. It is known to live only in the last remaining undisturbed portion of the Little Tennessee River — the very part to be eradicated by Tellico. Because its population was so small and its natural habitat so limited, the snail darter was placed on the U. S. Endangered Species list. As such, it is protected under the Endangered Species Act of 1973.



The Endangered Species Act is based on the belief that species, sub-species, and even local populations of rare plants and animals should be protected and preserved within their natural environments. Only those plants and animals actually on the Endangered Species list are eligible for protection. Section 7 of the Act makes its provisions binding on the Federal government. At the time of its passage, the Act was anything but controversial. The Senate approved it unanimously and the House ushered it in with a 390-12 vote.

The Endangered Species Act was not created for the purpose of stopping dams in mid-development. Nonetheless, such authority does lie within its power. The Tellico Dam was accused of endangering the snail darter after it was 90% finished. This created a sticky situation for Congress, environmentalists, and TVA officials alike. Abandoning the dam meant literally throwing away over $100 million. Completing it meant destroying forever the last free-flowing section of the Little Tennessee, along with the snail darter.

Early in 1977, Senator Howard Baker called for a review of the Endangered Species Act, denying requests to try for a special exemption for Tellico. But on June 15, 1978, the U. S. Supreme Court upheld the lower court's decision. Congress then created the Endangered Species Committee in October to review appeals for special exemptions from the Act. On January 23, 1979, the Committee voted unanimously against exempting the Tellico Project. They determined that the benefits of the dam did not overrule the survival of the snail darter.

The Committee weighed many things other than the snail darter in its decision, however. Cost/benefit predictions (nearly all unfavorable) were taken into consideration. The dam is to produce only a small, almost insignificant amount of electricity. It will flood thousands of acres of developed farmland, which are becoming increasingly valuable. Careful economic analysis of the Tellico project showed it to be unfeasible and unprofitable. So even when plans were made to transplant colonies of the Snail Darter

ACC: Committees in Review

The ACC held its first meeting of the year on October 2,1979, at Anderson Hall. It was chaired by Dr. Wayne Anderson, chairman, and Kevin Reilly, co-chairman.

The two committees that reported were the Social Committee and the CIV Committee.

The Social Committee was pleased to note the student participation and cooperation in the planned activities. Looking ahead, a busy calendar is being prepared which includes Homecoming week and Halloween.

The CIV Committee reported favorably concerning the student turnout for the first CIV presentation. In the future they plan to present a format which will include more variety than last year.

An attendance policy was accepted by the Council to maximize the effectiveness of the ACC.

SOCIAL COMMITTEE

The two chairmen of the Social Committee, Sharon Crane and Linda Wiley, reported to ACC October 3, on the activities planned for this term. The events that have been planned since the beginning of school have been well-supported by the students. Homecoming was a major focus — the theme will be "That Maryville Magic." There are three separate committees working on the Homecoming Celebration, dealing with the Parade, the Half-time Program, and the Dance.

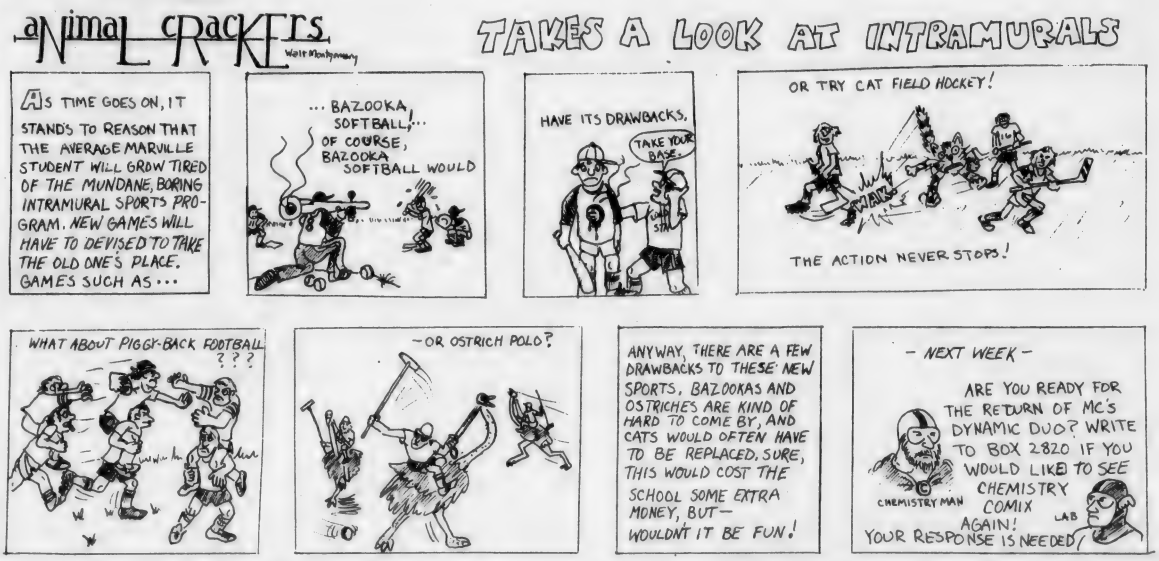
The Social Committee has a new structure this year that should provide more student input and better activities. Each dorm has a representative: Davis Dorm — Betty Schuster; Dorm I — Tina Flickinger; Copeland — Bryan McFarland; Lloyd — Barb George; Pearsons — Greg Tabeek and Tom Owings; and Carnegie — Steve Serotte.

Other Social Committee members are Lawrence Kennedy, Janet Weston, Debbie Hayworth, Dave Kibben, Janet Rickel, Sheila Threatt, Cathy Angell, Tammy Lytle, and Sarah Findlay. The Social Committee meets every Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. in Pearsons Dining Hall and the meeting is open to everyone.

INSTRUCTIONAL PROGRAM

The Instructional Program Committee (IPC), chaired by Dr. Alfred Perkins and co-chaired by Larry Bidwell, held its first meeting of the year on October 1. Primarily an organizational meeting, the committee viewed a tentative agenda for the upcoming year.

First on the agenda is the calendar issue — whether Maryville College should adopt a new calendar and/or convert to a credit hour system. However, this issue will not be discussed in detail or voted on until November. Also to be reviewed this year are the College Level Examination Program (CLEP), the English Proficiency Test (what action to take with those who fail), the Mathematics 99 policy, the core requirements in foreign language, and the necessity of the independent studies' editor. Also to be discussed are reports on the developmental reading program and the continuing education program.



The IPC meets regularly at 4:00 p.m. in Anderson room 304 on the first Monday of every month. Anyone interested in the meetings is welcome to attend.

FOOD COMMITTEE

The food committee is designed to serve as a link between students and the food service. With a new food service on campus, the committee has been active.

The committee is headed by Lori Bowers. Other members include Vic Schoen, Randy Scurlock, Nancy Winslow, Don Nuss, Tom Kierznowski, and Julie Quinton. Meetings are held every two weeks and results of the committee's work can already be seen. Such improvements include the change in the serving line, the deli bar at lunch, improvements in the salad bar, and a suggestion box. New items which are being considered are a possible vegetarian casserole and a sundae bar. Various other improvements are still being discussed.

The food committee always welcomes constructive ideas and is willing to listen to all complaints. Most meetings are open and all are welcome to voice their opinions.

MORNING WORSHIP SERVICES HELD

Early morning worship services are currently being held Monday through Friday in the little chapel. The services begin at 7:30 a.m. and last about 15 minutes. All faculty, staff, and students are welcome to attend.

Dave Lundell, who along with his wife Laura has helped organize the services, is very pleased with the turnout so far.

Anyone who has questions about the early morning worship services should contact the Lundells.

STUDENT RECITAL TUESDAY

The second student recital of the year will take place on October 16 at 7:00 p.m. in the Fine Arts Music Hall. Only Maryville College students participate in these recitals. Various instruments, composers, and musical selections will be performed.

Local land-owners stage a lay-down protest of Tellico Dam, which will flood hundreds of acres of valuable farmland.

to the Hiwassee River, Tellico still remained a dubious project.

After the Tellico exemption was denied, dam proponents increased their efforts to obtain permission from Congress to finish the project. Finally, late this summer, Congress appropriated $36 million for completion of the Tellico Dam as part of a $10.6 billion water projects appropriations bill. President Carter recently approved the bill "with mixed reactions." He stated that he believed Congress to have weighed the issue carefully, and even though the Endangered Species Committee had found it economically unjustifiable he was convinced that other exemption provisions would be brought up if he vetoed this one. He did not feel the Tellico decision weakened the Endangered Species Act — a point which ecologists have strongly protested.

Reportedly within hours after the President signed the bill into law, TVA workers began moving to complete the dam.

The Highland Echo was interested in visiting the site of the controversial project. Tellico Dam is located about 30 miles southwest of Maryville, just off Route 95 right before Lenoir City. It is, at most, only a half mile or so from Ft. Loudon Dam. Tellico is easily visible from the top of the bridge overlooking Loudon Lake. The two dams, however, affect two different rivers.

Echo representatives were shown around the construction site by Ernie Atkins, a six-year TVA employee. The dam, which is rather small (much smaller than Ft. Loudon Dam) appears to be completely finished. The bulk of the construction remaining to be done concerns the canal which is to connect Tellico and Loudon. This canal is vital for energy-production purposes. Mr. Atkins explained that Tellico Dam does not have its own generator. Instead, its water flow will be directed through the canal to an unused generator in Ft. Loudon Dam. Tellico is expected to generate 200 billion kilowatt hours of electricity a year, which is less than 1% of the total electricity-generating capacity of the TVA system. Even this small amount of energy will be produced only indirectly, through Loudon. Electricity generation is not (and was not intended to be) one of the dam's main functions.

When the gates of the dam are shut, approximately 16,500 acres of land will be flooded. The new lake should reach all the way out to the bridge on State Hwy. 411. Mr. Atkins believes they should be able to start filling the reservoir within the next two weeks.

The Echo questioned Mr. Atkins about the money which Congress has appropriated for completing the Tellico project. He said that TVA had enough money to finish the dam itself, but not enough to turn it into a recreational area, as they wish to do. TVA intends to install boat ramps, public access roads, picnic grounds and other recreational facilities to allow public use of the lake. If electricity is not a main function of Tellico Dam recreation certainly is. Much of the appropriated money will go toward developing Tellico Lake into a modern recreational area.

The decision of Congress to complete the Tellico Project has been met with predictable favor from TVA officials and business interests and equally predictable disfavor with persons concerned about preserving the snail darter and the Little Tennessee River. Local opinion, except for those people forced to move from the Tellico area because of the dam, runs largely in approval of the project, according to Mr. Atkins. If nothing else, the controversy has served to expose the economic uncredibility of the dam, as recognized by the Endangered Species Committee. It should be realized by now that the benefits to be obtained from Tellico Dam are not without considerable cost.

By the time southbound Maryville College students head home for Thanksgiving vacation, the 411 bridge will afford a shoreline view of Tellico Lake.

Women atheletes sue HEW

Washington, D.C. (CPS) — Several women's groups, impatient with the government's efforts to insure equal educational rights for women, joined the National Education Association (NEA) last week in a suit against the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare (HEW).

The suit charges HEW with allowing discrimination against women in intercollegiate sports to continue too long. It asks HEW to be more forceful in compelling schools to comply with Title IX.

A 1977 federal court order gave HEW enforcement powers in actions involving Title IX of the Higher Education Amendments of 1972, which forbids discrimination against women by federally-funded institutions. Proof of discrimination could ultimately lead to the loss of federal funds.

The court set a March, 1978 deadline for clearing up cases involving women in college sports. It was the third Title IX deadline given to colleges. A fourth deadline of October 1979 is now in force.

That's one deadline too many for the groups that filed suit last week. "HEW," contends Margie Kohn of the Center for Law and Social Policy, "is not handling cases in the required time frame, and they haven't processed the higher education sports cases as the (1977) court order asked."

The suit accuses HEW secretary Patricia Harris and David Tatel, head of HEW's Office of Civil Rights, of violating Title IX and of contempt of court.

But the office of Civil Rights' Larry Velez maintains "there are legal attempts to bring about enforcement, and we are coming out with clarifications for Title IX guidelines, we hope, by the end of the year." HEW says clarifications are needed because circumstances have changed since Title IX was passed in 1972.

Velez says HEW is conducting investigation into possible discriminatory practices at 62 schools, including Yale, Cornell, Fordham, Maryland, Georgia, Kentucky, Washington, Michigan, Wisconsin, Arizona State, Oregon State, Michigan State, North Texas State, and Vanderbilt.

Scots slay Lane Dragons

The Fighting Scots of Maryville College extended their home winning streak to 17, and on the verge of an undefeated season, won its fourth game of the season by beating Lane College 17-9.

The game had many outstanding performers, but it was the Scots' defense that stole the show. The defense kept the Scots in the game by blocking two field goal attempts and an extra point at crucial stages in the game. Lane College (which has an average weight of 250 lbs. on the offensive line) received the opening kick-off and appeared to take control at the line of scrimmage on its first possession. But a tough Scots defense held its own and forced the punt. This was to be the beginning of the defensive struggle. The Scots scored only once in the first half on Carey Starnes' first quarter 45-yard field goal. It wasn't until the second quarter, however, that Lane managed to get on the scoreboard. Mounting a 63-yard drive, John McGee's one yard put the Dragons ahead 6-3. The extra point attempt was blocked and Maryville trailed going in at half-time, 6-3.

The third quarter was typical of the whole game as neither side could assert its dominance. Only once did Lane get close enough and scored on a 45-yard field goal, making the score 9-3.

As the fourth quarter opened, the Scots' defense kept Lane's offense in check. However, it was the MC offense that came through to clinch the game. Maryville, taking control of the ball on its own 20-yard line, began driving the ball toward the Dragon goal line. The key of this drive rested on a fourth and five situation. The Scots faked a punt and quarterback Dave Kibben threw to Steve Moffitt, who made a spectacular catch for a 20-yard gain. The Scots drove all the way down to Lane's 2-yard line, where Barry Mathis ran the ball in for the score. The extra point by Starnes was good and the Scots led 10-9.

On the next series of plays MC's defense again held out and forced a punt which ended up in the Scots' advantage. The punt was a bad one and the Scots took possession at the Lane 43-yard line. The drive climaxed with Alvin Nance running 25 yards for the score, making it 16-9, Scots. The point after was good and the final score was MC 17, Lane 9.

The leading rusher for Maryville was Ken Adair, running for 99 yards on 23 carries. Alvin Nance contributed 43 yards on 17 attempts.

Maryville's next game is against Central Florida next Saturday in the Tangerine Bowl.

Barry Mathis pulls off a quarterback sneak to earn the Scots their first touchdown against the Lane Dragons.

Lady Scots own 12-1 record

The Lady Scots' volleyball team is headed in a winning direction. So far, they have compiled a 12-1 record. Their only loss was against the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga, which is a Division I school.

The volleyballers got first place in their own Maryville Invitational. They defeated Montreat-Anderson (15-3, 15-3), Tusculum (15-5, 15-3), Fisk (15-6, 15-4), Carson-Newman (17-15, 15-4), and Tennessee Wesleyan (15-2, 15-3). The Lady Scots played Fisk in the finals and defeated them 15-5 for the first place trophy. Coach Sharon Brown was very pleased with the victory. She felt that the girls worked as a team and showed a great deal of spirit. Rachael Reese, Sandy Rabun, Donna Owens, and BJ Salade all had fine performances.

The Lady Scots traveled to Chattanooga for a quad-match with UTC, Covenant and Berry College. The Lady Scots had never beaten UTC and were hoping to bring home a victory. The Lady Mocs were a powerful offensive team and defeated the MC volleyballers 15-4 in the first game. The Lady Scots refused to give up and came back with a 15-9 victory. Although the Lady Scots were winning 7-0 at one point, they lost the final match 15-9.

The Lady Scots went on to play well against Covenant, beating them 15-11 and 15-3. They also beat Berry 15-10 and 15-7.

The Lady Scots continued their winning streak when they traveled to Nashville this past week-end to face Fisk and Austin Peay State University. The women played an awesome game against APSU. Sandy Rabun and Donna "Inga" Owens had several good spikes that put the Austin Peay team on the floor. The Lady Scots defeated Fisk 15-8 and 15-12. Coach Brown is very happy with her team's progress. She states, "We are really working as a team. Our serve has improved greatly. It was an added thrill to beat Austin Peay because the coach there was one of my former players."

The Lady Scots are on a winning streak and hopefully they will keep it up. Their schedule is busy. Monday they played Bryan, Tuesday they traveled to Carson-Newman, and this week-end they will be at the Emory & Henry Invitational. Their next home game is Saturday, October 20, when they go up against Carson-Newman and Vanderbilt.

Intramurals underway

Women's Intramural soccer teams started their season last week. The first game was played on Monday with the Rainbow Connection vs N.A.O.W.'s. The Rainbow Connection won 1-0 in a challenging game. Wasted Again played Dorm 1 Team the next day and won 2-1. N.A.O.W.'s and a team from Davis Dorm tied their match Wednesday after the team from Davis scored in the last minute of the game. The final score of that game was 1-1. Thursday's game was rained out and will be rescheduled. This week's action will be: Rainbow Connection vs Wasted Again on Monday, Davis Dorm vs Dorm 1 on Tuesday, and Wasted Again vs Davis Dorm on Thursday.

THE NEWS OF MARYVILLE COLLEGE, MARYVILLE, TN.

Calender change proposed

by Lois Boney

Of great concern to many students on campus these days is the possible change in the school calendar. The issue was brought up at least three years ago when objections were raised to the present system. Some fields of study, such as mathematics and foreign languages, need more than ten weeks to accomplish what is needed in the course. However, the Instructional Program Committee (IPC) will not vote on the issue until November.

The proposed calendar, a 4-1-4 system, would involve taking four courses for 14 weeks, one course for three weeks (the interim), and four courses for another fourteen weeks. For example, if a 4-1-4 calendar was in affect for the 1981-82 school year, classes would begin on September 15, and Thanksgiving break would be November 26-29. A winter break period would be from December 19 until January 24, with the interim coming after Christmas, lasting from January 25 to February 12. The spring semester would begin February 15, and commencement would be on May 30. Spring vacation would come in the middle of the semester, April 3-11.

Also under consideration is a proposal to change over to credit hours. All classes would meet for 55 minutes. Courses at the 300 and 400 level, and all core courses, would generally be worth four credit hours and would meet four times a week. Courses at the 100 and 200 level, and all interim courses, would be worth three credit hours and meet three times a week. Students would normally earn 30-32 credit hours per year. Graduation would require 128 credit hours, which would be about 36 courses.

The calendar change would have its advantages and disadvantages. Besides the extended class time, registration would be simpler and involve less administrative cost since there would be two, rather than three, registrations per year. The winter break would cut heating expenses and allow students a chance to work. Also, faculty members would have a chance to reorganize courses or continue work of their own. The big disadvantage of the proposal is that Thanksgiving and spring vacations would come in the middle of a semester. Also, students would have to adjust to carrying four courses instead of three.

The IPC has not voted on the proposals yet, and won't until November. If the IPC approves the 4-1-4 calendar and the credit hours system, the ACC will vote to adopt or reject them. If the ACC adopts the proposals, nothing will go into effect until the fall of 1981 at the earliest.

MC Board in session

The Board of Directors of Maryville College will meet at Maryville on October 18th, 19th, and 20th. At 2:00 p.m. on Thursday the board will divide up into sub-committees. They will hold meetings for the rest of the day. Several of these meetings are to be open sessions.

One of these open sessions will be the meeting of the Student Affairs Committee. They will be in the meeting room on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall. From 3:00 until 4:00 the student affairs staff will meet, and from 4:00 until 5:00 the students are invited to come out and participate in the rest of the session. Kay Beals is the chairman of the Student Affairs Committee.

The Board of Directors meets twice a year, once in the fall during the month of October. The second meeting is in the spring during April. There are around 34 regular members and a number of honorary members now serving on the board.

Thursday afternoon will be devoted solely to committee meetings. Both Friday

Kurka defines Art in CIV program

Professor Donald Kurka, chairman of UT's Art Department, used slides to show the diverse aspects of modern American art at the CIV program on Wednesday, October 10. His topic, entitled "But Is It Art?" dealt with new areas of experimentation outside of traditional art.

The presentation included examples of many new art forms, such as abstract expressionism, pop art, and optical art. According to Professor Kurka, all of these were part of the movement away from specific art objects. Art began to capture intangible ideas and words. Artists began to make their works larger so as to create whole environments. This was the beginning of concept art or art which causes an effect to occur inside the observer.

He also talked about the use of new materials which were unavailable half a century ago. These include foam, plastics, and welded metal. The most radical mediums used are sound, ice, electricity, magnetism, and light.

Professor Kurka stated that art reflects the artist's lifestyle. Today artists are responding to many things and there is no single art form. He urged his listeners to look at all of the art forms together to get a closer sense of what modern day America is all about.

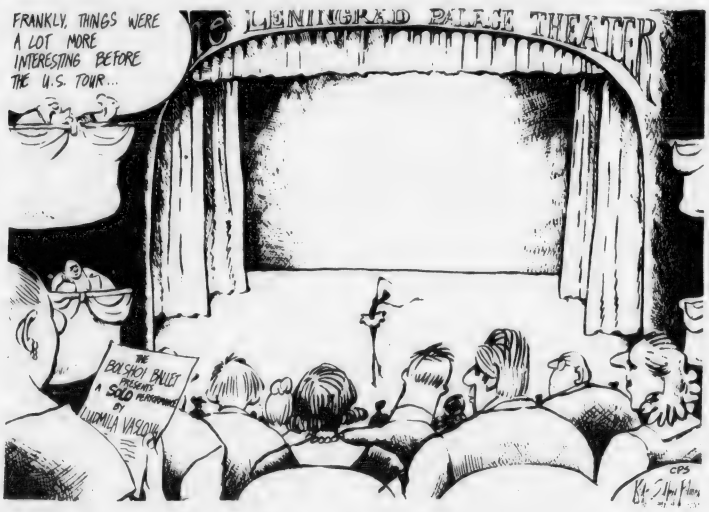
A day without $$$...

...is like a day without sunshine

This past Saturday's trip to the Tangerine Bowl was one of the highlights in the career of the Maryville College Highlander Marching Band. This was the first trip of its kind in quite some time and hopefully it will not be the last.

Through a fine performance at half-time, the Highlanders proved to those in attendance, and most of all to themselves, that they are something to be proud of and not a second class organization.

Originally, the Florida trip was said to be financially impossible, but the band got the backing of the Florida Alumni Association and the administration decided that they could find the funding. Unfortunately, the necessary funds were removed from the Instrumental Music budget, leaving about $90.00 left to cover expenses for the rest of the year.



This development disappointed and disheartened many band members and morale seemed to drop somewhat. But the band in the Tangerine Bowl that Saturday night was a different band — a magical band, a proud band. Out on that field the budget problems were left behind them and they were making the most of what they were and what they had.

However, budget problems still exist. It is going to be very hard for the Instrumental Music program to keep body and soul together this year, trying to survive on the few crumbs left in its budget, in addition to fund raising efforts. It is not unfair to say that more financial support is needed.

Certainly we all know that every department here at MC has its financial woes, but it seems that the whole idea of a liberal, broad-based education is defeated if a department or program is left by the way-side for want of reasonable funding.

However, this is not the main point. The spirit, the conviction and the pride of the band — to keep plugging along with a near empty tank — this is the point. Though few in number and low on cash, the Highlanders have proven that they will survive and give MC the best band they possibly can.

It was a good feeling to have people come up to me in Florida and say, "That's a good little band your school's got there." It made all the work and all the worry seem worthwhile — and that's what it's all about. T.H.

Echoes from the past...

In October, 1928, a total of 396 MC students, comprised of 288 women and 108 men, indicated their intention to teach after leaving college. This represented over half of the entire student body and included three-fourths of the 1929 graduating class.

Festival to honor Vachel Lindsay

A grant in the amount of $3865 has been awarded Maryville College for the Vachel Lindsay Festival November 14-15. Dr. Elizabeth Fowler and Mrs. Herma R. Cate, co-directors of the project, were notified by the Tennessee Committee for the Humanities that their proposal for the Festival was approved with only minor alterations.

The Festival will commemorate the 100th anniversary of Vachel Lindsay who was born in Springfield, Il, on November 10, 1879. During the 1920s he recited his poems to high school and college audiences in every state of the union; in 1906, on one of his three vagabond tours, he hiked through East Tennessee.

Festival activities will include a Poetry Reading on Thursday evening, November 15; CIV on Friday morning; a symposium of scholarly papers in the afternoon; and "An Evening With Vadhel Lindsay" at 8:00 p.m., featuring the Playmakers, the MC concert choir, poem games, and interpretive dancing.

"Stewartvillers" on display

The Stewartville Photographers, Tillman Crane, Michael Jacobus, and Sandra Son, are featured in an exhibit of their black and white photography at the Fine Arts Center this month. Prints ranging from abstract to environmental make up the display. The showing will continue through October 31 with gallery hours from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Crane, a 1978 Maryville graduate, is currently a photographer for the Maryville Alcoa Daily Times. Jacobus, a Senior at Maryville, works as a photographer at the Gatlinburg Tin Type Studio. Son, also a Senior at the College, recently had a pictorial essay published in Village Post Magazine.

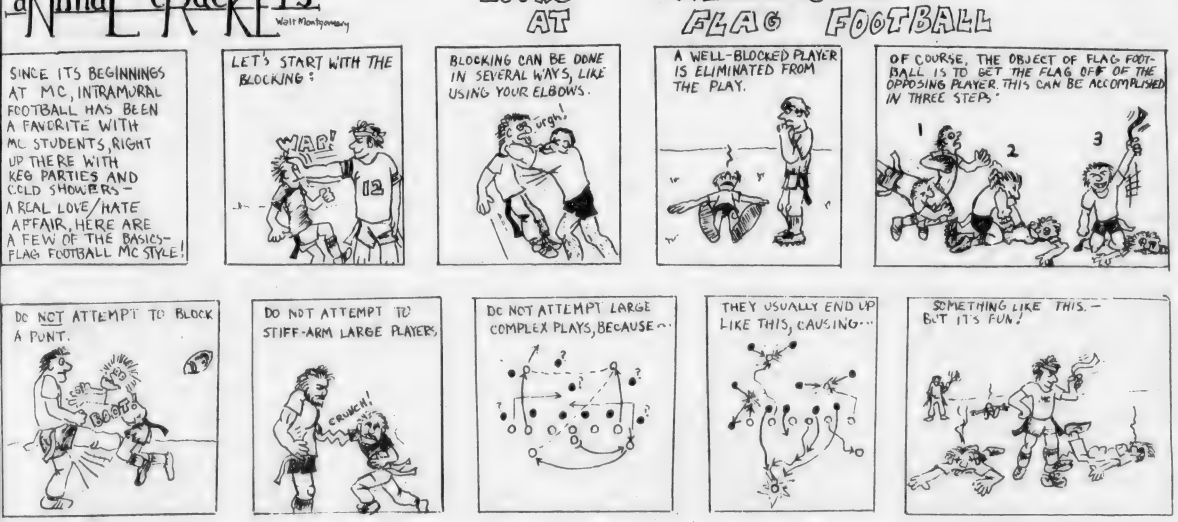
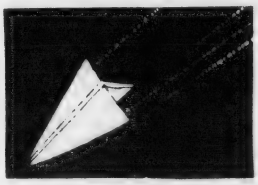
Do you know booze rules?

by Jeff Hayes



Alcohol is a welcomed commodity to many of our lives. We should, however, be aware of the laws concerning its acquisition and use. The information stated here is taken from the Tennessee Code Annotated and the Maryville Municipal Code. Both are available for public use at the Courthouse on Court Street.



Minors: It is illegal for a minor, one under the age of 18, to purchase or to attempt to purchase any alcoholic beverage, or for any person to purchase the same for a minor. It is illegal for a minor to have in his possession alcohol for any purpose or to transport it for any purpose, unless he transports it in the course of his employment. It is also illegal for a minor to loaf or loiter in any place where alcohol is sold or served. This is punishable by a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $25 for the first offense, and by not less than $25 nor more than $50 for each succeeding offense, and falls under the jurisdiction of the local Juvenile Court.

Legal Drinking Age: It is illegal for any person under the age of 19 to purchase or receive, or have in his possession any alcoholic beverage in any public place. This is a misdemeanor, and is punishable by a fine of not more than $100. Any person under the age of 19 who knowingly makes a false statement to the effect that he or she is 19 years or older to a person selling alcohol for the purpose of obtaining the same is guilty of a misdemeanor, and can be punished by a fine of not more than $200. If he or she fails to pay such a fine and all related costs, that person can be imprisoned for not less than five days nor more than thirty days in the county jail.

General: It is illegal for any person to drive or operate any automobile or other motor-driven vehicle while he or she is under the influence of an intoxicant, narcotic drug, or a drug producing a stimulating effect on the central nervous system. Here in Maryville, it is specifically illegal for any person to drink or consume or have an open can or bottle of alcohol in or on any public street, avenue, highway, sidewalk, public park, public school, school ground, or any other public place unless the place has a permit for consumption of alcohol on the premises.

These are the basic laws that govern the possession and use of alcoholic beverages in Blount County. They are useful to remember. So keep an eye on them, and have fun!

"Midnight Express" takes a ride at Lehigh

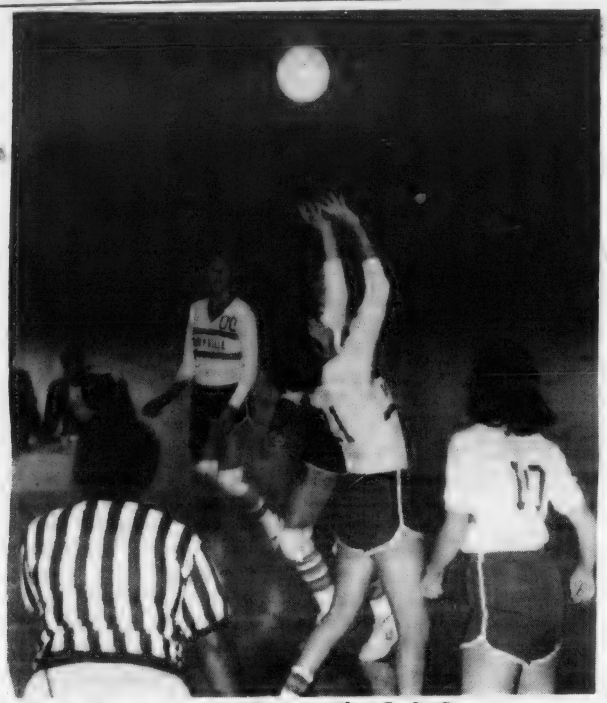
BETHLEHEM, PA (CPS) — The film "Midnight Express" was shown at Lehigh University uneventfully last week, a marked contrast to the controversy the film caused prior to the screening.

Laura Schrier, Student Activities Council president, recalled she had "no idea" the movie would cause controversy, but when it appeared on the SAC schedule 28 foreign students — 22 of whom were Turkish — petitioned to have the showing cancelled.

They criticized the film as "racist" and "anti-human."

The movie purports to tell the true story of a young American who tried to smuggle drugs out of Turkey, and who was imprisoned and tortured in a Turkish prison.

According to student Erdal Unver, the movie makes Turks out as "villains and stupid creatures," and thus promotes a "distorted and inaccurate portrait of the nation."



The university's Cultural and Social Events Review Committee, though, voted to allow the showing to be held. The committee officially decided the film wouldn't provoke the racism the students feared, but it did allow the students to distribute a flyer to the audience outlining students' objections to the movie.

The same committee voted to cancel a showing of the pornographic film "The Story of O" last spring after Dean of Students William Quay argued the movie might offend alumni contributors.

Lady Scots keep on spikin'

Donna Owens sets up for another Lady Scot victory.

by Birdie Hill

Seven years ago Maryville did not have a women's volleyball team. Six years ago it was just a club. Today, Maryville College can be proud to say that they do have a volleyball team and it's a winning one, holding a 19-3 record.

Tuesday, the Lady Scots traveled to Jefferson City for a tri-match with Carson-Newman and Tusculum. In their first match with C-N, Maryville won 15-4, 15-9. The Lady Scots definitely out-played the Lady Eagles. In their second match they beat Tusculum 15-5, 15-9.

The volleyballers hosted Bryan College and defeated them 15-0, 15-6, 15-12 on October 8. The ladies had an almost faultless first game and played with a great deal of accuracy. This past weekend the volleyball team traveled to Virginia to compete in the Emory & Henry tournament. The Lady Scots were up against some tough competition and came home with a second place trophy. The first game brought MC against Mary Washington. The ladies lost both games 15-13, 15-9. They then moved up through the loser's bracket to the quarter finals. In the process, the Lady Scots beat Longwood 15-10, 16-14, Virginia Intermont 15-4, 15-2, Radford 15-9, 15-7, and Concord 15-4, 16-14. In the quarter finals the Lady Scots were matched again with Mary Washington.

If the ladies beat M.W. they would have to play them again for first place. If they lost, they would come home with second place. Unfortunately, Mary Washington was an almost faultless defensive team and returned everything Maryville put over the net. The Lady Scots were defeated 15-11, 15-13.

Coach Sharon Brown was not disappointed in the loss. She felt, "we played as well as we could. We were up against some tough teams and beat them. I'm very happy with the way the girls played."

The Lady Scots' next home game is Saturday when they go up against Carson-Newman and Vanderbilt. Come cheer the Lady Scots onto two more victories!

Scots squeezed in Florida

The Scots received the first blemish on an untarnished season last Saturday, dropping a 10-7 decision to the University of Central Florida, before perhaps the largest crowd ever to see a Maryville football team, estimated at 15,000 in the Tangerine Bowl in Orlando.

Mike Cullison of the home team hit Bob Ross for a touchdown pass in the first half, and UCF added a field goal to make it 10-0. Alvin Nance scored on a one-yard run for the Scots. MC hurt their own cause, being penalized for 124 yards and losing 5 turnovers.

Maryville travels to Jackson, Miss. next week for a game against the Millsaps Majors. The Scots will return for homecoming on October 27 when they will face Southwestern at Memphis. MC has not lost at home in 2½ years, beating 17 straight visiting opponents.

Soccer draws tie

The MC soccer club fought a heavily favored University of Tennessee squad to a 2-2 draw last Wednesday in Maryville. A sizable and enthusiastic crowd watched as the Fired-up Scots put forth one of their best efforts.

Although UT dominated most of the play in the first half, the Maryville defense was superb in thwarting all of the visitors' scoring attempts. Early in the second half, Byron Findly scored from the wing to give the Scots a 1-0 lead. The Vols came back with two goals to move out in front until the 33-minute mark, when MC erased the score off of a disputed penalty shot.

The play of the Scots' defense was the brightest aspect of the game for Maryville. The fullbacks have shown marked improvement this fall. Offensively, the Scots have only been shut out once in six games, at the hands of Tennessee Temple, 2-0. MC will try to arrange avenge that loss next Wednesday at Maryville. Game time is 4 p.m. and Saturday sessions will be business sessions. All meetings and sessions, except the open sessions, will be in Proffitt Dining Hall.

Friday afternoon at 4:30 there will be a faculty reception for the board members and the faculty. Friday night there will be a dinner for the board in Proffitt Dining Hall.

The Board of Directors is meeting at this time to review the business of Maryville College. For example, they will probably discuss enrollment and occupancy of the residence halls and other such standard items.

Almost certain to come up will be the discussion of Maryville College's campaign to raise five million dollars by June, 1981. However, for the most part, the only matters discussed will be routine items.

Cherokees or concrete?

Once more around the block for Tellico Dam

There are few people who would not agree that the Tellico Dam controversy has not been dragged out and driven into the ground almost beyond the level of public tolerance. Yet, just when it appeared that the issue had finally been settled (for better or for worse), it has been pried open one more time. And because the cause is far from trivial or unworthy, Tellico Dam has once again earned the popular spotlight.

Last weekend nearly 2,000 people jammed the banks of the Little Tennessee River at Chota, an area near Vonore that is to be covered by the Tellico reservoir. There is nothing particularly important about Chota except for the fact that, in the centuries before the white man drove them westward on the Trail of Tears, it was the capital of the Cherokee Nation. Archaeological digs in the area have uncovered indications of civilization dating back to 8500 B.C. Tellico Dam, once closed, will flood the Cherokee Nation's ancient, sacred burial grounds.

The gathering at Chota was peaceful, except for a bomb threat and 150 lbs. of nails lying on the road leading into the site, both planted by opponents of the rally. The crowd included Cherokee Indians, their sympathizers, local farmers protesting the flooding of their land, environmentalists left over from the snail darter case, and people simply interested in preserving the last free-flowing section of the "Little T." The representation was truly indicative of the myriad of controversies that surround the completed, but unfilled, dam.

The Cherokee's claim is a valid one. We believe it actually has more merit than the snail darter issue. The snail darter is a fish, and it has been successfully transplanted to other rivers. But the Cherokees are people, and their history cannot be moved about so easily. Great injustice has been done to them in the past. Are we of today to tell them that even the memory of their Nation is not worth preserving?

One cannot help but wonder, however, why the Cherokees did not make their claim earlier. After some consideration, a few reasons become apparent. For one thing, the dam has been held up for quite a while (about three years) by the snail darter case. It is not too difficult to understand why the Cherokees would wish to avoid getting their name attached to that controversy. If they had, their case would have gone down with the darter's defeat. And with the snail darter case pending, there was no need for them to issue their own. Also, the law under which the Cherokees have filed suit was not passed until 1978. If the Indians succeed in getting a preliminary injunction, for which purpose they will go to court tomorrow, "the only way TVA could complete the dam would be to exempt the Cherokee Nation from the First, Fifth, and Ninth Constitutional Amendments," according to Randy Brown, organizer of last weekend's rally. Undeniably, the Cherokees' claim has been filed nearly at the midnight hour. But they are not altogether unjustified for doing so.

An editorial in the Highland Echo last February concerning Tellico Dam came to the simple conclusion that the project, unfeasible from the outset, should never have been started. It presents a perfect illustration of wasteful government spending. And now we would like to see it stand as such. The snail darter case alone was not enough to foreclose the dam's completion; it could be manipulated too easily. But now we are talking about a culture, a history, a Nation — a people who are still among us. And we are talking about a river that, if the dam is closed, will be no more. These things should not be sacrificed simply because of the money that has been squandered on concrete.

Yet money speaks with a booming voice in our society, and little can conquer it. It does not appear too likely that the Cherokees will succeed in their attempt to halt the dam. But if, by chance, they should, perhaps we will have learned a valuable lesson. Concrete is not always progress; money does not always measure value. The Cherokees and other supporters of the Little T are trying to weigh aestetic, naturally-occurring rights and values against cold government figures and political manuverings. It would indeed be a wonder if they should succeed. But if they should, the people of our country may even come to believe that their government can perceive values in terms other than dollar signs.

Echoes from the past...

"Moonshining" seems to have been a popular synonym for a popular activity in the 1920's: courting. Professor Ellis, librarian, was quoted as saying, "It makes absolutely no difference to me how much you young people moonshine, but the library is not the place to do it. You may sit together at the same table, but you may not study off the same book."

the activities during the day. The parade will begin at 4 p.m. and everyone not on a float is to go to Nowtown and cheer as it passes by. At 8 o'clock a bon fire and pep rally will be held in the parking lot beside the football field. Some former coaches and team captains will be present to give a pep talk. The cheerleaders will give a special performance and then there'll be a marshmallow roast, BYOS (Bring Your Own Stick)! Following the bon fire at 9:30, there will be a concert in Lloyd Lobby featuring the band "Dixie Delights." Come for some easy listening music.

Bright and early Saturday morning at 8 o'clock will be an MC road race. The entry fee is $4.00 for a ten kilometer, five kilometer, or a one mile run. T-shirts will be given to all race finishers.

The MC Women's Faculty Club will hold the annual crafts fair at Wilson Chapel at 10 a.m.

The pre-game show will start at 1:30 p.m. The winners of the float contest and the road race will be announced. The choir will sing the Alma Mater and the band will perform a full show. A special tunnel will be formed for the football team and this calls for student participation! Watch for signs explaining the tunnel! The game kick-off is at 2 p.m. The Homecoming Queen will be announced at halftime.

On Saturday night the Homecoming dance will be held in Pearson's Dining Hall from 9 p.m.-1 a.m. The dance will feature a new band called "Illusions." Tickets are $5 per couple and $2.50 for a single. (BYOB).

Sunday, October 28th starts the Halloween films with "The Blob" in the theatre at 9 p.m. On Monday the film "See No Evil" will be shown in the FAC at 9 p.m. and on Tuesday at 9 p.m. the feature will be "Blood, Beast, Terror" in Lloyd basement. Caramel apples and cider will be sold Tuesday night!

On Halloween, there will be a costume party at dinner which will include a costume contest, bobbing for apples, and other goodies! At 9 o'clock the same night, Playmaker's will hold a haunted hour in the FAC Music Hall. Y'all come for a good scare!

It's up to you to make this Homecoming magical so do your part!

Explore Craft Fair

As in previous years, the Harvest Crafts Festival, sponsored by the Women's Faculty Club, will enhance Homecoming Week. The Fair will be held Saturday, October 27 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Chapel and Fine Arts Colonnades.

Handicraft exhibits, ranging from weaving, quilting, and pottery to painting and needle work, will be displayed. This year most of the talent will come from local area craftsmen, compared with

Gov. Lamar Alexander was the featured speaker for the October 19 kick-off of MC's $5 million fund-raising campaign in Knoxville.

Members of the Maryville College Board of Directors mill about informally before the luncheon meeting.

Fund-raising campaign given K-town kick-off

Maryville College's $250,000 Knoxville area fund-raising campaign was officially kicked off last Friday, October 19. The MC Board of Directors, including Tennessee Governor Lamar Alexander, and many Knoxville civic, business, and professional leaders attended the luncheon meeting held at Cherokee Country Club. The campaign represents part of the $5 million fund-raising drive, "Toward Century III," currently underway for the college.

Robert Campbell, a Knoxville attorney, presided over the meeting. He introduced the members of the Knoxville Steering Committee, who will be responsible for eliciting support for the fund-raising campaign. These include: Dean Anderson, Tutt S. Bradford, Robert R. Campbell, E. B. Copeland, Carle Davis, Charles Dean, Jim Dick, James A. Halsam, Arnold Kramer, John W. Proffitt, Richard Ray, and Jack Walker.

George Webster, a prominant Washington, D.C. attorney, has been appointed national chairman of the entire "Toward Century III" project. Mr. Webster, a 1941 MC graduate, is a member of the college's Board of Directors. He went on to graduate from Harvard Law School and has been in private practice in Washington since 1951. He is a member of several boards and professional associations, including the American Society of Association Executives and the Tennessee Industrial and Agricultural Development Commission. Gov. Alexander, serving as honorary campaign chairman, will be helping Mr. Webster spear head the three-year fund-raising drive.

Mr. Campbell then introduced President Wayne Anderson with a listing of his background and achievements at MC. Dr. Anderson spoke on the future of small liberal arts colleges in general and Maryville College in particular. He stated that, while other small private colleges are facing serious problems and regressions, Maryville is moving forward. He pointed toward the addition of new faculty members, greater career orientation, good campus unity, strengthening ties with the Presbyterian Church, good community relations, and the first balanced budget in 17 years as indications of MC's future potential.

Dr. Anderson promised the group that "Maryville College will continue to serve the greater Knoxville area for a long, long time to come."

Gov. Alexander, the featured speaker for the luncheon, was introduced next. Gov. Alexander spoke of the various ways that Maryville College has influenced him, both as a boy growing up in Maryville and now as a member of the Board of Directors. He claimed that the City of Maryville is different from most small cities in its style and quality of life because of its jobs, location, residents, and, significantly, Maryville College.

Alexander stressed that Knoxville cannot be separated from its outlying areas; Maryville and Knoxville are neighbors and, as such, are valuable to one another. He also stated his belief that it is just as important for private as well as public institutions of higher education to thrive, in order to preserve the diversity so integral to learning. He therefore expressed his desire to see the Knoxville community support Maryville College.

Last to speak was Jim Haslam, who gave the actual fund-raising pitch. He urged contributors to think of giving to the MC campaign as an investment in higher education.

Student affairs board listens

by Linda Wiley

When you have something to say, either good or bad about MC, where is one of the best places to go to get something done? The MC Board of Directors' Student Affairs Committee opens the forum to students to voice their opinions twice a year when the entire Board is in session. This committee deals with all aspects of student life at MC, including food, dorms, social activities, judicial affairs, career planning, and campus traffic. Each area reports to the committee members regarding last year's statistics and events as well as this fall's, and a projection of winter and spring term happenings.

The first meeting of this school year was on Thursday, October 18 in Fayerweather Hall. A small number of students were present, yet several problems were brought up and reviewed.

The proposal to actually apply dorm damage fees back into the dorm was advocated and acted upon. The policy of charging tuition for a full three course load when the student is only taking two courses was brought up and seriously questioned by the students. The committee promised to review it with the entire Board of Directors and resolve the problem.

Throughout the meeting, the committee members seemed genuinely interested in listening and working toward a resolution of all the problems discussed. Even though this group meets only twice a year, it is certainly a good sounding board for concerned students and should be kept in mind when the Board meets again during the spring term.

The Highlander Marching Band, directed by drum major David Fisher, entertains the Scots' fans in the stands.

Cheerleaders in line for athletic supporters

It would be hard to imagine a football game without cheerleaders. The 1979 MC cheerleaders have been hard at work all season to make sure the Scots are well-supported by their fans.

There are ten female and three male cheerleaders on this year's squad. Mary Snook, a senior physical education major from Ft. Lauderdale, FL, is their captain. Tina Tyler, a Louisville, , sophomore majoring in special education is serving as co-captain.

The other cheerleaders include: Nan Elliot, a freshman business major from Conyers, GA; Anne Folger, a freshman physical therapy major from Dahlonega, GA; Sissy Gravely, a sophomore political science major from Harrodsburg, KY; Janet Helwig, a sophomore math major from Chattanooga, TN; Shelley Kingsbury, a freshman from Punta Gorda, FL; Kathy Kurtz, a sophomore art major from Miami, FL; Rachel McCampbell, a sophomore art major from Knoxville, TN; and Betsy Pankey, a sophomore English major from Birmingham, AL.

Keith Amos, Bill Engel, and Joe Sprigg are the male cheerleaders. Keith, also known as "Toby," is a sophomore business major from Lenoir City, TN. Bill is a senior from St. Petersburg, FL, majoring in biology. Joe is also a senior biology major, from Birmingham, AL.

The cheerleading squad demonstrates a wide variety of outside interests as well. Between them, they represent a large number of campus organizations, including Chi Beta, Theta Epsilon, Alpha Lambda Delta, and Beta Beta Beta. Many are active in sports; Shelley and Janet are on the women's tennis team, while Keith plays baseball in the spring. Mary Snook is a member of the Judicial Review Board. Joe Sprigg is president of the Outdoor Club.

The cheerleaders are sponsored by Terrie Guillaume, a 1976 MC graduate currently living in Maryville. Terrie cheered for the Scots herself from 1972-76.

Besides practicing five days a week, the cheerleaders have a number of other responsibilities. They decorate the dining hall and the dressing rooms before the games, and make spirit notes for the players. They organize and lead pep rallies and bonfires. And of course they are always out front during the games. The same people will be cheering for the basketball games when football season is over.

The 1979 MC cheerleaders treat students to a special pep rally routine.

Highlander Band: Kilted clan rallies spirit

by Tom Hudson

Already off to a good season, the Maryville College Highlander Marching Band is ready to make 1979 its best year yet, with more productivity to come in years ahead.

This year's Highlanders show a lot of spirit and vitality, as evidenced in the band's excellent performance in Orlando, FL on Oct. 14. True, the Highlanders have had some financial difficulties, but the kilted clan keeps on marching.

The band's personnel keeps the group alive. Of great help are director Gene Taliaferro-Jones and drum major David Fisher.

This is "TJ's" third year here at MC as co-ordinator of instrumental music studies. He has had much experience working with musical groups, having been a high school band director for ten years after receiving his B.S. from East Tennessee University. He later received his M.A. in Music Education from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

David Fisher is a sophomore majoring in Applied Music. For four years he was a drum major with the 460 piece Homestead H.S. Highlander Marching Band of Mequon, Wisconsin.

The band members speak for themselves. "We may be short on funds, but we're long on spirit," says one band member.

The entire Highlander band is comprised of only 32 people: 24 instrumentalists, 6 flag personnel, 1 drum major, and 1 majorette.

When asked about the band's size and how it affects a half-time performance, drum major Fisher replied, "We march decent shows and we have a good sound — it's just that we don't have the personnel to get really fancy."

"TJ" seemed to echo the problem of personnel: "It's too bad that so many freshmen who were in high school bands don't join the band here at Maryville. Some won't join because we're small — but how are we going to get bigger if they don't join?"

One problem with recruiting seems to be a "shell shock" the freshmen have from strenuous high school marching bands.

"We're not a high school band," emphasizes Fisher. "We don't rehearse 3 hours a day — we don't have to. We've got the leadership to keep to a light rehearsal schedule of about 3 hours a week. I wish folks would realize this and come out and join us and have fun."

"Yeah, we have fun," adds another Highlander. "Sometimes it seems like we're up against a brick wall, but we make it work and have a good time."

So far this year, the band has had fun. The Highlanders have performed for all the home football games and for the pep rallies. They have traveled to Emory, VA for the Scots-Emery & Henry game and to Orlando, FL for the Scots-UCF game. There, the Highlanders were the smallest college band ever to march in the Tangerine Bowl.

Well, all that is behind the Highlanders now. What's for the future? "TJ" responds, "Try to develop the best band we can — a band this school can be really proud of."

And with the spirited personnel the Highlanders have, you can bet that they will be.

MC Playhouse opens curtain on "Black Comedy," Oct. 24-26

The Maryville College Playhouse will open the 1979-80 season during Homecoming week. The farce, Black Comedy, by Peter Shaffer, will run Wednesday, October 24 through Friday, October 26. Wednesday's performance will be a matinee at 4 p.m. The Thursday and Friday performances will begin at 8 p.m. All performances will be held in the MC Theatre. Tickets will be available at the door at a cost of $3 for adult tickets and $2 for student and senior citizen tickets.

Mr. Donald Thomas is the director of the MC production of Black Comedy. Mr. Thomas has been involved with theatrical work for the past 15 years. Besides directing this production, Mr. Thomas is also the director of the entire theatre program at MC. He joined the English faculty of Maryville College in September, 1979 and teaches part-time.

The long, one-act farce contains some humor which may not be suitable for young people and parental discretion is advised. The play satirizes British customs and values.

The plot begins with a young sculptor, Brindsley, and his fiancee preparing to entertain the wealtiest man in the world — hoping to sell some of Brindsley's work.

Hoping to impress Bamberger, the rich man, Brindsley borrows his neighbor's furniture without permission, while the neighbor is out for the weekend.

Brindsley's future father-in-law is invited to the party, but the evening's plans become muddled when a fuse blows and everyone spends the time in confused darkness. Brindsley's neighbor returns early and his ex-fiancee also shows up. The electrician is mistaken for the millionnaire and the situation becomes worse.

Black Comedy has been loved by audiences in both Europe and America since its opening in London 12 years ago.

Tim Stuart, an elementary education major from Concord, TN plays the sculptor, Brindsley, and Ruth Cartlidge, an aspiring professional actress, portrays a spinster neighbor, Miss Furnival. Both Tim and Ruth are veterans of the Playhouse.

The other actors and actresses are all freshmen. Wren Griffin, a voice major from Louisville, KY plays Carol, Brindsley's fiancee. Robin Snipes portrays Bamberger, and Andrew Heyward portrays Carol's "monster" father.

Two English-theatre majors are cast. Mike Clark from Miami, FL portrays the neighbor, Harold. Katey Flick of Cincinnati, OH plays Brindsley's ex-fiancee.

Maryville College received over $2.3 million in gifts and grants during 1978-79 — the largest amount ever given the College in a single year — MC board members learned during their semi-annual meeting this past weekend.

Included in the record $2,340,000 received by MC, a 59 percent increase over last year's total, was the $1 million gift made to the College last fall by an anonymous donor. MC President Wayne Anderson pointed out that without this historic gift, total giving would have still made this a record year for gifts and grants to the College.

MC directors also heard a report that the College had closed the fiscal year with a balanced budget. Dr. Anderson attributed this feat to a newly established budget control system and the significant increase in private fund raising.

Of the total raised, $192,431 came from the Blount County community, up from $142,000 received the previous year and far surpassing the local goal of $175,000, the MC president reported.

The largest amount given, $1,136,989, came from non-alumni individuals; while federal grants, primarily for Title III programs and student financial aid, accounted for $417,020. Other principal sources included alumni giving which totaled $227,151, followed by $173,550 from foundations and $134,382 from business firms, corporations and related foundations.

In all, 2,184 contributors made gifts to the College last year.

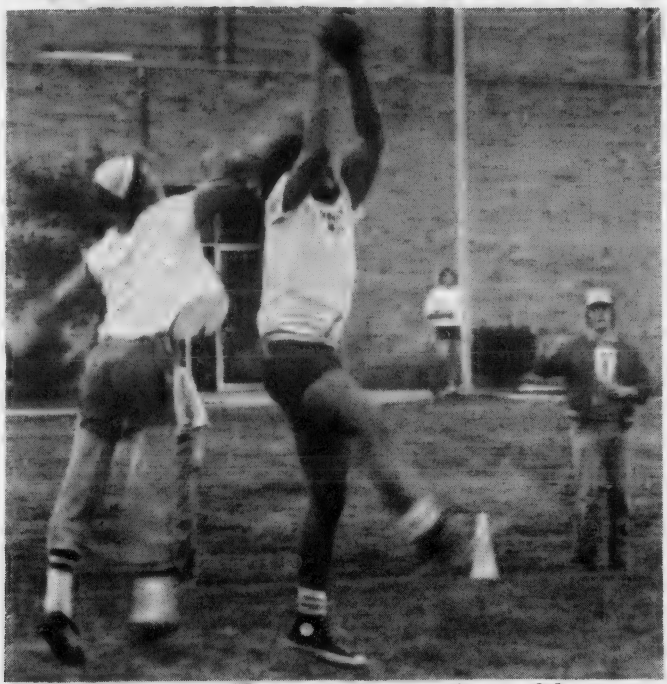
In action taken, the MC board promoted Ms. Jane G. Richardson from assistant to associate dean of student services. Ms. Richardson joined the MC staff in 1976 as a resident director for Dorm I and became assistant dean of student services the following year.

The central focus for the board's fall meeting was on development with the directors taking time out to attend Friday's luncheon in Knoxville to kick off that phase of the College's $5 million Toward Century III campaign.

Twenty five directors attended the two-meeting; they will next meet on campus April 24-26.

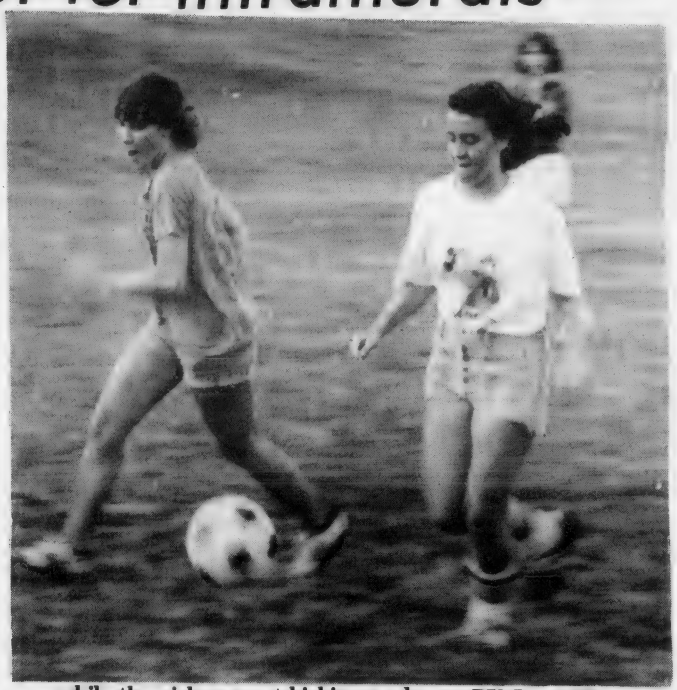
The intramural sports program at Maryville is a vital part of college life. The program director is Coach Byrd who is also the men's basketball coach.

Presently, the fall intramural program is made up of five men's flag football teams and five women's soccer teams. During interim many indoor individualized sports such as ping pong, racquetball, and one-on-one basketball will be offered. Winter intramurals will be comprised of men's basketball and women's volleyball. Men's and women's softball will be the sport during spring term. Coach Byrd said that because of scheduling conflicts more variety cannot be offered. But he added that if enough interest was shown in a sport not offered he would organize a program for it.



The intramural sports program is allotted one thousand dollars the entire year for both the men's and women's teams. The money this year has gone toward the purchase of a leather football, new flags for football, and goals for soccer.

The football teams this year have four paid students to officiate the games. The women's soccer teams, however, provide their own referees.



The rules governing both men's and women's sports are slightly modified because of time limits, experience, and limited participation. For example, football is divided into 20 minute halves and soccer consists of four eight minute quarters.

The soccer games are played twice a week and the football games once a week behind the gymnasium. The participants in the program also attend practice sessions two to three times a week.

Rain, rain, go away, so we can play a game today. That was the feeling of all the teams as the first two weeks of the Maryville College intramural football program tried to get under way. Now, with the recent warm weather, action has picked up, and games are under way. The Mongolian Stompers have the only unblemished record as they stand with 4 wins and 0 losses. David Shankle has his team in second place with a record of 2 wins and 1 loss. Rick Holland's team stands in third place with 1 win, 1 loss, and 1 tie. The teams A.M.F. and S.O.M.F. stand at 0-2-1, and 0-3, respectively.

This year's season, under the direction of John Thomas, has a schedule of five games per team with a play-off at the end of the season.

If you would like to see some fast action, or watch your favorite player, or even Lawrence Kennedy try to dunk the ball over the big tree next to the private road, come out on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday each week behind the P. E. building at 6 p.m. and watch one of MC's great intramural programs in action.

Did you know that there is a way to let out all the frustrations, stress, and strains of college life? Yes — you can do this through the Women's Intramural Sports program. This program is geared for all types of people: young, old, athletic, non-athletic, shy, and the aggressive. Intramurals provide stimulating activities, friendly competition (a chance to prove yourself), exercise (lots of it!), and fun. Women's Intramural soccer has been a hit again this fall and five teams will be fighting for the championship this week in the playoffs. After the soccer season is over basketball and racquetball seasons will start.

Sign-ups will be held this week and next week. Other exciting sports that will be provided this year are: volleyball, co-ed volleyball, 1-on-1 basketball tournament, softball, and co-ed softball. Get a team up today!

Sign-up boxes are located in the gym across from the men's and women's dressing rooms. Students, faculty, and staff are eligible to play. (Varsity competitors not eligible fo. intramural competition in their related sports).

If there are any questions about the Intramural Program contact Intramural Director, Rick Byrd or Women's Intramural manager, Janet Weston, Box 2501.

Tennis team swings in fall

Patty Berkau returns a volley during the tennis team's fall practice.

The Lady Scots' tennis team met Tennessee Wesleyan in their first fall scrimmage on Wednesday, Oct. 3, in Athens. The ladies ran off with the victory, losing only one of nine matches.

Scores were as follows: At the number one singles position, Janet Helwig downed an old rival, Laura Hudson, 6-3, 6-0. Playing number two for the ladies was Sharon Wood, who slaughtered her opponent, Leslie Cameron, 6-0, 6-1. At number three there was somewhat more of a struggle, with Shelley Kingsbury finally defeating Susan Ray, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2. The only loss for the Scots came at the number four position, where Patti Berkau lost to Misti Farmer, 2-6, 3-6. In the number five position Linda McCall went a tough three sets to finally come out with a 6-4, 1-6, 6-3 victory.

The ladies took all three points in doubles. The number one team of Janet Helwig and Wood defeated Hudson and Cameron 6-1, 6-2. The number two team of Kingsbury and Berkau defeated Ray and Farmer 6-3, 6-1. The number three team of Barrie and McCall had a bit more difficulty, coming out with a 6-7, 6-4, 7-6 victory.

Lady Scots; bittersweet record

The Lady Scots' volleyball team felt the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat this past week, but through it all they have managed to maintain a winning season, holding a 23-5 record.

The volleyballers had a tough night when they traveled to Bryan for a tri-match with Middle Tennessee State University and Bryan College. They defeated Bryan in one game 15-5, but lost the next two 7-15 and 8-15.

The Lady Scots could not "get up" for the MTSU game either and were defeated 11-15 and 6-15. Coach Sharon Brown admitted, "We played poorly."

The volleyballers did not let this get them down however, and they won the next four games. They defeated Tennessee Temple 15-3, 15-12, and Tennessee Wesleyan 15-6, 15-6.

The Lady Scots hosted Carson-Newman and Vanderbilt on Saturday for a tri-match. The ladies beat Vandy 15-1, 15-7, and defeated Carson-Newman 15-6, 15-5. The C-N and Vandy games were big wins for Coach Brown. She stated, "Carol Neal played an almost flawless volleyball match. I feel like we're on the upswing and hopefully we can keep it going."

This weekend the ladies will be traveling to Milligan for the Milligan Tournament. They are defending champions. Their next home game is Tuesday at 6:30 p.m.

Soccer suffers setbac

The MC Soccer team dropped two tough games last week, a 2-0 home loss to Johnson Bible College, and a 4-2 decision at Carson-Newman.

Against J.B.C., the Scots were simply flat. The visitors took the lead in the first half and never relinquished it as the MC offense just did not click.

In the Caron-Newman match, Maryville started quickly, taking a 2-0 lead on goals by Byron Finley and Greg Hosler. C-N scored later to make it 2-1 at half-time. The second half was all Eagles as they netted 3 unanswered goals while the Scots came up empty.

The Scots have not played good soccer since their thrilling 2-2 tie with UT two weeks ago. They will try to snap out of their slump on October 31 in Knoxville when they once again take on the powerful Vols. MC closes out the fall season at home on November 6 when they will meet Milligan.

Majors sink Scots

Millsap's Dale Loiacano scored from the Scots' 4 yard line with two minutes to play to give the Majors a 17-10 victory over the Scots in last Saturday's game at Jackson, Mississippi. It was the Scots' second loss in a row, giving them an overall record of 4-2.

The Scots scored first in the game on Ken Adair's 72-yard run in the first quarter. Carey Starns added the extra point to give the Scots a 7-0 lead. But the Majors closed the gap to one when Brad Chishom caught Byrd Hallman's pass from six yards out. The extra point attempt was wide. Millsaps, however, did take the lead before halftime as Chuck Smith kicked a 32-yard field goal, giving the Majors a 9-7 halftime lead.

In the third quarter the Scots recaptured the lead as Carey Starnes kicked a 34-yard field goal. This put the Scots ahead, 10-9. The score held until Loiacano scored with two minutes left in the game. The Scots' next game is the Homecoming battle against Southwestern at Memphis this Saturday. Game time is 2 p.m.

THE NEWS OF MARYVILLE COLLEGE, MARYVILLE, TN.

The crowning of Ms. Bobbie Jo Sallade as the 1979 Maryville College Homecoming Queen highlighted last Saturday's festivities. Bobbie Jo, a physical education major from Ft. Lauderdale, Fl., was escorted by senior Pete Gardzina.

Keefover resigns; ARA seeks boss

Mr. John Keefover has recently announced his intention to resign his post as manager of the ARA food service at Maryville College. Mr. Keefover has served as manager since ARA first arrived at MC in June.

Mr. Keefover will be assuming a position as manager of food services at the McGee-Tysen Air National Guard Officer's Club. This position represents a considerable pay increase over his current post with ARA.

The search for a new food service manager has already begun and will continue through November 12. ARA is currently in the process of searching its personnel files to find possible candidates. The actual screening and selection of a manager will be left up to Maryville College, however. A group consisting of Brick Brahms, Larry Mangus, Sarah Atchley, Sharon Crane, a representative from Dr. Anderson's office, and the Food Committee will handle the interviewing of people ARA recommends.

The faculty was informed of Keefover's resignation at their monthly meeting on October 17. He made his formal announcement to the Food Committee on October 23.

Mr. Keefover's resignation becomes effective November 23, 1979. The period between November 12, when the selection of a new manager should be completed, and November 23 will serve as a training period for the new manager.

Where is your $50 going?

During a recent open forum meeting, students asked for an explanation of the distribution of their fifty-dollar student activity fee paid at the beginning of the year. The Office of Student Services has provided the ECHO with the following assessment.

Social Committee (program monies)	$7000	$10.79
Special Programs (religious activities, black student programs, alcohol awareness, etc.)	$4500	$6.94
C.I.V.	$3900	$6.01
ECHO	$3500	$5.39
Student Activities	$2700	$4.16
Artist Series (guest artists)	$2500	$3.85
Cheerleaders (expenses)	$1200	$1.85
Intramurals (equipment)	$1000	$1.54
All-College Council (expenses)	$1000	$1.54
IMPRESSIONS	$150	$0.23
TOTAL	$32,450	$50.00

The funds, $32,450 total, will be divided to pay all or part of the budgets of the following activities. The total amound represents a $50 payment by 649 students. The first figure given below indicates the total amount budgeted; the second figure shows how much of each individual's payment goes toward that activity.

PAC offers a night with Karen Roewade

The second in a series of Performing Artist Concerts, featuring Karen Roewade, soprano, will be held in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall, Thursday, November 1, at 8:15 p.m. The concert is free and open to everyone.

Ms. Roewade, a graduate of Northwestern University and one of America's leading sopranos, was an affiliate artist at Maryville College from 1967 to 1970. Besides giving concerts, she also lectured, directed operatic scene recitals, appeared on television, and was a soloist with college and community groups. Ms. Roewade also co-directed and performed the leading role of Magda Sorel in Menotti's "The Consul." Mayor Stanley Shields honored her in 1970 by making her an honorary citizen of the area and proclaiming a special day in her honor.

Ms. Roewade's television appearances include three with the NBC Opera: Gian Carlo Menotti's "Labyrinth" and "Amahl and the night Visitors", and Bach's "St. Matthew's Passion"

Student rep needed on Board of Directors

Two weeks ago the MC Board of Directors met. As usual, very few students became involved in an open forum held by the Board's Student Affairs Committee.

The Student Affairs Committee seems genuinely interested in student life here at Maryville. This committee, however, is the only access students have to the Board. Questions of fees, tuition increases, and the like were not answered by this Committee. The reason: the Student Affairs Committee is not prepared to, or required to, deal with such questions. Who then do students talk to when such questions arise? Theorectically, the Board of Directors has a Fiance Committee. The problem with this committee is that student input is only felt by remarks made through the Student Affairs Committee.

It is quite evident that many student concerns and opinions are lost due to lack of direct student input to the proper Board committees. How then can the Board of Directors arrive at decisions directly affecting students?

Since the end of the 1960's, many colleges have allowed a full-time student to be a non-voting member of their Board of Directors. Such a position should be given consideration by MC's Board. This student, elected by his peers, would be able to voice student concerns directly to the Board. MC students would lose their feelings of alienation from the Board. A student representative would help Maryville College develop a greater community attitude.

In the "Purpose and Objective" section (page 5) of the Maryville College Catalog a sentence reads, "The total college experience is designed to prepare the student for effective participation and leadership in the larger community of mankind." So long as MC students are purposely kept out of touch with the true governing body of this institution, the statement above will remain a dream, not a reality.

To the editor:

We at MC have a tendency to regard ourselves as isolated and cut-off from the rest of the Maryville community. There is one area in which we no longer dare to hold this attitude. That is the area of campus security.

Two weekends ago, a Davis resident found a male in the fourth-floor lounge at 3:00 a.m. Upon confronting him, she found out that he did not even live on campus. A few minutes later, he stuck his head into an unlocked room. No one could get a hold of security. No one knew the police phone number. Meanwhile, this guy was still in the dorm. When security finally did arrive, they had to search every room in the dorm. The guy was never found.

Last year, there were repeated nights when a middle-aged man was seen in Davis and Dorm I after hours and unescorted. He was never caught. Luckily, nothing happened.

A few weeks ago, some folks from Carson-Newman spray-painted Pearson's and the surrounding area the day night before the game. Where was security?

Saturday night following the Lane football game, a group of on-campus guys were out raising hell in front of Davis from approximately 2-4 a.m. In the process, two windows were broken. Where was security?

These are only a few of the more recent indidents that have occurred during the past couple of years.

I feel that the security system on campus is a sham. Rightly, all of the blame should not be placed there. Students are to blame also. We are far too apathetic. A little peer pressure could go a long way in discouraging outright vandalism. Also, when strangers are noticed on campus or in a dorm when they obviously shouldn't be there, have a little common sense. Yell if you have to. Call the police immediately. By the way, how many people knew that in order to reach campus security at night, you must first call the Maryville police? Don't just turn your head and ignore it.

Those are things that students can do. But what happens in a true emergency when security cannot be reached as was demonstrated two weekends ago?

Maybe the faculty and administration don't feel that this matter warrants serious attention. That just might be because they are not around when this type of thing happens. I for one feel that an attempt to make the present security system more effective and updated must become a high priority item.

If there had been a more effective means of communication between students and security, many of the previously-mentioned incidents would not have occurred. For instance, why hush up things when they happen as has been done in the past? The students should be made aware that these types of things are going on.

For starters, how many telephones have the number of the Maryville police near them?–let alone other emergency numbers?

Sincerely,
Barbara George

Homecoming magic

The 1979 homecoming activities commenced with the parade Friday afternoon at downtown Maryville. This year was the biggest turnout ever of floats. Eight floats were represented: all five dorms, two honor music organizations, and the band. The winners of the floats were-first place-Lloyd,, which received$75; second place-Pearsons, which was awarded $50; and third place-Dorm I, which received $25. The dorm decorations were won by Davis and Dorm I, both of which were awarded $30.

Another homecoming activity was Big Man on Campus, which was won by Rich Suttle. He received a football signed by the homecoming court and the cheerleaders for the honor.

The same night a bonfire pep rally was held at the stadium. The cheerleaders did a special skit in recognition of senior football players. Coach Ficker gave a speech. Also present at the bonfire was ex-MC football coach Baird. After the bonfire, Dixie Delights, an easy listening band, entertained in Lloyd lobby. Both the bonfire and the band were well received and enjoyed by the students.

Saturday, the climax of the festivities, began during halftime. Last year's homcoming queen, Colleen Masterson, was present to crown this year's winner, Bobbie Jo Sallade. Bobbie Jo was escorted by Pete Gardzina. The remaining senior court consisted of: Muffet Anderson, escorted by Andy Limone;Lynn McGowan, , escorted her brother, Lonnie McGowan; Jill Kissinger, escorted by Danny Morris; and Janet Rickle, escorted by Rodney Nelson. The Juniors were represented by Jill Flickenger, escorted by "Tree". Arthur Campbell; the Sophomores by Janet Helwig, escorted by Murray Smith; and the Freshmen by Colleen Lucas, escorted by Jeff Nardo.

The delightful week of homecoming concluded with a dance Saturday night at Pearsons. The music was provided by "Illusion." Linda Wylie, chairman of Social Committee, mentioned that they might be back for an outdoor dance during May Madness.

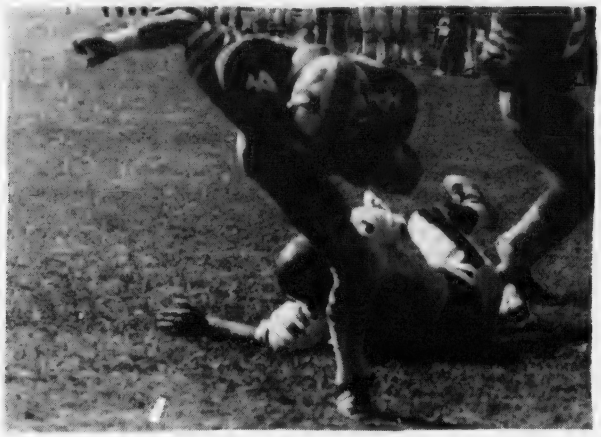
On hand to experience some of the bustle were alumni from various parts of the country.

WHAT DO YOU HAVE TO SAY ABOUT THE OPPOSITE SEX AT MC?

The September 27, 1979, HIGHLAND ECHO article on the attitudes of 1936 MC students concerning the opposite sex invited response on the same subject from current students. So far, the only response the Echo has received has been from girls. We're not sure, but we think this may indicate that the guys here think the girls are pretty much perfect. If this isn't so, we need to hear from some males. And girls, we could use more input from you, too. Address your opinions to the Echo, Box 2820. No names are needed, but please include your class level. We'll publish the results of this informal survey next week.

Ogle speaks his mind

Dr. George Ogle, Associate Professor of World Christianity at the Candler School of Theology of Emory University, led the CIV meeting Wednesday, October 24. Dr. Ogle, who worked in Korea from 1954 to 1974, spoke on the subject of economic development and religion, and cited Korean examples of conflicts which arise. Dr. Ogle stated that Korea examplifies what is typical of economically growing third-world nations. Korea has industrialized, but Christians are being imprisoned because of conflict with the government's methods of development.



The government dictates that the people must be patient and not complain about their condition. When a per capita income capable of sustaining the population is reached, then freedoms will be discussed. To achieve the capital, total cooperation is needed. A strong government must then control the workers.

The Christions argue that the present conditions of society will not turn around once a sound economic base is established. It is not economic stability that promotes freedoms, but the people and government advocate that the worker should be able to take part in the development and that existing social classes must be abolished if the common people are to enjoy any of the rights which come with an industrialized nation.

Dr. Ogle summed up his lecture saying that in the economic process, some Christian leaders have taken the stance that they must critique this process as judged by government economists. The result of this is Christians being arrested because the government sees their protests as defiance of authority which equals defiance of God.

Dr. George Ogle presented a CIV program last Wednesday on "Economic Development and Religion," using Korea as his principle example.

Scots win the big one

The Fighting Scots' offense poured in 23 first quarter points, and the defense held Southwestern to a minus 17 yards rushing as Maryville College crushed Southwestern 29-6 before the Homecoming Day crowd. It was Maryville's 17th straight home victory.

It took the Scots only a few minutes to open up the scoring in the first period. The Scots' defense held Southwestern on its first possession, which forced the punt after the opening kick-off. Steve Moffett received it at the Scots' 38-yard line and raced 62 yards for a spectacular touchdown. It was to be the first of three first quarter touchdowns. Carey Starnes added the extra point and the Scots led 7-0.

On their second possession, Southwestern again could not mount an attack as the Scots' defense would not yield a yard. Taking control of the ball at their own 45 after Southwestern's second punt, the Scots' offense drove the ball down to the 8-yard line where Eddie Brea swept the left side for the score. Starnes again added the extra point and the Scots increased their lead to 14-0.

The defense again rose to the occasion and forced Southwestern to punt. The Fighting Scots' offense reasserted their dominance and drove the ball down to the SAM's 6-yard line where Alvin Nance scored. The try for the two point conversion failed and MC had a 20-0 lead. Before the first quarter ended the Scots added three more points and led 23-0 on a Starnes 40-yard field goal.

After the first quarter, however, neither side's offense could control the game in the scoring category. Maryville added three in the second quarter on a Starnes 38-yard field goal and three more points in the fourth on a Starnes 32-yard field goal. Southwestern did manage to get on the scoreboard late in the fourth quarter on a 25-yard pass from Greg Peters to Mickey Mays. The two-point conversion atte empt failed and the final score was Maryville College 29, Southwestern 6.

Alvin Nance was the game's leading rusher, gaining 131 yards on 21 carries. Ken Adair added 118 of his own on 16 carries as the Scots rolled up 372 yards on the The defense again played another great game, intercepting four Southwestern passes and recovering two fumbles. The Scots are now 5-2. They play Washington & Lee next Saturday in Virginia.

Lady Scots on brink of season's climax

The women's volleyball team had an unlucky weekend when they traveled to Milligan. The ladies could only manage to bring home a third place trophy. The first game brought MC against Montreat Anderson. The Lady Scots won 15-11, 15-6. They then played Bryan and won 15-6, 15-7. Emory & Henry was the third opponent and the v-ballers won again 15-2, 15-4. The Lady Scots' bad luck started with Mars Hill when they lost 16-14, 15-11. They won the next game 15-8. 15-9 with Milligan, but lost again to Mars Hill. They won the first game 15-11, but lost the next two, 15-10, 15-

Coach Brown said, "We never got organized or played together completely.

We could have played a lot better." Even though the Lady Scots lost, they still have a winning record of 29-7.

The State Volleyball Tournament will be held at Maryville College November 9-10. The games will start Friday afternoon and end at noon on Saturday. There will be eight to ten schools represented from Division III colleges in Tennessee. Come support the ladies' climax to a great season!

Soccer fit to be tied

For the third time this season, the soccer Scots have tied an opponent. Their most recent draw came last Saturday with the Blount County Booters, a team comprised of many ex-MC players. The final score was 2-2.

The Booters took a 1-0 lead in the first half on a goal by a former Scot, Chris Rigell. Maryville could not take advantage of many open shots around the visitor's net; thus the half ended in a disadvantage to MC.

Seconds after the tion of play, captain Greg Hossler drilled a Byron Finley cross into the back of the cage, knotting the score. Another alumnus, Vinnie Fucci, scored for Blount County to make it 2-1. The Scots tied the score late in the match on a penalty shot, but once again were unable to knock in the winning margin.

This was the final home match of the fall season for the Scots, who travel to Johnson City, TN, on Nov. 6 for their last game against Milligan.

The East Tennessee Chapter of the National Association of Teachers of Singing will be sponsoring a NATS master class on November 3 in the MC Fine Arts Music Hall. Registration will begin at 9 a.m. The fee is $2.50 for teachers and $1.00 for students.

Walter James of Florida State University will be the guest clinician. He will deal with the subject of "English Literature for the Young Voice." In a morning session from 10-12, he will present ideas of this subject and work with students of high school and early college age. He will present a recital of English literature in the afternoon session from 2:00 - 4:30. Professor James will also work with students as time permits.

Students from colleges and high schools in the East Tennessee area will participate. Five students from Maryville College will have the opportunity to work with Professor James, who is considered an expert in English literature. All are welcomed to participate.

"Messiah" presented Nov.11

Maryville College's 47th annual presentation of Handel's "Messiah" will take place this Sunday, Nov. 11, in the Wilson Chapel. The performance is set for 3:00 p.m.

Seven MC students will be featured as soloists in the concert. Mark Herron, a freshman music major from Maryville, TN, will perform the recitative "He was cut off" and the aria "But thou didst not leave his soul in hell." Bill Thomas, a junior political science major from Greenville, TN, and former soloist in the "Messiah," will sing the recitatives "Comfort ye my people" and "Thy rebuke hath broken his heart" and the aria "Behold and see."

The recitatives "Behold a virgin shall conceive" and "Then shall be brought to pass" and the aria "O thou that tellest" will be performed by Sharon Youngs, senior physical education major from Gainesville, Ga. Ms. Youngs will also join with Thomas in the duet "O death, where."

Lesa Payne, junior music major from St. Petersburg, Fla., and winner of the National Association of Teachers of Music contest in 1979, will sing the aria "Rejoice greatly."

The bass arioso "For behold, darkness" will be sung by Bruce Wilson, a junior music major from Bronx, NY. Two freshman music majors, Wren Griffin and Karen Henderson, complete the list of soloists. Ms. Griffin from Louisville, Ky., will perform the recitative "Then shall the eyes of the blind" and the arias "He shall feed his flock" and "He was despised."

Ms. Henderson of Elon College, N.C., will sing four recitatives: "There were shepherds," "And lo the angel of the Lord," "And the angel said unto them" and "And suddenly there was with the angel."

Miss Faith Esham, 1979-80 ALCOA Foundation Affiliate Artist, will make her debut public performance as featured soloist in the year's "Messiah." She is a native or Vanceburg, Ky., and a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music. Currently a member of the New York City Opera, Miss Esham will be visiting artist at MC for eight weeks during the 1979-80 academic year. She will perform the aria "If God be for us."

Male and female MC students have at least one thing in common: they all suffer alike in the cafeteria.

18 seniors elected to "Who's Who"

Names of eighteen MC students will be carried in the 1979-'80 edition of "Who's Who Among Students In American Universities and Colleges." The students, who have been choosen as being among the country's most outstanding campus leaders, were selected from thirty-two nominees. Qualities considered in their selection were excellence and sincerity in scholarship, citizenship, service to the college, and promise of future usefulness to business and society. The criterion for excellence in scholarship must be met by the student with a grade point average of 3.0 or above. To be elected for "Who's Who" the candidate must receive at least twenty-five per-cent of the votes cast by members of the senior class and twenty-five per-cent of the votes cast by members of the faculty. The list below joins a distinguished group of students from more than 1,200 institutions of higher learning. Listed after their names are extracurricular activities they have been or still are involved with:

Jenny Andrews	Alpha Lambda Delta, Beta Beta Beta, Worship Committee, Chilhowean, Impressions, Alcoa Schol., Blount Co. Alumni Assoc. Schol.
Charles Brooks	Intramurals, Choir, "Messiah", ECHO, BSA, Tutorial Services.
Nickie Brown	Delta Omicron, Tau Kappa Chi, Wind Ensemble, Choir, "Messiah", Orchestra, Worship Committee, Alpha Gamma Sigma Schol., Davies Fine Arts Schol., Presser Foundation Schol., Oscar Phillip Steele Award.

The girls speak: Guys, keep it clean

by Ruth Reese

What do the women at MC like about their men? The answers to that question would be about equal to the number of women at MC. However, this article will try to give some general opinions in the areas of looks, clothes, and personality.

As far as your personal appearance is concerned, men, all that is asked is for you to be clean and well-groomed. This includes teeth, hands, and nails. Beards and mustaches are welcome as long as they do not become scraggly. After shave is a bonus unless you can be smelled six feet away. Also, please, please, stay in shape. Beer bellies are most undesirable.

As for clothes, most women prefer them casual, but neat. Flannel shirts and jeans are in, but sweat pants and holely football jerseys are out. Remember, also, that three-piece suits have their place.

Personality means more to the women at MC than either of the previous items. Be independent and creative. Be proud of your individuality. Show good manners and refrain from embarrassing or gross remarks. Use your intelligence and common sense. Always be honest with yourself and others. Develop such qualities as maturity, gentleness, sensitivity, dependability, and a sense of humor.

Violators out of their hands

Judicial board's authority hindered in Davis

Davis Hall . . . the late night place to be, or so it seems judging by the number of illegal nocturnal incidents that have occurred thus far. Within eight weeks we've had approximately twenty offenders of various types darken our doorstep. And in not one case has the Hall Judicial Board been allowed to fulfill its purpose.

The fault is partially that of the Board itself. Inexperience in dealing with such matters and poor preparation allowed certain cases to be dimissed on technicalities. But the problem also has roots in the Student Affairs office. In one instance a case was taken from our hands, then returned to us after the 10-day period had elapsed (see III. K. Maryville College Judicial Manual). Other cases were removed from our hands after the Dean was persuaded to do so by certain students who were unwilling to be responsible enough to accept whatever the consequences of their actions might have been.

You might think we're getting our feathers ruffled over nothing. It's not that we're upset because we haven't "nailed" anyone. We're upset because so many violations have occured and will probably continue to occur as long as offenders think they won't be penalized. And that gives rise to another problem: the issue of safety.

A good raid now and then may be essential in keeping thigs alive. But these once-a-week attempts are getting monotonous, and are actually endangering the right of the residents' right to live safely. Really fellas, since you know you won't get punished for violations the least you can do is to consider our safety and devise a means for locking the doors behind you.

Or go ahead, sneak downstairs and leave the door popped open. Better yet, break all the glass out of the front door so that anyone can enter any time they please. We've already had one such late night intruder who was fortunately scared off by the assertiveness of the resident who first encountered him. Unfortunately, he got away with two purses first.

The combination of so many violations and the frustration of not being allowed to deal with them through the Hall judicial system is causing discontentment among many residents. Our discontentment will be alleviated —either within the system or outside the system . . . the natives of Davis grow restless.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Who would think, that "football," as it it called in Europe, would become such a well-liked and well-known sport in the U.S.A.? Well, soccer has become one of the most enjoyable and most talked about sports, here at MC.

Pele was the big promoter of soccer here in the U.S.A., but we've got about 20 young women and men here at MC that do one heck of a job in promoting soccer.

Our team doesn't have a coach though. Apparently, our administration doesn't feel that soccer is important enough, or interesting enough, to warrant the salary of a coach. Our team's good, but with the guidance and drive of an honest-to-goodness coach, they could soar to even higher heights in the world of soccer.

Speaking of higher heights, we ask ourselves, why isn't soccer an intercollegiate sport at MC? Why?, because MC is so football-oriented that they just don't seem to care enough about soccer to let it become an intercollegiate sport. If soccer did become an intercollegiate sport, it would mean more money out of the budget would be allotted for soccer, and less for football. The poor football players wouldn't be able to get new equipment, new uniforms, new helmets, new coaches, new fields, new aides, new buses for those long-distance away games, new shoes, and, new footballs, just because soccer would be made an intercollegiate sport. It's enough to make one vomit at how much money, time, and effort is put into one sport, when with a little less money being pumped into football, we'd be able to grow and expand at MC, in the varieties of sports.

It would seem to be beneficial to a lot of aspiring young women and men if soccer became an intercollegiate sport at MC. These people may have no interest in football, but do have the stamina to be competitive in sports. They may not have the strength in their arms and backs, but they use their legs and their heads (no pun intended) to maintain an exciting and invigorating game. They don't require a lot of equipment either. Perhaps a couple of goal nets, a few soccer balls, and if they're lucky, uniforms. But even so, their uniforms would seem to be much less expensive, than the football uniforms. And what about cheerleaders, too?! So far, the people cheering for soccer are only a handful. Maybe with a few girls and guys out there cheering to support the team in their endeavors, there just might be a bit more support from the fans.

In football, the team takes out their aggressions on the other team, through tackling, and onthe football. Because the soccer team isn't recognized as an intercollegiate sport, they are steering their aggressions away from their game, rather than take them out on the soccer ball. If the soccer team was recognized as an intercollegiate sport, they'd have the respect a team deserves. They'd have the guidance of a coach, which they deserve. And, most of all, they'd have the support of

MC students receive scholarships

Alumni Scholars

Three Maryville College students have been awarded $500 scholarships. Virginia Andrews and Timothy Poole will receive scholarships from the Blount County Alumni Association, and Lawrence B. Sheeley is the recipient of a scholarship from the Greater Chattanooga Alumni Association.

Jenny Andrews, a senior, is majoring in English and is a member of the Math Club, the Hunter Club, and Alpha Lambda Delta Honor Society. For the past two years she has served as art editor of the MC yearbook and is currently assistant editor of Impressions, the campus literary magazine. Miss Andrews is a 1977 graduate of Maryville High and a previous ALCOA Foundation Scholarship winner.

Tim Poole, also a senior, is a graduate of Maryville High and a chemistry major. He is currently secretary of the MC chapter of the American Chemical Society and assists with sports information for the football team.

An MC junior from Chattanooga, Lawrence B. Sheeley majors in political science as a preparation for a career in law. He enjoys athletics, serving as a pitcher for the Scots' baseball team.

Both of the scholarship funds were established last year to provide financial aid for MC students from Chattanooga and Maryville areas. They will be awarded annually for rising juniors and seniors at the college.

Winners of Blount Co. Alumni Association Scholarships: Jenny Andrews and Tim Poole.

Women's Club Scholars

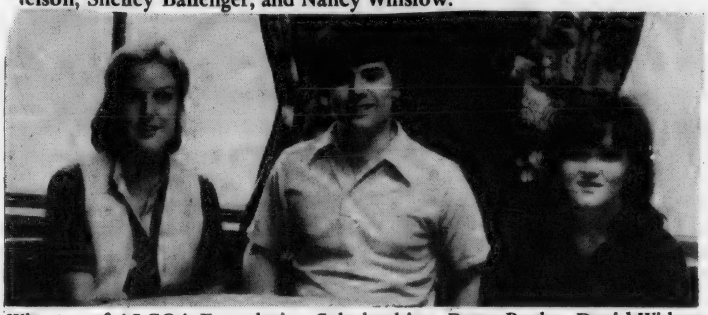
Four Maryville College students have been named as recipients of the MC Faculty Women's Club Scholarship Awards for the 1979-1980 school year.

Recipients for this year include Rodney Q. Nelson, Knoxville; Nancy E. Winslow, Abingdon, VA; Shelley K. Ballenger, Bexley, OH; and James Charles Engel, St. Petersburg, FL.

The $500 awards go annually to students who have exhibited outstanding leadership, campus involvement and financial need. In addition, all recipients must have a G.P.A. of 3.4 or above out of a possible 4.0.

Nelson is a senior history major, member of the basketball team and president of Pi Gamma Mu social sciences honor society.

Miss Winslow, a senior psychology major, is a member of Theta Epsilon social society and Alpha Lambda Delta honor society.



Miss Ballenger, a junior, is an English major. She was editor of the campus literary magazine, Impressions, in 1978-79 and is now serving as editor of the Highland Echo, the student newspaper. She is also a member of Alpha Lambda Delta.

Engel is a junior economics major, assistant secretary of the All College Council, member of the instructional programs committee, a judicial advisor and vice president of his residence hall. He has also won the Bank of Maryville Scholarship.

These awards are made possible by proceeds from the MC Faculty Women's Club's annual Harvest Crafts Fair which was begun in 1971 to raise money for scholarships for MC students. To date 16 scholarships have been awarded; in all, the Club has given over $8,000 to the College's financial aid program.

Winners of Faculty Women's Club Scholarships: Jim Engle, Rodney Nelson, Shelley Ballenger, and Nancy Winslow.

Winners of ALCOA Foundation Scholarships: Betsy Panky, David Widner, and Donna Hurst.

Presidential Scholars

Presidential scholars are a group of students, 37 to be exact, who have met certain academic criteria and are required to maintain a particular academic standard for a scholarship.

To qualify, they met specific stipulations in high school: a minimum 3.25 GPA, combined 1,000 on SAT scores with no less than a 500 on verbal or a composite of 25 on ACT scores, and placed in the top 15 percent of his or her high school class.

The qualified students are then evaluated by the Presidential Scholars Committee consisting of seven members: Dr. Beck, the chairman; Dr. Parker; Mrs. Largen; Mr. and Mrs. Schoen; Dr. Cartlidge; and Dr. Ramger. These seven members select candidates and 10 alternates and offer the candidates scholarships. If the student accepts and comes to Maryville, then he or she is expected to maintain a 3.0 GPA per year in college.

This year there are 24 freshmen and 13 second-year presidential scholars. The scholarships received, which are determined by the office of admissions based on need, range from $500 to $2,000.

They meet together once a month in one of the committee members' homes and attend various programs concentrating on different disciplines. Some of the planned activities are attending concerts and plays at UT, trips to

ALCOA Scholars

Every year the Alcoa Foundation presents three scholarships of $750 each to one of the top five students in each of the freshman, sophomore, and junior classes at Maryville College. The recipients of these scholarships are chosen by their portrayal of scholarly achievement, leadership in extracurricular activities, and a showing of responsible campus citizenship during the year. The three students awarded scholarships for the 1979-80 school year are Donna Lynn Hurst, David Earl Widner, and Elizabeth Ann Pankey.

Miss Hurst, now a senior English major, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hurst of Maryville. She was copyreader for both the Chilhowean and the Highland Echo during the 1978-79 school year. Miss Hurst is also a member of the Alpha Lambda Delta Honor Society.

Widner, a junior history major, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Widner of Alcoa. He is a member of the Band and Orchestra, Alpha Lambda Delta, and the Instructional Program Committee of the ACC. Widner was also a participant in the 1978-79 Tennessee Intercollegiate State Legislature. He is currently serving as editor of Impressions.

Miss Pankey is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Pankey of Birmingham, AL. She is a sophomore English major. She is a member of the MC Concert Choir, Chi Beta, and the social committee, and she served on the judicial committee for her residence hall. Miss Pankey was also vice-president of the freshman class in 1978-79.

Affiliate artist performs

by Darlene Gilman

Ms. Karen Roewade, a former Maryville College affiliate artist, presented a program of vocal music in the FAC Music Hall last Thursday evening. Mrs. Sallie Warth Schoen, an associate professor of music at Maryville College, accompanied Ms. Roewade throughout the concert. Among the selections performed were works by Dr. Arne, Brahms, Puccini, and Wolf-Ferrari. Ms. Roewade, a soprano, proved her versatility by singing in a number of different languages, including English, German, Italian, and Spanish. As an unusual encore, Ms. Roewade performed a Brazilian folk song about a little cat gone astray. Ms. Roewade commented that she was glad to be in Maryville, her second home, and dedicated the entire concert to "you, my friends."

Our current affiliate artist, Faith Esham, is also a soprano. Ms. Esham will be staying at Maryville College for 14days, giving various informances for community and college groups. Ms. Esham will be in Maryville at various times throughout the year.

Ms. Karen Roewade, the first MC affiliate artist, presented a concert in the FAC last Thursday. Mrs. Sallie Schoen accompanied her on the piano.

The Maryville-Alcoa College Community Orchestra has begun its season ticket sales drive for the 1979-80 concert season, according to conductor Gene Taliaferro-Jones (TJ).

"A special student rate has been set up this year," says TJ. "A student ticket for the three regularly scheduled season concerts can be purchased for $1.50, or a third off the regular price." Student tickets are $1.50 per concert if purchased at the door.

"We've also arranged special discounts for MC faculty members. Regular season family tickets are normally $10, but for MC faculty families, these tickets will be $8," adds TJ.

The three regularly scheduled concerts are to be held on Nov. 29, 1979, Feb. 28, 1980, and May 1, 1980. Tickets may be purchased from any college member of MACCO.

lege from 1970-73, will perform the the recitative "Behold I tell you a mystery" and the aria "The trumpet shall sound." Since leaving Maryville in 1973, Steele, also a graduate of Juilliard, has performed as operatic soloist with the Houston Grand Opera, the Kansas City Lyric Opera and the New York City Opera, among others.

Michael Ketcherside, voice instructor at MC and a past performer with the Knoxville Civic Opera, will sing the aria "Every Valley shall be exalted," the recitative "He that dwelleth," and the aria "Thou shalt break." Ketcherside, who joined the MC faculty in 1977, is a graduate of Florida State University with an M.S. degree in voice and opera production. He has vast experience in both performing and directing opera and other musical productions.

Five community soloists will join Miss Esham, Steele and Ketcherside in the "Messiah." Peggy (Mrs. Michael) Sherrod, church soloist at St. Andrews Episcopal Church who is singing in her first "Messiah," will perform the aria "Come unto Him."

The aria "How beautiful are the feet" will be sung by Dorothy (Mrs. Arthur) Bushing, a 1942 graduate; while the aria "I know that my Redeemer liveth" will be sung by Betti (Mrs. Bruce) Greene, a community soloist who has performed in previous "Messiah" presentations and in last spring's production at MC of the comic opera, "Trial by Jury."

Howard Bell, a 1958 MC graduate in music, will sing the recitative "Thus saith the Lord" and the aria "But who may abide." Performing the aria "The people who walk in darkness" is Dr. George Henry, local veterinarian, who is also singing in his first "Messiah."

Trumpet soloist for this year's "Messiah" is Horace Little, former member of the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra.

This year's presentation is dedicated to the memory of William G. Hoffner, 1960 MC graduate and president-elect of the College's Alumni Association who died in an airplane accident in October. Hoffner sang in the "Messiah" chorus as a student and for many years following graduation and had planned to participate again this year.

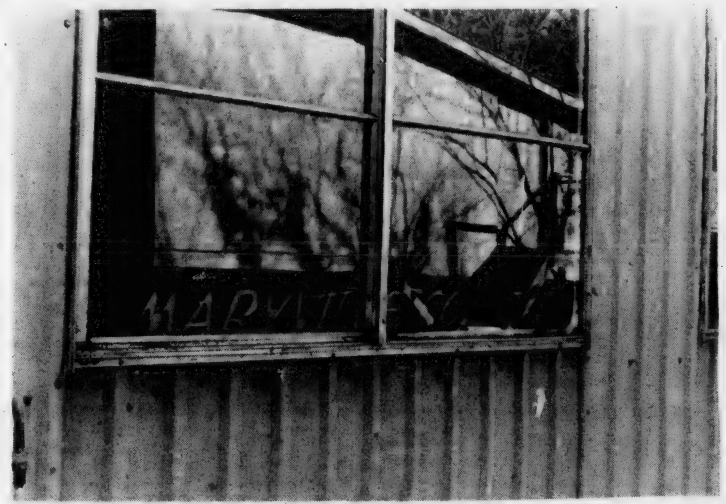
The chorus of college and community participants will be augmented by the Heritage High School Choir under the direction of Kenneth Hawkins, making the "Messiah" chorus over 200 strong.

Whatever happened to Tremont?

The sign on Cade's Cove Road which used to point to "Tremont Environmental Education Center — Operated by Maryville College" is gone. So is the larger sign at the entrance to the deserted Center. The bridge is gated off. The buildings are tightly closed up, and the whole place appears desolate. What happened?

The buildings and bridge at Tremont were condemned over a year ago by public authorities. The Center therefore was used only on a limited basis last year and is completely shut down this year. The Federal Government awarded the National Park Service $154,000 to repair the buildings, and a target completion date of June 1, 1979, was set. But when Park authorities began soliciting bids on construction, they were all far above the allocated amount. Finally, they decided to accept a bid of $238,995 from King Construction Co. of Sevierville. They then returned to the Federal Government to ask for the money necessary to cover the difference. Red tape being what it is, this amount was just recently awarded.

Now it appears that construction may begin sometime in the near future. A "pre-construction conference" was held on Nov. 6 to decide the actual starting date; it will most likely be before Christmas. Construction is expected to take 100 (working) days. Therefore, the buildings at Tremont should be totally rebuilt by next summer- providing, of course, that everything goes as planned.



A contract has not yet been awarded on the condemned bridge. Bridge construction is also dependent upon the receipt of steel necessary for the project.

Once the Tremont Center is rebuilt, it will retain basically the same relationship as before to Maryville College. That is, we will be its official operators, and it will be used mainly to teach environmental awareness to upper-elementary school students. However, some of Tremont's business might be lost due to its long lay-out period. School districts from long distances away especially might find someplace else to take their sixth-graders. Then again, they may not. Until the Center is re-opened, we will not be able to tell how much effect its closing will have on its future use.

The Echo will report on Tremont's construction status sometime this winter.

The bridge leading into the Tremont Center has been condemned and closed off since last fall.

The sign which used to mark Tremont as Maryville College's Enviormental Educational Center now sits inside one of the deserted buildings.

"Life of Bryan" marred by controversy

by Jeff Hayes

The movie "Life of Bryan," a Monty Python spoof on religious movies, is causing a lot of controversy throughout the nation. But this controversy has come to a head in Valdosta, GA, where a group of nine pastors of local churches and the District Attorney's office have secured a restraining order against Ashley Cinemas, the theatre showing the movie. The order was announced on October 29.

When asked why they were prosecuting, one of the ministers, Dr. Hank Russel, said, "The implicatons of the film are devastating to our moral society." But you can't remove a film because of religious objections, so the prosecution used an obscenity charge, compiled with a public nuisance charge.

To win an obscenity charge one must prove the film to be erotic and offensive to community standards. To win a public nuisance charge one must prove the film to be offensive to himself.

But when asked about their charges, the theatre manager, Mr. Andy Baker, said, "In my opinion, and in that of the normal, average American, the movie would turn you on about as much as seeing a dead fish on a beach." He said their basic charge was that the film showed male genitals in an obscene, lewd manner.

But the film shows a man in a full-frontal view for about two seconds as he is looking out of a window, a scene that can hardly be called lewd. It also shows no sexual eroticism whatsoever. Yet the judge had not seen the movie and ruled in favor of the prosecution. He did, however, see it directly afterwards, and expressed that viewing the movie would be of considerable help to the court before the injunction.

The restraining order against Ashley Cinemas means that they can not show the film again until either the trial decides whether or not to ban it, or until it has to be returned to the distributor.

Mr. Baker said that they were certainly going to fight the order and not back down as the prosecution expected.

The fight is not, however, for "Life of Bryan" in particular, but for the theatre's right to show the movies it wishes freely, and not have its selections restricted by a small group that objects. Mr. Baker said, "If we were to back down now, this would give free reign to anyone who objected to an R-rated movie to have it removed. That's not fair to the theatre or to other's right to see them." He said it was a violation of the first amendment to the Constitution.

A date is being set for the trial, but until then the movie is not being shown.

many MC students, their biggest fans.

Making soccer a recognized intercollegiate sport at MC is just in the dream stages right now. But, we're all working diligently in trying to make that dream a reality. This reality would give students a choice. A sports choice for students may open the doors to prospectives for MC. Those students not large enough, or strong enough, or football-oriented enough, for football, may be enticed with MC more, if we have soccer, too.

Ombudsman has open door

Dr. Wally Lewis is the first (and current) Maryville College Ombudsman.

by David Mitchell

Dr. Lewis, history teacher, is currently occupying the position of College Ombudsman. His job is to act as a mediator for those who may encounter problems with one of the offices on campus. Dr. Lewis has taught at MC since 1962. During that time he has served on the judicial council and other college orgnaizations. I interviewed Dr. Lewis in his office and asked him about his new job as College Ombudsman.

H.E.—Dr. Lewis when did your appointment as College Ombudsman come about?

Dr. Lewis—This came about last spring. Dr. Anderson mentioned it. It was after the spring break. You remember the uproar that came along after spring term came. It was one of his responses to it. It had been talked about before, about four or five years before that

H.E.—Is this the first time it has been enacted?

Dr. Lewis—The previous administrations sort of started the idea and discarded it. It was Dr. Anderson's idea that we at least try it out and see.

H.E.—What do you feel is the most important aspect of your job?

Dr. Lewis—To be available if a student runs into a problem with the dorm or particularly with the front office. If they feel they are not getting an adequate answer or are not getting an answer they are to bring it to me and I'm supposed to pursue it.

H.E.—What sort of problems have been brought to your attention?

Dr. Lewis—Ah, scheduling of social events. Essentially some academic things.

H.E.—Have you gotten any feedback on the Ombudsman post?

Dr. Lewis—No immediate response at all. It was not until last term that I began getting a couple of people. I do not expect mass business in the hundreds. I would hope that is not the case. My office should be looked upon as a last resort.

H.E.—How were you chosen for College Ombudsman?

Dr. Lewis—I was sort of coopted. Dr. Anderson spoke to some other faculty members and then me. He asked me if I would like to be the first one. He told me to think it over. We went back and drafted a rough draft of the duties.

H..E.—Do you have a special box number?

Dr. Lewis—That has not happened yet. I have to go see Dr. Anderson this term about that. It would be good to have a way to get into touch with me. Especially if a person wanted to remain anonymous. I have a box of my own, but I think we need a special one. Might be an advantage.

H.E.—How do you see things materializing so far?

Dr. Lewis—I'm still in the process of inventing as I go. Takes a little while. Not moving nearly as fast as I would like to be.

H.E.—Do you foresee using much authority in your new position?

Dr. Lewis—I'm certainly not out to build an empire. I certainly do not want to generate more work for myself.

H.E.—In concluding this interview with you, Dr. Lewis, I would like to know what you hope to show over-all in taking this post?

Dr. Lewis— I would like to see it as a useful position. It is something a faculty member can do in his spare time, if he can squeeze it in.

SLIGHTLY UPDATED WEDDING VOWS FOR THE 80's

Will you, John, take this woman to be your lawfully wedded wife? Will you comfort and keep her in sickness and in health? Will you provide her with credit cards and a 4-bedroom, 2½ bath home with central air and professional decorating, a Mercedes, two weeks in the Bahamas every spring and a week skiing in Colorado after Christmas? Will you paint the house each spring and make sure the lawn is mowed? Will you try to remember the little things that mean so much, like flowers on her birthday, kind words when she's had a rough day, and an occasional, "Gee, honey, you look pretty nice today." Will you be understanding when she is tired, headachy, or on "those days," when she is pregnant, when she feels ugly, or when she has a big pimple on her chin? Will you come home from work on time or at least call when you're going to be late? Will you not watch football all week end and drink beer all night? Will you not be such a pig when you shave and shower? Will you listen to long stores about kids' deeds, colds, friends, cancerous aunts, schools, houses, drapes, clothes, hair, sore feet, religion, or decorator checkbook covers?

Will you, Jane, have this man to be your lawfully wedded husband? Will you honor him, comfort him, and keep him in sickness and in health? Will you do all the dirtier things around the house, like clean the bathrooms, change diapers, empty the kitty litter, clean up after the puppy, scrub the oven and under the kitchen sink? Will you balance the checkbook and pay the bills? Will you pick out the carpeting, drapes, wallpaper, sheets, bedspreads, kids' clothes, and Christmas cards? Will you do the shopping, drop the shirts off at the cleaners and remember to pick them up? Will you have patience on the occasions when he cannot perform? Will you put up with his loud, crude, and rude friends, remember his mother's birthday, admire his muscles, laugh at his jokes? Will you wear your clothes season after season, go easy on his money, avoid using his razor on your legs, and give him the good side of the bed?

For as much as John and Jane have consented together in holy wedlock and 1915 big season for Scots

(This is the first in a series of articles on past incidents in sports at MC. The research and quotes in this feature are taken from Ken D. Kribbs' History of Athletics at Maryville College, 1866-1968, Mangrum Printers, 1969.)

The 1915 Maryville Fighting Scots football team was the most successful squad ever to do the Orange and Garnet. Compiling a 6-0-1 record, the 1915 squad did not yield a single point to an opponent. The tie was a scoreless affair with Tusculum College. The team was coached by the College's first physical education director, Arthur Samuel Kiefer, who preceeded the legendary Lombe Scott Honaker.

Rolfe M. Rankin gave this description of the team in the school's yearbook: "It was not a team of stars, although there were men of that caliber on it. Rather was it a well-balanced machine, in which the defensive out shone the offensive, as the uncrossed goal line would indicate, but the offensive was also of great power, as the total score of 248 plainly shows. The success in a large measure was due to Coach Kiefer and his system of training and conditioning the men. They did not always hope to win when they went into a game, but they were always sure that it would not be because every man had not given his all."

The Scots rolled over their first two opponents, Knoxville Central and Washington College, before meeting the University of Chattanooga (later UT-C) in Maryville. Rankin gives a very colorful account of this match: "The third game was the surprise of the season, for the mighty Moccasins from the University of Chattanooga, led by the famous Speigel, who were mentioned as contenders for the Southern championship, came to give the Highlanders a few of the fine points of football. However, when the dust of the battle had settled, the dreaded snake lay withering on the field with two large and beautiful knots neatly fied in its battled corpse. It was then we awoke to the realization that we were represented by an eleven of marked merit."

The next opponents were all conquered in what must have been equally dramatic fashion, with the exception of the scoreless Tusculum game, which was played in a mudbath. The highlight of the season came on Thanksgiving Day in Morristown, when the Highlanders mutilated the hated Eagles of Carson-Newman, by the incredible score of 99-0. Thus ended the greatest season in MC's rich football history.

"Macho Moms" give net to tennis team

by Kathy Fitzell

The "Macho Moms," an organization consisting of 12 of the best women tennis players in Maryville, donated a new net to the athletic department recently. The motivation for this gift stems from the "Moms" interest in the women's tennis team here at the College, and also from their gratefulness to the College for the use of the courts when they played this summer. The members of the club that worked to provide the new net are: Jo Ann Garner, Marty Calloway, Lawana Harper, Sylvia Erwin, Kay Henderson, Peggy Crowder, Dusty Bowen, Ann Anderson, Cathie Armfield, Susan Hitch, Mary Conia, Lynne Haworth, and Caroline Haynes. The "Macho Moms" help with Maryville College's tennis team by coming out and hitting with the team. Caroline Haynes stressed the fact that there is an increasing interest in the women's team by the town of Maryville.

Last year, besides their matches, the "Macho Moms" sponsored the Scots Road Race and the Fowl Play Tournament.

Scots outrank Generals

The girls' volleyball team goes to state tournaments this weekend. Kathy Spurlock, Janet Rickle, and Rachel Reese are three of the Lady Scots looking for victory.

Maryville rolled up 383 yards total offense and scored six touchdowns. The Fighting Scot's defense scored two other touchdowns to lead MC to a 55-21 victory over Washington &Lee (W.&L.).

Maryville scored after Washington & Lee was unable to move the ball following the opening kickoff. Starting the drive at their own 38-yard line, the Scots penetrated deep into Generals' territory on Alvin Nance's 18-yard run down to the 7-yard line. Two plays later, Dave Kibben kept the ball and swept the right side and scored from the 5. Carey Starnes added the extra point and the Scots led 7-0.

The defense, which seemed almost unbendable all day, forced the Generals to punt the ball away after its second possession. Starting the drive at their own 43-yard line, the Scots moved to W.&L.'s 49-yard line. On a second down and 5, Alvin Nance swept right, reversed after a defensive surge, and swept left to score on a 49-yard run. Although an illegal procedure was called to wipe out the tally, it was Nance again two plays later who scored on a 44-yard screen pass from Mathis. The point after was good and the Scots led 14-0.

After another W.&L. punt the Scots took possion of the ball at their own 35-yard line. Driving the ball down to the opposition's 36, it was Bill Wheatley scoring on a Dave Kibben pass. The extra point attempt by Starnes was good and the Scots' lead increased to 21-0 at the end of the first quarter.

The second quarter saw the Fighting Scots' defense score the next two touchdowns. The first came on a blocked punt by Keith Martin and speedy Steve Moffit on a spectacular 57-yard punt return and the Scots built a 34-0 halftime lead.

The Scots received the second half kick and it took the offense two plays before Ken Adair scored on a 65-yard run. The extra point was good and the Scots had a comfortable 41-0 lead. W.&L. did manage to score twice in the third quarter on a 9-yard pass from Rich Hachenburg to Sid Farr and on a 1-yard run by Pat McGuire to make the score 41-14 at the end of the third period.

The fourth quarter saw the Scots score twice, both coming from freshman Melvin Douglas on a 1-yard run and on a 30-yard screen pass from freshman Mike Wortman. Both extra points by Starnes were good and the Scot's lead was a tremendous 55-14. The Generals did tally once more but all was in vain as MC won 55-21.

Ken Adair was the leading ground carrier (123 yards on 10 carries), and freshman Melvin Douglas was the leading scorer on touchdowns. Pete Barron, Tony Ierulli, Keith Martin, and Larry Wright all recovered fumbles for the Scots which proved most costly for the Generals as the defense held them to 99 yards rushing. The Scots' record is now 6-2. They play their final game of the season next Saturday against Centre College at Heritage High School at 7:30 PM.

Football intramural playoffs show spunk

All that was lacking was a crowd of about 70,000. The intensity, the enthusiasm, and the desire to win were very noticeable as the intramural play-offs got underway.

The Mongolian Stompers, who went undefeated through the season, drew a bye the first round and would face the winner between S.O.M.F. and the team of Rick Holland. S.O.M.F. lost all hopes for a win this season as they lost by a score of 17-7.

In the most exciting game of the play-offs, the team of David Shankle defeated AMF in double overtime by a score of 16-6. With Shankle leading 6-0 and less than a minute to play, Rusty Palmer intercepted a pass and ran it to the 10-yard line before being stopped. With time running out at less than 10 seconds, Palmer caught a touchdown pass to tie the score at 6-6. With a chance to win the game, AMF missed the extra point conversion which sent the game into over-time. The first over-time produced no score, but the second saw Shankle's team score twice while holding AMF scoreless and taking the victory by a score of 16-6.

In the other semi-final game, the team of Rick Holland fell short to the undefeated Stompers in the 10th round by a T.K.O. score of 18-6. Holland's team took a early lead of 6-0 but could score no more as the Stompers scored three times to take the victory.

In the championship game it looked like an upset was in the making. David Shankle's team came ready to play and had the ball inside the Stompers 5-yard line twice in the first half but could only lead at half-time 6-0.

The second half was all Stompers as they put their game plan into action and scored three touchdowns against the penalty plagued team of Shankle, who could only score one touchdown in the last half. The Stompers took first place by a score of 21-13.

The season ended with the shaking of hands and telling each other to wait till the basketball season starts.

N.A.O.W.wins playoff against Wasted Again

There was exciting competition this past week as five teams battled for the women's intramural soccer championship.

In the first game of the playoffs N.A.O.W.s defeated Dorm I team 1-0, as Vadonna Moffet scored a goal in the first quarter of the game. The second game was played by Wasted Again and Davis Team. Wasted Again won 4-2 after goals were scored by Beverly Fox, Bev Woeber, Jenny (Shake) Vance, and Wendy Magee (assisted by Stacy Brubaker). The third game was played by NAOWs and Rainbow Connection. Vadonna Moffet again was the star by making two goals and leading N.A.O.W.s on to victory by score of 2-0. In the final championship game N.A.O.W.s and Wasted Again battled to the very end. Jill Kinsinger scored in the first quarter for N.A.O.W.s and at halftime the score remained 1-0. Then, in the fourth quarter Nancy Winslow kicked the ball into the goal for Wasted Again, tieing the score 1-1. An over-time period had to be played. Cathy Culpepper then scored two goals and Vadonna Moffet scored one goal, ending the championship game: N.A.O.W.s-4, Wasted Again-1. Congratulations N.A.O.W.s!!

Intramural Women's basketball will start next week.

THE NEWS OF MARYVILLE COLLEGE, MARYVILLE, TN.

Vachel Lindsay Festival slated

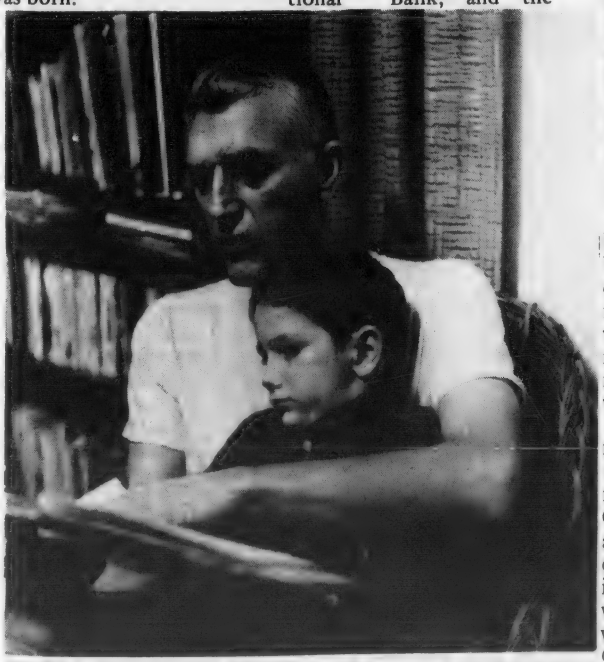
Vachel Lindsay was born November 10, 1879, in Springfield, Illinois. He was educated by the Springfield Public School System. From there he went on to Hiram College, Ohio, and to art schools in Chicago and New York.

Lindsay, uncertain as to whether he was an artist or poet, took to the road as a vagabond, trading rhymes for necessities. He soon developed into a lecturer, traveling to central Illinois, New York, and New England. Finally he became a reciter of his own poetry. During the period between World War I and the Great Depression Lindsay recited his poems to well over one million people, in every one of the then forty-eight states in the Union.

Vachel Lindsay died on December 5, 1931, in the same residence where he was born.

Maryville College and the surrounding communities are sponsoring a festival, co-directed by Herma Cate and Elizabeth Fowler, commemorating the 100th anniversary of his birth. Festival activities are planned in keeping with Lindsay's ideas of community involvement, encouragement of the Arts, civic improvement, ecumenical religion and individual expression. The festival activities follow.

From Nov. 5-20 an invitational exhibit of art work by local artists will be on display in the Maryville College Fine Arts Gallery. Mrs. Martha Wright, president of the Blount Artists Guild, will be the director.



From Nov. 12-16 copies of some of Lindsay's drawings, personal letters, and books shall be on display in the lobbies of the Bank of Maryville, Blount National Bank, and the Citizens Bank.

On Thursday, Nov. 15, at 4:00 p.m., "I remember Vachel" will be held in the Maryville College Fine Arts Center lounge. Anyone who has ever heard Lindsay recite his poetry is invited to share in the reminiscences. Dr. Dennis Camp, curator of the Vachel Lindsay Home and associate professor of English at Sangamon State University, Springfield, Illinois, will be presiding.

Mrs. John Nowell will be impersonating Nellie Vieira, a Pulaski, TN. teacher who knew Lindsay during her college years, and will share some of the insights of the young woman to whom Lindsay wrote nearly 100 letters.

Then at 8:00 a poetry reading shall be held in the FAC. Presiding over the reading will be Dr. Charlotte Beck, who will also be reading some of her own poetry. Other readers include Alvin Baker, Maryville; Ruth Cartlidge, Maryville Jeff Clark, Atlanta, GA.; Steven Fernandez, Jackson, N. J ; Philip Merrill, Antioch, TN.; Prof. Don Vachel Lindsay's son, Nicholas, reads some of his father's poetry to his own son. Nicholas will be one of the featured speakers at the Lindsay festival this weekend.

The 47th annual performance of Handel's "Messiah" at MC took place last Sunday. The Chorus, directed by Harry Harter, was over 200 strong. The featured soloist was Faith Esham.

The ACC meeting on Wednesday, November 7, opened with the reading of the minutes and six committee reports. The committee on Residental Life is working to find solutions for emergency situations and safety hazards. The Food Committee has been trying to get the serving lines better organized and has been looking at equipment to help improve the quality of the food itself. World Concerns is sponsoring several programs on campus, including the Great Decisions program. Otner committees that reported were the Review Board, Elections Committee, and Intercollegiate Athleties.

The meeting also included debates on "Who's Who", the recommendations of the Judicial Task Force, and the possible installation of a Maryville College Honor System. The main objection against "Who's Who" was that it is a false honor spurred on by publishing companies who then sell "Who's Who" booklets to the honored students. No conclusion was reached by the ACC on this subject. After arguments on several points concerning the recommendations of tne Judicial Task Force, the ACC decided to delay voting until the recommendations were written into better English. As for the Maryville College Honor System, the ACC plans to take steps to determine student interest in such a program.

Is cheating really a problem?

Recently, concern has been expressed as to the problem of cheating at Maryville College. Various students have been found cheating on tests, stealing other students' papers, and copying from published works (plagarism). Although cheating has always (and will always) exist, Dr. Alfred Perkins, the Academic Dean, has had to deal with more cases of cheating this year than he had to at the same time last year.

The ACC is currently considering the establishment of some type of honor system to counteract any cheating problem which may exist at Maryville. Several types of honor systems are used at various other colleges and universities around the country; the strictest are generally those at military schools and many Ivy League schools. Most of these institutions have employed an honor system from the time of their foundation, and have grown up around it. Since MC's adoption of an honor system would come so late in its history, there is some question as to the ease of its adoption.

Under one form of honor system being considered, a teacher giving a test would be required to leave the room for the duration of the test. Any student who observes another student cheating would theoretically be obligated to turn that student in. If he did not, he would assume responsibility for the act of cheating equal to that of the cheater himself. A very high penalty, possibly immediate dismissal, would be levied if a student was convicted of cheating. Other types of honor systems would be somewhat different, but all would place responsibility for the reporting of cheaters on the shoulders of other students, and all would mandate serious penalties.

The ACC at this point is not completely convinced as to the necessity of establishing an honor system at Maryville. They are also unsure of how strict such a system, should it be imposed, ought to be. They are asking that students consider cheating at MC, determining whether they believe it to be a serious, prevalent problem or not. If a large number of students do see cheating as a significant difficulty, the possibility of an honor system will be discussed further. If, on the other hand, they do not, and so long as the occurence of cheating does not increase tremendously, the honor system idea will probably be rejected.

All students interested in expressing their opinion on this matter are asked to address their response to P O Box 2375.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

This letter is in response to last week's letter to the editor. I would like to commend the person that wrote it for a total display of ignorance. As a new student here, this person does not seem to understand what is going on. As a senior here at Maryville College, I hope I can set this person (and those she has confused)straight.

Last year during spring term a survey was issued to the students regarding the intercollegiate sports that MC should offer. Women's basketball came in first, with football coming in second. Soccer did not receive enough student votes to be considered a sport. It is quite obvious that the student body did not show any paramount interest in soccer. This is one reason why soccer is still a club. There is another reason why Maryville College cannot have a varsity soccer team. According to Title IX of the Equal Rights Ammendment, we cannot have another men's sport on this campus until we first have another women's varsity sport. The major reason, however, is the lack of funds to support a soccer team.

I agree that soccer should be an intercollegiate sport here. I wish we could make every sport a varsity one, but we cannot. It was stated in last week's letter to the editor that money should be taken out of the football budget. If the person who wrote the letter had gone to ask about the money put into the football program, she would have found out that the budget has been reduced 20% since 1975. With inflation the way it is, there is not much money in our football program. It was stated that new buses were purchased for road trips, new equipment was bought, that there were new fields, and that new aides were paid. MC has had the same bus for the last four years; I truly wish we had a new bus for those trips. The new equipment and uniforms were purchased. The equipment was old and battered and needed replacing. Anybody with common sense knows that faulty equipment could possibly result in injury to players. The uniforms we had were three years old and needed replacing. The football team has been practicing and playing their games on the same fields for the past four years. There are no new fields.

Maryville College had five football coaches this season. Three of these coaches are full-time, and the other two were volunteers. One coach worked at night and coached here during the day. The other one goes to school here. MC did not pay for new coaches.

It is obvious that this person did not know what she was talking about. The football team does not have all the money that we were led to believe through last week's letter to the editor. We have more people out for football than any sport here. Naturally it will take more money to be successful. I am sure that there are not too many people who would say we were not successful. I wish the soccer club luck in getting a coach; they are entitled to one. However, the football team is not responsible for the absence of a soccer coach.

Sincerely,
Jimmy Miller

CIV focuses on death

Last week's CIV meeting on death and dying was led by two Maryville College alumni, Phyllis and Steve Henderson. Steve, who is a kidney transplant patient, discussed how the dying person must make changes and accept his condition. Acceptance, Steve said, is a mixture of pain, joy, weakness, and strength. One must learn to accept that he is not the same as he once was and cannot do everything he used to. Many questions arise that must be dealt with. The depression that one feels when searching for the answers to these questions should not be feared because it is a normal response and one that has to be felt. The way the patient looks at himself must be based on who he is instead of what he can do. One way in which friends can help the dying person is to talk about and share his experiences.

Phyllis, as Steve' wife, talked about the role of the family member. She said that when something is wrong, most people pretend that everything is normal. Instead of ignoring the problem, however, sharing the fear that is felt makes life less lonely. Grief begins as soon as it is learned that the patient is dying. The family member must grieve the loss of fantasies and security. He must also deal with who he is without the other person. The survivors need love and care as much as the dying member. A feeling of having no control over the situation, anger, and uncertainty are part of the family's life. One stage the family goes through is that of resignation or trying to end the relationship so it will not hurt as much when he dies.

One overall theme that emerged from the discussion was that whatever one feels honestly, although it may be frightening, is normal and should not be feared.

The speakers will be introduced by Dr. Nathalia Wright, a distinguished professor of English at the University of Tennessee and President of the South Atlantic Modern Language Association, and by Dr. Robert Drake, novelist and Associate Professor of English at UT.

The conclusion of the festival will be "An Evening with Vachel Lindsay." The evening will include a radio play by George S. Bonn, presented by the Playmakers; "Daniel," a

Lady Scots triumphant in state tournament

by Birdie Hill

The Lady Scots' volleyball team's dream came true this past weekend when they won the Division III State Volleyball championship for the first time. The Lady Scots went into the tournament seated No. 1 with a 30-8 record, and they came out of the tournament with a 34-8 record.

The first game brought MC and Milligan together. The Lady Scots played well, winning 15-4, 15-3. Next they faced Southwestern. Maryville hadn't played SW yet this year, and lost the first game 10-15. They came back with two more wins; 15-7, 15-5, and won the match.

The V-ballers advanced to the semi-finals on Saturday when they played Bryan, an old rival. The Lady Scots downed them 15-12, 15-10. The lady Scots then had only one team left to beat, and that was Vanderbelt. The team knew this game would either make them or break them - and it made them winners - The State champs. They defeated Vandy 15-11, 15-11 and captured the first place trophy.

Coach Brown, along with the whole team, was very pleased with the victory. She stated, "It was very much a team effort. We played well together and played as a whole team. I feel this was a big factor in our victory."

Three Maryville College players were named to the All-Tournament Team. Freshman Rachael Reese, Sophmore Donna Owens,, andCaptain Carol Neal.

This Thursday the Lady Scots will leave for Radford College in Virginia for the regional volleyball tournament. The state winners Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Tennessee will be represented. It is a double elimination tournament. The lady Scots play Midway from Kentucky at 4:00 on Friday.

The top team from Regionals will advance to the Nationals, which will be held at Occidental College in Los Angeles, California. Here the top volleyball teams in the United States will meet. Coach Brown is very optimistic about her team. She feels her girls are ready to play. "It will be very competitive, but I'm very confident that we do have a chance."

MC runs over Centre 14-6

By Dave Ierulli

The fighting Scots ended their season by beating Centre College of Kentucky 14-6, extending their home winning streak to eighteen games. The Scots raised their record to 7-2 this season and 15-3 over the past two years under the helm of Coach Steve Fickert.

Maryville's offense gained 205 yards rushing and 54 yards passing but could only manage 14 points for the game as penalties and fumbles plaqued the offense near the goal line.

Maryville scored twice before Centre in the on Alvin Nance's 8-yard run in the first quarter and on Steve Moffit's 56-yard punt return (his third for the season). Both extra points by Starnes were good and Maryville took a 14-0 lead to the lockerroom at halftime.

However, it was the defense who kept the Scots ahead in the second half, as the offense seemed to sputter at the goal line. Interceptions by Tony Ierulli and Jon Watson, and a fumble recovery by John Driscoll, kept the Scots ahead. Centre did manage to schore late in the fourth quarter on a 1-yard run by Mike Shannon. The 2-point conversion attempt failed and the Scots went on to win by the score of 14-6.

Ken adair was the leading rusher, gaining 169 yards on the ground. Alvin Nance recorded 58 yards to combine for a total of 227 yards rushing for the Maryville offense.

It was a good year for the Scots, although it was marked by some disappointing losses. Nevertheless, all should be congratulated for hard work and for a fine season--a season dedicated to a winning tradition!

MC delegates attend TISL conference

By Mike Weiss

College students from all over Tennessee converged on the State Capitol in Nashville last week for the twelfth Tennessee Intercollegiate State Legislature (T.I.S.L.). The Maryville College delegation consisted of Larry Bidwell, a junior political science major, and Mike Weiss, a sophomore History major.

T.I.S.L. is essentially a mock session of the General Assembly and also a lobbying group for issues concerning Tennessee's college students. It consists of a House of Representatives and a Senate, which meet in the actual legislative chambers and vote on bills drawn up by members, submitting passed legislation to the Tennessee General Assembly for consideration.

The four-day convention consisted of legislative sessions, committee meetings, election of officers, speeches by prominent state politicians, and of course, some good old-fashioned "politicking." The MC delegates served on the Committee on Transportation and Energy. which considered favorably a Gas Rationing bill and a bill to provide for the use of "Gasohol" in state vehicles. Other bills debated and acted upon on the floors of the Assembly were: a bill to increase the penalty for littering, a bill to monitor the ethics of state politicians, a handgun control bill, a resolution to abolish the electoral college in favor of popular vote in presidential elections, and many more.

Bidwell served in the Senate, Weiss in the House, and both agreed that T.I.S.L. was a highly exciting and rewarding experience.

Ken Caraway.

All sessions are open to the public. No admission is to be charged.

The festival is funded in part by the National Endowment for the Humanities through a $3,865.00 Grant from the Tennessee Committee for the Humanities, Inc.

Lady Scots volley top games

by Birdie Hill

Volleyball season is over for the Lady Scots. In the course of their three-and-a-half month season not only did the team win the AIAW Division III Tennessee State and Region II tournaments, but, holding a 38-8 record, they became the first team ever in the history of Maryvill College to go to a national competition.

Teamwork, hustle, and never-say-die attitude were just a few of the characteristics Coach Brown's team possessed this past year. On the way to national competition they faced a tougher schedule than last year, but won the Maryville Invitational Tournament, placed second in the Emory and Henry Invitational, and won the AIAW Division III Tennessee State and Regional II Tournaments.

In the State competition held at Maryville Nov. 9-10, the Lady Scots defeated Vanderbilt in the finals 15-11, 15-11. In regional play at Radford College in Virginia Nov. 16-17, the Lady Scots were the only team to go undefeated. The MC volleyballers took the title in a thrilling come-from-behind victory over Mary Washington College of Virginia 16-14, 15-11.

The thrill of a lifetime came for the team when they left for the Nationals in Los Angeles, California. The tournament was held Dec. 6-8 at Occidental College. Sixteen of the top teams from across the country were present. The team, along with Coach Brown, were excited about playing in the Nationals. Coach Brown stated, "Our goal at the beginning of the year was to win the state championship – and look how far we have come."

Since volleyball is a year-round sport in California, it was no wonder that five of the teams competing were from California. The level of the volleyball was very high in the competition. Although the Lady Scots

Only in Tennessee...

KNOXVILLE TN (CPS) Ever wonder what happens to all the liquor university police confiscate at football games? Despite all the speculation about wild post-game police parties, University of Tennessee officers claim they shoot the stuff.

"You've got to destroy it some way," university Police Chief Hugh Griffin told the UT Beacon. "We can't drink it, and it sure is effective to shoot it."

Deputy Chief Ed Yovella, however, has a hard time shooting at such things. "I'm ordinarily a pretty good shot, but I got there and I couldn't hit a thing. My hand was shaking."

"One of the fellas said he thought it was the hardest thing he'd ever done."

The year's biggest haul was at the Nov. 24 Notre Dame-Tennessee game, at which officers confiscated 125 bottles of liquor. After setting up the bottles as targets on nearby Cherokee Bluff, three officers took 30 minutes to shoot them all. "It was a lot of whiskey," Yovella reports. "We had that whole hillside smelled up."

A fire engine remained in front of Sutton most of the day Friday while a chemical fire filled the building with fumes.

Chemical fire fumigates Sutton

Dr. Terry Bunde noticed a peculiar smell in Sutton Science Center when he arrived at 7:00 a.m. last Friday, January 11. It seemed to be coming from under the door of 216, the chemical stockroom. When he tried to open the door, the fumes were so strong as to make entry physically impossible.Obviously, something was very wrong.

Dr. Bunde called Hugh Crawford, who notified the local fire department. Bunde also called the maintenance department and had them shut off the venilation system in Sutton. The fumes were already circulating throughout the building.

The fire department arrived with eight men and four trucks – an impressive, if unnecessary, showing. With oxygen masks on, one fireman and Bunde were able to get into the stockroom. They soon discovered that the source of the fumes was the locked wooden cabinet which housed the more dangerous inorganic chemicals.

Two of the three bottles of phosphorous in the cabinet had caught on fire. Phosphorus, stored as a solid, ignites when brought into contact with oxygen. It is therefore kept in bottles of oil. Apparently, the oil in these bottles had either evaporated or leaked out. Because the oxygen level of the cabinet was so low, the fire had merely been smouldering, probably for quite some time. When the doors were opened, however, it burst into flames.

Because of the nature of other chemicals in the cabinet, it was unsafe to extinguish the fire with either water or carbon dioxide. The cabinet had to be emptied, which took some time. Meanwhile, a man from the Hazardous Materials unit in Knoxville was sent for. When he arrived, he dumped the phosphorus into a bucket of water, creating a phosphoric acid solution. This was then dumped in the college woods into a pit approximately five feet in depth. As the phosphorus was still burning on the surface of the water (though without visible flame), the pit was left open.

Dr. Bunde feels that, in a way, Maryville College was lucky. "The damage was minimal," he stated. "It

Decade of the unknown

No predictions for the 80's here

Seventeen days ago, the world (by the Christian reckoning) ushered in not only a new year but a new decade. Much has been made of our transition from the 70's to the 80's, as though a simple step in numbering could change the way we think and act and feel. There seems to be no end to speculation about what the 1980's will hold. Some still see visions of Jetson-like utopias, complete with interplanatary space travel and total computerization. Many others now prophesy "the end of affluence" – the cutting back of consumption and automation and a return to a simpler way of life. We are told that we are on the frontiers of major chemical, biological, astrological, physiological, technological, psychological, you-name-it-logical breakthroughs, all of which will drastically alter the state of our lives. Some foresee war, though all fervently hope for peace. There are many gruesome, disheartening predictions. This is a prime-time viewing period for pessimists. And indeed, optimism seems hard to justify these days.

Oh, it's a wonderful world we're inheriting, isn't it? I suppose that's how every generation feels – as though its fathers purposely confounded and confused things to the brink of hopelessness, and then said, "Happy New Year, kid." "Why thanks, Dad, and after I solve the crisis in Iran I think I'll lower gasoline prices and then do away with welfare fraud. OK, Dad?" I suppose our kids will think no better of us – unless, of course, we give them reason to.

Speculation is idleness. The 80's are an unplayed hand in the great poker game of life. Not undealt, mind you, but unplayed. The cards are out, and the bets are coming in from all sides, but the actual moves are as yet unmade – and the score, therefore, is unknowable. At this stage in the game, anything can happen.

The thing to do now is to play as best we know how, trusting both our cards and our ability to handle them. It may not be easy, and at times not much fun, but it is both our obligation and our redemption. This next decade will be shaped according to how we use the power and opportunities in our possession.

So what will the 80's hold? Your guess is as good as mine. At the present time they stand blank before us. All one can say is that come hell or high water, they too will pass.

Here's hoping for the best. Have a happy new year.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,

Well, next year Maryville College is going to start charging for C.I.V. credit. This new rule should fit snugly into the plan for raising $5,000,000 over the next few years. Over the years the administration must have become convinced that Maryville College students would gladly pay $280.00 rather than go through the trauma of taking tests or doing research. But that's only an assumption, and it may be an unfair one since the C.I.V credit will be optional. But I hope none of you will encourage next year's freshmen to sign one of those C.I.V. cards before they know fully the ramifications of committing the act. They will be in essence committing themselves to a $280.00 contract. And since it is assumed that all our students spend their evenings reading the catalog from cover to cover, they will be held liable for their immaturity.

I'm beginning to feel glad that I will not be here when people start complaining and the careful explanations are made. For myself, I will not have to go through the trauma of once again reading how our wize administrators considered the problem (that's the part that comes after you invent the problem), and concluded that charging for C.I.V. credit was an unavoidable necessity. And Thank God that I will not have to hear once again the horrors that "other small colleges across the country" are inflicting on their impoverished students. I am sure most of you will feel lucky enough as it is.

There's no telling what Maryville College will be charging for in another four years. There doesn't seem to be anything left. But this school has always employed creative people. Personally, I'm going to put my reputation on the line and predict pay toilets. So if you trust my judgement, you'll start hording those Susan B. Anthony dollars no one else is interested in accepting–yet!

Robert McCulloch

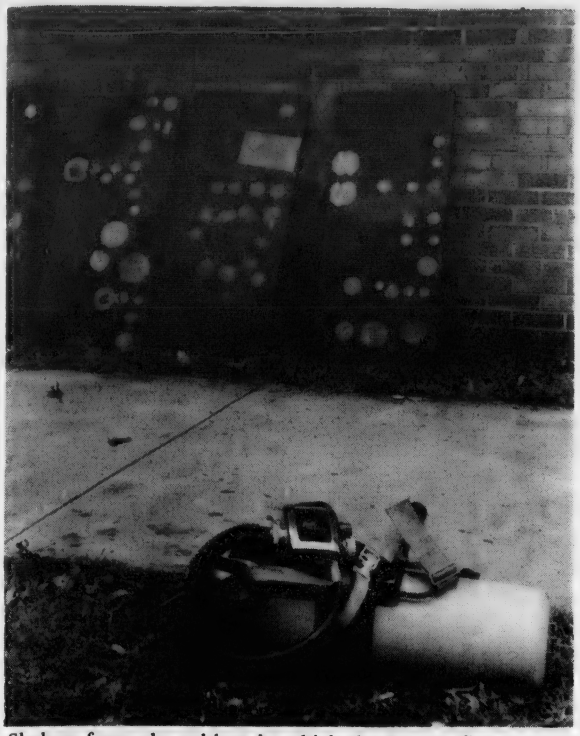
Echoes from the past...



Ten years ago –

A non-violent student protest was staged at UT on January 15, 1970. The students (about 1500 of them) were protesting the appointment of Dr. Ed Boling as UT's new president, who had been appointed "without any attempt to ascertain student support." The protest was, for the most part, organized and orderly; although city police arrived "in full riot gear–helmets, sticks, gas masks, and riot guns," no damage was reported. Some students threw snowballs, four policemen and one student suffered minor injuries, and 22 people were arrested, facing a charge of one to ten years imprisonment (from the April 10, 1970 Highland Echo).

Ethics of energy featured

Dr. Douglas E. Sturm, professor of religion and politcal science at Bucknell University, spoke on the topic, "Techne and Telos: The Energy Question and the Limitations of Liberalism," last Wednesday, January 10, in the FAC music hall. He is the first of three speakers brought to Maryville College by a grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation for faculty and curriculum. The knowledge gained through these seminars will aid in the development of an interdisciplinary ethics course to be offered to selected seniors this spring at MC.

Dr. Sturm focused on the energy crisis as a basic problem viewed in three different lights: that of the technician, the socialist, and the conservationist. He noted that in order to arrive at a resolvable solution, each person must view the problem from a holistic perspective.

An underlying issue of the enrgy crisis is the lifestyle of the American society, particularly its love affair with the automobile. Branching from this idea, Dr. Sturm pointed toward three aspects of our society which included corporate, technological, and liberal viewpoints. To conclude, Dr. Sturm pointed to the ethical concepts of utility, justice, and community and their relation to the good life.

Guyana art displayed

An exhibit of Guyana jungle children's arts and crafts will be displayed in the Fine Arts Center Gallery until January 25. Admission is free and open to the public. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays.

The display is the collection of Miss Hendrika Tol, a 1936 MC graduate, who spent five years in Guyana's jungles during the 1960's. Miss Tol taught school, provided aid in medical and educational supplies, taught the word of God, and founded the Guyana Project which allowed churches, businesses, and other organizations to provide supplies for the poor.

Miss Tol took charge of the entire project without church or government sponsorship. The works of art were exchanged for the project gifts for the purpose of explaining their culture to other countries. Besides drawings and pictures, there are also toys, models of boats and paddles, pottery, and samples of weaving displayed. Miss Tol is present in the gallery to answer any questions.

Students enjoy Big Apple

by Kathy Fitzell

"New York, New York it's a wonderful town..." So says the song, and so say the two groups that took trips to the "Big Apple" during Interim. One class, "Cultural New York," led by Victor Schoen, spent ten days in the city studying operas. The students attended four operas: Aida, Mahaghanny, La Gioconda, and Der Rosenkavalier." After three of these performances the class went backstage to meet and talk to the stars of the show. They also had two personal interviews, one with Charles Bohneur, the business administator of the Met, the other with Frances Robinson, tour director of the Met. A backstage tour of the Metropolitan Opera House, which took the class to the scenery, costume, carpentry, and wig shops, was also part of the trip.

The other Interim, "Drama in New York," took Dr. Beck and eleven students to Broadway and six plays where they mingled with such stars as Lucy Arnez, Zsa Zsa Gabor, Dustin Hoffman, and Sandy Duncan. Among the plays seen were Sweeny Todd, Dr. Faustus, Hamlet, and Strider. Interviews with the actors were given backstage after Dr Faustus and Strider. The class also toured the New York Public Theatre and talked with a movie critic from the New York Times. While walking down 49th Street the students found themselves in the midst of the filming for a T.V. movie.

could have been much worse." If the fire had been hotter, numerous other organic and inorganic chemicals might have reacted (not to mention the paper cabinet next to the one that burned). As it was, the lab assistants merely have to clean up the sticky phosphoric acid residue that has coated the entire room and its contents.

The phosphorus at fault was probably sixty to eighty years old, as are many of the other chemicals in the stockroom. Most of these are only rarely used. But problems of disposal have mandated that they remain in the stockroom, despite the dangers. Although the cost will be high, Dr. Bunde feels that the chemicals may soon be disposed of properly in order to avoid a recurrence of Friday's episode.

The stockroom is also in need of air-conditioning, as high summer heat often causes the bottles to leak and even crack. If the room was given its own ventilation system, fumes such as the ones which caused classes to be cancelled all day Friday would not be so dangerous. As it was, however, both the students and professors of Sutton enjoyed the free afternoon.

Tom Weston goes up for the basket as Rich Suttle prepares for the rebound in last Wednesday's game against Johnson Bible College.

Basketball: season catch-up

by Mike Weiss

The basketball Scots have begun the 1979-80 season with a bang, streaking to a 7-3 record. After dropping the season opener to Oglethorpe University of Atlanta, MC reeled off 7 victories in 9 games, including big wins over Division III powers Centre College and Washington & Lee at home, and a 78-65 clubbing of Carson-Newman on the Eagles' home court.

The Scots high-powered offense has scored over 100 points twice, in a 105-92 shootout with Emory & Henry, and a 103-72 shellacking of Johnson Bible College, both to the delight of the Maryville home crowd. Other wins were a 90-81 victory over Steed College, and an 83-62 win over JBC in the Preachers' gym. The other two losses came in an 81-77 heartbreaker to Mt. Union, and a lopsided 93-62 defeat at the hands of Western Carolina, a Division I school.

The Scots' fast start is an indication of how second-year Coach Rick Byrd has turned the program around at Maryville. After a slow start last year, MC rebounded to win 6 of their last 9 games, including an exciting upset of Washington & Lee in the season finale. One of the youngest head coaches in the nation, Byrd modestly states, "The players have been the most important factor in our success this year." Indeed, the hardworking, spirited Scots look like winners – a reflection of their coach. Especially outstanding have been the brilliant floor leadership of Rodney Nelson, the marked improvement of Rich Suttle in the pivot, and the inside play of junior-college transfers Kelley Hall and Dale Watson.

Next year the Scots will be eligible for the Old Dominion Conference championship. Were MC eligible this year, it would be in second place. Individually, Nelson leads the league in assists, with 7.6 per game. Suttle leads in field goal percentage with a .667. It is believed that this puts him among the national leaders in that category; however, the NCAA stats were unavailable at press time. Forward Doug Tutin is second in free throws with an .826 percentage.

Coach Byrd expressed a desire for more people to come and see the Scots play. No doubt, fans will see an exciting brand of basketball and a team that they can be proud of.

gave it their best, they lost all three games.

The first team the vballers played was the host school, Occidental. Maryville lost both games 15-7, 15-9. Their next game was against George Washington of Illinois, who was seeded number two in the tournament. GW defeated Maryville 15-5, 15-4. The Lady Scots played Sacramento State in their last match. Sacramento finished number two in the tournament. The Ladies were defeated 15-2, 15-9.

Even though the Lady Scots didn't win any games, it was an honor to represent Maryville in the national play-offs.

Three of the Lady Scots were named to the All-State Team for 1979. They were: junior captain Carol Neal, sophomore Donna Owens, and freshman Rachael Reese. Owens and Reese were also named to the All-Regional Team for their play in Virginia.

Coach Brown felt this year's squad was the most fundamentally sound one and had more depth than any team she has coached in years.

Bobbie Jo Sallade was the only starting senior on the squad. She has been named to the All-State Volleyball Team two years in a row. The team's other seniors were Janet Rickel and Birdie Hill. Janet was named most improved player her junior year and played her best in nationals. Birdie was most improved player her junior year but was sidelined most of this season with a broken foot.

"If you want it bad enough, you'll get it," was the familiar saying for the ladies this season. The Lady Scots volleyball team showed that they are a group of close-knit athletes who "went for it" and got it – honor for themselves and Maryville College.

Co-ed intramurals spike interim punch

by Janet Weston

Co-ed volleyball proved to be very successful and a lot of fun during interim. There was a total of eight co-ed teams who participated in the program nightly and showed their skills at serving, spiking, setting, and playing. Captains and records of the teams were: Team number 1, Keith Martin (4-3); Team number 2, Vicky Black ((0-7); Team number 3, Tony Scalise (2-5); Team number 4, Tim Topham (3-4); Team number 5, Randy Scurlock (4-3); Team number 6, Lori Bowers (6-1); Team number 7, Bonita Terry (5-2); Team number 8, Terry Bunde (4-3). In the first round of playoffs Bowers' Team number 6 defeated Black's Team number 2, and Scurlock's Team number 5 defeated Bunde's Team number 8. In the second round of playoffs Martin's Team number 1 defeated Topham's Team number 4, and Terry's Team number 7 defeated Scalise's Team number 3. In third round of playoffs Bower's Team number 6 defeated Scurlock's Team number 5 and Terry's Team number 7 defeated Martin's Team number 1. In the final playoff game, Bonita Terry's Team number 7 defeated Lori Bowers' Team number 6, 2 games to 1.

Congratulations to the Champs, Team number 7, and a thank-you to all who participated in the co-ed volleyball program.

This term women's basketball and volleyball will be held. Last term only 2 teams signed up for women's basketball so the program was not started. Since then there has been some talk about more teams signing up, so if you would like to start a basketball team, sign-ups will start January 15 and will close January 21. Men's intrmural basketball will also be held during winter term.

Medical tech plan offered

The Instructional Program Committee (IPC), chaired by Dr. Alfred Perkins, Academic Dean, held its monthly meeting on January 14. Presented to the twenty-member committee was the proposal to "establish a cooperative arrangement with the new School of Medical Technology of East Tennessee Baptist Hospital (ETBH-SMT) to enable Maryville College students to earn a B.A. degree with a major in medical technology." Approved unanimously by the IPC, the proposal will be presented to the Board of Directors for final approval.

Prior to 1975 the college had a similar arrangement with Blount Memorial Hospital. However, the program was cancelled for economic reasons, and until recently, Maryville was unable to find another school with which to set up a cooperative program. Dr. Terry Bunde, professor of chemistry, was contacted in September by Dr. Dan Beals of ETBH, informing him of the opening of the school in July of 1980. At present time Maryville is guaranteed one space of the ten available. Dr. Bunde expects there to be two or three students a year to be interested in the medical technology program. He also stated that "if this works out there's a possibility we may have arrangements with other hospitals in the future." Dr. Bunde pointed out that medical technology is a growing field and now has the status equal to that of a nurse, whereas in the past this has not been the case.

The arrangment is referred to as a 3-1 program, in which the student's fourth year and part of the preceding and succeeding summers are devoted to clinical study at ETBH. When asked what advantages this type of program provides. Dr. Bunde replied, "The student is accomplishing two things in four years, receiving a B.A. degree in medical technology from Maryville College and registry in medical technology from ETBH." After completing the program, the student only has to pass a Medical Technology Licensure Examination in the state of his choice before he can practice.

Dr. Bunde stressed the fact that a student in the 3-1 program would not be getting away with anything, as far as required courses are concerned. The only core exemption would be Health Science 101. A very stiff curriculum for the student's first three years has been planned in order to satisfy Maryville's requirements, prepare the student for his year at ETBH, and allow graduation with a degree in chemistry or biology within four

Ms. Susan Standridge officially began her duties as manager of ARA food services at MC in late November.

Is there hope for ARA?

In the words of our new ARA manager, Ms. Susan Standridge, "Food is one of the things nearest and dearest to our hearts." Everyone has, at least, heard complaints about the MC food service, and most of us have made them. Although it is true that ARA can not always please everyone, it is also true that improvements can, and should, be made. It is the job of the manager to find out what can be done and move in that direction.

When Mr. John Keefover resigned as manager last November, ARA was supposed to send MC several candidates for the job. They only came through with one, Ms. Standridge. Ms.. Standridge has been with ARA for 2½ years. She graduated from Tenn. Tech. at Cookeville with a home economics degree, heavily concentrated in nutrition. Having been the assistant manager at Carson-Newman, the job was a promotion for her. It was also closer to her home and a greater challenge.

Ms. Standridge is well aware of the problems at MC. For instance, more serviceable equipment is needed in the kitchen. Dieters find it impossible to eat well-balanced meals. Students with C-hour classes come in only to find there are no glasses, silverware or napkins. Some meals are just plain dull.

The Food Committee is working with Ms. Standridge to find solutions to these problems. More glasses have already come in to help ease the situations at lunch. Plans have been made to expand the deli bar as an alternative for dieters and other students as well. Possibly the deli bar will even be used at the evening meal. Traffic patterns will hopefully be more efficient in the future.

Perhaps the best solution of all is the monotony breakers planned for once a week. On January 16, the student body enjoyed making their own banana-splits. Future plans include a cheese bar for January 24, an Italian buffet on January 29, and a night to make your own doughnuts on February 6.

If you have any complaints, compliments, or suggestions stop by Ms. Standridge's office or tell them to your dorm representative. Make sure your complaint is not based on your personal taste alone, but that it is one shared by a large percentage of the student body. Above all, be nice. Center cures common campus curses

The Counseling Center will offer three "Mini-Classes" during the winter term. One will be a class in assertiveness training. This class is designed for those people who would like to learn to say exactly what they mean. The students will also learn to state their own positions without harming others. Another class will be Anxiety Management. This class is designed for those people who feel slightly nervous or "keyed up" much of the time. The students will be taught total relaxation techniques. The third class will be rational thinking. The students will learn techniques that will aid them in controlling their emotions, thoughts and perceptions.

Each class will be five sessions. Each session will last for 1 hour, once a week. The Counseling Center will try to be as flexible as possible in scheduling these classes in order to accomodate as many people as possible. People may sign up at the Career Planning and Placement Office or by putting a note in 2893. Since there will be an upper limit placed on all the classes, those interested should sign up immediately.

Boycott Moscow Olympics

No-show U.S. shows disapproval

Russia's invasion of Afghanistan has raised serious reservations about the summer Olympics in Moscow. The invasion is a senseless and inexcusable act, and one America cannot afford to ignore. Attending the summer Olympics as though nothing had happened would be a dangerous endorsement of Soviet imperialism.

The Soviets are looking forward to hosting the Olympics. Moscow will get a type of press limelight it has never before enjoyed. The Russians will have the opportunity to show off their system – a system that advocates unjustified military takeover – to the entire world. But what if we should refuse to listen?

When boycotting the Olympics is suggested, many immdeidately protest that politics and international sports are two separate entities, never to be combined. This is a fine idealistic concept. The Olympics should be void of any political overtones. But this is like baking a cake without eggs. Politics always have been and always will be a factor in the Olympic games. To think otherwise is unrealistic and ignorant. Nothing done on an international scope is totally lacking in political motivations. History has shown that the Olympics are no exception.

In 1936, Hitler used the Olympic athletes, officials, and ceremonies in Berlin to propagate his anti-Semitic theories. In 1972, Arab terrorists killed several Israelis participating in the Munich games. There have been other, though less spectacular, instances of political intervention in the Olympics. The 1980 summer games in Moscow could provide another outstanding example.

The Olympics are simply not as pure as they are said to be. The Greek ideal of international sports competition has long since been corrupted by politics and the mass media. For America to participate in the Moscow games on the basis of idealism would be foolish, perhaps dangerously so.

An American boycott of the summer Olympics would be a tremendous blow to the Russians. It would also, no doubt, be a blow to our own athletes, who have been training for the games for four years. To deny them the opportunity to compete would be tragic. A possible solution would be for all boycotting nations to hold substitute games of their own. Montreal has already indicated willingness to host such an affair. The Canadians would need financial assistance, of course, but the price is small when compared to the value of the point we will have made.

The recent Soviet aggression in Afghanistan is so blatant, so obviously challenging, as to demand American reaction. Boycotting the Olympics would be an effective yet nonviolent way of expressing our disapproval. Attending them, on the other hand, would be reinforcing their imperialistic policies. The choice is a question of American political values.

No doubt our athletes can perform just as well in Montreal as in Moscow this summer.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

On the afternoon of Wednesday, November 14, 1979, the ACC Judicial Board held a hearing to determine the guilt or innocence of myself concerning certain school policies. I was found guilty on two of the charges, and instructed to write this letter as a letter of apology to the residents of Dorm 1.

Charges were brought by the head resident, Pat Alberda. These charges were brought concerning the events that occurred on November 4, 1979. On that date, there were disturbances in Dorm 1, namely, the setting off of a fire alarm around 4:00 a.m. At the hearing, there was never any evidence submitted in which a positive identification could be made of myself or anyone else. I was still found guilty of the lesser charges, namely, illegal entry and harassment. Rather than keep this situation open, I have decided to submit this letter to the Echo as instructed by the ACC Judicial Board.

So Dorm 1, residents, I apologise for any disturbances, traumatic experiences, or other emotional difficulties that may arise out of the events of November 4.

Signed,
Larry Sheeley

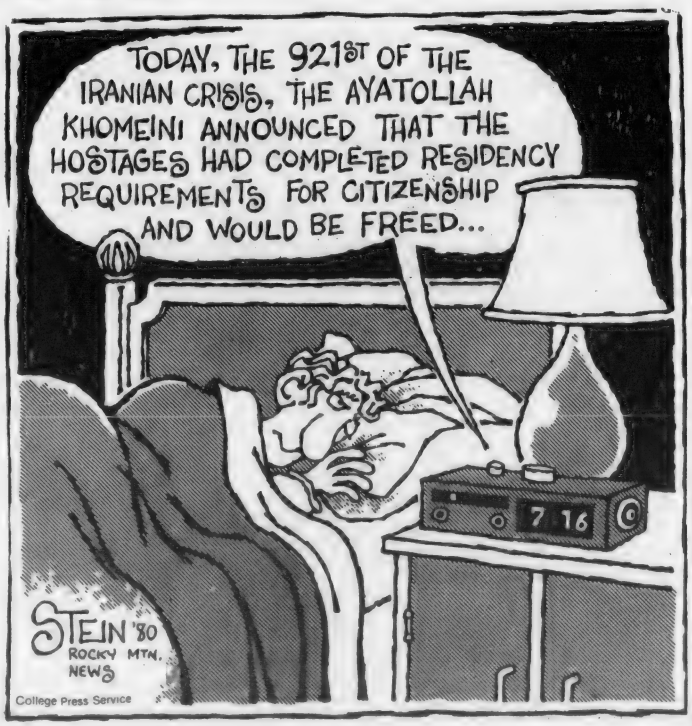
To the Editor,

In a recent ACC discussion about cheating and honor systems, the conversation revealed three attitudes on campus, re cheating, which I believe to be in error.

The first error, that cheating is solely the business of the cheater, was ably rebutted by Dean Perkins, who pointed to the fact that cheating breaks down the standards under which all students are evaluated. This breakdown seriously lessens the significance of your grades and honors.

That is a practical argument. One could raise in addition some questions about the morality of one's simply writing off one's responsibilty for classmates and colleagues.

The second error appeared in the form of an old fiction: "You can't legislate morality." I had a sense of deja vu when I heard those words, words which rednecks used as an argument against Civil Rights legislation of the '50s and '60s.



The Civil Rights movement demonstrated that one can indeed legislate morality. Legislation can change the social climate from one in which a particular moral ethos flourishes, if the legislation is intelligently drafted and if its stipulations are enforced.

The third error was that, somehow, it is professors and cheaters who are to blame for cheating. I suggest that it is the

The Echo's lead articles for January 25, 1975, concerned the recent appointment of Martha Hess as Registrar and the closing of Memorial Hall. Memorial, which had been built in 1871, was at the time known for its housing of male athletes on campus. New housing arrangements provided for the ousted Memorial men to occupy the second and third floors of the then all female Dorm 1.

Typesetter brings graphic sense to MC

A climb up the winding stairs to the balcony of the post office brings one to the new print shop and a man with a welcoming smile and much enthusiasm for his new job. This man is Henry Molter, Maryville College's new typesetter and graphic designer. Henry brings to the job a variety of experience from advertising in New York to writing funeral announcements for the Atlanta Journal-Constitution to being design editor for the Lenoir City News for three years.

Looking very at home surrounded by the tools of his trade -- an old cover of New Yorker magazine taped to the wall, photograph of the Maryville graduating class of 1923, and a baby tears fern – Henry discussed the different aspects of his job. His work includes pamphlets advertising the college, sports programs, and other campus printing. He also expressed the hope of creating a full graphic arts shop for Maryville.

When a day is over, Henry goes to the gym for a game of racquet ball and then home to the house which he built himself.

"Love" Theme of February meetings

The 1980 February Meetings will convene on February 24-26. The theme of this year's meetings is "Love That Is Shared."

Since the spring of 1979, the worship committee has been trying to get Dr. James A. Forbes to come to M.C. to speak. After much careful planning, they were finally successful. Dr. Forbes is a native of North Carolina and presently the Associate Professor of Worship and Homiletics at Union Theological Seminary in New York City. He has pastored in North Carolina and Richmond, Virginia, and has taught in several southern theological seminaries. Some of his recent publications are "We Are One in the Spirit," "Racism as Demon Possession," "Heaven or Hell," and "Are You Resonating With God." Dr. Forbes will speak on campus at 2:30 and 7:00 on Sunday, February 24, and on Monday (the time will be announced.

Several other activities will take place during these meetings. Monday evening a play is to be presented and followed by an informal discussion. A program will be presented Tuesday morning at 10:30. This will deal with world concerns and the other with community issues. These seminars will provide the path to at least one campus project for the remainder of the year. This is the goal of the February Meetings.

With student and faculty participation and the help of these seminars, this goal can be reached. Students can help by actively participating and encouraging friends to do the same. Faculty can help by rearranging class schedules, tests, and papers during the meetings. This will allow students some free time to do their part. Volunteers to help plan the activities are welcome. With the necessary participation, this year's February Meetings will be the best and will have a significant impact on the campus and community.

Campus security explained

by David Mitchell

The question of campus security has surfaced recently, which was made evident by a letter in a previous issue of the Highland Echo. The letter, written by a Maryville College student, expressed serious concern with our campus security. To get a response from the administration on the issue of campus security I spoke with Hugh Crawford, Brick Brahams, and Larry Mangus. All three have ties with security. Hugh Crawford is in charge of security; I asked him about the role of security. "Mainly safety, fire control, and keeping outsiders out." When I questioned him about the incident that had occurred in Davis dorm, early in the year, his reply was, "We have limited manpower, so we really can't be in a lot of places." He also added that "internal security is the responsibilty of the head residents." Security should be on the conscience of every person living on campus. This being an open campus, it is very easy for people to come and blend in with the crowd. Students should not be fooled into a "false sense of security," as Larry Mangus put it.

The security force here on campus is made up of four full-time staff. They are Chief Eldria Hurst, Rex Gredig, Fred Humphrey, and Dale Hurst, the newest addition to the force. 983-3620 is the number to call if you need security. It is advised that you check with your hall staff or head resident first. It takes time to lock up the buildings, check the steam building, and patrol. With the limited manpower and the various jobs they have to do, it is understandable why security can't be everywhere. Security is a concern of everyone on campus, and the students especially should share the responsibilty. As Larry Mangus explained, "We need to take those extra precautions to ensure safety and security."

Long talk on vocational ethics

Dr. Edward Long, consultant to the Mellon project, presented a CIV on vocational ethics on Tuesday, January 15. Dr. Long is a professor of Christian Ethics at Drew University and is one of three CIV speakers helping to design a new course in ethics at MC.

Dr Long said the academic study of ethics has a long precedent in college education, though it has been neglected in recent years. MC's concern is indicative of a general rebirth of interest in the field.

Dr. Long believes the renewed interest in ethics stems from the widespread recognition that society is at a point where it needs guidance.

The medical profession is particularly concerned with ethical issues. The ability to sustain physical life without expectation of mental life has raised numerous questions. Vocational ethics also play a part in business management, where personal rights and the public interest are subjects in corporate decision-making. The code of ethics in the field of law has become less restrictive, depending more on the integrity of individual lawyers and the justice system itself. The technological sciences are becoming increasingly aware of the ethical problems their discoveries and techniques create. Finally, education itself is a subject for ethical consideration.

After his presentation, Dr. Long entertained questions from the audience. During this period he outlined the ethics course he teaches ast Drew.

Dr. Long received his Ph.D from Columbia University in 1951. He holds various other degrees and has taught in many capacities at numerous colleges and universities. He has written or co-authored twelve books and a great many journal articles, book chapters, and book reviews.

ACC hears reports

The All-College Council opened the year 1980 with its meeting on January 9. First on the agenda were the committee reports. The Intercollegiate Athletics Committee, the Community Standards Committee, Social Committee, the Committee for World Concern, and the Review Board reported on issues and events during Interim. Topics of interest included the soccer club's request to become a varsity sport, the follow-up actions taken by the school in response to the report given on fire and safety hazards, a report on Interim social activities and those projected for winter term, and fund-raising by the World Concern Committee.

Other issues presented at the meeting were Judicial Process Task Force recommendations, a report by Mike Weiss and Larry Bidwell on the Tennessee Intercollegiate Student Legislature, and possible approval of a personnel policy. The Task Force recommendations included six incerpts to the judicial manual and suggestions to improve the committee. The personnel policy concerned tenure appointment procedure, faculty appellate procedure, and faculty evaluation and resignation. The ACC closed with accepting the Task Force recommendations and the personnel policy.

The Maryville College athletic committee made a plea to the A.C.C. earlier this month for formation of an athletic philosophy here.

A philosophy prepared last year by the committee was rejected by the A.C.C. who, as yet, have not moved to prepare one of their own. According to one member, Dr. David Cartlidge, the athletic committee is handcuffed without guidelines and boundaries.

In earlier decisions to hire coaches and enter Maryville College into the O.D.A.C., the committee was not consulted. Some members fear a similar disregard toward recommendations they will make on the soccer issue.

Without a knowledge of the athletic budget or a policy to distribute it, the athletic committee has little influence over changes in the athletic department.

JEREMIAH'S

Jeremiah's – the epitome in good food and a relaxed, homey atmosphere – is located on Kingston Pike beyond Cedar Bluff in Knoxville.

The house-converted-restaurant is an old survivor of the Civil War and displays many relics of the past. Each room is furnished in a simple, elegant style against a wood decor.

The specialty at Jeremiah's is the open-pit New Orleans-style barbequed pork or chicken. The main menu selections, however, are the traditional steak and seafood. Each entree is accompanied with a soup of the day, a large salad, and a basket of bread with butter. The wine cellar is adequately stocked with fairly inexpensive popular wines.

Service is very prompt and courteous. Reservations are recommended during the weekend. The prices range from moderately expensive to very expensive.

SWENSON'S

Swenson's Ice Cream Factory, located at the Downtown West Shopping Centre on Kingston Pike, is the nostalgic ice cream parlour of the twenties.

The interior is decorated in an old fashioned, reminiscent manner with ceiling fans and a soda fountain.

The ice cream is made at Swenson's itself and is served in the original San Francisco style. Though ice cream is its specialty, the sandwich menu, ranging from hamburgers to Quiche Lorraine, is equally good.

Reservations are not accepted, so be prepared to wait for at least ten to twenty minutes during the weekends. Prices are fairly inexpensive for the large portions served.

Cal students face first tuition

(CPS)–California college students may soon have to pay tuition for the first time in the state's history. A committee assigned to find ways to offset the effects of Proposition 13, the 1978 voter initiative that drastically cut California property taxes, has recommended that the state university system begin making its students pay tuition for the first time.

The California Post-Secondary Education Committee released a report last week that predicted the nine-campus University of California system would have to impose a $100 annual tuition because of Proposition 13 cutbacks and projected enrollment declines.

California students currently pay approximately $240 per quarter in registration, education and student fees, but there is no tuition charge.

However, officials of the California system claim tuition is not imminent. Rich Taylor, director of the UC-Davis academic affairs offices, says the university isn't likely to institute tuition for a long time. He says the state legislature, which supplies about a third of the UC budget, "has warned if the university charges tuition, it will cut back its support."

Adds UC President David S. Saxon, "Clearly the university has the legal authority to impose (tuition), but legal authority is not particularly useful unless UC is able to work out an understanding with the governor and the legislature."

The university has regularly raised the registration, education and student fee levels when in financial pinches in the past. On the heels of the committee report, UC-Davis Vice Chancellor Elmer Learn announced that fees on his campus would have to be raised about $50 per year if current programing were to be maintained.

Taylor notes that "the possibility of tuition would become much more real" if voters approve more tax reform measures like Proposition 13.

Proposition 13 has already had a broad impact on university affairs. This year, for the second straight year, Governor Edmund G. Brown, Jr., has asked university officials to list programs in order of importance. He has made it clear the state might refuse to fund low-priority programs.

Tellico goes under at last; farewell Little Tennessee

by Shelley Ballenger

The gates of the controversial Tellico Dam were closed on November 29, 1979. After a long battle involving environmentalists, economists, government officials, farmers, and Cherokee Indians, the last free-flowing stretch of the Little Tennessee River was finally dammed. Sixteen thousand, five hundred acres of former farmland now provide bottomland for Tellico Lake.

The Cherokees lost the court suit to protect their sacred burial grounds on November 1. Their case was dismissed by U.S. District Court Judge Robert Taylor on the grounds that "the impoundment of the Tellico Reservoir has no coercive effect on the plaintiff's religious beliefs or practices." Several major archeological sites (dating back to 8500 B.C.), the ancient Cherokee capital of Chota, and the burial grounds were flooded when Tellico's gates were closed.

The actual closing was delayed a few weeks to allow farmers time to harvest their fall crops and to evict the remaining tenants of the valley.

Since Maryville College is located so near Tellico Dam, and because the Highland Echo has been concerned with this site of local and national dispute for so long, we thought it only fitting to commemorate the final passing of the Little T. The following photo spread was created by Clarence Maslowski; the verse, written by Mike Weiss, has been set to music by Bryan McFarland.

Deep Water

They came into our green hills
Two hundred years ago
They drove our people to the West
Oh, how our tears did flow

But many brothers and sisters
Would not leave our sacred land
They fled to the lofty mountains
Defying Long Knife's command

Oh, today my heart is sinking
With tears my eyes are filled
For underneath deep water
Lie the souls that they have killed

We came down from the mountains
After staying many snows
We listened to their promises
But soon their lies would show

We tried to live by their ways
But our once-proud tribe became Objects of their amusement
And our spirits burned with shame

And even the mighty rivers
Could not escape their greed
They built great walls of stone
And the rivers turned to sea

When they raped the last great river
Her waters consumed the earth
Where the souls of my grandfathers
Had fled their eternal curse

Oh, today my heart is sinking
With tears my eyes are filled
For underneath deep water
Lie the souls that they have killed

In a dream I became an eagle
And I flew to the other side
Where the hills are green and the water sweet
And men still have their pride

But the souls of my grandfathers
With me were unable to go
For they are damned forever
At a place called Tellico

Oh, today my heart is sinking
With tears my eys are filled
For underneath deep water
Lie the souls that they have killed

Ramger expands curriculum

Biology and Chemistry will be combined into a single academic unit, the Department of Biology and Chemistry, at the end of the 1979-80 academic year. A major in each field will continue to be offered by the department. Combining these two departments is intended to increase efficiency in curriculum planning, equipment and supply use, and general departmental management. Bob Naylor will serve as chairman.

Starting in 1980-81 Bob Ramger will be teaching several sections each year of Health Science 101. This will enable the college and Bob to draw more on his interests in the areas of Human Sexuality and Physical Fitness. Mr. Ramger will be working with Edith Largen and others in reconstruction of the course.

Dr. Ramger will continue to do most of his teaching in Biology and will remain an active member of the department.

Biology majors especially will be pleased to know that this shift will make it possible to add a Vertebrate Physiologist to the teaching staff in 1980-81. This new position will be a joint appointment in Biology and Physical Education.

Combining Biology and Chemistry into a single department is intended to strengthen each area, while producing some economies in time and materials, if not in money.

years if the student should change his mind about completing the 3-1 program. Realizing the difficulty of the planned curriculum, Dr. Bunde commented, "You cannot do this if you're not dedicated to the work."

The student would remain registered at Maryville for the duration of the 3-1 program. Though course work would be done at ETBH the last year, the student would pay tuition and fees to Maryville, with the college then paying tuition and fees charged by ETBH. Financial aid, including the BEOG, NDSL, and state grants would continue to be available. During the year of study at ETBH the student would have the choice of living on campus, accepting accomodations at ETBH, or choosing housing on the commercial market.

Bridal show sponsored

A wedding fashion and music show will be presented on Tuesday, January 29, from 8 to 9 p.m. in the MC Wilson Chapel. The show is sponsored by the Alpha Zeta Chapter of Delta Omicron, an international, professional fraternity for women in music. Admission is $1.00.

Representatives from Wedding Wonderland and Jim's Gems will be present to answer any questions.

Faith Esham, ALCOA Foundation affiliate artist, will perform a duet with Michael Ketcherside, as well as solo numbers accompanied by Sallie Schoen.

Modeling fashions are MC students Steve Burnett, Debbie Campbell, Allen Evitts, Linda Hasty, Karen Henderson, Mark Herron, Andy Limone, Lesa Payne, Cindy Sehnert, Beth Sieber, and Mark Wilson.

Soloists include: Dorothy Bushing, accompanied by Jennifer Bushing and Mary MacPhee; Allen Evitts and Karen Henderson, accompanied by Masako Yoneda; Lesa Payne accompanied by Kazourou Ohi; Betty Schuster accompanied by Darlene Gilman; and Karen Ketz accompanied by Judy Grahl.

Providing background music are Jennifer Brown, Jennifer Bushing, Bill Dent, Joan Dempsey, David Fisher, Darlene Gilman, Mary MacPhee, and Bryan McFarland.

High scorers looking east

(CPS) – Students who score high on standardized tests – even those who live in the western United States – are once again choosing to attend the old-line prestigious colleges in the northeastern U.S. instead of colleges closer to home.

Lewis Solomon isn't sure why high-scoring western students have been migrating to eastern colleges like Bryn Mawr, Yale, Dartmouth, Columbia, and Princeton in greater numbers. His study, which he co-authored with Alexander W. Austin, does conclusively show that some of the West's most prestigious schools – Stanford, Reed, and Pomona –are no longer mentioned among the top ten choices of those who score highest on standardized tests.

Solomon adds that traditional midwestern leaders like the University of Chicago, Carleton, Rice, and Oberlin have also fallen from the list of colleges enrolling the highest ratios of high-scoring students.

When raw numbers of high-scoring students are compared, Solomon says "larger institutions such as Stanford and Duke rank much higher."

As expected, the Solomon-Astin study has excited a lot of controversy, especially amid western and midwestern administrators. They point out that test scores are not the only criteria weighed in a college's decision to admit or reject an applicant.

Stanford Dean of Admissions Fred Hargadon charges the "survey makes test scores more important than they really are. In fact, a forthcoming survey of several major private institutions indicates there are very few schools where test scores are the most important factor in admissions."

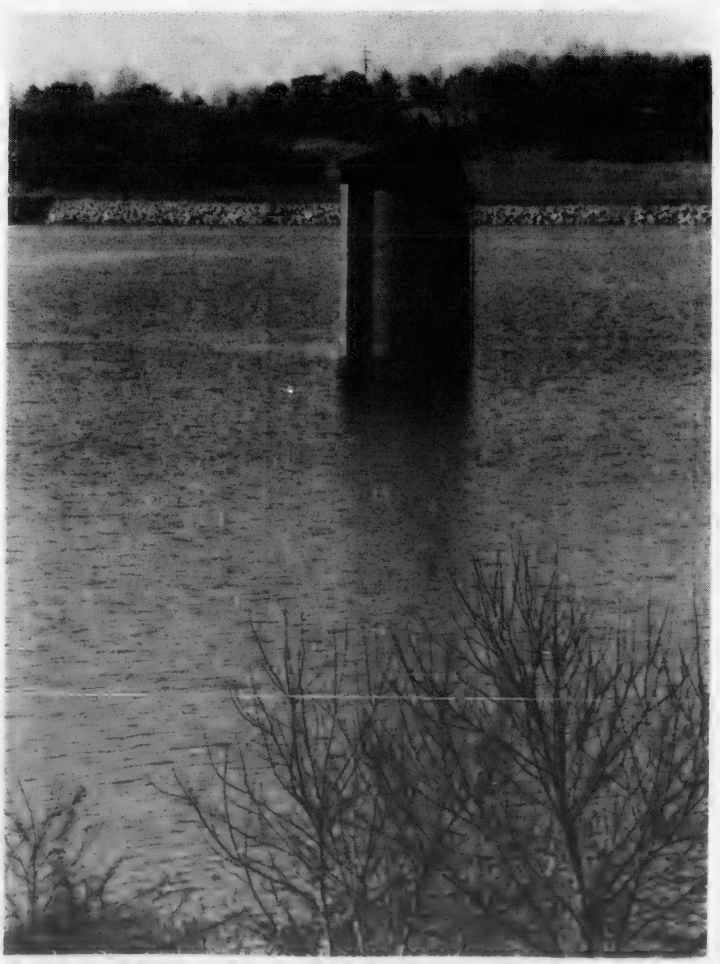
student body which sets the ambience of the college. If cheating is declared not to be the students' business, there is no way by which to eliminate cheating.



Professors try to expose cheaters. But if one is to honor the principle that students accused of crime must receive due process, then one must be able to prove that cheating has occurred. That usually means that the professor must document the plagiarized source, and that takes hours of often unfruitful work. Jane Savage and I once spent hours (four) searching for the source of a paper which we knew had been copied from a published article. We did not find the source. The then Dean and I both agreed that we therefore could not charge the student with plagiarism.

If you have no luck finding one of your teachers around paper time, even if you have searched the Down Yonder from top to bottom, he or she may well be tied up trying to prove that one of your classmates cheated. To Dear Perkin's practical argument, I add another: cheating costs you real money, as you are paying for professors' energy and time. As cheating increases, the professorial time and energy which is yours diminishes.

My main point:

Cheating is the business of the whole campus but especially of the students, because academic dishonesty can exist only when the student body permits it to exist. If the majority of students does not want cheating to flourish on campus, then the student majority must find the will to change the atmosphere in which cheating thrives.

Fickert resigns from Scots; accepts post at Wayne St.

by Steve Arnold

In everone's life there comes a time when better opportunities arise and a decision must be made. For Coach Steve Fickert, this decision came on January 2, 1980, as he turned in his letter of resignation to MC to accept the position of head football coach at Wayne State University.

Wayne Staste University is a Division II school in Detroit, Michigan, which offers scholarships to its players. They also offered Coach Fickert an unlimited recruiting budget, a better salary, more assistant coaches, and a number of other things that made this a good job opportunity that Fickert could not turn down. Coach Shannon stated that "it was like exchanging your Volkswagen for a Cadillac."

The move was made official on Jan. 4 as Coach Fickert appeared on Michigan radio and television and was announced as the head football coach at Wayne State.

In his two years at Maryville College, Coach Fickert compiled a 15-3 win-loss record. He was a very dedicated coach who seemed to live football twenty-four hours a day. His energetic enthusiam and desire to win brought compliments from everyone who was associated with him.

Due to the time that he was called to his job, he regretted that he was unable to have the opportunity to sit down with his players for one last meeting.

Athletic Director Billy Henry had these words to say about Coach Fickert: "I think Steve did an excellent job here and inspired enthusiasm in everyone involved. It is a great compliment to Coach Fickert and the Maryville College football program to have a school like Wayne State admire the accomplishments of the program enough to offer Steve the position he received."

Coach has always had the desire to be a Division I football coach. This was just another step in attaining that goal.

The process of finding a replacement for Fickert has already stasrted and is expected to be final by the end of January.

Coach Fickert, the Fighting Scots, and students gather for the traditional post-game prayer on the football field.

Head football coach Steve Fickert has decided the 1979 season will be his last at MC. He recently accepted the head coaching position at Wayne State University in Michigan.

Ever wonder how Maryville got its name? Someone did.

(Editor's Note: This article is reprinted in full from the January 16, 1937, edition of the Highland Echo. It was written by Otto Pflanze, who was a freshman at the time.)

A few weeks ago the query was made by an Echo writer, "Why was Maryville named Maryville?" With his curiosity fully aroused, this author consulted several musty volumes pertaining to local history in the city library and interviewed some of the town's oldest citizens. He found that the story back of that name involves national as well as local history.

The atmosphere of Congress was electric. A constant roar of conversation filled the room as the bewigged Congressmen leaned out of their seats to confer with colleagues. The roar quieted down to a tense murmur as a speaker mounted the rostrum. In his hand he held a message from President John Adams, and as he read the members strained to catch every word.

The security of the young republic, he announced, was in serious danger. A plot had been uncovered in which certain men high in political affairs were conspiring to aid the Spanish in seizing American territory west of the Appalachians. The success of the plot would mean the loss of much land as well as the presence of an overpowering foreign nation at America's backdoor. It would prove, he believed, to be a definite check on the country's growing power and might eventually end in foreign domination.

There were several such conspiracies in early American history. Aaron Burr had been brought to trial on such a charge, and no less a person than Andrew Jackson had been implicated. On this occasion the accusing finger was pointed at one William Blount, a member of the Senate.

The accusation brought a furor of discussion, for Blount was considered a prominent member of the body and previously had had a distinguished career in Southern politics. He had previously been a member of both Continental congresses and had helped frame the Constitution. President Washington had looked upon Blount as a personal friend, and had appointed him to the superintendency of Indian affairs and territorial governor of Tennessee. He had proven immensely popular with the people of that district, and when the state of Tennessee was formed he had been unanimously elected to the Senate.

Although he protested his innocence, Blount could disprove nothing. He was consequently expelled from the Senate, and an attempt to bring him to trial failed only because of the lack of evidence.

Upon returning to Tennessee, Blount expected to be met with hisses and catcalls. However, it was quite the opposite, for the people were unable to believe that their leader was guilty of such a crime. In order to show their confidence in him, they elected Blount to the state legislature, and upon entering that body he was made speaker. Members of the legislature, in order to establish a lasting proof of their record, named a new county which had been formed south of Knoxville in honor of Blount and the county seat in honor of his wife Mary Blount.

And so the names, Maryville and Blount County, stand as monuments to show the loyalty and affection of the people of the state for one of their greatest leaders. Tennesseans have no cause to regret that fidelity, for historians have proved that Blount was not implicated in the conspiracy.

Lanier named coordinator

Ricky Lanier of Memphis, Tenn., has been named coordinator of minority student affairs at Maryville College, MC Admissions Director Rick Ziegler has announced.

Tucker, who graduated from the University of Tennessee-Knoxville with a bachelor of arts degree in sociology in 1979, will also serve as a minority student recruiter for the College, Ziegler said.

Tucker succeeds Rick Mosley who left the College to work for TVA.

Ziegler also announced that Joan King Wiseman, a 1978 MC graduate in psychology, is serving as admissions counselor for New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Miss Wiseman, a native of Winter Park, Fla., worked for the College's Career Planning and Placement Office after graduating from MC.

"We're very fortunate to have someone with Ricky Tucker's background to serve as coordinator of minority student affairs," Ziegler said. "Both of the new members of our staff are already hard at work in their efforts to recruit new students and implement programs to make Maryville College stronger in the coming years."

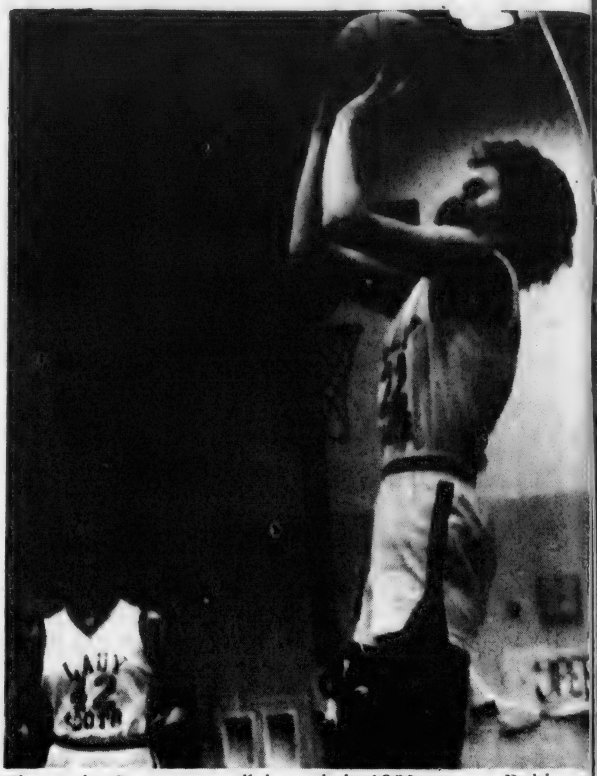
Scots play one-on-one

by Mike Weiss

On January 13, the 5th ranked team in Division III, Southwestern at Memphis, paid a visit to Maryville, and came out with a 77-68 victory. The Scots hung tough for most of the game, but ran into a hot-shooting SAM club in the second half. Mike O'Keefe led the visitors with 21, Rodney Nelson paced the Scots with 18.

The Scots then went West for a 2-game road trip. On January 18 Maryville took on Millsaps in Jackson, Miss., and whipped the Majors 76-72 in a come-from-behind win. The Scots came from 10 down in the second half, despite a 37 point performance by the Majors' Jim Murray. Kelley Hall had 17, Nelson hit 16, and freshman Andrew Baker sank 6 clutch free throws down the stretch to give MC its first win ever on the Millsaps home court.

Weary from the previous night's big win, the Scots travelled to Memphis for a rematch with SAM. This one was no contest, as the Southwestern team raced to an 85-64 win. Rodney Nelson was the lone bright spot for Maryville, pouring in 18 points and passing for 9 assists.



The Scots' record stands at 9-5. On last week's games, Coach Byrd commented, "It was unfortunate that we missed the opportunity to beat the 5th best team in the country, but a split on the road was not the worst we could have done." He praised the play of Nelson, saying, "Rodney is doing everything we could ask of him right now; he had three superb games."

One final note: Before last week's games, Scot center Rich Suttle was fourth in the nation in shooting percentages, hitting almost 70 per cent of his attempts from the floor.

Soccer moves indoors

The Soccer Scots have begun weekly indoor scrimmages in the gym. The fast-paced indoor game helps develop skills such as ball-handling and shooting. This version of soccer also features the extra dimension of the opportunity to bank the ball off the walls, one reason for the speed of the game. Anyone interested in soccer is welcome to participate every Sunday at 2 p.m.

The issue of soccer's elevation from club to varsity status is still in debate by the Athletic Committee. The Highland Echo Sports Editor welcomes opinions on this matter.

The Lady Scots are well into their 1980 season. Robin Rimmer was caught in action going up for a basket in the Jan. 15th game against St. Mary's.

Kansas has problem MC will never face

Lawrence, KS (CPS)—As one of them recalls it, some University of Kansas Student Senate officers were hanging around the office one Friday complaining about a proposed increase in student fees. The officers in the room thought the increase was unnecessary, especially because there was still $89,000 left over from last year's fees. They wondered how to make their point. Then one of them had an idea.

Thus the KU Senate is currently considering a bill that would use unallocated student fee money to buy a year's lease on a condominium, a Winnebago motor home and a Mercedes Benz coupe for student use.

Treasurer David Van Parys claims the idea was his. "We've got $89,000 left over," he said. "Why do we need any more?"

The Mercedes Benz, to be the official student car, would cost $33,000. Van Parys sees the $27,000 Winnebago as a "mobile hospitality unit," and the $84,000 condo as "The KU equivalent of the Camp David retreat."

"Of course the treasurer's office would have first dibs," the treasurer added. "But then we would make the car, motor home, and condo available to students on a lottery basis." Van Parys sadly adds that "people will treat the bill (authorizing the purchases) as being insignificant."

Zaneski chosen as new football coach

The Echo learned on Saturday, January 26, that Dan Zaneski has been hired as head football coach of the Scots, replacing the departed Steve Fickert.

"The athletic committee and player representatives were unanimously in favor of Dan," said Athletic Director Billy Henry. "It is an asset that a quick decision was made, in order to unite and continue the program." Zaneski comes to Maryville from Plymouth State College of New Hampshire. In addition to coaching football, he will be responsible for reviving Maryville's track and field program.

At Plymouth State, Zaneski was 7-12 in 1978-79. Before that he was an assistant at the University of Louisville in 1977, and compiled a 29-6 record as head coach of Mattatuck Community College in Waterbury, Conn. Zaneski was metro collegiate football conference coach of the year in 1973. He also coached high school football and track in Connecticut.

The new coach is 34 years old and is a native of New London, Conn. He is married and has two children. He received a B.S. degree in history from Central Connecticut State College in 1967, where he was a defensive back for the football team. He earned an M.S. in education from the same school in 1970.

Billiards registration to begin

Registration for the All-Campus Billiard Tournament starts February first and will run through the eighth. Interested persons can register at the equipment room in the P.E. building. The tournament begins February 18 in the lobby of Carnegie Hall.

Bryan McFarland was one of ten featured performers at last Friday's Coffee House.

Coffee House stimulates crowd

by Jeana Webb

On Friday, January 25, in the dining hall, Maryville College had its second Coffee House of the school year. The tables in the dining hall were set up to resemble an original coffee house, with candles as centerpieces and a bowl of potato chips on each table. Lending a certain flair was George Cassuto, who was the official emcee of this special event.

There was a good turnout to watch the events of the Coffee House, which consisted of ten acts. The first performers were Linda Crozier and Cathy Angell, with Cathy on guitar and both of them singing.

Jean Plant then told a funny story about Kevin Riley.

After Jean we were taken on a journey back through time to the fabulous fifties, with the spectacular greasers, Johnny Flush and the Commodes. This group consisted of Tim Stuart/alias Johnny Flush, Todd Dickson/Straight Flush, Mark Beyer/Royal Flush (on piano), Walt Montgomery/ Noisy Flush, Mike Carter/ Sani Flush (on guitar), and Frank ...Fiore/Sitting ...Bull. They performed such fifties hits as "Run-a-round Sue," "Barbara Ann," and"Takin' Care of Business" from the seventies.

Bryan McFarland, who followed the Commodes, was the most popular act of the night. After performing twice he was brought back when the audience screamed for an encore. He did a beautiful version of Mike Weiss' poem "Deep Water" which appeared in the Echo last week and "Fuel for the Lord" which he wrote himself. On a lighter side, Bryan also sang "The Copeland Song," "She's a Doll,' and "Ode to My Tennis Shoe."

The fifth act was Donna Czegledi and Jean Plant, who signed a terrifc version of "My Life" by Billie Joel.

Next we were taken back in time again. This time it was to the forties with the Andrew Sisters, who are more commonly known around campus as Betty Schuster, Ruth Wilgus, and Carol Carter.

The next performer was Kathy Wilson who sang and

Soph class officers finally chosen

The Sophomore class has finally elected its officers.

Because last year's officials did not elect officers at the right time last spring, the Sophomore class elections were delayed. Although nominations were taken in the middle of fall term, the elections were not held until January 18. Nevertheless, three members of the class were chosen as officers. Cathy Angell is president; Sidney Bright, vice president; and Carol Carter, secretary/treasurer.

At a class meeting on January 24, several activities for winter and spring terms were tentatively planned. Some of these include an ice skating party, a sophomore class trip, an after-Spring-break party, and a socially oriented community activity. However, before any of these can be accomplished, class unity must be established. Sidney Bright, class vice president, stated that, "The class officers must show interest and school pride in order to establish unity. When the leaders are together, a smoother path is made for others to follow. When the path is made, then the followers are expected to do their part. However, before anything can be done, we must have unity; without it we are like a ship without a sail."

Sleep late? You can still make Vespers

Guest soloist at the Sunday vesper service in the chapel on February 3 will be Faith Esham, Maryville College's affiliate artist. Chaplain Charles Fowler will preach.

Returning to the traditional hour of 7:00 p.m., the Worship Committee, co-chaired by Sarah Edris and Linda Crozier, is planning a variety of formats for the vesper services, including Holy Communion, group singing, and informal worhsip on succeeding Sunday evenings.

Until sufficient student interest in Sunday morning worship warrants resuming on-campus services, the Committee will concentrate on making the weekly vespers interesting and inspirational.

For many years the vesper service at Maryville College has provided an opportunity for worship to faculty, students, administration, staff, and the surrounding community. Students are encouraged to participate in the Sunday morning services in local community churches.

Thomas revives productions

Prospects brighten for theater department

The revitalization of the drama department at Maryville College is a notable action. In doing this, the college reaffirms faith in those who believe that the liberal arts college has a place in today's education. Rekindling the theatrical flame at MC will undoubtedly bring new life to campus; in fact, it already has.

Those people actively involved in theatre are well aware of the personal benefits to be gained from such experience. They also know how much time and cooperative efforts are necessary to create a successful production. The total commitment one must give is a richly rewarding experience, and is often carried on into one's daily life.

Last year might have been considered an all-time low for mainstage productions at MC. Although the "show went on" each term, enthusiasm was lacking from the place it is needed most – the director's chair. Even the most energetic cast and crew will dwindle in spirit if they feel their efforts are not recognized by their director. Frustration and confusion can only hinder the quality of the show.

This fall, a new face and mood graced MC's theater department. Don Thomas "is just what the doctor ordered" for the anemic stage. After just one production, the blood has begun to flow again, enlivening the nearly dormant department. This man walked into a dilapidated situation and chose to tackle the problem head on. He had little help from upperclassmen. Most of them with any interest in theatre were already involved in a group of their own. Perhaps he was lucky to be able to grasp the freshmen immediately, because he'll bring them far in their years at MC.

Life is definitely looking brighter in the Maryville College theater department. If Mr. Thomas stays as director, perhaps recognition will again flow in the direction of the mainstage. It is long overdue.

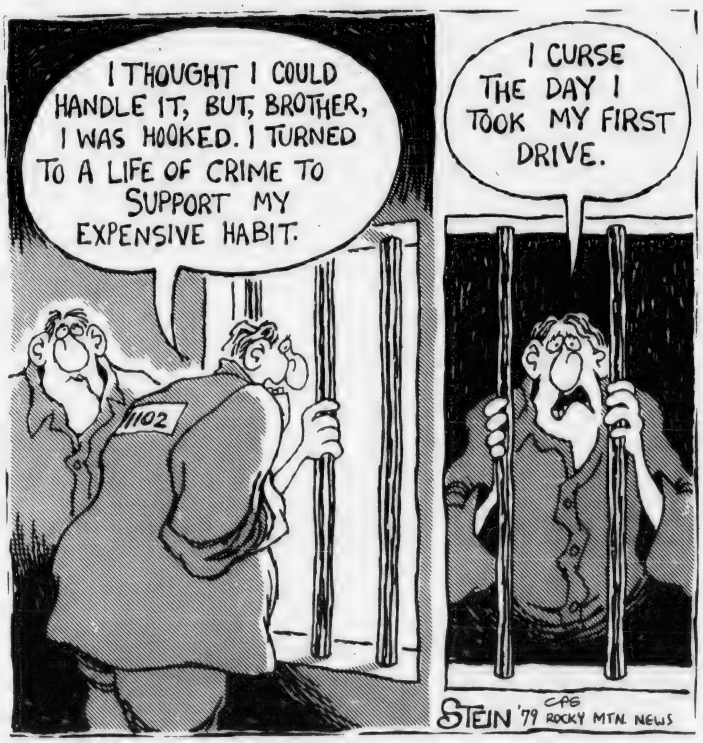
Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Lately, several of us have been disappointed and disgusted by students who continually show a lack of consideration for fellow students. This lack of consideration is especially noticeable in the dining hall.



Everyday I see people who are rushed being forced to waste time looking for a seat without an empty tray at it, or having to take someone else's tray up so they can sit down. I don't understand this tray phenomenon. It seems to be particularly prevalent among males. Well, fellas, does it make you feel more macho? It certainly doesn't make you look it.

Taking your tray up takes, at the most, three minutes. Not taking your tray up makes student workers put in more time; that makes ARA put more money into the payroll – money that could be used to buy better quality food. Not taking your tray up also costs student workers valuable study time or free time.

Please, actions speak more loudly than words. Let's show more consideration for one another, not only in the dining hall, but all over campus.

Thank you,
Kathy Culpepper

Up to nine college credits may be earned through the program. Interested students should write to Dr. Doreste, Augustana College, Rock Island, IL 61202.

Echoes from the past...

The February 6, 1970, Highland Echo reported that the ACC had finally passed a visitation rights policy. The reasons for adopting the policy were stated as such: students should be given responsibility for their own affairs; it would help break down the artificial separation of the sexes on campus; it would prompt better room upkeep; it would stimulate intellectual and interpersonal relationships; there were insufficiant social activities on and near campus; and surveys from other schools showed visitation increases academic achievement. The vote was 15-3 in favor of visitation, which involved a sign-in, sign-out escort policy. Previous Echoes carried numerous articles, editorials, and letters to the editor calling for the adoption of visitation rights.

Forum fields student questions

The students of MC met with administrative representatives for an open forum on January 21. Members of the administration in attendance were President Anderson, Larry Mangus, Brick Brahams, Billy Henry, Al Perkins and Jane Richardson.

All of the topics brought up for discussion boiled down to one – MC's lack of money. If there were more funds, more could be done. So far a little over $2 million in pledges and gifts has been raised in the $5 million fund drive.

The library is an important part in the $5 million campaign. It does not have enough new or up-to-date materials because the budget can not comply with cost increases of new materials.

Low salary is one reason MC had difficulty finding a new coach. The position was advertized at the National Convention and in Knoxville and Maryville newspapers, as well as by word of mouth. Other hindarances include our division three status, non-scholarship recruiting, and a very small staff with a tough budget. However, $500 has been allotted to the softball team.

There were complaints that ARA has not lived up to its agreements. It definitely promised a longer spread of meals without repetition, and we were supposed to be able to see the menu three weeks ahead. The main criticism is due to poor menu plans with too much starch, grease, and some kinds of foods used over and over.

Other topics discussed included a way to stagger the lines at registration by doing it alphabetically or in classes. There was a positive outlook concerning new professors, especially Dr. Johnstone, Mr. Thomas, and Mr. Harmen.

President Wayne Anderson, Coach Billy Henry, and Dean Larry Mangus entertained questions and comments from students at the administrative forum.

The Pep Band is working to add a little "note" worthy spirit to the home basketball games.

Pep band tunes into Scots

by Ed Brewer

The MC band is at it again.

Dave Fisher has organized a Pep Band to play for some of the basketball home games. The Pep Band played January 22nd and seemed to be fairly well received. The hope of the members of the band is to build spirit at the basketball games. Tom Hudson, a member of the group, commented, "It's about time we had a Pep Band. I believe it'll prove to be a fun type of thing for everybody – the musicians, the team, and the fans.

The members of the recently organized Pep Band are: Dave Fisher, Dave Cartlidge, Wendy Wolfner, Donna Czegledi, Don Gilliland, Tim Fitzgerald, Jon McSayles, Johnnie Dent, Bill Warren, Bill Dent, Beth Sieber, Linda Hasty, Ed Brewer, and Tom Hudson.

Some of the music to be played is: "You've Said It All," "Sgt. Pepper," "Peg," "Pink Panther," "March of the Cueballs," and, of course, the fight song and the "Alma Mater," played the guitar.

Hopefully, the band will achieve its goal and add a little "pep" to the basketball games.

After Kathy, we were treated to a very interesting performance: Tim Stuart and his Appalachian dulcimer. Along with other songs, Tim did a very original version of 'Cindy."

The ninth act was Wren Griffen and Diane Bonyadi who, with Wren on guitar, sang "Dog and Butterfly" by Heart.

And last, but certainly not least was Kazurou Ohi, who did a very impressive job on the piano. Kazurou was close beside Bryan for the most popular act.

After Kazurou, several of the performers returned again. First was Bryan McFarland. Then Kathy Wilson returned with "Vincent," a beautiful song about Vincent Van Gogh. Wren Griffen sang "Coyote," and the popular Kazurou returned a final time.

The Coffee House was a big success and all of the performers deserve hearty congratulations for their participation, as do all the students who came out and supported it.

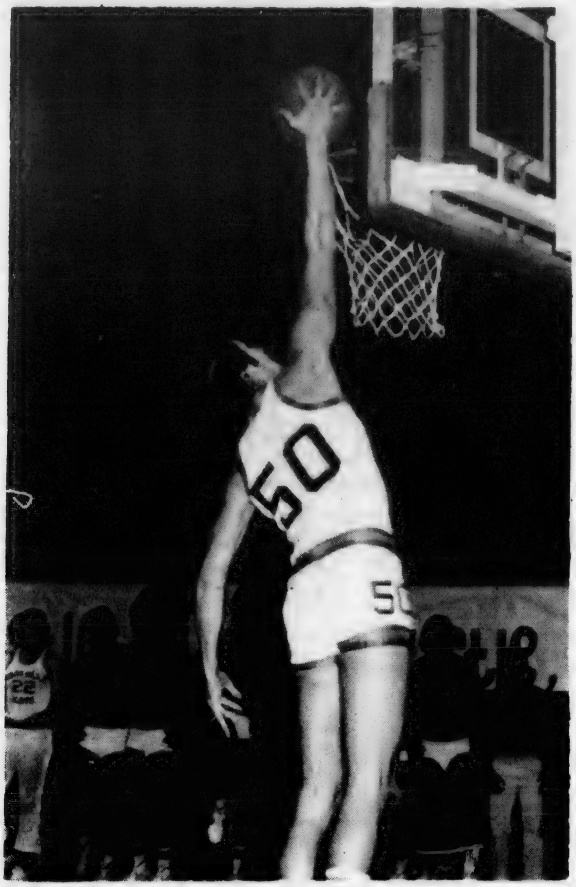
Great Decisions begin

The Great Decisions program of U.S. foreign policy discussion groups, sponsored by the World Concerns Committee, will begin Tuesday, February 5, and continue for eight weeks.

Groups will meet at 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays in Room 210 of Thaw Hall. Anyone from the college or community may participate.

Program books, which contain information about each week's topic, can be obtained from the college bookstore. For more information, contact Dr. Arda Walker or David Widner.

Only the Shadow knows...



Have you been hearing strange footsteps behind you? Have you had the feeling of someone's eyes on you, only to discover there is no one there? If the answer is yes, you may be a victim of the Shadow. The Shadow will seek out an unsuspecting victim each week and present the mystery for you to figure out.

The Shadow's first victim leaves her dorm reluctantly at 7:50 on a Friday morning. Pearson's is bypassed, forsaking breakfast as our victim disappears into Anderson Hall. What's this? Around eleven o'clock Anderson Hall once again becomes her point of destination. After C-hour, of course, our victim heads for lunch.

Following lunch, our victim heads back to Lloyd Hall where she spends a relaxing afternoon watching the soaps. She bops back to Pearson's for dinner, and around 6:30 our victim begins setting up for the evening's social activity, the coffee house. Afterwards our victim stays to clean up and put Pearson's back in order. As a matter of fact, our victim can be seen setting up and cleaning up for every social event. Who is the mysterious victim? Only the Shadow knows!

Kelly Hall gains two points from the Scots against Carson-Newman as his teammates urge him on.

Scots sapped by Millsaps

by Mike Weiss

The Scots' basketball team won two in a row last week before dropping a disappointing decision to Millsaps, 81-76.

On Jan. 22, the hated Eagles from Carson-Newman came to MC looking to avenge an earlier loss at the hands of the Scots. It was not to be, however, as MC drilled its rival from up the road 70-61. The game was a tight defensive battle until midway through the second half, when the Scots went into Coach Rick Byrd's delay offense. Spreading out the C-N defense, the Scots were able to get several opportunities for inside shots. Rodney Nelson led all scorers with 19 points; Rich Suttle had 18. Brad Chambers led the Eagles with 14.

On Jan. 24 the Scots squeaked by Bryan College on the Lion's home court, 63-62. MC came from 7 points behind with 1:30 remaining in the game. "We were glad to get out of there with a win," said Byrd. Rodney Nelson had another great night, hitting 24 points.

The Millsaps loss was a shocker for the Scots, who had defeated the Majors earlier in Jackson, Miss. Maryville jumped out to an early lead, but slackened defense, and Millsaps took advantage with 67 per cent shooting, while the Scots shot only 45 per cent. Kelly Hall set the high mark of the season for MC, pouring in 29 points in the loss. Tommey Murray canned 26 for Millsaps.

Note: The win over Carson-Newman last week continued the Scots' domination of their larger neighbor. The football team beat C-N 15-7 this year, the volleyball girls trounced the Lady Eagles on their way to national recognition, and the basketball team has manhandled the Eagles twice. The Eagles' only success against the Scots this year has been in soccer, with a 4-4 tie and a 4-2 victory.

Ladies shooting it out

The Lady Scots' basketball season is off and rolling. So far, the women b-ballers hold a 7-6 record.

Six of the team's players were in California for the National Volleyball Tournament in December, so the Lady Scots were left with six players to play in the first two games of the season. MC defeated Johnson Bible College, 70-55, but dropped their next game against Christian Brothers, 70-55. The Lady Scots were also defeated by Covenant College, 81-63.

The b-ballers won their next three games. They defeated Tennessee Temple, 69-52, Bryan College, 68-48, and Johnson Bible College, 81-27.

The Ladies then traveled to Memphis to play Christian Brothers, who beat the Scots 81-53, and Southwestern. The MC girls beat Southwestern, 58-50.

On January 15, the Lady Scots rolled over St. Mary's, 95-43. Four days later, however, they lost to Hiwassee, 68-76. The Ladies came from behind three times, but couldn't quite catch up. Coach Brown stated, "We were exhausted. They were much quicker than us, and our defense couldn't cover them."

Tennessee Wesleyan defeated the b-ballers by two points, 67-65, in an exciting game on January 22.

In their most recent game with Milligan, the Lady Scots were victorious, 91-35. Melissa Sullivan put in 23 points, and DeeDee Chapman added 14 more. Coach Brown was very pleased with both Melissa's and Dee Dee's performances. She stated, "They were a team, and we took advantage of that. The team is coming along very well."

The Lady Scots face Bryan College at their next home game on February 1.

Esham sings life song

The Student Music Educator's National Conference (SMENC) sponsored an informal get-together with MC's affiliate artist, Faith Esham, Saturday, January 26.

The FAC lounge, warmed by a roaring fire, provided the perfect setting as Miss Esham traced her career from piano lessons at age 7, to undergraduate and graduate school as a psychology major. Miss Esham had not thought of becoming a singer until she entered and won competitions suggested by her voice teacher. She then won a full-tuition scholarship to the prestigious Julliard School of Music in New York City, which she attended for 5½ years to receive her master's degree.

Miss Esham is now with the New York City Opera.

When asked about the competition, Miss Esham replied that you must "put your blinders on (to those more successful) and do the best you can with what you have at that moment." Her goal? "To be excellent. If you ever reach the point when you think you're beyond improvement, then you're dead."

The students, many seeking musical careers, appreciated the insight that the talented Miss Esham shared about a professional career.

(CPS) – Twenty-five years ago you could take a date to a movie, an inexpensive dinner, and then out for a drink or two and a little dancing for about $9.50. But Ray Devoe, a New York investment strategist, warns that the same date could cost as much as $43.

According to Zodiac News Service, Devoe has examined the skyrocketing price of dining out, movie theater tickets, intimate lunches at Italian restaurants, and cocktails in fancy restaurants, and compared his findings with the cost of the same activities 25 years ago.

Devoe discovered that while the cost of living has gone up 172 percent since 1954, "the cost of loving" – his term for the cost of courting or dating – has risen at twice that rate, or 340 percent.

Great Decisions pondered

The nation-wide Great Decisions program, the 26th annual foreign policy discussions program sponsored locally for the fourth year by the Maryville College World Concerns Committee, will begin an eight-week schedule of meetings on campus on Tuesday, Feb. 5.

Seven groups are being organized for this year's program. Four groups will meet at MC at 4 and 7 pm on Tuesdays and Thursdays in Room 210, Thaw Hall. Other groups will meet at Asbury Acres Retirement Home, Broadway United Methodist Church, and Maryville High School.

Faculty and student leaders have been assigned to each group. Faculty leaders include Dr. Dean Bolder, Keith Bruckner, Dr. David Cartlidge, Rev. Charles Fowler, Mrs. Vera Gilmore, and Dr. Young-Bae Kim. Student leaders are Larry Bidwell, Chris Cesvenka, Linda Crozler, Debbie Hall, Jeff Nardo, and David Widner.

Among the topics for this year's discussions are "The World in 1980: An Uneasy Time for a Superpower," "The Mideast and the Gulf: U.S. Policy in Ferment," "The United Nations at 35: Illusions and Realities," and "The World Energy Crunch: U.S. Choices – At Home and Abroad."

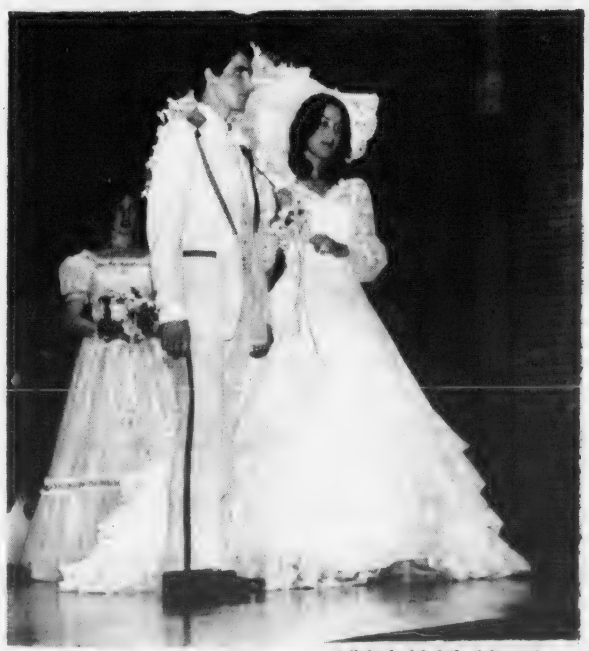
What to wear when wed

On January 29, Delta Omicron sponsored a wedding fashion and music show with the help of Wedding Wonderland and Jim's Gems, who provided beautiful silk flower arrangements for each wedding. Lighted candelabra, a white archway, and potted plants formed the scenery on the chapel stage. Tom Hudson served as the master of ceremonies for the evening.

Featured in the antebellum wedding was Lesa Payne, wearing a gown of chantilly lace with a chapel train, an open crown bridal hat and veil, and carrying a parasol trimmed with silk flowers.

Cindy Sehnert modeled the traditional bridal gown of ivory silk organza with a bodice encrusted with pearls and crystals.



Linda Hasty, attired in a gown of white silesta with an appliqued bodice of silk Venise lace, represented the modern bride. A lace pillbox hat with a face veil and lace fan completed her outfit.

In the informal wedding, Cindy Sehnert modelled an old-fashioned dress of ivory crinkle voile.

Grooms and groomsmen were Mark Herron, Steve Burnett, Allen Evitts, Andy Limone, and Mark Wilson. Modeling as bridesmaids were Karen Henderson, Beth Seiber, and Debbie Campbell. Mrs. Troy Hasty represented the mother of the bride.

Many musicians also created the wedding atmosphere. The performers included Bill Dent, David Fisher, hornists; Jennifer Brown, flutist; Jennifer Bushing, organist; Dorothy Bushing, Karen Henderson, Betty Schuster, sopranos; Wren Griffin, alto; Allen Evitts, tenor; Bryan McFarland, guitarist; and Darlene Gilman, Kazourou Ohi, Joan Dempsey, pianists. Delta Omicron was also pleased to have Delores Ziegler, mezzo-soprano, perform several solos.

Delta Omicron is an international, professional honor fraternity for women in music, whose purpose and goal is to promote high standards of music everywhere. The MC Alpha Zeta Chapter advisor is Mrs. Dorothy Bushing.

Lesa Payne and Mark Herron exhibit bridal fashions in a show sponsored by Delta Omicron.

Winter finally arrived at MC late last week as a layer of icy snow covered East Tennessee.

Beck and Parker published in journals

Two Maryville College professors have recently had their work published in regional journals.

Dr. Charlotte H. Beck, associate professor of English, has published an article in the fall issue of The Southern Literary Journal.

Dr. Beck's article is entitled, "Unicorn to Eland: The Rilkean Spirit in the Poetry of Randall Jarrell."

The Southern Literary Journal is a regional quarterly published by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Dr. Russell Parker, professor of history and secretary of the faculty, has written a book review that will appear in the winter issue of the Tennessee Historical Quarterly.

Dr. Parker, a specialist in southern American history, reveiwed the study by Dewey M. Grantham entitled, The Regional Imagination: The South and Recent American History, for the journal.

Draft registration haunts men,women alike

By now the initial shock is over. It was two weeks ago yesterday that President Carter's proposal to resume registration for the draft reached our ears. During those two weeks, Americans – especially those in our age group – have been forced to face several important questions.

The issue of registration itself is the most basic one to be considered. Some believe the President's call for registration to be only a political maneuver to scare the Russians. Others feel the gap between registration and actual conscription is wide enough to remain unbreached. But many are convinced that registration is merely a stepping stone toward mandatory military service.

I would like to believe registration is a harmless ploy, a rational scare-tactic – but I question who they're trying to scare, the Russians or the American youth? The registration process was designed with draft in mind, and it seems reasonable to assume that one leads to the other. Perhaps it won't; yet some underlying fear won't permit me to trust the government not to use my number once they've got it.

This leads to a second question – will they ever get my number? For the first time in our history, registration of females, as well as males, is being considered. Most people, male and female, who favor the registration of women do so on the grounds of equal rights. Equal pay, equal work, equal draft. It sounds reasonable; however, I think it's rather regretable.

I have never agreed with the militant feminists who claim that there are no differences between the sexes. There are differences (and thank God for them!). Little things called hormones cause the most amazing variations, both emotional and physical, between males and females. Much as feminists would like to deny them, they exist. There are certain things a woman, because of her physical and chemical make-up, simply can't do as well as a man. Reasonable attention to this fact could make things better all around.

I don't believe women are physically suited for combat duty. This doesn't mean, however, that they can be of no military value whatsoever. There are thousands of civil service jobs that women are capable of performing. They can serve as nurses, doctors, cooks, clerks, and administrative personnel, to name just a few. These positions demand equal mental, yet less physical, stamina than actual combat. America's military might will be greater if the physical limitations of women are recognized; this will allow the most advantageous use of the strengths they do possess.

The prospect of draft registration is not a pleasant one. If I was certain registration was an end in itself, I might advocate it – but I'm not at all certain. And, like most of you, I am terrified of actual conscription – even more so now that women might be made eligible. In all fairness, I suppose women ought to be required to register along with men. It would be a tragic mistake, however, to expect them to perform equally in combat.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

As a senior at Maryville College this year, I have naturally become somewhat nostalgic about the last four years: we of the class of 1980 have endured at this "fountain of knowledge." Looking back, I can certainly say that change has played a most important role in the scene at MC. Obviously many of the changes which have taken place have not always been good; there is always room for improvement. However, I can honestly say that a great number of improvements have been instituted since my frightful freshman days back in 1976.

I can remember, for example, when being caught with an alcoholic beverage was one of the "deadly sins," and when cars for freshmen were a distant fantasy. As a matter of fact, once I had to pile six people in my Porsche on a Friday night in order to prevent the starvation of a few freshmen who got the munchies for McDonalds. My one comment on that matter is, thank goodness for the new regulation allowing freshmen to bring vehicles to school (the tires on poor Fritz will never be the same)!

Likewise, I can recall that dark period before the ping pong and foosball games were provided in the dorms – when watching "Saturday Night Live" or having a food fight in the cafeteria were the major weekend social events.

Besides these changes, we have also witnessed the building of a new commuter room in Fayerweather, experienced the security of the new library check-out system, and enjoyed the freedom of the now co-ed Dorm I, to mention only a few more.

Thanks to the recognition of the necessity of change and the allowances which have resulted from that recognition, each year has been an improvement over the previous one. Having witnessed these changes as a senior of 1980, I can sincerely say that the last four years have been filled with many experiences which have made my past seem more memorable, my present more fulfilling, and my future more promising.

Sincerely,
Betty Vars

DRAMATIC PRODUCTIONS SCHEDULED

Playhouse

The Maryville College Playhouse will present Ronald Millar's pageantry romance "Abelard and Heloise" as its winter offering, MC Playhouse Director Donald Thomas has announced.

The play is based on true accounts of the 12th century French scholar Peter Abelard and his conflicts with the Medieval Church over his love of Heloise, his student.

The MC production will feature a cast of over 30 members, including a large choral ensemble.

"Abelard and Heloise" is scheduled for the third week in February; exact production dates will be announced later.

Playmakers

The MC Playmakers will present a dinner theatre tomorrow night at 7p.m. in Proffitt Dining Room. Reservations are $8/person and can be made by contacting Sharon Crane or Terri Boyd.

Richardson promoted to associate dean of students

by David Mitchell

Jane Richardson, former Assistant Dean of students, has recently been promoted to Associate Dean of students. I had the pleasure of interviewing Jane and finding out about her new position.

I began by asking Jane if her new position puts her authority on the same level as Dr. Mangus. Her answer: "No, Dr. Mangus is boss; overall, he is in charge of Student Services." Jane has more direct involvement with students, which is what she enjoys.

It was news to me that Jane is not primarily a woman's Dean, as I had thought. She has as much contact with men as women.

Jane's position encompasses many responsibilities. She is in charge of housing, which includes room changes, fees, damage reports, etc. I asked Jane if she has any imput concerning the housing budget. "I have nothing to do with the budget. I can request changes in it, however," was her reply.

Jane thinks this has been a relatively quiet year. We talked about last year and the incidents that happened then. When Dr. Mangus first took office, he let it be known that drugs were something he would not tolerate. In response to Mangus' tactics, student unrest was unusually high. "The paranoia that followed was unbelieveable," Jane commented. That paranoia seems to have simmered down now.

Jane believes there have been some slow but definite improvements in facilities that come under her authority. Better furniture in some of the dorms, and more hot water are a few examples of such improvements.

Dean Richardson is a mother of four children. She has a degree in Craft from UT, with a minor in psychology. In 1976 she became resident director of MC's first co-ed, freshmen dorm. Hiking and reading nonfiction stories are Jane's greatest pleasures, when she can find the time for them. I asked her if that was the key to her youthful looks. She just laughed and thanked me for the compliment.

Dr. Harry Price and Dr. Wally Lewis presented a CIV program dealing with "American Views of Changing China" last Wednesday.

China highlighted in CIV

Wednesday, January 30, Dr. Harry B. Price and Dr. Wallace L. Lewis, two MC professors specializing in studies of China, presented a lecture/slide show on "American Views of Changing China."

The two MC professors had joined other college and university professors in participating in the U.S.-China Peoples' Friendship Association tour of China in August, 1979. Their trip, funded by the Mellon Foundation grant for faculty and curriculum development, enabled them to exchange valuable educational and cultural traditions with representatives of the two countries.

Dr. Price, scholar of international reputation and professor and chairman of economics and business administration at MC, was born in China while his parents were missionaries there. After completing graduate work at Yale University, he returned to China to teach at Yanching University in Peking. He later served with the United Nations and the U.S. government as a specialist in Chinese international relations.

Dr. Lewis, associate professor of history and a specialist in Chinese History, teaches Non-Western studies in Asian Culture along with Dr. Price.

Dr. Lewis spoke first at the CIV, presenting his slides. It was his first trip to Asia and China. Dr. Lewis divided his presentation into three sections: slides of the Forbidden City, slides taken in a children's nursery in Shanghai, and a variety of slides from the capital, Begin. Dr. Lewis explained that Begin, being the capital, gets most of the business and that Shanghai is basically an experimental city.

Dr. Price took the second half of the program. The trip was more of a nostalgic one for him because he spent nine years of his adult life in various occupatons in China. He explained some past and present-day situations of government, agriculture, and industry. He also stated that person-to-person relationships , between citizens will help solve problems better than constant struggle for power between nations.

Both Dr. Lewis and Dr. Price were impressed with the hospitality, friendship, and warmth of the Chineese people.

Esham entertains eager ears

CIV on Thursday, January 30, featured Miss Faith Esham, soprano, accompanied by Mrs. Sallie Schoen.

Miss Esham, ALCOA Foundation Affiliate Artist, presented an interesting program which included a "nonesense song" by Sidwell, "Roads of Love;" "Rise and Shine;" and the "Jewel Song" from Faust by Gounod.

Miss Esham opened the program with a song about Old Mother Hubbard, followed by an aria from Carlisle Floyd's opera Suzanna.

The program was very informal and Miss Esham established an immediate rapport with her audience. She also explained about the Affiliate Artist Program and gave a brief background to each of her pieces.

Miss Esham's vivid interpretation and total involvement with each song won the admiration and appreciation of the audience.

HENRY AND OHI PRESENT RECITAL

by Bonita Terry

As the fingers of Hampton Henry rolled across the piano keys last Tuesday night, the audience looked thrilled. Henry was the first of two performers at the student recital which was held at the Fine Arts Center. He displayed poise and concentration as he played Chopin's Nocturne.

Kazuro Ohi dynamically rendered selections by Lizst and Prokoffiev. Ohi's performance demonstrated a flashy style with a nice variation in pedal technique. The combination of Henry and Ohi resulted in a short, sweet, and snappy classical concert.

Majors command Scots

The basketball team hit some rough sledding on the road last week, bowing to King College, 89-71, and Washington and Lee, 62-60.

On January 28, the Scots ran into a powerful King squad in Bristol. "They played the best anyone has played against us," said Maryville coach Rick Byrd. "We played poorly. We shot badly and played poor defense." Kelley Hall led MC with 18 points.

On Feb. 2, in Lexington, Va., the Scots faced O.D.A.C. rival Washington and Lee University. It was a see-saw contest throughout, and Tom Jeffries of the Generals converted a one and one attempt with 3 seconds left breaking a 60-60 tie. The Scots then fumbled the ball away on a last-second shot try, and the game ended 62-60 in favor of the bad guys. Rich Suttle of MC led all scorers with 23 points. Jeffries paced W&L with 19.

The Scots' record as of last week is 10-8. The postponed Jan. 30 meeting with Sewance has been rescheduled for Feb. 26 at Maryville.

Topics for these weekly discussions are contained in the Great Decisions program book, available at the MC bookstore.

In conjunction with the program, the Great Decisions 1980 series will be telecast at 4 pm each Saturday for eight weeks on the Public Broadcasting System (WSJK-TV, Channel 2). The TV series, which began on Jan. 19, will cover the same topics as the program book and is moderated by Martin Agronsky. Noted experts and policy-makers will be featured weekly.

Founded in Oregon in 1954, the purpose of the Great Decisions program is to inform citizens of critical American foreign policy issues and to give citizens the opportunity to voice their opinions on the issues. The program is administered nation -wide by the Foreign Policy Association.

Following each week's hour-long meeting, participants will record their veiws on ballots provided in the program book. Each week the topic will vary. The ballots will then be sent to the Foreign Policy Association for tabulation along with ballots from Great Decisions programs across the country. The results will be sent to appropriate national leaders.

For more informaion on Great Decisions, contact Dr. Arda Walker or David Widner.

Donna Owen goes up for two points against Bryan College as Dee Dee Chapman and Brenda Babb prepare for the rebound.

Ladies overpower visitors

The Lady Scots claimed victories over two rival teams this past weekend. On Friday, the Scots trampled Bryan College, 66-42. Saturday, Covenant College yielded to the MC ladies by two points, 75-73.

Brenda Babb earned 15 points against Bryan and 19 points against Covenant. She was top scorer for both games. Rachel Reese racked up 12 points against Bryan, and Sandy Raburn earned 18 points in the Covenant game.

The Lady Scots played Covenant earlier in the season. At that time, they lost by 18. Coach Brown was confident they could come out winners this time. She stated, "Individual players have made great progress. Also, we're playing together as a team."

The Bryan and Covenant games move the Lady Scots' season record up to 10-6.

HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY

Vol. 65 No. 14 February 14, 1980 Maryville College Maryville, Tennessee

Couples on Campus

by the MC Grapevine

It's Valentine's Day, and quite a few MC students are basking in the warmth of mid-winter romance. Who did you sit with at Jailhouse last week? Were you seen talking passionately with someone of the opposite sex in line in the cafeteria? Who asked if you wanted to go to the basketball game? Did you get a card in your mailbox this morning? It doesn't take long for the word to spread, does it?

By it's nature, Valentine's Day provides the perfect opportunity to indulge in a little gossip-telling. The Grapevine, with completely harmless intentions, has gathered the following assortment of "campus couples'" for February 14, 1980.

Then, there are the couples who have decided to make definite plans together. Current engagements include:

Jimmy Miller & Jenny Anne Cary, Dave Osborn & Tammy Brown, Ed Herbert & Peggy Stewart, Donna Hurst & Gary Ridge, Rick Holland & Kyle McComb, Greg Hosler & Robyn DeMaat, Mark Michel & Sarah Edris, and Ruth Allen & Phil Lloyd.

And finally, there are those who have tied the knot. During the past six months, three MC couples have walked down the wedding aisle: Tom & Teri Walker, Tony & Judy Norris, and Barry & Lynn Mathis.

The Echo wishes everyone, whether paired or unpaired, a happy Valentine's Day — and happy swinging on the Grapevine!

Where's the connection?

Love and the Saints

by Steve Fernandez

St. Valentine's Day, which by the Roman and Anglican Calendar falls on February 14th, is deemed the year's most romantic day. On this day folks of all ages exchange epistles and missives, either comic or sentimental, in which the love of the sender or the foibles of the receiver are set in prose, verse and emblematic picture.

There is no custom without a reason; however, in the case of Valentine's Day, the reasoning seems to have been obscured with time.

The day is associated with about seven or eight legends. Two of the more prominent ones are mentioned in early Christian martyrologies. These histories of early Christian martyrs mention two saints named Valentine associated with Feb. 14th. Both men suffered martyrdom in the second half of the third centruy and were buried in the Flaminian Way.

The first of them is described as a priest of Rome who stood steadfast in his faith during the Claudian persecutions, and for that faith was thrown into jail, where he cured the jail keeper's daughter of blindness. When the miracle was made known, he was first beaten with clubs and then beheaded. His remains are preserved in the Church of St. Praxedes at Rome. There, a gate, now known as the Porta Del Popolo (gate of the people), was named, in his honor, Porta Valentine, or Valentine's gate.

The other Valentine was the Bishop of Interamna who healed a son of Craton the Rhetorician, and was choked to death by a fish bone.

Firm guidelines required

Athletic policy needs shaping up

Maryville College needs a cognizable and concrete athletic policy – a set of guidelines that will be beneficial to the operation, the decisions, and the enhancement of Maryville College athletics.

The lack of a visible athletic policy is undoubtedly a contributing factor to the sometimes unjust and unfounded criticism of the MC Athletic Department. A strong and viable athletic policy would spell out what should and should not be done in regard to MC athletics, and would serve as a measuring rod for the Athletic Department and the entire college community.

A specific athletic policy is only one step toward "athletic excellence" at Maryville. An effective Athletic Committee is also needed – a committee to help implement athletic policy on behalf of the ACC, and to work with the Athletic Department toward MC's idea of "athletic excellence."

Some may regard the existence of an athletic policy and an Athletic Committee as a questioning of the integrity and honesty of the MC Athletic Department. A more rational view, however, would realize that such a policy, and such a committee, functions in regard to athletic standards as the Instructional Program Committee functions to maintain MC's academic standards.

An athletic committee should also function as a forum – a place where the campus community can voice opinions and suggestions for the promotion of an even better athletic program. Through the Committee, campus athletic concerns may be realized and digested, so that MC's athletic goals (as set forth by an athletic policy) can be striven for.

However, MC can discuss athletic standards, build a more effective Athletic Committee, and propose and implement policy until it is orange and garnet in the face – but unless such standards, committees, and policies are acknowledged and respected by the entirety of the college, particularly the Athletic Department, all efforts will prove futile.

A strong, workable athletic policy at MC should stress:

1) A balance of resources and energies between varsity and intramural sports, men's and women's sports, and major and minor sports;

2) The definition and compositon of the Athletic Committee, and its role in MC athletics;

3) A striving for "athletic excellence" – how MC athletics can best contribute to the entirety of the college;

4) Priorities and assumptions – that football, basketball, and baseball are not the only sports offered at MC and should not be regarded as such.

It is easy for anyone to sit back, make judgements, and "throw stones." With a strong, functional athletic policy and Athletic Committee, the stated MC athletic standards would make the judgements.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Life is becoming a little disconcerting. I've come to the conclusion that everyone I know is the same. At first, I thought it was just my imagination, so I tried an experiment. I walked into the cafeteria and shouted, "What's everybody gonna do tonight?" "Get high, get drunk, get laid!!!" came the unison reply. So much for imagination...

People feel threatened by non-conformity. Non-conformity arises drom differences. Differences provoke discussion. Discussion requires thought. God forbid we should ever have to think.

Actually it goes deeper than that. There is a campaign of terror being waged against those who would practice individuality openly. For instance, last week an ugly mob came to my door demanding my presence at a party downstairs. When I declined, they turned on me. Thinking quickly, I grabbed a nearby beer bottle and held it aloft, poised for rapid descent To my surprise, the mob immediately fell to its knees and began chanting softly. Seeing my chance, I smashed the bottle against the door and fled down the fire escape amid cries of "Heathen" and "Infidel."

Not wishing to cause anyone undue anxiety, I have since become more conscientious with regard to my demeanor. Now I wear the same clothes, go to the same parties, and claim the same values as everyone else. I only think when it's absolutely necessary. And if I ever want to be myself, I'll lock my door and do it in front of the mirror.

ACP POETRY CONTEST

The National College Poetry Contest is offering $200 in cash, book prizes and free printing for all accepted poems in the American Collegiate Poets anthology. Deadline for submissions is March 31. Persons wishing information about the contest should contact the Echo, Box 2820.

UT OFFERS GALLERY SPACE

The University of Tennessee Exhibits Committee cordially invites submission of work for consideration as part of the 1980-81 Exhibit scheduled for the gallery facilities in the University Center.

Any artisan or craftsperson wishing to be considered for gallery space between June, 1980 and May, 1981, should contact the Committee immediately at 615 974-4160.

All work will be reviewed by the Committee between February 22 and March 10. No materials will be accepted after February 22.

Pageantry romance arrives

The Maryville College Playhouse's winter production of Abelard and Heloise, a 12th century French pageantry romance directed by Don Thomas, will open Tuesday, February 19, at 8:15 p.m. in the Theatre and will run through Saturday, February 23, with a special matinee performance on Wednesday, Feb. 20 at 2:45 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday performances will begin at 8:15 p.m. Tickets are $3 for adults, $2 for students.

The story concerns the life of the religious cleric and scholar, Peter Abelard, played by Bill Thomas, and his love for his charming and intelligent student, Heloise, portrayed by Linda Wiley. Their relatonship inevitably leads them into conflict with the Church of their day. This two-act drama was written in 1970 by Ronald Millar and is based on two historical figures. The conflict within the play is as timely today as it was eight hundred years ago.

Suporting roles include: Fulbert, played by Allen Evitts; Gilles de Vannes (Frank Fiore); Robert de Montboissier (John Morton); and the Abbess of Argenteuil (Marianne Sawdon). Other cast members are: Mike Hester, Robin Snipes, George Cassutto, Vanessa Logan, Peggy Stewart, Ruth Cartlidge, Katey Flick, Ruth Reese, Tim Stuart, Jeff Pevy, Jean Plant, Mike Clark, Jerry Archambault, Teresa Lawson, John Pritchard, and Vanessa Smith.

The majority of the cast members work as an ensemble chorus, framing the main action of the play. Through movements and chanting, they create a vivid picture of dramatic intensity. Abelard and Heloise is a unique production that should not be missed.

Bill Thomas gives Linda Wiley a lesson as the chorus, comprised of monks and nuns, looks on in a rehearsal of "Abelard and Heloise."

Cleveland sums up ethics in CIV tomorrow

Dr. Harlan Cleveland, renowned authority on international affairs, will present the final of three CIV lectures on ethics at 9:20 a.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

Dr. Cleveland's lecture is entitled "Third Try at World Order" after his latest book.

In addition to speaking at the CIV program, Dr, Cleveland, former U.S. ambassador of NATO under President Lyndon B. Johnson and former assistant secretary of state for international organization affairs under President John F. Kennedy, will remain on campus through Saturday. During this time he will work with members of the college faculty and students on the development of a new interdisciplinary course dealing with contemporary moral issues.

The course, which will be offered to selected MC seniors for the first time this spring, will present ethical dilemmas and show students how to make decisions, based on their own beliefs, about current problems of a world-wide community.

In addition to writing Third Try at World Order, published in 1977, Dr. Cleveland has written four other books and co-authored and edited a number of other publications.

A Rhodes Scholar, Dr. Cleveland has held many important positions in both government and education since graduating with high honors from Princeton in 1938.

Dr. Cleveland served as president of the University of Hawaii from 1969 until 1974, when he assumed his present position as director of the international affairs program at the Aspen Institute of Humanistic Studies in Princeton, N.J.

Grahl, Payne perform

Miss Grahl performed several pieces which included Haydn's "Variations in F Minor, H.XVII:6" and Kabalevsky's "Sonata No. 3 in F Major, Op. 46." Miss Grahl closed the program with the selections "Au bord d'une source" and "Vallee d'Obermann" from Liszt's "Annees de Pelerinage, Suisse."

Miss Payne and Miss Grahl's excellent preparation and interpretation of each piece contributed to a wonderful evening for all.

Judy Grahl, pianist, and Lesa Payne, soprano, accompanied by Kajurou Ohi, presented a junior recital in the Fine Arts Music Hall on February 7, 1980.

Miss Payne opened the program with Scarlatti's "Cara, cara e dolce" and Handel's "O sleep, why dost thou leave me?" Other pieces sung by Miss Payne included works by Mahler, Faure, Duke and Offenbach.

UT artists exhibit works in FAC

The Maryville College Fine Arts Center Gallery will feature an exhibit of prints and watercolors by two University of Tennessee-Knoxville graduate students Feb. 6 through 28.

The work of Deborah (Buzzy) Broad and Paul Sasso will be on display from 9 am to 5 pm weekdays. There will be no admission charge, and the artwork will be for sale.

According to Carroll Barger, art instructor at MC, this show will be "a good chance to see two different types and styles of work."

Ms. Broad, a graduate assistant who teaches drawing and print making while working toward an MFA degree at UT, will show realistic prints, Sasso's watercolors are abstract.

A native of Newport News, Va., Ms. Broad is a 1975 graduate of Buena Vista, Virginia's Southern Seminary Junior College, and a 1977 graduate of Hollins College in Hollins College, Va.

Sasso, a native of Windsor in Onatario, Canada, is in his second year of graduate study at UT working on his art theme, "The American Gaud." Sasso received his undergraduate degree from the University of Windsor in 1978. In addition to his paintings, which are 22"x30" and smaller, Sasso does wood sculpture.

"This is the first abstract exhibit in a couple of years" at the MC Gallery, Barger said of Sasso's work.

Barger said Ms. Broad's prints, which include intaglio prints, will feature varied subjects, especially animals, composed in unusual arrangements.

Regulations restated

The Traffic Committee would like to remind all students with cars on campus of the traffic and parking regulations.

All vehicles on campus must be registered with the Office of Student Services. No parking, faculty, and staff areas (marked or unmarked) are off limits for parking at all times. Parking is never allowed on any grassy area on campus and substantial fines will be levied against violators. Cars in violation of any parking or traffic regulations are subject to tickets 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

For further information on traffic and parking regulations, contact the Office of Student Services or consult your student handbook.

Traffic Committee members are Sam Foust, Ed Brewer, Mike McCroskey and Bob Steinbuch.

Double standard dying out

(CPS) – The sexual double standard is dying. At least that is the finding of Patricia MacCorquodale, assistant professor of sociology at University of Arizona, and John DeLamater of the University of Wisconsin.

MacCorquodale and DeLamater recently reported the results of a survey of 1600 18-23 year-olds in a small Midwestern city. One thousand of the subjects polled were college students.

"We hear a lot of talk these days about the sexual revolution," MacCorquodale observes, "but what we found is that people's focus has shifted from 'doing or not doing' to relationships, what each couple thinks is acceptable."

MacCorquodale attributes the change in the double standard to overall changes in women's roles. "People aren't as quick to accept differences in the roles of men and women anymore," she says.

Of those polled, only five percent of the men and 13 percent of the women disapproved of sex without the benefit of marriage. MacCorquodale noted that more men than ever before approve of premarital sex. Men as a whole, she suggested, have traditionally accepted premarital sex more readily than women.

"In any couple, the man will accept premarital sex earlier than the women," MacCorquodale said, indicating that the double standard is not altogether dead. But, when asked what conditions respondents thought sex was acceptable for women and when it was acceptable for men, most indicated little difference of opinion, regardless of sex.

Carlisle Floyd slated to visit in May

Carlisle Floyd, a famous American opera composer, will be visiting Maryville College in May. His visit is to be financed by a grant recently awarded to MC by the Tennessee Art-Humanities Support Program.

During his week-long stay, Floyd is to direct the last week of rehearsal for the productions of his opera, The Sojourner and Mollie Sinclair. The opera will be performed May 15-17 as part of MC's Performing Artist Concert Series.

The opera is MC's third annual operatic presentation. This year's cast will feature professional talent as well as student and community talent. On alternating years the cast consists entirely of student and community performers.

Michael Ketcherside, MC music instructor and co-ordinator of the college opera program, announced the grant. Ketcherside, Victor Schoen, and Dr. Russell Parker, are on the committee which will organize this year's project.

MC tentatively renews statement of purpose

The Church-Related College Task Force is pleased to place before the college community for its review a new Statement of Purpose for Maryville College. There will be forums provided for faculty and students separately as well as opportunities to meet together. This is being done prior to the Task Force's submitting the Statement of Purpose to the College Board of Directors for its approval. We invite your serious reflection and comments on the following Statement of Purpose. The schedule of open forums is as follows:

–All college, 9:20 a.m., February 20, FAC Music Hall
–Students only, 4:00 p.m., February 20, FAC Lounge
–Faculty & Staff will be notified of the date and time for their forums.

"Maryville College was founded in 1819 as a seminary to train Christian ministers for service on what was then the great Southwest frontier. In its long history, the institution has included a graduate theological seminary, an undergraduate college, and a preparatory school. Now, concentrating on undergraduate education, Maryville College continues its founding tradition as it seeks to serve all humanity as a liberal arts, church-related college.

"As a liberal arts college, Maryville strives to be an instrument of liberation and growth for adults of all ages. Through its curriculum, the college affirms the continuing value of a broad range of study in the humanities and sciences and, avoiding undue specialization, aims to enhance career opportunities and develop a true sense of vocation. To prepare students for a future of uncertainty and accelerating change, the college seeks to stimulate purposeful curiosity, to encourage analytical thinking and effective expression, to foster discriminating aesthetic taste and sound judgement, and to nurture the deep concern for persons that leads to constructive action.

"Maryville College stands firmly in the tradition of the Christian faith. The college is joined to the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America in a voluntary covenant. This relationship is a source of mutual strength, since the college and the church share a commitment to search for truth, to work for justice, and to recognize and develop wisdom. An atmosphere of freedom and moral sensitivity, fostered and sustained by the church, is fundamental to the life of the college. As a central part of its service to the church and all humankind, the college encourages deep and serious inquiry into all the traditions and values of a pluralistic society and a diverse world.

"Maryville College is, in essence, a community of teachers and learners. The faculty and students represent a variety of interests, backgrounds, beliefs, and nationalities. The faculty, as a group of scholars committed to the preservation and advancement of knowledge, emphasizes effective teaching and the supportive personal relationships with students made possible by the college's size. The students are challenged to grow in academic competence, personal and social maturity and spiritual discernment. Administration and staff, faculty and students join in building and strengthening the campus community – through caring for others on campus and beyond, sharing genuine concern for the world, and working to fulfill the college's purpose."

Christian comedians provide "witty" and entertaining program.

Witty performance review

by Jeana Webb

On Saturday night, February 9, Maryville College was treated to a very special concert. John and VickiJo Witty, a husband and wife comedy team, performed at the FAC Music Hall in a concert sponsored by the Worship Committee. The Wittys specialize in situation comedy with a Christian viewpoint.

The concert was opened by the Reverend Charles Fowler, who welcomed the audience and the Wittys. Their performance included eight skits as well as a testimony from each of the Wittys about what they are doing with their lives.

The first skit was a game-show where a contestant was asked six questions. If he answered all six questions truthfully, he would win $12,000. If he told one lie, he would only win $10,000. If he told two lies, he would lose everything. The contest's topic was Christianity. In the process of answering the questions, he learned how he really felt about God.

Next VickiJo came on as a five year old talking about the winter and trees. This was developed into an analogy of Christ's resurrection.

The third skit was about a woman trying to tell her husband about a wreck that she had just had. The brakes on the car had gone out and she had slammed into the back of a Mercedes. He yelled at her because he had not acted responsibly and did not have any insurance on their car. Finally he admitted that everyone had faults, but he thanked God that he did not have as many as she did.

After the fifth sktech, which showed two singers singing "I Got Them First International Club dinner

The first annual International Dinner will be held Saturday, February 23, at 7 pm in the Proffitt Dining Room. Tickets for the dinner are $3 each and will be on sale in Pearsons lobby through the 18th.

The dinner is to acquaint the American palate with international delicacies. Featured will be dishes from China, Japan, Peru, and other countries. Music and entertainment will be provided.

Drama of February Meetings emphasized

"Christ in the Concrete City," a dramatic presentation, is scheduled for Monday night, Feb 25, as part of February meetings. The drama will develop the theme selected for February meetings: "Love You Can Trust."

Directed by the Rev. Peter Vial, the drama will feature six actors: Tim Kiersnowski, Jeff Clark, Charles Fowler, Linda Crozier, Angela Murphy, and Carol Coffey.

Keynote speaker for February Meetings will be Dr. James Forbes of New York City. He has recently returned from an extended preaching mission to South Africa.

Dr. Forbes will preach on Sunday afternoon, February 24, at 2:30 and again at 7:30 p.m. He will also be the CIV speaker at 9:00 a.m. Monday.

Tuesday activities include a follow-up session linking faith and action, and two afternoon seminars focusing on world concerns and community action.

Applying the theme "Love You Can Trust" to community and world concerns, the Worship Committee is considering a number of projects, including affiliation with existing groups in Blount County, such as "Offender Aid and Restoration" and "Bread for the World"; volunteer service with Mental Health Clinics and/or Child and Family Services; the Fred Hope Fund, possibly focusing on the poverty in Haiti.

Active involvement in translating human concerns into specific areas of need is one of the goals of February meetings. Following the presentations on February 24 and 25 by Jim Forbes, the Tuesday morning session will include the relating of experiences by those who have been involved in community and world concerns. The Tuesday morning meeting is set for 10:30; afternoon seminars led by faculty and students will be at D and E hours.

Love Backsliding Blues" live from the Grand Old Opry House in Nashville, John came out and talked. He said they enjoyed doing what they were doing, admitting that it was hectic but saying they had it all together.

Next, the Wittys showed what advertising on Christian television of the future would be like. The two products they advertised were "The Rapture Ejecto Coffin" and "Fraidy Hole (so you can hide on the judgement day)."

Before the last skit Vick-Jo came out and talked about her views on what they were doing. She said that when she was younger she decided to become a missionary in Africa. She also wanted to be an actress. When she could see no way to combine drama and Africa, she turned her back on God. Now, she is working for the Lord and being an actress. She said she really enjoys it.

The last skit was entitled "Old Man Joe" and was about a man who found Christ after going to church for over 50 years. He said that he and his wife raised their boys in church but they neglected the spiritual side of life. When the boys left home, they all quit going to church. It was only after he had retired that he realized what he had been missing.

He ended the performance by saying that "Life without Jesus is like a peanut butter and jelly sandwich without the bread. It just gobs up in your mouth and you can't swallow it."

With that, the concert was over. John and VickiJo came out to greet the audience and were met with enthusiastic applause and a standing ovation.

John and VickiJo started out in 1972 as two-thirds of a comedy team called "The Insane Liberation Theatre Group." At that time, they were both students at Oklahoma State University. In 1974, they turned their talent towards religious comedy. They are recognized today by such religious leaders as Bill and Gloria Gaither and the pioneer of Christian comedy, Mark Warnke. Warnke says, "John and VickiJo Witty are two of the funniest people I have ever met and are absolutely the most effective Christian comedy team anywhere. Their quality and style equal and, in many ways, surpass anything happening in secular entertainment."

John and VickiJo Witty may offend people or step on someone's toes (as John put it "if we haven't stepped on your toes, don't worry, we will."), but they certainly get their message across: God is for you, not against you. When asked, "How do you make people laugh at religion?" they reply, "We just get up here. If people laugh, that's great. If they don't we just feel stupid."

The Echo interview: Dan Zaneski

On February 4, 1980, Dan Zaneski officially began his duties as the Scots' new head football coach. I interviewed him on February 7 in his office. The new coach is energetic and enthusiastic about his job, and has a positive outlook toward the Scots' football program.

Zaneski is 34, married, with two children. He came to MC from Plymouth State in New Hampshire. Before that, he served as an assistant at the University of Louisville, was head coach at Mattatuck (Conn.) Community College, and coached high school football and track. Mike Weiss

Echo: How were you attracted to Maryville?

Z: What primarily attracted me and got my initial interest was the region of the country; that, along with the fine football tradition that has been established in recent years, is really what stimulated me. Before I went to Plymouth St., I was coaching at the University of Louisville; and the three years I spent there probably had to be the best three years of my life. I just loved that part of the country, and my family loved it, and everybody was happy. But I wanted to depart from being an assistant and get back to being a head coach, so I went to Plymouth St. But with the cold weather and frigid winds that blow around there, my ears really perked up when I heard that the Maryville job was open. Maryville is near Knoxville, which is very much like the Louisville area. As a matter of fact, two years ago, when the position opened up, I applied for the job then. When I heard that it was open again, it really got me excited. Also the fine academic reputation that the college has makes it seem to me that it would be a very fine place to be.

Echo: What are your basic coaching philosophies, and what do you stress in order of importance?

Z: I think the game of football is an extremely important facet of a young man's life. I look at a football player not just as a football player, but as a student-athlete. I think that through the game of football, he is going to learn many things that are going to help him tackle the game of life when he gets through playing.

I do place a great deal of emphasis on winning. The idea of winning is how our country has grown to be the fine country it is today. However, we will not have a "win at all costs" attitude. We are going to stay within the rulebook, but we're going to make every possible effort that we can to win.

I am also a firm believer in discipline. I think discipline is a very critical ingredient to the success of a football program. No discipline allows for too much individuality on the football field, and football is not an individual sport.

I also believe in a tremendous amount of enthusiasm on a football team. This goes back to my basic philosophy about life. I believe that if you are going to tackle anything, do it all the way. And if you're going to do it all the way, you've got to have enthusiasm. If you've got to accomplish a task, and you do it enthusiastically, then it's not a job, it's fun.

Echo: What kind of offense will you install?

Z: I can't really tell you what I'm going to do right now. A great deal of it will depend on the personnel we have to work with. What I would like to do is run a very wide-open type offense – I'm an offense-minded football coach, with a balanced attack between the air and the ground We are not going to be a "three yards and a cloud of dust" team. I believe in putting points on the scoreboard.

Basically, we're going to run an option game. We're going to throw the ball out of the drop-back-and-play action, so it's going to be a very balanced attack, hopefully.

Echo: What will the Scots' defense look like?

Z: There are two ways to coach defense. You can coach to contain, or you can coach to attack. I believe in getting out and forcing things to happen. I believe in aggressive football, and there's nothing that's going to spark a defense more than to see a linebacker pop through and put a good hat on somebody. We're going to run basically out of a 3-4.

Echo: Do you anticipate any problems with recruiting at a school like Maryville?

Z: The only problem I have right now is the time element. The change-over in coaching has definitely hurt the recruiting effort. We're going to utilize every connection possible to attract student-athletes to this college. In the future, this is a school that is not going to be difficult to recruit for. It has a fine academic reputation, a very beautiful campus, and a fine athletic reputation. The facility here is fine, although the stadium could use some improvements, and now that we're a member of O.D.A.C., that's going to give us a conference title to go after. The way financial aid is structured, if there's need, there's money there for a student. So down the road, I look at this as being an ideal school to recruit for.

Echo: Is there a single football coach, college or pro, that you admire most?

Z: No, there's not a single one. There have been many that I've learned a great deal from. As a youngster and through my college career, I really admired Bear Bryant; but I haven't attempted to fashion myself after him. To be a successful coach, you've got to be your own man. As far as style of coaching, I learned a great deal from Vince Gibson (Louisville), and Johnny Majors. But it's just a conglomeration of picking up ideas here and there.

Echo: Do you have any long-range goals that you would like to achieve at Maryville?

Z: Win the national championship. That's definitely a forseeable goal. Our immediate goal is to win O.D.A.C. If we're talking about goals, I'd put it in three steps: number one, to win O.D.A.C.; number two, to secure an N.C.A.A. play-off bid; number three, to win the national championship.

Echo: How do you feel about the players you have returning, and the outlook for next season?

Z: There is some good talent returning next year. It's going to provide us with a good nucleus. We do have to fill some gaps created by graduation and so forth, either through recruits or young players coming up through the ranks.

As far as the athletes that I've met personally, so far they are good examples of what student-athletes should be. However, I might come across a few that might change my mind. They seem to be very disciplined, polite, attentive, and most important, very enthusiastic. I'm pleased with the individuals that I've met so far.

"I look at a football player not just as a football player, but as a student-athlete."

"There are two ways to coach defense. You can coach to contain, or you can coach to attack. I believe in getting out and forcing things to happen."

"If we're talking about goals, I'd put it in three steps: number one, to win O.D.A.C.; number two, to secure an N.C.A.A. play-off bid; number three, to win the national championship."

Intramural basketball is on the way up. The Zoo Crew and the Loadstars battle it out.

Intramural b-ball shooting through season

GIRLS

Women's Intramural Basketball got under way last week. There are four teams this year. They are: N.A.O.W.'s, captain Blinky Hinds; Wasted Again, captain Bev Woeber; Bad Girls, captain Bonita Terry; and Cowgirls, captain Birdie Hill. Last Thursday was the first game between Wasted Again and Bad Girls. Wasted Again defeated Bad Girls 34-12 after an exhilarating game. Friday, N.A.O.W.'s and Cowgirls scrimmaged.

Thursday, Feb. 14, at 6 p.m., Bad Girls will play Cowgirls and, at 7 p.m., Wasted Again will play N.A.O.W's. Women's Intramural Volleyball will also start this week.

GUYS

January 16 was the kick-off date for ten teams competing for the title of Men's Intramural Basketball champions. The teams making up this year's program are Zoo Crew, Basketcases, Rejects, Loadstars, B-bombs, Red Eyes, Studs, Shooting Stars, E.H.P., and Undertakers.

In the first four games of the season, E.H.P. defeated the Basketcases, the pre-season favorite Undertakers downed the Zoo Crew, the Shooting Stars defeated the Rejects, and the Studs downed the Loadstars. As of February 12 there were only two teams undefeated. The Undertakers and the Studs both stood at 7-0, with the showdown of these teams being pegged as the best game of the season.

History was made this season as the Zoo Crew won its first game in two years and won its second game only a week later.

Several changes in intramural basketball rules were introduced this year. Under new directorship, the 3-point shot and the alternating jump ball were instituted. At the end of the season all teams will participate in a tournament.

Sunday curses Ladies

The Maryville College Lady Scots lost two games and gained one win after tough competition last week. Last Tuesday night was the Lady Scots' only win of the week after an exciting game against Tusculum College. The Lady Scots' Brenda Babb was the high scorer with a total of 26 points, while Rachel Reese followed closely behind with 24 points. The final score was MC 73 - Tusculum 63.

Saturday night the Lady Scots were beat by Austin Peay Lady Governors. In the first half of the game the Lady Scots were led by Sandy Rabun's scoring efforts. At the half, the score was 34-34. In the second half Austin Peay's defense tightened up and they defeated the Lady Scots by a final score of 81-53. The high scorer for the game was Austin Peay's Golena Rucker with a total of 27 points. The high scorer for the Lady Scots was Sandy Rabun with 15 points.

Because of inclement weather, Wednesday night's game was rescheduled for Sunday. On Sunday, the Scots and Lady Scots travelled to Sewanee and both suffered defeat at the hands of the Sewanee Tigers and Tigerettes. The women's score was MC 55, Sewanee 61. Rachel Reese was high scorer with 10 points.

This week's schedule for the Lady Scots: Thursday, Feb. 14, away game at Milligan, and Saturday, Feb. 16, home game against Hiawassee at 5:30.

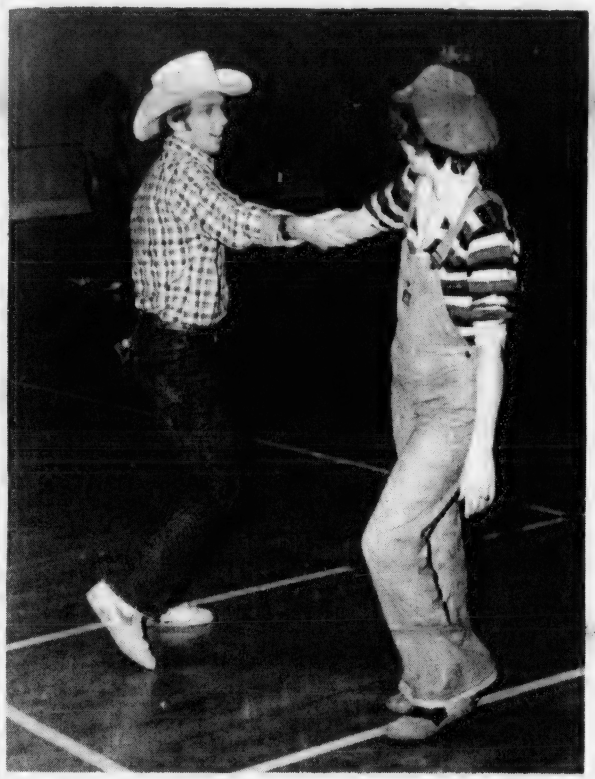
The few known facts of the Saints' lives are so interwoven with undocumented traditions that it is impossible to distinguish fact from legend. Neither wrote any love songs, nor has anyone ever risen up to accuse either of them of casting "sheep's eyes" on any Roman maidens. Both Valentines would most likely be surprised to find themselves a lover's saint.

Another legend regarding the theory of how the name Valentine came to be connected with the day is based on the belief throughout rural Europe during the Middle Ages that the birds began to mate on Feb. 14. Chaucer, in his Parliament of Foules, refers to the belief in this way:

For this was Seynt Valentyne's Day,
When every foul cometh ther to choose his mate.



English literature, following Chaucer, contains frequent references to Feb. 14th as sacred to lovers. Shakespeare, Drayton, and Gay are among those who mention it with this type of connection.

Those who disbelieve the old opinion about the mating of birds on Feb. 14th suggest that the association grew out of the similarity between the Norman word, Galantin, meaning a lover of women, and the name of the saint. They think that Gallantin's Day, with the letter "G" frequently pronounced as "V," led to the confusion in the modern mind.

Another theory is that the association with lovers is a survival, in Christianized form, of a practice that occurred on Feb. 14th, the day before the ancient Roman feast of the "Lupercalia." At that time, names of young women were put in a box and drawn out by chance, an arrangment by which a young man became the gallant of the young women for the next year, or at least became her partner for the festival.

February Meetings focus on "Love you can trust"

February Meetings have been a part of Maryville College life since before the Civil War. In 1895 the primary purpose of the sessions was the conversion of students to Christ. By 1920 the objective was to build up Christian character, inspire usefulness in life, and prepare one for the immortal life beyond. In the mid fifties, the stated purpose had changed to devoting a portion of the college year to spiritual emphasis. By 1970 the purpose had become the confrontation of the college community with ideas and perspectives in the Christian's relation concerning his nation and church.

Having changed quite a bit over the years, the idea of February Meetings today is the initiation of student involvement in service on the community or individual level. The object is to get the student to examine his role in community and world affairs, not exclusively, but essentially from a Christian perspective.

The theme of this year's February Meetings is "Love You Can Trust." The sessions begin with services at New Providence Presbyterian Church on Sunday the 24th and continue with CIV programs, worship services, a dramatic presentation, and two seminars, through Tuesday the 26th of February. Sunday afternoon at 3:00 p.m. there will be a traditional Protestant worship service in which the Maryville College Concert Choir will sing and Dr. James Forbes will preach. Sunday night at 7:00 p.m. Dr. Forbes will conduct a "free church" worship service, accompanied by the choir and followed by a reception in the FAC lounge.

The subject of the Monday morning CIV presentation by Dr. Forbes deals with taking the love of God and applying it to reaching out to others in the Christian perspective. Monday night in the chapel at 8:00 p.m. Christ in the Concrete City, a drama by P. W. Turner, will be presented, followed by a reception in the FAC lounge.

The CIV Tuesday morning is designed as a preface for the two seminars that afternoon. The CIV will

Famed guitarist performs

Classical guitarist Douglas Niedt, described by a critic as "one of the most outstanding young musicians in the world today," will perform at MC Tuesday, February 26, as part of the Performing Artists Concert series.

The concert is set for 8:15 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

Niedt began playing guitar at age seven when his father, also a guitarist, gave him his first lessons. Since then, Niedt has improved his playing through studies at the Juilliard School of Music, the Segovia Master Classes in Spain and with Narcisco Yepes, Christopher Parkening, Jorge Morel and Oscar Ghiglia.

In 1973, Niedt, then age 21, made his New York debut in Carnegie Hall. "After his debut," stated the New York Times, "there was no doubt that he was a gifted performer." Since that time he has performed in major concert series throughout the United States.

Niedt was the first guitarist to be accepted into the prestigious and highly competitive Artist Presentation Society,placing first among all instruments entered. Niedt also finished first in the Chet Atkins International Guitar Competition in which 300 guitarists from around the world competed.

Neidt recently completed his first recording, the critically acclaimed "Classical Guitar Artistry," which contains his own arrangements never before played on the guitar.

Raymond Ericson of the New York Times wrote, "Mr. Niedt is not only a brilliant master of his instrument but a performer of great sensitivity; the wealth of sound and the dynamic finesse which he elicits from the guitar promise to make him a worthy companion of the few great guitarists such as Andres Segovia and

ARA not living up to promised standards

I would like to depart, for a moment, from the Echo sports page, so that I may voice an opinion. I do so out of desperation. And nausea.

I feel that I must be blunt. The food prepared by ARA stinks. Literally. More important, and upsetting, is that it is not fit for consumption by man or beast. Grease, slime, age, and many different names for basically the same food are all trademarks of ARA fare. How many times have you readers thrown up your hands (or stomachs) in disgust, deciding to forego the slop that's offered and settling for a peanut butter sandwich and a bowl of Fruit Loops for supper?

I have a feeling that the administration hears the complaints over ARA and says, "Those fickle students! They moaned about SAGA, so we threw them out, and now they're groaning over the replacement they begged for!" In other words, "Let them eat cake." (It would probably be stale.)

Driven by curiosity (and irregularity), I did a little research. The February 22, 1979, issue of this paper ran an article by Wendy Magee which reported the dissatisfaction with SAGA and painted a rosy picture of ARA as a potential replacement. It quoted Food Committee members who went to Carson-Newman to judge the ARA operation there. The comments were all favorable. The article went on to mention several other Tennessee schools who employed ARA and found it quite satisfactory. We must get their leftovers.

Here is how the article described part of ARA's program: "A typical breakfast on ARA's plan included such items as eggs to order, omelettes, bacon, ham or sausage every day, danish pastry or donuts, English muffins, hot chocolate, and other various beverages."

If you'll notice, there are a couple of items here that we see only when we are home on vacation. There were also several items listed on the lunch and dinner schedules that we have never seen. The article is available in the Echo office for inspection.

The part that really made me laugh was the following: ". . . ARA's main objectives are to introduce greater variety into the menu, relieve monotony, satisfy students' differences in tastes and food preferences, initiate and maintain a strict sanitation program, and put new life into the dining service so that students will regard it as a plus to campus life . . ."

Need I go further? As far as greater variety is concerned, how many times have we been served that orange-colored slab of "meat" that squirts grease when you cut it, or that piece of fish with the red glaze that should have been thrown back? Relieve monotony? An ARA meal is about as exciting as English 121. Strict sanitation? Ha! Every day we get silverware with yesterday's corned-beef hash still clinging loyally. And how about the glasses we drink out of that smell like old sweatsocks? They usually have nice little particles on them, too. And the only plus ARA adds is to profits of local restaurant establishments from increased MC patronage.

I certainly hope the administration and/or food committee does something to resolve this problem. Malnutrition is not one of my favorite pastimes. Until then, pass the Fruit Loops.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

We thought the Echo might like to print this letter to the editors of Time. It would give all the students at Maryville College an opportunity to see it. Thank You.

To the Editors:

As students at Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee, we were astounded by the ARA Services advertisement on page twenty-five of the February 18 issue of your magazine. ARA provides the food services here on campus. We question the integrity of the advertisement on the grounds that we have had fish and/or veal patties for the past nineteen days.

A company that compromises on the quality of their smaller contracts should not prostitute the fact that they have the food services contract for the Winter Olympics. We sincerely hope that the Olympic athletes and their hopes for gold medals do not literally go down the tubes.

Sincerely,

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, P.O. Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, TN 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, staff, and/or college administration.

Echoes from the past...

The February 15, 1929, Highland Echo included this comment on February meetings: " This morning 582 students expressed their determination to become Christians or else to make some definite advance in the Christian life, if already Christians. There can be no such accounting of the total good effect the (February) meetings have had."

The April 29, 1929, Echo was happy to report that "moonshining" privileges were to be extended to Vespers. Men would now be allowed to escort women to the service and sit with them so long as two rules were observed. No talking or writing of notes during services, and men must leave the dormitories promptly after walking the girls home. This "much-longed-for privilege" was immediately taken advantage of by 35 couples.

Jim Forbes to be featured speaker for Feb. Meetings

The annual February meetings being held the 24-26 is featuring the renowned Rev. James Forbes as the guest speaker. He will also be speaking at New Providence Presbyterian Church on Sunday, Feb. 24th. Rev. Forbes will be speaking on the topic of relating to the love of God and reaching out to others through God's love.

Presently, Rev. Forbes is the Associate Professor of Worship and Homeletics at the Union Theological Seminasry of New York. His extensive educational credentials include a B.S. degree in Chemistry from Howard University and a Divinity degree from Colgate-Rochester Divinity School of New York. Other honors and distinctins awarded are: First Black clergyman since Reconstruction to offer the opening prayer at the 1973 Session of the House of Delegates of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Virginia; Fellow, The Martin Luther King Jr. Black Church Studies Program, Colgate-Rochester Divinity School; Pan-Hellenic Council Community Leadership Award, Richmond, Virginia, 1973; member of National Committee of Black Churchmen; and Chairman of the Education Department of the United Holy Church of America.

Including his position as professor, speaker, and other leadership offices, he is also the husband of Betty Franks Forges and father to an eight year old son, James Avril.

Jim Forbes, principal speaker for February Meetings, will share his views on "Love you can trust" with the MC community.

Questionnaire seeks response to management

Maryville College has received a grant which permits participation in a management development and training program designed to improve the management of the College in all areas. The program is being carried out in cooperation with the Higher Education Management Institute (HEMI).

Between February 25 and March 7, faculty, staff, selected students (about 200), and a few off-campus persons will have an opportunity to respond to one of several questionnaires provided by HEMI. Answers to the questionnaires will be confidential and will be recorded on printed sheets for computer tabulation by HEMI. Reports will be provided to the College based on the answers to the questionnaires and indicating areas in which management might be improved through training programs and the use of action plans.

Those participating in the surveys will receive personal communications indicating the date, time, and place for the administering of their questionnaire. Full cooperation will be appreciated in order that maximum results may be achieved.

NOMINATIONS FOR ACC ELECTIONS

Nomination forms for the 1980-81 ACC elections may be picked up in the Post Office. They must be returned to the P.O. by Friday, February 22. Elections for all class representatives and the ACC co-chairman will be held at the beginning of spring term.

Language requirement might be reinstated

WASHINGTON DC (CPS)– The President's Commission on Foreign Languages and International Studies has handed down a report that suggests that the federal government add $187 million to step up foreign language studies in this country. The commission called Americans' incompetence in foreign languages "scandalous."

The report, published after 13 months of deliberations and hearings, discovered "a serious deterioration in this country's language and research capacity, at a time when an increasingly hazardous international military, political and economic environment is making unprecedented demands on America's resources, intellectual capacity and public sensitivity."

Only eight percent of American colleges and universities now require a foreign language for admissions or graduation, compared with 34 percent in 1966.

But Congresswoman Millicent Fenwick (R-NJ) told College Press Service that she disagrees with the commission's findings.

"The importance of language and international studies at colleges and uni-

Conscientious objectors may declare themselves

The Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors has announced that they are registering individuals who are opposed to participation in the military.

Larry Spears, Director of CCCO's Youth and Conscientious Objection Campaign, says, "The need for young people to go on record as conscientious objectors to war has never been greater than it is today."

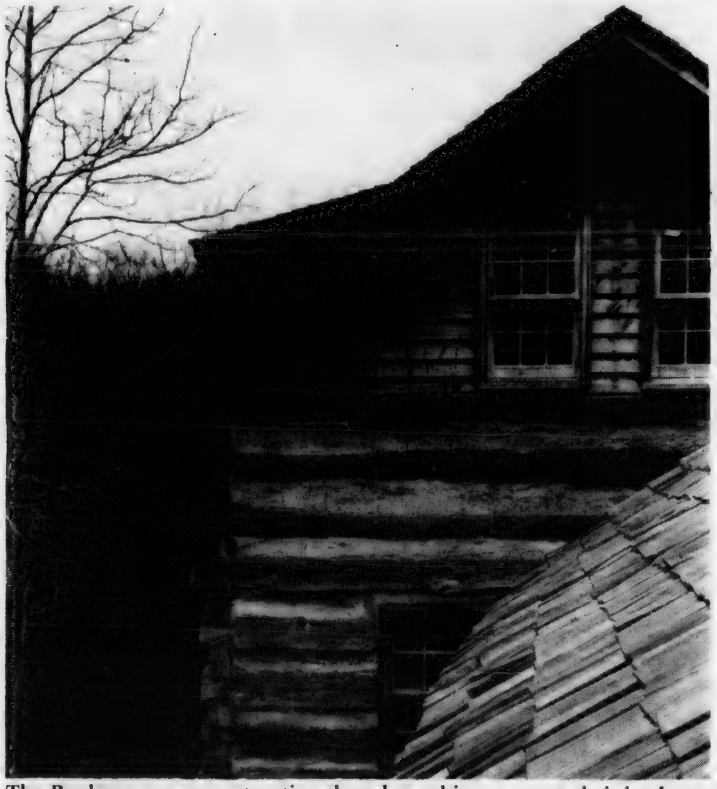
According to Spears, "There is a very real possibility that Congress will pass a bill, after the 1980 elections, requiring the mandatory registration of young people with Selective Service. Young Americans should start thinking about whether they could participate in the military."

Spears says that CCCO has already registered several thousand young people through its conscientious objection card. "These cards are available from CCCO, P. O. Box 15796, Philadelphia, PA 19103. They simply state 'Because of my beliefs about war, I am opposed to participation in the military.'"

According to Betty Alexander, a National Selective Service spokesperson in Washington, the cards could carry a lot of weight in convincing a draft board of an objector's sincerity. "It sounds like a rational approach," she said. "It shows the applicant is not experiencing a late crystallization of beliefs.

"They [CCCO] are a very organized group. They know a statement made at this time would carry a lot of weight. If the draft is reinstituted and a young man can prove he went on record in a time when he was not in danger of going to war, then it might have some influence on his board."

"The usefulness of this card," says Spears, "is that it provides a record of an individual's opposition to war and the military. Under current Selective Service regulations, an individual who is called up for active duty will have only 10 days to put together his or her CO claim. This CO card will help demonstrate to the military the thousands of young people who will not serve in the military even if the nation returns to the draft."



CCCO was founded in 1948 as the Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors and is a national agency counseling young Americans facing the prospect of military service.

A lake mirrors the Bonham's contruction efforts.

The Bonhams are reconstructing three log cabins to create their log home in Walland.

Bonhams construct log home of dreams

by Stephen Fernandez

The morning of Sunday, January 28, I was picked up by Clarence Masloski, Echo photographer. We were headed to a log cabin presently under reconstruction in the Chilhowee foothills. We drove about ten miles before he pulled the car off the main road on to a dirt drive. Above our heads hung a wooden sign stating "Cliffside." As we slowly made our way down the long drive, overhanging branches scratched and screeched against the car. Eventually a mobile home became visible. After we parked Mr. Bonham, the owner, came out to receive and direct us across a dam and up a path.

From the dam we saw a pond reflecting trees, sky, and not one but three cabins. The first cabin, situated farthest west, formerly stood about four hundred feet south-west of where it is now. It is estimated to be over one hundred years old. Four years ago, as part of a learning experience, Mr. Bonham and twenty interim students used their arms and backs to move and rebuild the cabin at its present location.

The following summer the Bonhams bought two more cabins. One was disassembled and the other was erect. In one day they disassembled the latter and loaded both on a truck. It took two trips to move the logs to their property.

During the 1977 interim, students reassembled these logs. Mr. Bonham said, "It was like doing a giant jig-saw puzzle." From that point on the Bonhams worked basically unassisted except for occasional help with heavy labor. They completed the roofs on the cabins that summer. All three cabins are made of nineteenth century materials except for roofings and a dormer, which was incorporated into the first cabin. The interior of the first cabin has two floors. The first floor serves as a guest house, containing a bed, table, bureau, and fireplace. The second floor is still under construction. Future plans for the cabin layout include a first floor living room and a second floor library/studio.

The interiors of the second and third cabins are still basically uncompleted. The entire plumbing system is to be installed in the center cabin, which will combine economy in heating and considerable savings in building costs. The first floor of the third cabin is planned for music, while the second floor is planned to be a bedroom. As Bonham states, "There are still a lot of basic decisions left, such as ecological sewage disposal."

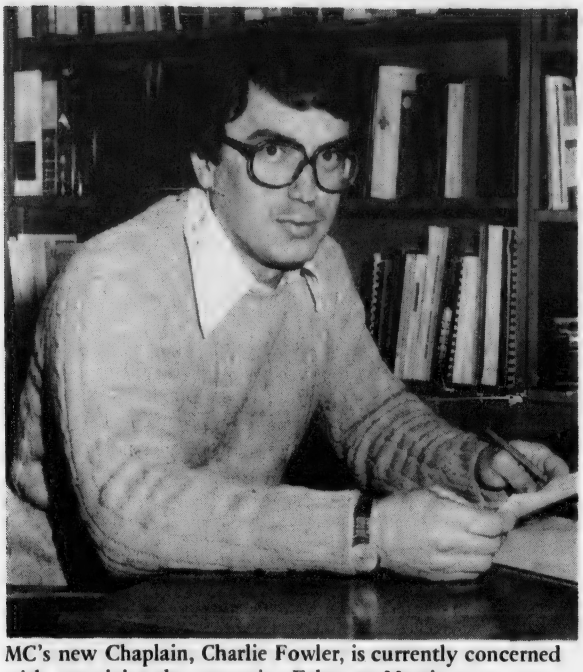
Plans for connecting the cabins include one common porch to be erected to the south of the houses. Mr. Bonham says, "I'll close in the spaces between the cabins so whatever I put in there will be protected from weather."

The antiquity of these cabins is asthetically pleasing. From the blacksmith-forged door hinges to the pellucid serenity of the surroundings, one gathers a feeling of contentment and belonging. All around are different varieties of vegatation, as exemplified in a series of quotes from Mr. Bonham, "There is a good crop of blackberries, a stunning crop of poison ivy, and if there were any money in honeysuckle, I could be wealthy. Eventually I'll have a garden up the hill, an orchard, nut trees, Everything in the future."

I asked Mr. Bonham about the time factor as it relates to reconstruction. He replied, "I'm really looking for a lot of time to work on the cabins. If we work in the summertime, I'm sure we can live in it by winter. But I need a big chunk of time to do it in."

Mr. Robert Bonham and wife Sheri stand stoically on the stoop of their wooden abode.

Are you soap(opera)-ed up?



(CPS) - Four out of ten Northern Illinois University women are involved in illicit affairs, unwanted pregnancies, divorce, and bizarre illnesses, though only one out of ten NIU men are similarly involved. Fortunately enough, their involvement is limited to watching those problems played out on soap operas.

Zodiac News Service reports that two NIU professors have found a growing number of college students are spending their afternoons following the day-to-day trials of the nations most-beleaguered tv characters.

Professors Myles Breen and Jon Powell polled about 500 NIU students, 40 percent of whom confessed they watched the soaps because they were intrigued by the plots. Thirty percent of the viewers said they watched because the characters were "so dumb." Almost 14 percent said the troubles they were watching made their own problems seem trivial. Some even said they identified with the people they watched.

"Ten or twenty years ago these students wouldn't be caught dead watching soap operas," Breen and Powell said. Now they are "national phenomena."

Powell added that the students' involvement probably wasn't a hazard to them because if they weren't watching they'd be drinking beer or doing unimportant things.

MC's new Chaplain, Charlie Fowler, is currently concerned with organizing the upcoming February Meetings.

A chaplain named Charlie?

Rev. Charles J. Fowler has been named the new chaplain for the remainder of the academic year at Maryville College.

Rev. Fowler, the son of Dr. Elizabeth Fowler, professor of English and religion at MC, is not new to the college. He holds a M.A. in mathematics and has taught mathematics part-time here at MC since January of 1978. His other educational credits include a B.S. degree in physics and Master of Divinity from Duke.

Dr. Anderson highly commended the new chaplain; "Charles Fowler has already demonstrated a keen interest in students at Mayville, through his position as a part-time mathematics instructor, and we are confident that he will continue to provide strong leadership and counsel through his new position as director of the College's religious life activities.

Presently, the religious activities provided on campus are the morning weekday worship services at 7:30, the Vesper service on Sunday night, a fellowship on Fridays, and a Bible Study on Thursdays. Though the attendance at the programs are limited, Rev. Fowler was optimistic about the potential. He plans to include community and students in the areas of music and leadership to add variety to the ongoing programs.

Currently, the main concern of Rev. Fowler is February Meetings. The Meetings are a 100-year-old tradition at Maryville College. This year's religious emphasis week is being conducted February 24th through 26th. The main attraction will be the presence of Rev. Jim Forbes of Union Theological Seminary.

Rev. Fowler's other goals are to plan service projects involving both community members and students.

Besides his job as Chaplain, Fev. Fowler is also involved with the World Concerns Committee, the Community Outreach Committee and the planning of the Worhip Committee.

Rev. Fowler is very interested in the student body and is very excited about the possibilites of increased student participation. He is also available for pastoral counseling.

NICHOLS ATTENDS MATH SEMINARS

Dr. John Nichols, associate professor of mathematics at Maryville College, recently attended the annual joint meeting of the American Mathematical Society and the Mathematics Association of America in San Antonio, Texas.

Among the sessions Dr. Nichols attended were seminars dealing with current trends for freshman mathematics and realistic application for mathematics in the 1980s.

Money flows toward MC's Century III campaign

Maryville College is spearheading a massive fund-raising drive which, if its goal is reached, will add $5,000,000 to the College treasury. The projected deadline for this "Toward Centruy III" campaign, which at this time has raised $2,572,715, is May 30, 1981. The most notable gift was presented to the College by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Beeson of Birmingham, Alabama. The gift was one of securities that will mature at $400,000. It is in the form of a Charitable Remainder Unitrust from which the donors will receive life-long income. The proceeds of the trust will ultimately provide an endowment fund to be known as the Ralph W. and Orlean B. Beeson Chaplaincy. The annual income from this endowment will cover the salary, office and program expenses of the College's chaplain. Of this award Dr. Anderson stated, "We deeply appreciate this most generous gift from Mr. and Mrs. Beeson. Their interest in Christian higher education is an inspiration to us, and their splendid gift will enable us to build on the long history and tradition of this College."

Besides the gifts and pledges, Maryville will receive a $350,000 Challenge Grant Award from the National Endowment for the Humanities over the next two years. In order to secure this grant, the College must raise, by June 30, 1980, $1,050,000 over and above the amount already acquired. The NEH Challenge Grant will be used to strengthen the academic program, primarily in the humanities, and to provide general financial stability for the College. "Not only will this challenge gift make a significant impact in our program, but it will be a real incentive for others to give to Maryville College during our current $5,000,000 'Toward Century III' campaign," Dr. Anderson said. Academic funds will be delegated to purchase much needed library materials, for reviewing the college curriculum, and for community outreach, Dr. Anderson said. According to Joseph D. Duffy, NEH chairman, the challenge grant is made available to 101 educational and cultural institutions in 32 states and the District of Columbia, and totals $27,000,000. Its aim is to provide an important financial stimulus to institutions which are being hit hard by rising costs.

Priorities for the funds attained by the "Toward Century III" campaign are faculty salaries, student aid, and building renovations. The local campaign kick-off began Friday, January 25, 1980. Considering the whole "Toward Century III" drive, Dr. Anderson stated, "It's a tremendous preoccupation of mind."

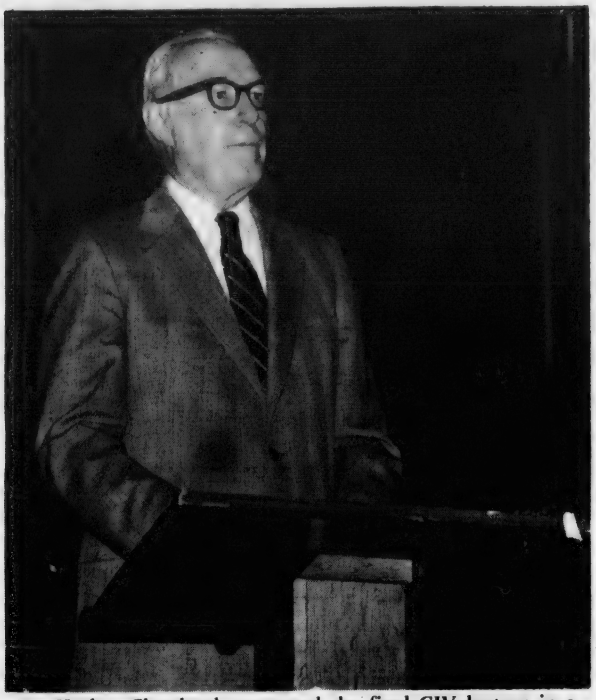
consist of speakers from the MC faculty and local community, who will give their reasons for their concern with world problems and community affairs. Two of the speakers will include MC's own Dr. Terry Bunde, assistant professor of chemistry, who was recently a delegate to the World Council of Churches Conference on Faith, Science, and the Future, and Dr. Sam Franklin, a 1924 graduate of MC who served as a missionary in Japan and bears the title Professor Emertus of Tokyo Union Theological Seminary.

The World Concern seminar Tuesday afternoon at 1:10 p.m. is designed to stimulate concern for world problems, particularly in Haiti, and discuss MC's work in the Bread for the World campaign. February Meetings will close with the Community Outreach seminar at 2:30 p.m., which will include such issues as the need for volunteers in the Child and Family Services and Mental Health Associations, the Adopt-a-Grandparent program, and the Offender Aid and Restoration (OAR) program, which deals with working with families of incarcerated prisoners.



MC offers land to MHS

MC may sell approximately 20 acres located behind Roddy Manufacturing's Coca-Cola plant to the Maryville School Board for the relocation of Maryville High School.

According to Mr. Brick Brahams, the decision rests on the cost of remodeling the old high school vs. the cost of relocation. The price of the land is one consideration, as is the possible sale of the old school building. Although the MC location would be centrally located with access to Highway 73 and Court Street, the school board could decide to relocate elsewhere.

If MC does decide to sell, the money for the land would be invested. A joint stadium for the college and the high school would be almost a certainty if the MC site is chosen. Other co-operative ventures might be considered, such as allowing MHS the use of the computer room. There would still be privacy for both institutions, however, as the highschool would be no closer than the fence behind Lloyd Hall.

Dr. Harlan Cleveland presented the final CIV lecture in a series of three dealing with ethics in America.

Cleveland offers viewpoint on ethical questions

by Jeana Webb

. The theme of Harlan Cleveland's CIV lecture on Friday, Feb. 15th, was "In theory we can, but in practice we can't." He said that Americans, in their own busy-ness, are in danger of reaching the point where they know so much that they can't figure out what to do. Mr. Cleveland talked about the transition from the seventies to the eighties which, he says, comprises a variety of changes in beliefs, loyalties, fears, aspirations, doctrines and assumptions about personal and national futures. He said the transition consists mostly of changing concepts of security, growth and equity. In his words, "If you chart the direction of those changes, you find a common characteristic: our concepts are all widening out to include factors that used to be regarded as externalities."

Mr. Cleveland believes that Abe Lincoln and Walt Kelly were right when they said, "The enemy is us." Americans take comfort in tunneling their vision. We neglect to ask pertinent questions when deciding that we want something. We plunged into the use of nuclear power without asking questions about safety, waste, and proliferation. We built highways without knowing what their effects on urban living would be.

Tunneling our vision in international affairs can be more serious. Learning by trial and error that SALT, human rights, the World Bank, and the Horn of Africa are all linked together in world politics and in American opinion should not have been necessary.

Cleveland also talked about the thing most prominent in most of our minds: The Iran Crisis. He said President Carter brought on the Iran crisis by letting himself be persuaded that only American medicine could save the Shah. Cleveland said that we are not very good at crisis avoidance.

Our biggest self-initiated crisis is powerlessness. We are just learning what we can't do with power. We sold the Shah of Iran our best and most modern weapons, before our own armed forces had them. Every industrial and urban development plan he would buy we sold. The Shah's and our security were not bought by our weapons however. Our association with the Iranians did not guarantee us the protection of simple human rights in Iran.

Cleveland then turned to the need to widen our world view, in order to manage Nature's resources for human purposes. The race between world populations and resources will not appear nearly so frightening in the eighties and nineties as it did in the seventies. Forecasters of doom made the mistake of taking the current population trend of the seventies for ultimate human destiny. They did not think about countervailing trends, such as development and chemicals. We gained knowledge, insight and wisdom in the seventies. We discovered that the problem was not a shortage of resources, but a shortage of imagination, and we came to look upon information as an expendable resource.

Black History Month spotlights famous Black Americans

(Editor's note: the month of February is designated as Black History Month. It serves as a commenoration to Blacks who have made outstanding contributions to America and its people. David Mitchell has prepared the following information as a tribute.)

Jesse Owens is perhaps the most celebrated Biack athlete of the 1936 Olympics; however, one other individual who stood out equally as well as Owens was Ralph H. Metcalfe. In the midst of Hitler's claim of the invincibility of the pure, white race, Metcalfe won a gold medal in the 400-meter relay. He came in a close second in the 100-meter sprint, behind Jesse Owens. Metcalfe served in WWII as an Army director of physical education. After the war, he became the first Black named to the Illinois State Athletic Commission. In 1952, while residing in Chicago, Metcalfe began his political career. He quickly rose to become one of the late Mayor Richard Daley's most trusted Black lieutenants. In 1970, Metcalfe won a seat in the House of Representatives and in spite of disagreements with Mayor Daley, he was constantly re-elected. Before his death in 1978, Metcalfe became a founding member of the Congessional Black Caucus, as well as founding the Ralph H. Metcalfe Youth Foundation for the old and the needy. Ralph H. Metcalfe was an uncompromising individual in his pursuit of excellence and helping humanity.

Metcalfe is but one of many Black Americans who strove and achieved status by overcoming many obstacles. There are others—like Patrik Francis Healy, America's first Black PhD and 29th President of Georgetown University; or Bill Pickett, cowboy and inventor of rodeo bulldogging, or Andrew "Rube" Foster, founder of the Negro National League. The names could go on and on. The purpose of Black History Month is to enlighten and maybe spark an interest and curiosity in those who would otherwise be uninformed.

versities is sufficiently stressed," Fenwick argued Fenwick charged the 156 page report contains "no mention of standards or achievement."

James Perkins, chairman of the commission said his group stopped short of proposing specific standards for foreign language proficiency because the commission wanted to be "practical minded."

Instead, $20 million of the language funding would go to colleges on an incentive award basis. Colleges would be paid $40 per student enrolled in third- and fourth-year language courses. An extra $15 would be added if the student takes a "less commonly taught" language. The commission thinks that the incentive program would "have major leverage in fostering foreign language programs."

Prize money offered in oratorical contest

The T. T. Alexander Prize, first established in 1928, is to be awarded May 7, 8:00 pm to the winners of an oratorical contest. The contest will be held under the supervision of the Religion Department and will award to the first place winner a prize of $50.00, and to the first runner up, a prize of $30.00.

The original trust agreement states that the subject of the oration is to be taken from vital Christian doctrines. Such topics could be Deity of Jesus Christ, Christ's Resurrection, Salvation through Faith, the Millennium, or any other topic that falls into that general category. There is a multitude of topics that could be expanded on.

The existence of this prize was unknown to the Religion Department for many years. The contest came to light about three years ago in a random file check, and will now be offered each year.

The subject of the contest this year is – Einstein's Universe and the Biblical Stories of Creation.

The oration is to be no more than twelve minutes long. Contestants will be judged on the content and presentation. The contest is open to all full-time Maryville College students. Three finalists will be selected on the basis of their manuscripts. The finalists will orate their speeches at a public forum and the winners will then be decided upon. All contestants are urged to research their speeches, and are reminded that Maryville College rules against plagiarism shall govern the content and delivery of the speeches. The orations should deal seriously with the subject matter; however they need not be solemn.

The past history of this prize is oblique due to the will of the original donor to remain anonymous. The original monetary donation was $2,000.00. Any student wishing to compete should submit an intent to participate, in writing, to Box 2833 by March 14. All final manuscripts should be submitted to the same box no later than April 18. The finalists will be announced by April 25. Any further questions should be directed to Dr. Cartlidge in Anderson Hall.

Ed Davalos and Ron Cuneo practice in preparation for upcoming wrestling matches.

King rules contest

The basketball Scots travelled to Virginia for a two-game road trip last week, losing 77-60 to Roanoke College and defeating Emory and Henry 76-67, before dropping a heartbreaker at home to King, 54-53.

On February 12, Roanoke drilled the Scots behind the 25 points of Ken Benton. Doug Tutin led the Maryville team with 16. The Scots bounced back the next night, however, as Tutin continued his hot shooting, canning 20 points. Rich Suttle added 16 as MC beat Emory and Henry for the second time this year. Tutin has replaced Dale Watson as the starter at strong forward, and has responded by "scoring like he is capable of scoring," according to coach Rick Byrd.

The loss to King was an unfortunate one for the Scots, who had hoped for an upset over the powerful Tornado. "We outplayed and outhustled King" said Byrd. The Scots hurt themselves with turnovers in the second half, including a key fumble when they held a small lead late in the game. Rodney Nelson missed a one and one which would have given the Scots a 3-point lead with 10 seconds remaining. "Everyone misses sometimes in that situation," said Byrd, "and Rodney's made a lot more for us than he's missed. Nobody felt worse about it than he did." King rebounded and scored with 3 seconds left. A desperation MC attempt was thwarted by an interception.

The Scots' record is 11-11, with two home games left, February 16 versus Steed and February 26 against Bryan.

Dale Watson gains two points for the Scots under pressure from King College players.

Wrestlers tighten own grip

By Ron Cuneo

In the late fall, the Maryville College wrestling team began its practices in an uphill effort to rebuild the weak and scattered team of the previous year. Some recruiting was done; senior Ed Davalos returned to MC after a year at Carson-Newman. At first, the Scots seemed to have a reliable and disciplined coach in Steve Fickert.

During the first month of practice the Scots worked hard. The team began to take form and appeared to be on its way to a successful season. Freshman Dino Thornton (118 lbs.) and junior John Lacava (126 lbs.) gave the Scots impressive contestants in the lower weight classes, while Ed Davolos (150 lbs.) and sophomore Ron Cuneo (158 lbs.) anchored the middle weights. The remaining weight classes were filled with promising but untested talent.

Upon returning to school for Winter term, the team was left without a coach, as Coach Fickert went on to pursue a more equitable coaching position. Many of the new wrestlers quit because of the adverse situation. Eventually Coach O'Brien scheduled some matches and Ed Davolos ran the diminished team through practices. Greg Hosler (134 lbs.), Art Isham (167 lbs.), Dan Farmer (142 lbs.), and Tom Ginsberg (190 lbs.) joined the team as it traveled to Sewanee and Tennessee Tech. Ed Davolos brought a 3-0 record into the Mid-South tourney, but was knocked out of it after three matches. John Lacava's record fell to 2-2 with a similar performance, while Ron Cuneo, despite avenging an earlier loss at Tenn. Tech, dropped to 1-3. All three lost to the eventual winners in their respective weight classes. Freshman Dino Thornton missed the tourney because of a bruised hand; his record was 2-1.

Because of bad weather conditions and several minor injuries, many of the Scots' matches were cancelled.

In the future, more interest and participation by the student body, and greater efforts in recruiting and planning by the athletic department, must be shown if the wrestling Scots are to ever approach their nationally ranked status of four years ago.

Runners take off in second Scots' Road Race

The second annual Scots Spring Road Race, which raised over $1,700 last year for minor sports programs at MC, is set for Saturday, March 29, at 10 a.m.

Co-sponsored by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times and the MC athletic department, this year's race again includes a one-mile "fun run-walk" around campus, a 5-kilometer (3.1 miles) run, and a 10-kilometer (6.2 miles) course through Greenbelt Park. The 5k and 10k races this year will be electrically timed.

A total of 228 awards will be given in the various events, along with T-shirts to all finishers.

The overall male and female winners in the 5k and 10k races will receive trophies, as will each male and female winner in various age categories. Second through fifth place finishers in each age category will receive ribbons.

Entry fee for the Scots Road Race is $5. All proceeds after expenses will go to support the Maryville College athletic program.

Registration forms are available at the physical education building or the office of student services on campus.

John Rhodes aims carefully as his turn comes up in the pool tournament held last week in Carnegie Hall.

PARKER PUBLISHES

Dr. Russell Parker, professor of history at MC and secretary of the faculty, has published an article entitled, "The Early Years: Alcoa, Tennessee 1919-1939," in the current issue of the East Tennessee Historical Society's Publications. A companion article, "Years of Change: Alcoa, Tennessee 1940-1960," will appear in the next issue, which should be available in mid-summer.

Wind Ensemble tunes

The Maryville College Wind Ensemble, under the direction of Mr. Gene Taliaferro-Jones, will present a concert on Tuesday, March 4th, at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

Selections will include Walton's Crown Imperial, Alfred's Vanished Army, Macbeth's Masque, Gershivin's American in Paris, Schuman's Chester, Leslie's Night Flight to Madrid, and the Theme from The Battlestar Galactica.

There is no admission charge for the concert.

The wind ensemble has been rehersing for some time in preparation for next Tuesday's concert.

Sounds of America heard

The Sounds of America, a patriotic and religious musical group stressing devotion to God and pride in country, will perform at Wilson Chapel Friday, February 29, at 8 p.m.

The show, which is sponsored by area banks and the Alcoa Kiwanis Club, is free.

The Sounds of America shows are a mixture of patriotic and religious music, some contemporary and some traditional, for all ages based on four themes the group uses: "In God We Trust," "A Positive Example of American Youth," "One Nation Under God," and "It's Great to be an American." Performances last from one to two hours.

The group is comprised of high school and college students ages 18-23. Membership is not based on auditions of musical talent but on a commitment to God and America, enthusiasm, and high moral standards. Tom and Nancy Hasty of Charlotte, N.C., serve as adult advisers, but the group makes all decisions and arranges all its own music and staging.

The Sounds of America was formed in 1966 for local performances in Charlotte, and has grown to nationwide prominence, performing at such places as the Grand Canyon, Disneyland, and CBS in Hollywood. They have appeared with many nationally known personalities, including Gerald Ford, Billy Graham, and leaders of commerce and industry.

Leap Year's Day fluke of calendar

Leap Year's origin can be traced back to the calendar change adopted in 45 B.C. by the Roman ruler Julius Caesar. With the help of astronomers, especially a Greek mathematician from Egypt named Sosigenes, Caesar fixed the solar year at 365 days and six hours (365¼ days). At the end of four years, the extra six hours per year made one additional day. Caesar then declared that following three years of 365 days each, there should be a fourth year comprised of 366 days. The shortest month of the Roman calendar was 28-day February, so he added the extra day to it.

Spring fever epidemic strikes

"Spring has sprung" – or so rumor has it. Every year at about this time changes in the prevailing weather conditions cause a massive campus outbreak of "februarius foolishius," more commonly known as spring fever.

To catch the notorious fever, one need only sit in the sun and breathe the germ-filled air. The steps of Pearsons are an exceptionally contagious location, expecially around 12:30 in the afternoon. The back lawns of Lloyd and Dorm I and the balconies of Davis are other well-known breeding grounds for this peculiar virus. Diseased persons often congregate around the post office. All of these areas should be placed under quarantine for the student intent on studying for an exam or completing a term paper.

The symptoms of the disease are numerous. The victim may first experience a sudden swelling of the lungs, due to the unaccustomed warmth of the air. This may lead to the shedding of sweaters, shoes, and other confining articles of clothing. Inertia usually sets in promptly. Some victims appear unable to leave their sunny locations in time for D- or E-hour. Others, especially females, tend to fall prostrate on beach towels. Still others become convinced of the redeeming properties of the Frisbee. And then there is the occasional victim who stands, books in hand, staring dejectedly at the mountains. This represents the final and most dangerous stage of affliction.

Victims of spring fever can be positively identified. If you have recently counted the remaining days until spring break, you are probably a carrier of the disease. If you have counted them more than once, you are a definite victim and should seek immediate help.

There is no known cure for spring fever. As long as warm, sunny weather holds, persons who have contracted the disease are doomed to suffer from it. A return to normal winter weather, however, is usually effective in breaking the spell. If prolonged gloom, chill, and wetness prevail, the spring fever victim may experience a severe let-down. Fortunately, this usually lifts at the onset of the next warm spell.

Spring fever is no respecter of persons. It strikes without warning, utterly regardless of time, place, or position. It is oblivious to the obligations of its victims. Its call is urgent, incessant, undefiable. Even newspaper editors are prone to its follies.

The mountains were beautiful last weekend. . . .

Letters to the Editor

Letter To The Editor:

Last week I read an editorial in the Echo which extremely upset me. The editorial, entitled "A.R.A. not living up to promised standards," led the reader to false convictions against A.R.A. Don't get me wrong. I eat the same food all the other students eat and I feel basically the same as the rest as far as improvement is concerned. The things that upset me were the tactics that the writer used. First of all, I believe that when someone has a gripe, they should speak to the person in charge of the specific division they are having problems with (i.e. food service). I think that the matter was taken out of the boundaries of its own seriousness. The writer claimed he researched; but really, how much research was accomplished where it was most important? Did anyone go to speak with Ms. Susan Standridge, manager of A.R.A., concerning the problems cited in the editorial...No. Did anyone go speak to the Dean of Student Services about the problem...No.

I feel that proper research is more than looking up a past article in the Echo and pulling a few quotes from it.

Secondly, there were major discrepancies in last week's article. The author stated that we are denied a "typical breakfast on A.R.A.'s plan." This is not so. I attend breakfast almost every morning and the choices available to me are "eggs to order, omelettes, bacon, ham or sausage every day, Danish pastry or donuts, English muffins (or biscuits), hot chocolate, and other various beverages." The author goes on to state that the above listed items are ones "that we see only when we are home on vacation." I dispute that statement, for anyone who attends breakfast will find all these items plus an occasional addition. The writer then writes about a "piece of fish with red glaze that should have been thrown back." Well, if he did all the research as adequately as he led me to believe he would have discovered that the red glaze was Paprika, a very common seasoning used on fish.

About the matter of stale cake. Yes, it is stale a lot. This is because A.R.A. tries to keep up with student demands for cake. I suggested that they cut down on cake production, so the supply will diminish and will be eaten before it can get stale...any other ideas?

In closing this letter I do want to stress that this is not an attack on the author of the first article. Not at all. It is an attack against the principles he used in writing his article. As far as I'm concerned he broke almost every "commandment" that a true reporter should follow...facts and research. I was appalled that the Echo would even consider the article for print, much less print it.

I feel that last week's article was totally out of place in the literary realm of journalism.

Very Sincerely,
Steven C. Fernandez

Echoes from the past...

The June 3, 1929 Echo carried the following notice: "The college barn, which has been an eyesore to the college, will probably be replaced by a more modern and we hope a more substantial edifice. Today the roof caved in and two men working in the barn narrowly escaped injury. One of the men was pinned between two of the animals, but was gotten out safely."

Thomas, Wiley shine in "Abelard and Heloise"

By Lois Boney

The Maryville College Playhouse production of Ronald Millar's Abelard and Heloise last week broke a long-running stalemate in theater on this campus. Directed by Mr. Donald Thomas, the twelfth-century romance about Peter Abelard, a prominent religious teacher of his time, and Heloise, his beautiful and intelligent student, was beautifully performed with Bill Thomas and Linda Wiley carrying the lead roles. They were dynamic and moving in portraying two lovers who suffer immensely for the cause of salvation. The play is a flashback, tracing the love affair, marriage, and tragic separation of Abelard and Heloise, which ends in a spiritual reconciliation between each other and with God.

The main supporting characters consisted of Fulbert, Heloise's over possessive and strict uncle, played by Allen Evitts; Gilles de Vannes, a canon who befriends Abelard and Heloise, played by Frank Fiore; Robert de Montboissier, a young monk played by John Morton who is on leave from his order to study with the great Abelard; the Abbess of Argenteuil, played by Marianne Sawdon, who provides refuge and guidance for Heloise; Sister Godric, played by Ruth Cartlidge, a good friend and confidante to the young Heloise; and Guibert, played by George Casutto, whose carnal desires drive him to betray Abelard and bring about his fate.

John Morton portrays Robert as a sensitive young monk who harbours a love for his master that offers no chance for resolution. The scene in which Robert reveals that his love for Abelard is identical to the love Heloise feels is one of the play's best. Allen Evitts exibits his ability as a character actor along with Ruth Cartlidge, who gives a very fine performance as Sister Godric. Other fine performances include those of Muff Sawdon and a newcomer to the MC stage, Frank Fiore.

Abelard and Heloise requires undivided attention and an open mind on behalf of the audience to follow the action of the play and accept the actors and actresses in dramatic roles. Mr. Thomas is to be highly commended for presenting a show exibiting quality directing and hard work by the entire cast and crew. Along with the familiar faces, it is good to see new faces and enthusiasm on the stage and in the director's chair. The revival of theater at MC is long overdue, and Abelard and Heloise provides a strong cornerstone from which to build and develop.

Alberic (Tim Stuart) and Gilles (Frank Fiore) discuss Abelard's demise as a teacher after he falls in love with Heloise.

Peter Abelard (Bill Thomas) and Heloise (Linda Wiley) are finally reconciled after a long, painful separation in the final scene.

Orchestra concert tonight

The Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra, under the direction of Gene Taliaferro-Jones, will present a concerto contest on Thursday, February 28, at 8:15 p.m. in the MC Chapel. Admission is $2.00 for adults and $1.50 for students.

Four soloists will be featured this year. Mary MacPhee, a senior applied music major from Colts Neck, NJ, will perform the second movement of Khachaturian's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, transcribed for flute by Rampal.

Kajurou Ohi, a sophomore applied piano major from Tokyo, Japan, will play the first movement of Saint-Saens' Concerto No. 2 in G Minor.

David Fisher, a sophomore Music Education major from Mecquon, Wisconsin, will perform the first movement of Haydn's Second Horn Concerto in D Major.

Steven Proffitt, a Maryville High School senior, will perform Faure's Elegy for Cello.

The orchestra will also perform Wagner's Overture to Der Fliegende Hollander (The Flying Dutchman) and Dukas' Fanfare to La Peri.

Faculty hold monthly meeting

Mid-term grades for all freshmen and all students on probation, participation in the Higher Education Management Institute (HEMI), and review of tenured faculty were items announced to the faculty at the meeting last Wednesday, February 20.

To assist students who may encounter difficulties at Maryville College, the faculty will be requested to submit a mid-term grade report to the Registrar's Office. These reports are to be compiled and called to the attention of the advisers who will counsel the students who are experiencing difficulty.

The HEMI program was initiated in 1971 through a grant from the Exxon Corporation to design, test, and disseminate management development and training programs for colleges and universities. The task force at Maryville College includes R. I. Brahams, Jr., chairman; Billie Sue Howard, Dr. Larry Mangus, and Keith Bruckner. Immediate involvement of all college personnel is scheduled this week when each individual will reply to a questionnaire regarding his/her perception of how the college is being managed.

The Faculty Personnel Standards Committee, chaired by Mrs. Edith Largen, reported the beginning of the annual review of certain tenured faculty who are scheduled for the five-year review. Other members of the committee include Dr. Carolyn Blair, Dr. Russell Parker, and Robert Bonham.

Other items of business at the Faculty Meeting included a discussion of negotiations with the Maryville School Board regarding sale of property, the medical technology program with East Tennessee Baptist Hospital, and the annual budget.

Scots squeeze final point from Bryan College

The Scots raised their record to 14-11 last week with wins over Centre, 60-58, and Bryan, 77-74.

MC beat Centre for the second time this year, this one in overtime on February 20 at Danville, KY. The Scots had to come from 15 points down at halftime to gain the victory. "The first half was probably our poorest half of the year," said Coach Byrd, "but the guys never thought they were out of it, and we played great defense in the second half." Senior guard Rodney Nelson scored 14 points after being blanked in the first half. Rich Suttle also had 14, and grabbed 16 rebounds, equalling his own high mark for Maryville this year. But it took Doug Tutin's two clutch free throws with 41 seconds remaining in overtime to seal the Colonels' fate.

On Feb. 23, the Scots hung on to beat a scrappy Bryan team at home. MC was obviously a more powerful team than the visitors, but couldn't pull away from the Lions, who led by 1 at the half. Freshman Andrew Baker's big 3 point play late in the game iced the victory. Junior Dale Watson played his finest game as a Scot, scoring 16 points and pulling down 7 rebounds. Kelley Hall canned 15, several coming on his long, high-arching jump shots.

The Scots have won 4 out of their last 5, including a forfeit against Steed.

Brenda Babb claims two points for the Lady Scots in last Saturday's game against Sewanee.

Women's regional tournament to be held at MC March 6-8

On March 6-8 the Women's Regional Basketball Championships for Division III will be held at Maryville. Representatives from North Carolina, South Carolina, Kentucky, Virginia, and Tennessee will be attending. The Lady Scots are automatic participants in an at-large position because they are the hostess team.

Students will be able to watch exciting basketball action by securing a tournament pass for $5.00 or by attending individual games for $1.00. Sharon Brown, Tournament Director, would like to let MC students in free, but the Region requires that admission by charged for all spectators.

Teams will be coming in on Wednesday evening for practice in the gym from 5:00 p.m. until 10:30 p.m. The women's physical education dressing room will be in use from 12:00 noon til 11:00 p.m. on March 6 and 7, and from 9:00–5:00 on March 8. Teams will also be using the men's athletic locker room for dressing at the aforementioned times.

Coach Brown hopes that the tournament will not inconvenience MC students to a great degree and that everyone will come to support the Lady Scots.

The first and second place teams from this tournament will advance to the National Tournament in Spokane, Washington.

So it goes...

Scotland Yard has more than 1.75 million fingerprints on file.

Ladies lose by a little but win by a lot

The Lady Scots were narrowly edged out, 71-70, by Tusculum College last Tuesday night in a fiercely-fought contest. The Lady Pioneers won the game as they sank two free throws with one second remaining on the clock.

Saturday, the women avenged an earlier 8-point loss to Sewanee. They simply out-classed their opponent, handing Sewanee an 85-65 defeat.

Brenda Babb was the leading scorer in the Tusculum game with 24 points. Candy Nutter had 17, and Sandy Rabun collected 11. Sandy Rabun, with a 23-point first-half effort, had 25 points against Sewanee, while Donna Owens followed close behind with 20. Brenda Babb added 11. Bobbie Jo Sallade, the only senior on the MC team, played her last home game at MC.

The Lady Scots are looking forward to the state tournament, which is to be held this weekend at Sewanee.

Vol. 65 No. 17 March 6, 1980 Maryville College Maryville, Tennessee

The MC touring choir was chosen from the ranks of the entire Concert Choir, pictured here in full concerrt dress.

Choir bound for Florida

The Maryville College Concert Choir will give 14 performances and sing at 4 worship services in Florida over a 10-day period during its 30th annual Spring tour set for March 16-25.

Prior to its Florida tour, the MC choir will participate in the 10:45 a.m. worship service on March 9 at the Greystone Presbyterian Church of Knoxville, the home church of choir member Tim Stuart, senior education major at MC and tour manager of this year's choir trip. Later the same evening, the choir will perform at the 7:30 p.m. worship service at the First United Methodist Church of Knoxville.

The trip will mark the fifth time MC's choir has visited Florida, the last time being in 1976. This year they will perform in churches and high schools in 12 cities throughout Florida.

In Florida, the choir will sing at nine churches, including the Westminster United Presbyterian Church in Bradenton where Maryville College President-Emeritus Ralph Waldo Lloyd is an active member.

The 45-member touring choir, chosen from the 58-member concert choir, will leave MC at approximately 7:30 p.m. on Friday, March 14. In Florida, they will present a diversified program covering five centuries of choral music appropriate to the Lenten season.

The three-part program features two numbers from Randall Thompson's Mass of the Holy Spirit, and "Daniel," a poem by midwestern poet Vachel Lindsay set to music by Maryville College choir director Harry H. Harter. "Daniel" premiered on the MC campus during the Vachel Lindsay Festival last November. The evening program also includes choral music by master composers from America, Russia, Germany, England, and Hungary. As a finale, the choir will perform a paraphrased setting of the "Twenty-Third Psalm" to the Psalter tune "Crimond" and "the Lord Bless You and Keep You" by Peter Lutkin. The MC choir will then depart through the sanctuary of the church, singing the African religious folk processional "Antya Laba," arranged by American composer Sonya Garfinkle.

Brahams becomes vice-president for administration

On February 22, the executive committee of the MC Board of Directors approved the appointment of Mr. Brick Brahams as vice-president for the administration of Maryville College. Brahams had previously been serving as assistant to the President.

Brahams' responsibilities in his new position will include supervision of all business and financial operations of the College, including the Business and Financial Aid offices. He will also be responsible for maintenance, the personnel office, and the computer center.

Maryville College now has three vice-presidents. Dr. Alfred Perkins is academic vice-president, Mr. Dave Roberts is vice-president in charge of development, and Mr. Brahams is vice-president for the administration. The President's responsibilities are divided among the vice-presidents in order that each area may receive the attention it deserves.

Brahams has several goals to aim for in his new position. In the area of business and finances, he and President Wayne Anderson are concerned with reaching a balanced budget and wisely managing MC's monetary resources. They wish to keep student's fees reasonable and develop good financial aid packages. Brahams also hopes to achieve maximum use of the College's computer facilities.

One of Brahams' most immediate concerns is the implementation of a good management system at Maryville. The recently conducted Higher Education Management Institute survey is the first step in this program. After the evaluation is complete, deficient areas will be given appropriate attention. Dr. Anderson commented, "I am confident that, with his expertise and commitment to Maryville College, Brick Brahams will greatly enhance our efforts to institute an effective management system at the College."

Brick Brahams has had some 24 years of experience with MC. He graduated cum laude from Maryville as a history major in 1949.

Art exhibited in FAC

Howard Hull, associate professor of art education at the University of Tennessee, will exhibit his paintings at MC's Fine Arts Center Gallery from March 3-28.

The paintings, which are for sale, will be on display from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays.

Hull, a native of Welch, W. Va., has taught at UT since 1965. Before coming to the Knoxville university, he served as design instructor at Northwestern Louisiana State University.

A 1960 graduate of Middle Tennessee State University, Hull also received his Master of Arts degree from MTSU in 1961 and an Education Specialist degree from George Peabody College in Nashville.

Hull, who now lives in the Blount County area, uses a variety of media in his paintings including some collage, noted Carroll Barger, MC art instructor and coordinator of the FAC Gallery. "Collages are used in his paintings to create an interesting effect," Barger added.

The exhibition is free and open to the public.

CIV credit: what's the charge?

For some time now, MC students have been voicing dissent over the new policy which requires a one-course payment in order to obtain an extra credit for attending CIV. It seems the matter has become confused and could bear a little straightening out.

Until 1975, three CIV credits were required for graduation in addition to the forty regular credits. Dr. Blair, then Dean of Students, suggested that the requirements be changed to forty credits flat, two of which could be earned by attending CIV. This idea remains unchanged. If a student wishes to include CIV as one or two of his forty credits, he may do so without paying anything above normal tuition fees. Beginning next fall, however, if he wishes to earn an extra credit – say, to make up for a flunked course or to graduate early – through CIV, he will have to pay for it like a regular extra course.

According to Brick Brahams, one of the initiators of the new arrangment, it represents not so much a change in policy as the correction of an "oversight." He states, "Basically, it's just a question of whether the College charges for its credits." Under the old program, some students were using CIV credit to avoid paying full tuition. The fundamental idea behind the charge, then, is to assure that students pay for all the credits they earn.

The new idea was discussed among members of the administration last spring and summer. It was not brought before the ACC or the Instructional Program Committee as financial matters are not within their jurisdiction. Dr. Perkins notified students of the change in a memo dated August 1, 1979. The memo makes it clear that a student will be charged for CIV only if he or she exceeds the 10-course/year limit without shortening a subsequent course load. Students who had begun earning CIV credit under the old plan were given until the end of this year to finish up if they wished a free extra credit.

Under the new plan, no one signs up for CIV credit. The Registrar's office automatically keeps track of the number of programs attended. Once a student has signed thirty of the little CIV cards, he may go in and sign up to receive credit if he wishes. If this credit is one of his forty required courses, he pays nothing. If it is extra, he will be charged.

This is essentially how the policy works. One must admit it seems fair enough. So where does the controversy enter in?

A lot of student objection stems from simple misunderstanding. Some are under the mistaken impression that CIV credit is charged extra for no matter what. Others resent that they now have to pay for a credit they somehow botched. A few are just fundamentally suspicious of the administration and its financial operations.

We believe these dissentions are unwarranted. CIV credit costs nothing extra when included as part of normal graduation requirements. CIV is a valuable program, and the new policy should not prohibit anyone from enjoying it. Just from taking advantage of it.

Editor:

As a member of the Worship Committee and February Meetings Planning Committee, I'd like to thank everyone who went out of their way to attend the meetings or make it possible for others to attend. Thanks to you – Jim Forbes, the seminar leaders, the choir, and everyone else involved – the meetings were a success. A great deal of interest has been shown in starting, or continuing with added membership, programs of service to our community and to the world. That interest in itself is of much greater value than the time we spent planning February Meetings.

To those faculty members who were unable to reschedule classes, meetings, rehearsals, or whatever, I only hope that we have proved the value of February Meetings. Perhaps next year we will be able to give you more warning so that you can find some way to avoid scheduling anything during the meeting times. Please remember that this is a church-related school which has, for over a hundred years, observed annually a period of several days of concentration on religious values.

Again, my thanks to those who helped with February Meetings in any way. Anyone who has comments or suggestions for next year should get in touch with the Chaplain or any member of the Worship Committee.

Sincerely,
Angela P. Murphy

Dear Editor,

In the February 12th edition of the Echo there was a small article on the possibility of Maryville College selling land to Maryville High School for the relocation of a new school. Being curious and concerned, I asked around about it; this is what I found.

To begin with, the land block, originally mentioned as about 20 acres, is actually 30 acres. Property lines are not certain, but it is probable that they would include the land directly behind Dorm I, not in the first and closest field but in the second field next to the tree line. The plan may also contain a new, larger stadium with a parking lot to be shared by the high school and college. And last but not least, it would include access roads which would probably cut across the back field as well.

Chances for relocation of the high school depend mostly on the cost; this, in turn, depends on whether or not the new mall is built in Maryville. If it is, then there will be enough base funds in the community to support the project; if not, then relocation will probably resort to renovation. And, of course, there is always the possibility that the new building site chosen will not be the college.

Apparently, the land to be sold was originally given to the college with the idea that is should be constructively used. This sale could be regarded by the supporters as a proper function for land they now consider unused.

Many student opinions on the matter are, as might be excpected, of a rather different slant. Some say that the land was a deciding factor in their choosing Maryville as their college; they call it their "breathing space," "sanity keeper," and "source of inspiration." If the land is "built on, chopped up, ruined, stolen," or otherwise, they say they'll be the first to leave.

Others don't like the idea of having a high school in the backyard. High school is one place we all finally managed to leave – why should we be subjected to high school students in the computer labs, in our classrooms, and on our campus (although there supposedly will be fences to keep them out)? Are we being unfair to say we don't want them here even if we are the ones who pay tuition, etc.? Personally, I won't enjoy being awakened on a no-A-hour-Monday by busses, shouts, and bells.

What do you think, Maryville? Have we got a case?

Debbie Hall

Dana Paul, Bryan McFarland, and Richard Battaglia teamed up as one of the acts in last Saturday's coffeehouse.

Campus talent brought out

by Kathy Fitzell

Du Cafe Pearsons was again a Coffee House Saturday Night. The mood was set by the candle-lit tables adorned with checkered tablecloths and the casual atmosphere which bred backgammon players and potato chip munchers. Tim Fitzgerald, the emcee for the evening, began the show with a few jokes (?) and then Jean Plant took over. Through Bill Cosby's "To Russel, the brother that I slept with," she recounted a scene which was humorously familiar to those with brothers and sisters. After Jean, the audience was the victim of Fitz' bird imitations – primarily the swallow, the duck, and the goose. Next, Bryan McFarland and Peggy Stewart sang Dan Mill's "Nobody's Right." Mark Beyer then played the piano and sang three songs which he composed himself. It was back to the emcee who had a joke for everyone. "Next" was heard from the back after this particular one and with that David Swim came on. After his reading of the "Dutch Lullaby," "Little Boy Blue," and "The Merman," there was a rousing chorus of "Happy Birthday" sung to Charles Milton. John Rhodes took over with two songs which he wrote himself. Dana Paul and Richard Battaglia sang Steely Dan's "Dirty Work" and Sam Cook's "You Send Me." Picking up the tempo, Bryan McFarland joined them and on the count of quatro they sang "Crippled Man." In honor of the snowfall, which brought a dull "oh" from the crowd, they finished with "You Keep the Night Alive."Bill Dent and Tim Fitzgerald put on many airs during their performance. With B.D. on the flugal horn and Tim on the trumpet, they played "Air" by Mozart, "The Arabian Song," "Bolero," which prompted a quick "bullfight," "French Air" dedicated to Copeland who has had to listen to them all term, "Italian Air" which was their favorite song in that book and they finished off with a waltz.

Bryan McFarland, who was directing, was stolen for a quick dance by Dell Folsom, and then returned to continue directing. Wren Griffin played her guitar and sang Jackson Browne's "A Song for Adam." Tim Stuart and his dulcimer kept the show going with a few tunes including "Greensleeves" and "I'm my own Grandpa,"-- an unbelieveable story of romance and intrigue.

A unique performance was given by Tim Sasscer and his group playing the guitar, piano, and harmonica. Bryan McFarland returned to sing John Pryne's "Please Don't Bury Me" and "Unrequitted to the Nth Degree."

A quiet fell over the audience as Bryan, accompanied by Bill Dent on flugal horn, sang Dan Fogelberg's "Longer" and was broken when he continued with "The Interstate is Coming Through my Outhouse."

Dana Paul and Richard Battaglia came back and sang two more songs. The crowd then began shouting for Bryan to do "Rufus," and, relenting, he gave the audience what they wanted. He closed out the Coffee House with the "Creation Song." The lights came back on and du Cafe Pearsons faded as the show ended.

Apply now for financial aid

As springtime rapidly approaches, one can behold the MC campus community gradually shrug its winter coat as thoughts turn to sunny days and warmer weather, spring break and summer vacation, frisbees and financial aid . . . financial aid?! While next school year may seem like a remote point in the distant future, application deadlines are drawing near, and, unlike the proverbial early bird, the punctual financial aid applicant may garner more than a can of worms.

To apply for campus-based funds awarded on the basis of need at MC, one must complete and submit the Financial Aid Form to the College Scholarship Service. The FAF serves as a needs analysis for the National Direct Student Loan Program, Basic Grant Program, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant Program, College Work-Study Program, Tennessee State Grant, and Maryville College Grant. In addition, the Financial Aid Office is initiating an Institutional Application for Financial Assistance. While serving as a supplement to the FAF, this document will replace the student employment application and provide information for scholarship selection.

These forms and various booklets explaining facets of the Federal, State, and Institutional Financial Aid Programs are now available in the Financial Aid Office in Anderson Hall.

Course offered

Riggins R. Earl, Jr., of the Department of Religious Studies at UTK will teach Religion 310 d, "The Beginnings of Afro-American Religion," at E-hour, Mondays, and D and E hours, Wednesdays, during the Spring term, 1980.

Mr. Earl was educated at American Baptist College and Vanderbilt University. He has received many honors and fellowships, including a Rockefeller Doctoral Fellowship and a Martin Luther King, Jr., fellowship. Earl was named one of the outstanding young men of America in 1972. He is the author of several articles on black religion and is now working on a book, "Toward a Black Christian Liberation Ethic."

The course which Mr. Earl will teach at MC is open to all; it will satisfy the religion core requirement. Underclass students should check with Dr. Cartlidge before enrolling in the course.

This course represents a unique opportunity for the students of Maryville College, as Mr. Earl is one of the very few people in this area who are qualified to teach about black religion.

"Christ in the Concrete City" dramatizes Meetings

by Angela Murphy

Christ in the Concrete City, a one-act play written by P.W. Turner, was presented Monday, February 25 as part of February Meetings. Peter Vial, MC alumnus and assistant minister at New Providence Presbyterian Church, directed the six performers: Jeff Clark, Carol Coffey, Linda Crozier, Chaplain Charles Fowler, Tom Kiersnowski, and Angela Murphy. Chaplain Fowler was assistant director and Matt Cragle was in charge of lighting.

The theme of this British play is Christ's suffering for sin — not only the sins of those who condemned and crucified him, but all sins of all time. This was revealed through the use of three types of scenes, tied together by the narrator, Carol Coffey. Each of the players represented characters, and members of a timeless chorus.

At various times the agony at Gethsemane, the trials before Caiaphas and Pilate, the via dolorosa, and the crucifixion were reenacted. The presence of Jesus was felt, rather than seen, during these segments. Between scenes, there was commentary by the chorus, as well as a number of scenes which showed that people of today are guilty of the same "crimes" committed by those present at the crucifixion.

Christ in the Concrete City requires that the audience be aware of the many different roles of each performer, some of which only last a moment. More importantly, the play's effectiveness requires remembering that the actors are no different from the audience. This effect was aided by the casual clothes worn by the performers, their stage entrances from the audience, and their exits through the audience and into the reception area.

Despite the limitations posed by time and the necessity of using the same set as Abelard and Heloise, the play was a success, as evidenced by the reaction of the audience.

The February Meetings Planning Committee thanks everyone involved with the presentation of Christ in the Concrete City, as well as all those who attended the performance.

Lady Scots host tourney

The Lady Scots will host the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) Southern Region II Division III women's basketball tournament Thursday-Saturday, March 6-8.

This year will be the first year ever for a Division III tournament. Previously, schools' classifications were determined on the basis of enrollment, but now classification is determined by the number of athletes on scholarships, Coach Brown explained. MC is in Division III, which includes schools which have 10 percent or fewer of its athletes on scholarships.

The regional tournament will feature the state championship teams from Kentucky, Virginia, North and South Carolina, and Tennessee; and two or three at-large teams selected by AIAW officials. The Lady Scots have an automatic spot in the tournament as host school.

The top ten teams in regional play will advance to the national championship round with the semi-finals and finals being held at Whitworth College in Spokane, Wash., March 20-22.

The eight-team tournament at MC will begin at 1:30 p.m. Thursday with the Kentucky state champions facing the Tennessee champs. MC will play the South Carolina champs in the 7 p.m. game. Other opening round games are set for 3:30 and 9 p.m.

Friday's second round play is set for 1:30, 3:30, 7 and 9 p.m. The action will conclude Saturday with a 10 a.m. consolation game to determine fifth and sixth places, a 1 p.m. game to determine third and fourth places, and a championship game at 3 p.m.

Tournament passes, available at the MC athletic department office, are $10 for adults and $5 for students. Tickets to individual games are available at $2.50 for adults and $1 for students and children under 12.

The high school program features a medley from West Side Story, partially choreographed. Musical selections for the worship services will be taken from the evening concert program.

Over the past 29 years, the MC choir has traveled more than 70,000 miles on its annual tour and visited almost 600 cities throughout the U.S. and in Canada. Cities visited in the past include Washington D.C., Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Chicago, Pittsburg, Atlanta, Chattanooga, Detroit, St. Louis, and Cincinnati.

As in the past, the choir will conclude its spring tour with a home concert on the MC campus. This year's performance is set for 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, April 1, in Wilson Chapel.

David Widner, Dr. Franklin, and Dr. Bunde spoke in the CIV designed to be a follow-up to February Meetings.

CIV encourages response to February meetings

The CIV program on Tuesday, February 26, was a follow-up of the February Meetings held Feb. 24-25, featuring Dr. James Forbes. Rev. Charles Fowler, MC Chaplain, began the CIV with opening comments encouraging everyone to act on the feelings about love which Forbes inspired, by taking specific action in the world and the community.

Dr. Sam Franklin, the first speaker, is an alumnus of MC and a graduate of Union Theological Seminary, and has spent much time in Japan. He spoke about how a Christian should take action for Christ. Dr. Franklin said that the issue of nuclear weaponry was a good chance for the Christians to take a stand. It is his belief that if one has accepted Christ, that person should be a kind of "Christ" to others, which involves helping people in any possible way.

The next speaker was Dr. Terry Bunde, MC chemistry professor, who discussed a conference held by the World Council of Churches, to which he was a delegate. Some of the goals of the conference concerned a lessening of the gap between science and faith; ethical issues such as euthanasia and abortion, and nuclear energy.

Dr. Bunde said that the conference did not accomplish anything concrete, they did not solve any of the problems, but the conference did identify what the problems were. Bunde stressed that society looks to science and technology to solve everything– most of the world believes more in science than in its religions. He called for a more Christian world view rather than a scientific one.

MC student David Widner spoke last about the Fred Hope Fund. The fund was started by Fred Hope while he was a student at MC. He later went on to become a missionary. The fund is a long-standing institution at MC which accumulates its funds through pledges from various groups in the Maryville area, and through auctions of goods and services. The Hope Fund is used to help MC graduates in mission work. In past years the money has been given to many different organizations, including the Frances Newton Hospital in India and the UNICEF Relief Fund in Bangladesh.

Recently, student interest has been very low so the World Concerns Committee is working to develop various fund-raising projects, perhaps to be connected with May Madness.

The Chaplain closed the CIV with a reminder about the seminars that afternoon. A world seminar was held at 1:10 p.m. to discuss projects in Haiti and Bread for the World. A community seminar was held at 2:30 p.m. to discuss student volunteer work in the community.

The 80's—what they expected

(CPS) – In 1964, Alvin Eurich, then and now the president of a consulting service called the Academy for Educational Development, asked 16 eminent acamedicians to write what they thought life on campus would be like in 1980. Eurich collected the essays in a modest paperback called Campus 1980, which stands today as a testament to just how hard it is to predict the future. Speculations in the book, quoted here verbatim, include:

The Student Mood, 1980

The college generation of the 1950's was the last "quiet" one we will see in a long time. (Alvin Eurich, the book's editor).

Enrollment in 1980

Enrollment will sharply until 1980, and will continue upward thereafter, but at a slower rate. Federal and state aid will increase substantially. (Sidney Tickton of the Academy for Educational Development).

Curricula in 1980

Secondary schools will have enriched their general-education effort, and students will come to college with a firm command of American and English literature, American government, and international affairs. . . Vocational training will gradually cease being a major preoccupation of undergraduate schools. . . (There will be) a shift from disciplinary courses during the first several collegiate years to courses designed to help students expand their impulse life. (Lewis Mayhew, a professor at Stanford then and now).

The Draft, The World, & Student Activism in 1980

The war in Vietnam will have quieted down . . . owing to the efforts of a Republican president who argued that the war was fine, but too expensive, and that in any case the boys should be brought home. (Nevertheless) a revolutionary situation will continue. . . This means that some kind of draft . . . will probably still be in effect.

The whole universe of students will have moved, and will be moving, in the direction pointed to by the student activitists. . . who are intending to major in social sciences and humanities in increasing proportions, and declining to major in science, engineering, and business . . .

Business may have increasingly great difficulty in recruiting the most talented young people. . .

Student activism will be flourishing in 1980 not only because more students of the new breed will have been produced, but because it will have many of the features of a successful social movement . . . A great interest in humanistic education will be touched and realized . . . (the late Prof. Nevitt Sanford of Stanford).

The Economy

The price level for goods and services will average out to levels existing in the fall of 1967. (Tickton of the Academy for Educational Development).

Lady Scots give their best at state tournament

The Lady Scots saw their hopes for a state basketball championship go down the drain this past weekend as they lost to Lee College in the semifinals, 90-75. However, the game was much closer than the score indicated. Maryville carried a 4-point lead into the dressing room at half-time and expanded the margin to 10 mid-way through the second half. Then, the Lady Scots' shooting went cold and the Lady Vikings' got hot. The contest ended in Lee's favor, 90-75. Donna Owens was the leading scorer with 19 points, while Brenda Babb and Sandy Rabun both had 16.

The ladies took the consolation game in overtime, 70-67, from a scrappy Sewanee team and carried home third place. Candy Nutter and DeeDee Chapman each collected 14 points; Rachel Reese had 10.

Donna Owens, Sandy Rabun, and Brenda Babb were named to the all-tournament team.

The Lady Scots will be in the Regional Tournament this weekend at Maryville. Coach Brown stated, "We are excited about having our first Region II Division III tournament here." The Lady Scots play the South Carolina state champion, Columbia College, at 7:00 p.m. Thursday, March 6.

Ketcherside recital features operatic pieces

Mr. Michael Ketcherside, MC voice instructor, will present a recital of operatic selections on Saturday, March 8, at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Music Hall. Mr. Kenneth Griffiths, UT coach-accompanist and pianist, will join Mr. Ketcherside. The recital is free and open to the public.

The first half of the program includes pieces from the standard repertoire by Leoncavallo, Donizetti, Strauss, Schubert, Mahler, Duparc, and Bizet. The recital will be concluded by works of American contemporary composers such as Floyd, Rorem, and Ives.

The recital is sponsored by a Mellon Foundation grant for faculty development at MC.

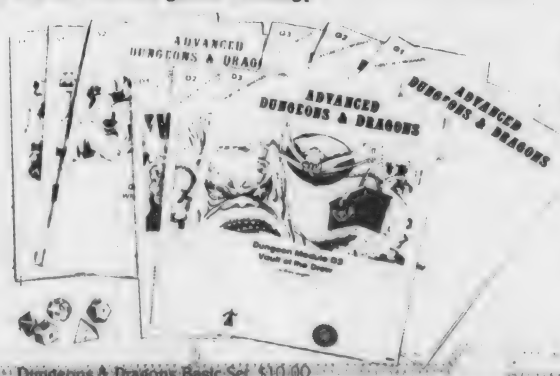
The fantastic world of swords and sorcery in the original adult game of fantasy role-playing!

DUNGEONS & DRAGONS

An incredibly popular fantasy role-playing game where players, using a variety of books and "modules" to supplement the basic game set, assume mythical characters and embark on dangerous quests to the depths of a many level dungeon in search of adventure and hidden treasure. Along the way they must defend themselves from monsters of all descriptions and must decide the best course of action when confronted with trap doors, quagmires, skeletons and the like. The adventurers combat these difficulties with an assortment of weapons, booty and magic spells, plus their individual character traits.



The basic DUNGEONS AND DRAGONS set provides an adventure module, a beginning book of guidelines which describes the characters (dwarves, clerics, elves, halflings, fighting men, magic users and thieves), character traits (strength, intelligence, wisdom, constitution, dexterity and charisma), types of monsters (orcs, doppelgangers, griffins, blink dogs and grey ooze, to name a few), levels of spells, strengths of attack and other possible strategic outcomes. These are all determined by rolling in turn one of the five multicolored, polyhedra dice, included. One player acts as the Dungeon Master, plotting the dungeon layout before the game, filling in both the story behind the quest and the details of the environment as they go along. Though the Dungeon Master secretly rolls the dice to determine what may next befall the adventurers, it is the players themselves who shape the course of the game, making choices based on the given elements in each situation.

DUNGEONS AND DRAGONS is a cerebral game, a test of wits and ingenuity. It provides a framework for a fantasy world in which seemingly real-life choices and challenges to character and intelligence shape and create the excitement of the game.

Beyond the basic DUNGEONS AND DRAGONS set, there are three hardcover books, PLAYER'S HANDBOOK, MONSTER MANUAL and DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE, and nine Adventure Modules (various locales beyond the dungeon) for advanced play. The books greatly expand on the available methods of play, the variety of monsters and the role of the Dungeon Master.

DUNGEONS AND DRAGONS, at all levels, will appeal to fans of J.R.R. Tolkien's Middle Earth, swords and sorcery sci-fi enthusiasts and all those who love games of strategy.

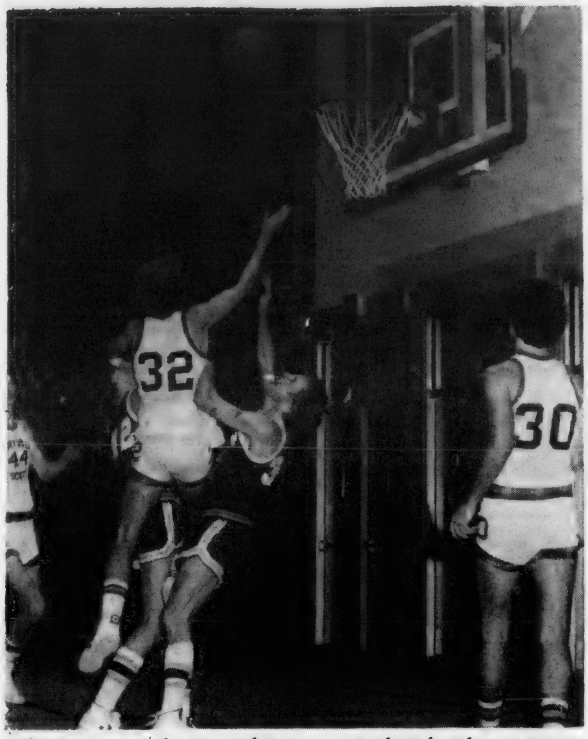
Scots finish up exceptional season with Sewanee win



Junior Richard Suttle had the finest game of his career as the Maryville Scots completed their best season since 1974-75 with an 87-78 trouncing of Sewanee last week. The lanky pivotman scored 28 points, yanked down an incredible 25 rebounds, and "dominated the game on both ends of the floor," according to his coach, Rick Byrd.

The Scots ran their fast break exceptionally well, and forced Sewanee into early foul trouble. Senior captain Rodney Nelson bowed out with 14 points and 8 assists. Tim Sherman tossed in 20 points in a losing cause for the visitors. "Overall, this was one of our best games all year," Byrd added.

The MC basketballers finished with a record of 15-11. The 15 wins represent the most by any Scots squad in 31 years. It has been a season of ups and downs for the young Maryville team, who lose only Nelson to graduation. The Scots started out the season strongly, going 7-3 with impressive wins over Centre, arch-foe Carson-Newman (twice), and eventual ODAC champion Washington and Lee. "The evolution and development of knowing that we could win anywhere was the best part of the season," said Byrd, whose team compiled a 6-6 road record, not easily done in college basketball. The Scots came very close to upsetting nationally ranked Southwestern early in January. The low point came in a five-game losing streak in the middle of the year. An unexpected home loss to Millsaps was another downer. The team finished strong, however, winning four in a row.

The Scots' outook for next season is a bright one. Coach Byrd's greatest task will be to fill the significant hole left by Nelson. Every other player on the roster retains eligibility. If Richard Suttle continues his improvement as the pivot, he could become an All-American candidate. Andrew Baker has shown impressive poise as a freshman, making several big plays for the Scots, and according to his coach, is the best defensive player on the team. Kelley Hall is an exciting offensive weapon, and Dale Watson and Doug Tutin form an effective strong forward combination.

The entry into ODAC next year could not come at a better time for Maryville College basketball. The program should continue its improvement and be a force to be reckoned with in the league next year.

The MC Scots dominated Sewanee in their last home game of the season, pulling off a 87-78 victory.

He then went on to earn his M.A. in history at the University of Colorado. He returned to Maryville in 1958 as director of development, serving until 1966. At that time, he became vice-president of development at Williamette University in Salem, Oregon. Within three years, however, he was back at MC as assistant to the president.

Brahams and his wife, Ellen, have two grown children. Mrs. Brahams is also an MC graduate.

Nelson closes career as Scot

by Mike Weiss

A thunderous slam-dunk. A deadly accurate "nothing by nylon" jump shot. A powerful rebound. "Globetrotter style" ballhandling. The loud smack of a blocked shot.

These are things that anyone can see in a basketball game, and those who do them often, we call "great players." But a truly great player possesses qualities that aren't always seen by the fans, and don't always show up in the box scores. Good defense. Leadership. Hustle and competitive desire.

In his two seasons as a Scot, Rodney Nelson has displayed the kind of all around ability that qualifies him as a great basketball player. Last week, Nelson, who transferred to MC after two seasons at junior college, played the last game of his career in an 87-78 Maryville victory over Sewanee.

MC coach Rick Byrd couldn't say enough about his senior captain. "Rodney is a complete, all-around player," said Byrd. "He is capable of playing at many, many Division I schools. We will greatly miss his leadership and abilities."

The last game in an athlete's career is always a sentimental moment. "Going into the game, it wasn't really in my mind," said Nelson. "But as the clock ran down, I felt it then. I was kind of sad, knowing that I wouldn't be playing organized ball anymore. It's something you know you'll miss. The past two years have been my best college years overall, academically and athletically."

This has been a fairly successful year for the Scots. For Rodney the highlights were the two victories over Carson-Newman. The talented guard had tried out at the Jefferson City school, only to be cut, no doubt to the later chagrin of the C-N coach. "If it weren't for Coaches Byrd and Henry, I wouldn't have even known about Maryville," remarked Rodney. "Winning here is not a life and death situation, and though we work hard, we keep it on the floor."

Rodney wished to thank the fans at MC "who came out game after game, through good and bad. And the cheerleaders for all they've done. And finally, the coaching staff, especially Coach Byrd, for sticking by us and treating us like humans, with respect."

Davalos wrestles his way to tourney champ

Although this year's MC wrestling team has faced frequent obstacles, one of its members was able to rise above them, and at the time of this article has qualified for the Division III National Tournament in New London, CT.

Senior Ed Davalos rose to the occasion during the season's last three weeks in capturing the ODAC and Mid-East Regional Wrestling championships at 150 pounds.

At the ODAC championships, Davalos pinned his way to the championship and wound up tied for first place in MVP voting. This championship carned him a spot in the Division III Mid-East Regional Tournament at Wabash College, Indiana. He continued his pinning streak there as he turned two close matches into history with second period pins in his quarter and semi-final matches.

In the finals, Davalos' obvious talent and charisma captured the crowd's support as he went on to decision his opponent from MacMurry College, 7-2.

The Mid-East Regional title qualified Davalos for the National finals in Connecticut. The results and season re-cap will appear in next week's Echo.

What makes a quality program?

New athletic policy given consideration by many

The ACC athletic task force is still at work looking into and formulating a suitable athletic policy for Maryville College. Dr. J. W. Nichols, Mr. Raymond "Brick" Brahams, and Kevin Reilly, who make up the task force, plan to present their results to the All-College Council in April.

MC at one time had an athletic policy and theoretically still does. However, in recent years, the policy has not been recognized, even though it was approved by the MC faculty, the ACC, and the College Board of Directors in 1976.

In the fall of 1978, when it was observed that the policy was not being followed, the athletic committee, under a directive from the ACC, began working on a new policy.

By the spring of 1979, the proposal had been so watered down by debate in the Athletic Committee that the ACC refused to accept it.

This year, a statement of athletic "philosophy" was brought before the ACC, but this too was found to be opaque.

Dr. Nichols, who is also chairman of the Athletic Committee, believes that a viable athletic policy would really help the AC to operate in its proper role.

"The AC does have some well-defined duties, but for the last few years it has not been allowed to function in its proper role," says Nichols.

Dr. Nichols' major concerns lie not so much with policy but with program – how much money is spent for each sport, which sports shall be offered, number of games per season, squad size – and how to develop this program to fit the stated policy.

Nichols adds, "I'm also concerned that in '79 the ACC said 'Follow the 1976 policy,' and that policy is not being followed."

In an interview three weeks ago, MC Athletic Director Billy Henry emphasized the fact that even though MC "lacks an athletic policy," the athletic department has been operated "according to NCAA Division III regulation."

Coach Henry is concerned with a quality program: "A quality athletic program is a reflection on Maryville College – so is any quality department. Some people equate quality with winning – we strive for a program everyone can be proud of."

"The phrase 'quality program' can mean anything one wants it to mean at a given moment," says Dr. David Cartlidge, a former member of the Athletic Committee.

Dr. Cartlidge believes that the athletic "problem" at MC revolves around a "qualitative difference between small college athletics and medium and large college athletics. Maryville has never really sat down to figure out what this difference means to the College."

So it seems that at this time, there are varying beliefs on how MC athletics should be handled. Maryville will have to wait until the task force sends their tablets down from the mountain top.

MC students participate in Midwest Model U.N.

The 20th annual Midwest Model United Nations held in St. Louis, Missouri, from February 28-March 2 was attended by Becky Gerrick, Larry Bidwell, Chris Cervenka, Jeff Nardo, Gracia Sugantharaj, and Brad Allison, accompanied by Dr. Y. B. Kim.

The Maryville College delegation represented Japan in three councils: Brad and Chris on Economic and Social; Becky on Social, Humanitarian, and Cultural; Gracia and Larry on Legal; and Jeff on Political and Security.

The work of these various councils is to consider the many resolutions sponsored by different countries. For example, the Social, Humanitarian, and Cultural Council had to consider those resolutions that dealt with issues such as Human Rights and Law of the Seas. A resolution is presented and debate is conducted; then the council votes whether to pass the resolution or not. If passed, the resolution is taken to the General Assembly where, if passed again, it will be enforced and considered a standard.

Legal Counsel debated issues pertaining to the U.N. Charter Review and Peacekeeping Operations, Economic and Social Council discussed matters dealing with Transnational Corporations and Proliferation of Nuclear Technology, and Political and Security Council debated issues dealing with Terrorism and Rights of Indigenous People living in Occupied Territories.

Other than deliberating the issues on the agenda, the delegates were responsible for following the policies of their country and its bloc, caucusing with fellow delegates for support, using correct parliamentary procedure, and being familiar with the U.N. Charter.

Some of the other schools attending were: Universities of Indiana, Illinois, Central Arkansas, and Kansas; School of the Ozarks; Florida State University; and Universities of Missouri, Oklahoma and Michigan.

ACC nominees picked

The following people have been nominated for the ACC all-campus election, to be held the first or second week of Spring Term.

Administrative nominees (2 to be elected) are Linda Stephens, S. M. Atchley, and Charles Fowler. Faculty nominees (1 to be elected from each group) are: 1 to 5 years – Dean Bolden and Robert Yager; 6 to 15 years – John W. Nichols and Marilyn Pollio; over 15 years – Victor Schoen and Carolyn Blair.

Staff nominees (1 to be elected) are Laura Lundell and Joan Wiseman. Student nominees (1 to be elected from each class) are: sophomore – Paul Johnson and Robin Henry; junior – Sidney Bright and Mike Davis; senior – Larry Bidwell and Dave Ierulli. The elected senior will serve as ACC Co-chairman.

Loss widely felt

Coach Stinnett's passing leaves void

Many of you will not recall that February 16, 1980, marked the end of an era at Maryville College that not too many people on campus, or in that manner the community, realized was in process here for the last seven years. Coach Ken Stinnett died of a heart attack, ending his era at Maryville College. Yes, I would go so far as to call it an era.

Coach Stinnet lived by what Maryville College stands for. His life revolved around what was best for Maryville College. And most importantly, Coach Stinnett was willing to do the hard work that comes with doing what's best for Maryville College and Maryville College sports.

Why was Coach Stinnett a great person to many of us baseball and football players? The answer is simple. Coach Stinnett was one of us. He became one of us, an admired and respected peer. We admired him because of what he did for us – literally broke his back to make sure we had everything we needed. And that, my friends, is a very hard, but rewarding, job. Every year, after each winter, the baseball field was in need of a huge amount of work. This in itself is a full time job for at least a month. The infield had to be tilled, raked, weeded, drug several hundred times, and these processes had to be repeated. Each year, Coach Stinnett and the players were out working on this. Coach Stinnett always knew where to get loads of infield dirt, outfield fence, and chicken wire cheap, and knew exactly what to do with it once he got it. This year, his goal was to get concrete dugouts built, but that dream will never be realized by him.

In addition to the field and maintenance job, Coach Stinnett had his coaching duties. He made sure things ran smoothly with the baseball team in the month of February. This year it even meant coming at 9:30 P.M. because of the availability of gyms. He did things that Billy Henry couldn't do because of his duties as Athletic Director. Coach Stinnett's baseball skills were unlimited and he passed them on in the best way he knew how. It seemed like he really enjoyed coaching Maryville College athletics. Maryville College athletes are people who just are not good enough to play on scholarship level. Coach Stinnett took pride in coaching this type of person. He even made sure we looked like a professional team by keeping our uniforms cleaned, separated, and folded.

What made Coach Stinnet great was that he was not paid a single cent for putting in limitless hours of work. He enjoyed what he did and the reward was not money, but the faces, the expressions, the emotions, and the qualities that his players showed during the course of the year.

We will remember Ken Stinnett as the man who we could joke with, the man who always kicked dirt on the umpires' feet, and the man whose goal was to win 24 games. Coach Stinnett will be and already is sorely missed by a lot of people, especially us baseball players. He will be remembered by us as number "2", and the man called "Geech."

It only seems fitting to pay one last tribute to this great man. I'm asking the campus to support us as we submit to the College a request that the baseball field be named the Ken Stinnett Memorial Field. Not a bad request for a man who lived Maryville College. Please help us.

B.D.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

The other day, I was shown an article from one of the local newspapers which mentioned the March 1 visit of 23 football recruits to Maryville College.

The story included the following:

". . . Also waiting for the recruits was an assemblage of 25 MC coeds, volunteers recruited by Zaneski to be hostesses for visiting prospects and to provide them a tour of the campus. . . .They call themselves 'Dan's Darlin's'."

Now, I am certainly not against the idea of making prospective students feel welcome and at ease while they are visiting MC. And I have nothing against Coach Zaneski or any one of his "Darlin's." But let's be reasonable.

We don't have "Perkins' Pets" to show around prospectives with high IQs and SATs, nor do we have "Harry's Harem" to give guided tours to those gifted in the area of the Fine Arts. And somehow I wouldn't feel comfortable if the Chaplain had an ensemble called "Charlie's Angels."

Let me not be misunderstood -- recruiting is an important and vital area in the life of MC. We have to make a good impression in order to get students. But let's try not to make harmless recruiting ventures out to be "escort services." Such moves smack of tackiness.

Another vital area in the life of our school is community relations, and I believe it would be detrimental to MC if the community was to get the wrong impression concerning this institution's intentions.

Maryville College is a small, church-related, liberal arts college. The idea of "Dan's Darlin's" may fit in with a big university, or a "football factory," but I believe it may be slightly out of place on our campus.

After all, we're the "Orange and Garnet" not a little "Big Orange."

Echoes from the past

The first issue of the Highland Echo, under the editorship of J. Charles Walker, appeared on November 4, 1915. An editorial titled "The New Weekly" set forth the needs for and purposes of a weekly paper on campus. Excerpts follow: "During the past ten years Maryville College has been growing by leaps and bounds. . . The increase in enrollment is accompanied by a marked advance of college spirit. . . The need of a weekly paper, in which this college spirit could be expressed, has been felt for some time. . .For this reason, the editorial staff of the College Monthly has decided to offer to the student body a weekly publication. The name of the weekly is the Highland Echo, and may all the news of Maryville College find an echo in it."

Faculty salaries on the rise in the South

ATLANTA – Faculty salaries in public institutions in the South are gaining on the national averages, according to a recent analysis by the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB).

In 1974, faculty salaries in the South were 16 percent lower than in the nation; by 1979, the gap had been reduced to 7 percent. Faculty salary increases averaged 7 percent in the South and 5 percent in the rest of the nation annually between 1974 and 1979. Meanwhile, inflation as gauged by the Consumer Price Index grew an average of nearly 8 percent per year.

SREB President Winfred L. Godwin observed: "Gains in Southern faculty salaries are a reflection of the added emphasis these states have given to higher education for more than a decade. This commitment is demonstrated by the South's 300 percent increase in state appropriations for operating higher education between 1968 and 1978, compared to the 250 percent increase nationwide."

Thus far this year, 1980-81 requests for faculty salary increases range from 6 to 10.5 percent in governors' budgets in those Southern states now in legislative session. A variety of approaches are being proposed to fund and distribute the faculty pay raises.

In Tennessee, the governor has requested a 6 percent faculty salary increase with longevity bonuses for faculty similar to those granted state employees. He also proposed tuition and fees be increased to produce 40 percent of the funds required for the raises.

Two coaches hired

On March 5, 1980, Athletic Director Billy Henry announced the hiring of Jim Davis, 22, and Stephen Marshall, 23, as part-time assistant football coaches. Both played and coached under head coach Dan Zaneski at Plymouth State in New Hampshire.

Davis, a P.E. major with a B.S. from Plymouth State, will coach receivers, while Marshall, also a P.E. major who earned his B.S. at the University of Louisville, will serve as offensive line coach. The two will also be employed as residence hall directors.

BOOKSTORE NOTICE

The MC Bookstore will be closed Monday, March 17. It will be open the rest of the week during regular hours.

Macintire aids communications at MC

Jerrie Sue Macintire, formerly editor of the Lifestyles and Business pages of the Cookeville Herald-Citizen, has recently been appointed assistant director of communications at Maryville College.

Ms. Macintire, a native of Woodbury, Tenn., will have responsibility for coordinating, writing and editing news and feature releases for the College. She will also assist in producing the MC alumni magazine Focus as well as photographing campus events.

A 1978 graduate of Tennessee Technological University with a B.S. in English/journalism, Ms. Macintire served as managing editor of the Oracle, TTU's student newspaper and photographer for the Eagle yearbook. While in college, she received Tennessee Collegiate Press Association awards for newswriting and sports photos. She was also a member of Alpha Phi Gamma, national journalism society.

In August 1978, Ms. Macintire became editor of the lifestyles, business and church sections of the Cookeville Herald-Citizen. While she was working there the paper received several press awards for newspaper excellence, including first place for Community Lifestyles.

As part of her duties at the Herald-Citizen, Ms. Macintire served as a feature writer, reporter, photographer and sports writer for the paper. She has also done free-lance photography and writing.

Ms. Macintire's husband, Jeffrey, is a Lieutenant in the U.S. Army currently attending the University of Tennessee Veterinary School in Knoxville.

Orchestra chooses officers

The MACCO Board of Advisors has recently been established for the 1980-1981 season. Maryville Mayor Stanley B. "Skeeter" Shields is the chairman. Mrs. Betty Newton, assistant vice-president and head of marketing for the Bank of Maryville, will serve as vice-chairman and chairman-elect of the Board. Mrs. Cindy Larson is the MACCO business manager, and Tom Hudson, Maryville College sophomore, will serve as public relations manager.

Other members of the MACCO Board include: Dr. Bloy, MC music professor; Dr. Waters, MC psychology department head; Roy Crawford, attorney-at-law; Jim Emert, D.D.S.; Dr. J.P. Stewart, Maryville City Schools superintendent; Susan Sterling, Maryville High School student; and Gene Hamilton, Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times advertising director. Dave Roberts, MC vice-president for development, and Gene Taliaferro-Jones, orchestra conductor, are ex-officio members of the Board.

Mrs. Larson and Dr. Bloy are representatives to the Association of Tennessee Symphony Orchestras Board.

The new MACCO Board has already met to discuss fund-raising and community participation in the orchestra. The next meeting will be April 15.

IPC debates language requirement for deaf

The March 2 meeting of the Instructional Program Committee passed a proposal concerning the foreign language requirement as related to the deaf and hearing-impaired students. The student will be able to choose between taking mathematics in place of foreign language or demonstrating competency in American Sign Language at the 103 level, which would probably mean taking ASL 101, 102, and 103. Also, the hearing student will have the option of satisfying the foreign language requirement by taking mathematics or showing competency in a foreign language at the 102 level and ASL at the 103 level.

The March 5 meeting of the All College Council heard committee reports by the Intercollegiate Athletics Committee, the World Concern Committee, and the Academic Standards Committee. A report on the Tennessee Intercollegiate State Legislature (TISL) was presented by Larry Bidwell and Mike Weiss. Also updated were the spring elections plans for class officers and ACC representatives.

Winter intramurals wrap up

GIRLS

Women's Intramural basketball ended its season with playoffs last week. The records before playoffs stood at: Wasted Again - first place - undeafeated; N.A.O.W.'s and Cowgirls - tied for second place; and Bad Girls were in last place (forfeiting playoffs). Playoffs started Tuesday night, March 4th, with the N.A.O.W.'s and Cowgirls battling for a win. N.A.O.W.'s won in overtime. Wednesday, March 5th, the N.A.O.W.'s played Wasted Again for the championship. It was a very exciting game, and ended with a close score of 22-21 in favor of Wasted Again. It was some of the players' first championship title in their 4 years as a team. Congratulations Wasted Again!

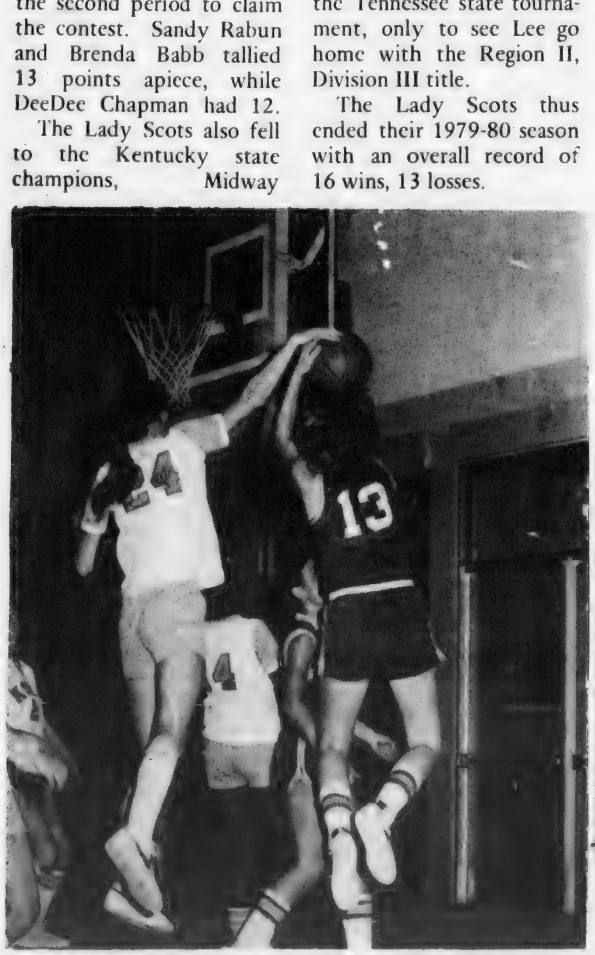
Sunday, February 24th was the starting day for women's intramural volleyball. There are seven teams. So far, the standings are: Team No.2 - Lori Bowers (3-0); Team No. 7 - Blinky Hinds (3-0); Team No. 5 - Bev Woeber/ Sue Wenkstern (2-0); Team No. 1 - Vicky Lambert (2-2); Team No. 8 - Sue Van Aken (1-2); Team No. 6 - Linda Wiley/Colleen Wagner (0-2); and Team No. 3 - Vanessa Logan (0-3). Because of the Women's Regional Tournament, games will be rescheduled for the first week of Spring Term.

Also, any women interested in signing up for a softball team are encouraged to sign up their teams now. Softball sign-ups end Friday, March 14th.

GUYS

When the horn sounded at 8:00 on March 5, the Undertakers had completed a perfect season by downing the Red Eyes 59-48, winning the men's intramural basketball championship. They won nine games straight in the regular season before winning three additional games to take it all. En route to the championship, the Undertakers downed E. H. P. 63-24 and the Shooting Stars 56-47. The Red Eyes advanced to the finals by defeating the Rejects 50-41, and in the semi-final round they avenged a regular season loss by defeating the second-place Studs 61-52. In other games, the quarter finals saw the Studs pull away in the final minutes to avoid an upset loss as they defeated the Loadstars 60-49. The Loadstars advanced by defeating the Zoo Crew 41-36. The Shooting Stars pulled off the tournament upset as Kevin Reilly put up a missed free throw with three seconds to go helping his team defeat the B-bombs 26-25.

Women's intramural action recently changed over fro basketball to volleyball.



Tourney provides exciting action

The Lady Scots met with defeat against tough Region II Tournament competition this past weekend. The Maryville women held on strong in the first half against Columbia College, but the South Carolina state champs pulled away during the second period to claim the contest. Sandy Rabun and Brenda Babb tallied 13 points apiece, while DeeDee Chapman had 12.

The Lady Scots also fell to the Kentucky state champions, Midway College, the second night of tournament action, with a score of 70-55. Donna Owens was the leading scorer with 14 points, while Candy Nutter added 10.

Columbia College collided with Lee College, the second place finisher in the Tennessee state tournament, only to see Lee go home with the Region II, Division III title.

The Lady Scots thus ended their 1979-80 season with an overall record of 16 wins, 13 losses.

The Lady Scots suffered defeat at the hands of Columbia College, the South Carolina State champions, in the regional tournament hosted by MC on March 6-8.

Soccer finally gains Varsity status

by Mike Weiss

Last month the All College Council (ACC) responded to an Athletic Committee recommendation, providing for the gradual phasing-in of soccer as a mens' varsity sport over a three year period. The committee, headed by Dr. Nichols, also called for recognition of womens' softball as an official club sport.

The following conditions were added by the ACC:

1.) one male sport is to be dropped by the end of 1980-81;

2.) one female sport is to be added by the end of 1980-81;

3.) a soccer coach is be appointed in 1980-81 possible, but no later th 1981-82.

This resolution was much-worked-for brea through for the socc clubs struggle to becor part of the Maryville C lege athletic program. Ne ly appointed captains Byr Finley and John Lacava a in the process of organizi the club to launch towards varsity status. committee of interested st dents will be formed ne term to help accompli the task.

Vol. 65 No. 19 April 3, 1980 Maryville College Maryville, Tennessee

550 runners took off in the Second Annual Scots Road Race last Saturday morning. The run attracted a large number of townspeople as well as MC students.

Easter rises with sunrise service

The 43rd annual Easter Sunday sunrise service, set for 6:16 a.m. at the natural ampitheater in the College woods, will be led by the MC Concert Choir, the MC Brass Choir, and MC Chaplain Charles Fowler, who will preach "At the Breaking of the Bread," based on Luke 24: 13-35.

The Concert Choir will sing such songs as "Christ ist Erstanden," "Alleluia, Ascendit Deus," and "Benedictus Qui Venit." The Brass Choir will play a selection of Moravian hymns along with other Easter selections. Chaplain Fowler will be assisted in the readings by Angela Murphy, sophomore religion major; Mr. Arthur Bushing, associate professor of English here at MC; and one or two others.

The service will be a joyful celebration of the most important day of the Christian faith — Easter.

In case of rain, the sunrise service will be held in Wilson Chapel.

Maryville College's Holy Week religious services in observance of Easter will also include a Maundy Thursday Communion on April 3 at 7 p.m. and a Good Friday Worship service on April 4 at 10:30 a.m. Both services will be held in the Little Chapel.

The Maundy Thursday Communion, the traditional celebration of the Last Supper, will be conducted by Chaplain Fowler, faculty, and students. The Good Friday service will include readings from various Gospel accounts of the passion, ancient and contemporary prayers, and special music.

Proffitt aids athletes

To establish the Fred L. Proffitt Athletic Fund in honor of his brother, Dr. D. W. Proffitt has pledged $100,000 to Maryville College.

"Once again Dr. D. W. Proffitt has displayed his great dedication and committment to Maryville College, his alma mater," said MC president Dr. Wayne Anderson.

"It is especially fitting that the gift is given in honor of his brother, F. L. Proffitt, who meant so much to D. W. and to Maryville College," Dr. Anderson added.

The Fred L. Proffitt Athletic Fund will be added to MC's endowment, the annual income to be used for the athletic department according to Dr. Anderson.

F. L. Proffitt was affiliated with MC for a total of 42 years serving as treasurer for 29 years. Proffitt accepted positions as professor of education, instructor of math and physics, and proctor of Carnegie Hall following his graduation in 1907. He was named principal of the preparatory department in 1911, a position that he kept until he was named treasurer.

In his work as College Treasurer, he worked closely with members of the community on loans for farms and land, and he encouraged and aided residents in improving their enterprises. Both the college and residents of the community thrived under his leadership. Proffitt was also active in civic organizations; he was chairman of the Maryville Planning Commission, chairman of the American Red Cross chapter in Blount County during WWI, and was the first Vice-president of the Southern Association of College and University Business offices.

F. L. Proffitt was treasurer from 1914 until his death on Sept. 30, 1943 at age 61. He is remembered for his outstanding work with and dedication to the college and community and for his enthusiastic support of sports at MC.

Faculty members study South's history

"A college was established in the South, at Enrico, VA, many years before Harvard was founded," according to Dr. Richard Beale Davis, keynote speaker at the joint meeting of the Tennessee College Association and the Tennessee Committee for the Humanities in Nashville last week.

The distinctly intellectual character of the settlers of the colonial South has often been overlooked by historians and literary critics. The first Thanksgiving, the concept of land-grant institutions, the first permanent settlement in America are all rightfully claimed by the South. These are a few of the ideas brought out by Dr. Davis in his recent address as well as in his monumental three-volume history, Intellectual Life in the Colonial South, 1585-1763, which won the 1979 National Book Award for History by the Association of American Publishers.

Attending the Nashville meeting at Tennessee State University/U. T. were Maryvillians Dr. Arda Walker, Dr. Carolyn Blair, Mrs. Herma Cate, Dr. Elizabeth T. Fowler, and alumnus Alvin Baker.

Dogwood artists sought

Artists are invited to submit entries for the first Blount County Dogwood Arts Festival art show, to be held at MC April 10-27. The show is scheduled in conjunction with the local Festival and will feature a wide variety of arts and crafts.

Exhibits should be brought to the FAC Gallery between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Tuesday, April 8. Paintings, drawings, sculpture, photography, and pottery, as well as other types of art, are welcome.

HAPPY EASTER!

Little-known facts brought to light

Tuition increase hurts, but can be justified

Students returning from spring break were greeted with the usual assortment of grades, old mail, and schedule change announcements in their post office boxes. But among these was a notice of a different sort. This one, from President Wayne Anderson, announced an 11.8% increase in basic fees for Maryville College next year.

Sigh. We cannot say the increase is unexpected — in these inflationary times, who expects the price of anything to remain stable? We certainly can't claim it is without precedent; fees have been going up steadily for the past several years. They rose 9.97% this year and 9.78% the year before that. Nor can we say, after honest consideration, that the raise is unwarranted.

At the present time, our country faces a national inflation rate of nearly 18%. MC is not immune to this; like everyone else, it must buy commodities on the open market. Energy costs in particular have soared to astronomical heights going up 240% over a five-year period. The College's gas bill for the month of January, for example, was $24,000 — a nice little sum. The increases in room and board fees are simply designed to cover higher operating costs.

MC is also anxious to raise the salaries of its faculty members, in order to make them more comparable to those of other institutions. Faculty salaries will be increased an average of 10% for 1980-81. This increase is desperately needed, and well-deserved. It really cannot be argued with. After all, the faculty must also contend with the rising cost of living.

So here we are, faced with a fee increase that is both objectionable and understandable, both regrettable and inevitable. Colleges and universities throughout the country are in the same boat. Many are issuing even larger increases than Maryville; some, faced with insurmountable financial difficulties, are folding. The future does not look any brighter. The U. S. birth rate has been declining steadily since 1961. The National Center for Educational Statistics reports that total four-year college enrollment will drop from 7.3 million in 1979 to less than 6.7 million in 1988, and will continue to decline in the 1990's. They predict that private, four-year, liberal arts colleges with enrollment under 1000 will be hardest hit. Some authorities predict that one-fourth of all such colleges will be forced to close during the 80's. Maryville College must take steps now to insure that it will be among those that survive.

MC must maintain its high academic reputation in order to continue to attract students. It cannot afford to cut back on programs, faculty, or facilities. When seen in this context, the fee increase becomes a bit more acceptable. To offset the hardship incurred, some of the new money will be put towards additional financial aid for both entering and returning students. The proposed 1980-81 budget, which must be approved by the Board of Directors in April, includes a recommendation for a scholarship program for upperclassmen. This, if approve, would fill a big gap in MC's current financial aid program.

Maryville can be one of the small private colleges that pulls through the 80's with flying colors. It will require a great deal of effort and dedication from administrators, faculty, financial contributors, and students alike. The money is not going to be plentiful. But who knows? — learning to make the best of what we have may be one of the most valuable lessons MC has to teach us.

Dear Ms. MC replaces Abby

Is your love life falling apart? Does arthritis strike every time you try to climb the steps of Thaw? Are you having trouble controlling the runaway tendencies of your checkbook? Do you still find guessing what ARA is serving for lunch harder than taking your C-hour quiz? Whatever your affliction, question, problem, or concern, Ms. M. C. is here to help you. As Maryville's own "Dear Abby," she will offer advice and information in a weekly Echo column. Address your questions (signed with a pseudonym) to "Dear Ms. M. C." and place them in the collection box in the Student Center. The column will begin next week.

Echoes from the past

The March 4, 1929, Highland Echo regrettably reported that the Highlanders lost the Smoky Mountain Tournament in basketball by one point to Emory and Henry in Kingston, TN. The final score of the championship game was Maryville 26, E&H 27.

PHILOMUSICA CONCERT AT UT

The University of Tennessee Cultural Attractions Committee announces its upcoming concert by the New York Philomusica. Philomusica was founded in the mid-1970's by the best of New York's solo artists to bridge the performing gap between the quartet and small chamber orchestra. Based on a core of nine musicians, the ensemble ranges from as few as two to as many as twenty players, allowing it to present a varied program representing the full range of the chamber music repertory.

The ensemble will perform Wednesday evening, April 9th, at 8:15 p.m. in the University of Tennessee Music Hall which is located on the main campus of UTK. Tickets are $5.00 for the public and are now on sale at the U. T. Central Ticket Office.

CRISIS CENTER OFFERS SEMINAR

The Knoxville Rape Crisis center is sponsoring a special series of training sessions for persons interested in becoming rape crisis counselors. The training, to begin on Thursday, April 3, will continue throughout the month on Thursday evenings from 7:00 to 10:00 p.m. at the U. T. University Center.

Classes are open to persons 18 and older who are interested in learning crisis counseling skills and volunteering for the Rape Crisis Center hotline.

To learn more, come to the Crest Room, University Center, April 3 at 7:00 p.m., or call the Knoxville Rape Crisis Center, 522-RAPE (hotline) or 522-4745 (business).

A slight registration fee will be charged to cover the expense of materials.

Faculty debates athletics

The monthly meeting of the Maryville College faculty was held Wednesday, March 26, at 2:30 p.m. in the Proffitt Dining Room. The focus of this meeting was discussion of MC's Intercollegiate Athletic Program.

Many questions were raised and talked about during the course of the meeting. Discussion was facilitated by a list of questions and views drawn up by Drs. J.W. Nichols and David Cartlidge, members of the MC Athletic Committee.

Among matters discussed were various aspects of an athletic policy at MC; why the 1976 Athletic Policy is not being adhered to; why the Athletic Committee was not involved in MC's decision to join ODAC; and basically, what MC's priorities are in regard to athletics.

Further discussion centered around recruiting; athletics and academic standards; use of athletic facilities; budget matters; and current matters, specifically the recent hirings in the Athletic Department.

The meeting was adjourned at 6 p.m.

CARNEGIE SPONSORS GAS RAFFLE

Carnegie Hall is sponsoring a gasoline raffle. Tickets are 50 cents each or 3 for $1, and will be on sale through Thursday, April 10. Drawing will be held on Friday, April 11, at 5:30 p.m. in Pearsons Dining Hall. Winner will receive $15 of free gasoline.

A poetic computer?

(CPS) – A breakthrough in computer programming by reserachers at the University of Wisconsin has provided a new literary lease on life for machines hitherto thought only capable of keeping registration lists and storing bookkeeping data.

The educational journal Change reports that a poem written by a UW computer was recently read at a Dartmouth College conference on Computing, the Social Sciences and Humanity.

Zodiac News Service says the four-line poem goes like this:

Till temper after an autumn the washed birds are always things
The newly shed contemplated beer is newly thing
Till never changing movement a beach is withstood
With fame the women never arrive.

Admittedly a little rough but nobody's perfect the first time.

The fantastic world of swords and sorcery in the original adult game of fantasy role-playing!

DUNGEONS & DRAGONS

An incredibly popular fantasy role-playing game where players, using a variety of books and "modules" to supplement the basic game set, assume mythical characters and embark on dangerous quests to the depths of a many level dungeon in search of adventure and hidden treasure. Along the way they must defend themselves from monsters of all descriptions and must decide the best course of action when confronted with trap doors, quagmires, skeletons and the like. The adventurers combat these difficulties with an assortment of weapons, booty and magic spells, plus their individual character traits.

The basic DUNGEONS AND DRAGONS set provides an adventure module, a beginning book of guidelines which describes the characters (dwarves, clerics, elves, halflings, fighting men, magic users and thieves), character traits (strength, intelligence, wisdom, constitution, dexterity and charisma), types of monsters (orcs, dopplegangers, griffins, blink dogs and grey ooze, to name a few), levels of spells, strengths of attack and other possible strategic outcomes. These are all determined by rolling in turn one of the five multicolored, polyhedra dice, included. One player acts as the Dungeon Master, plotting the dungeon layout before the game, filling in both the story behind the quest and the details of the environment as they go along. Though the Dungeon Master secretly rolls the dice to determine what may next befall the adventurers, it is the players themselves who shape the course of the game, making choices based on the given elements in each situation.

DUNGEONS AND DRAGONS is a cerebral game, a test of wits and ingenuity. It provides a framework for a fantasy world in which seemingly real-life choices and challenges to character and intelligence shape and create the excitement of the game.

Beyond the basic DUNGEONS AND DRAGONS set, there are three hardcover books, PLAYER'S HANDBOOK, MONSTER MANUAL and DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE, and nine Adventure Modules (various locales beyond the dungeon) for advanced play. The books greatly expand on the available methods of play, the variety of monsters and the role of the Dungeon Master.

DUNGEONS AND DRAGONS, at all levels, will appeal to fans of J.R.R. Tolkien's Middle Earth, swords and sorcery sci-fi enthusiasts and all those who love games of strategy.

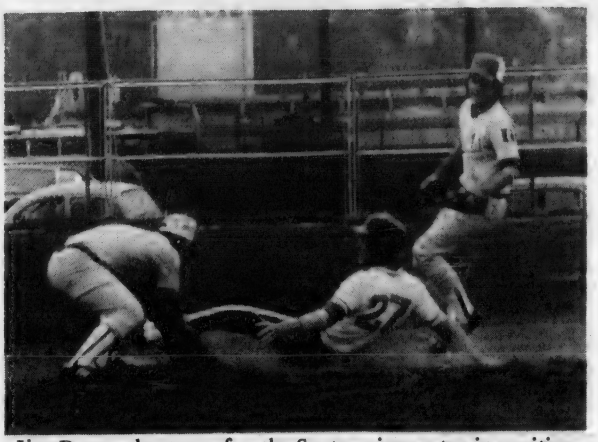
Baseball off to slow start

The Maryville College baseball team opened their season over spring break against a tough Tennessee Tech team. The Scots dropped both games of the doubleheader, 13-10 and 14-2.

In the first game, the Scots scored 2 runs in the first inning with Andy Limone and Dave Osborne coming in to touch home plate. In the second inning the Scots exploded for 4 runs. Ronnie Wyche, Rich Sandburg, Jim Reese, and Andy Limone all scored for the Scots.

However, the 6 run lead was short-lived. Starting pitcher Duran Williams was touched for 5 runs in the bottom of the second by Tech, who tied the score at 6-6 in the bottom of the third. Tech took the lead for good by adding 1 run in the fourth and 4 in the fifth, making the score 11-6 in their favor. Junior pitcher Larry Sheeley replaced Williams in the fifth inning during the Tech outburst.

MC did not give up, scoring 4 runs in the eighth inning, but Tech went on for the victory of 13-10



The second game of the doubleheader was no contest as Tech rolled over Maryville 14-2. Freshman pitcher Mike Wortman started the game. The Scots' only run came in the sixth inning on a 2-run homer by Mark Talley.

Tuesday, the Scots went to Nashville to play Fisk College. In a controversial game Fisk pitcher Randy Massey struck out 19 MC batters and held the Scots to 3 hits. Larry Sheeley started on the mound for MC and likewise limited Fisk to 3 hits. The Scots had men in scoring position throughout the game but were unable to score as Fisk came out on top, 2-0. Dave Osborne collected 2 out of the 3 MC hits and Andy Limone had the other.

On Thursday, March 27, the Scots visited UT. The Vols ended up with a 10-0 victory. The Scots were limited to 3 hits, again made by Osborne and Limone. Duran Williams started the contest and was hit for 4 runs in the bottom of the first inning. Mike Wortman and Bill Miller were brought in to relieve him, but it was to no avail as UT collected 12 hits against MC pitchers.

The Scots are presently 0-4 for the season. They play Bryan College (home) at 1:00 Friday and Carson-Newman (away) at 1:00 Saturday.

NEED X-TRA MONEY? Handicapped person needs someone to drive a van 2-3 days a week, mostly in afternoons and evenings. Call Dean McGuire-984-6647-for further information.

Jim Reese, shortstop for the Scots, misses a tag in exciting sixth-inning action in the UT-MC game March 27.

The surest sign of spring in East Tennessee.

Kickoff for Dogwood Arts Festival tonight in Theatre

by Ruth Reese

Spring has arrived at MC, bringing the bloom of the dogwood tree with it. Blount County's Dogwood Arts Festival is being held this year for the first time to celebrate its coming. The festival, set for April 10 to 27, is sponsored by the Blount County Chamber of Commerce, and many of the scheduled events are happening right on the MC campus.

"A Showcase Festival of Events" will kickoff the Festival on Thursday, April 10, at 7:30 p.m. in the MC Theatre. This program includes a variety of music, dance, and drama. Admission is free.

To begin the evening, the MC Concert Choir, directed by Dr. Harry Harter, will present five selections including Dr. Harter's musical version of "Daniel," a poem by Vachel Lindsey.

The MC Brass Choir, directed by Eugene Taliaferro-Jones, will perform Aaron Copland's "Fanfare for a Common Man," "Antique Suite," Bach chorales for brass, and Fanfare "La Peri."

Alcoa Foundation Affiliate Artist Faith Esham, soprano, will give an "informance," a technique involving both speaking and singing.

After an intermission the Maryville-Alcoa Civic Ballet will perform Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf," directed and choreographed by Mrs. Mitchell (Cheryl) Van Metre. Amy Moore will portray Peter and Yvette Herzburn the Wolf. The Van Metre School of Dance will join MACB to perform Tchaikowsky's "Waltz of the Flowers." The Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra will accompany the performances, and present "Bercuse and Finale (Firebird Suite)" by Stravinsky between the ballets.

The program will be concluded by a reception around the dogwood tree in the theatre courtyard. This reception is sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. James Penn. Hostesses for the evening are members of the Xi Gamma Delta Society.

An art exhibit featuring works by people of the community will also open on the evening of April 10. This exhibit, co-ordinated by Mr. Carroll Barger, will continue through April 27. Another exhibit open during Dogwood Arts Festival is the Tennessee Professional Photographers Exhibit held in the Bank of Maryville lobbies, featuring art by Blount County students in grades 1 through 12. Viewing of all exhibits is free of charge.

On April 12 from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Greenbelt Amphitheatre is the "Epworth Old Harp Sing." This will be a religious sing-along using an 1837 hymbook with no musical accompaniment. Singing of the words is preceded by the singing of shape notes to establish the tune.

From 4 to 7 p.m. that evening a fish fry will be

Bloy named new chairman of MC music department

Dr. James Bloy, MC instructor of piano and organ since 1953, has recently been named acting chairman of the Maryville College Fine Arts Department, effective in June, 1980.

Dr. Bloy received his B.A. and M.Mus. degrees from North Central College, IL, and a M.Mus. degree from the University of Rochester.

He came to MC as an instructor in 1953 and became assistant professor of music in 1956. Awarded a D.S.M. degree from Union Theological Seminary School of Sacred Music in 1964, Dr. Bloy was made an associate professor of music, and was elevated to full professorship in 1969.

"I'm excited about assuming the chairmanship of the Fine Arts Department," say Dr. Bloy. "Dr. Harry Harter has held this position very capably for quite a number of years, and it will be a challenge for me to follow him . . . . Even though I'm a musician, I aim to give as much of my administrative time and attention to the art program as to the music program.

". . . The arts at present are a very active and constantly changing scene. All students and faculty working in the arts need to cooperate to make our programs as rich as they possibly can be."

Dr. Bloy succeeds Dr. Harry H. Harter, Fine Arts Chairman since 1964, who is stepping down to resume fulltime teaching at MC.

——CIV slated for tomorrow——

U. W. Clemon, prominent Birmingham attorney who led the fight to desegregate the University of Alabama football team, will speak at the FAC Music Hall on Friday, April 11, at 9:20 a.m. The program will count as CIV credit.

Clemon, who has just been appointed a circuit judge, specializes in school desegregation and employment discrimination. His school discrimination cases have involved several county and city systems, and his job discrimination cases have included many large employers such as United States Steel and the City of Birmingham.

Clemon, a graduate of Miles College in Birmingham and Columbia University in New York, is the second black person since the Reconstruction Era to be elected to the Alabama State Senate. He is now chairman of the Judiciary Committee in that body, having previously served as chairman of the Rules Committee.

In the Alabama State Legislature, he led the opposition to the restoration of the death penalty and spearheaded the effort to require appointments of black people to state boards and agencies.

While at Miles College, Clemon served twice as editor-in-chief of The Milean, founded a student tutoring service, and was student body president. He was also a Presidential Scholar and valedictorian of Miles College in 1965.

At Columbia University School of Law, he won the First-Year Moot Court Competition and clerked with the National Labor Relations Board in Washington, D. C. He also served as librarian with the NAACP Legal Defense Fund in New York City.

Ignorance can be prevented

CIV: example of MC communication gap

When only forty-three people attend a program featuring two nationally recognized figures speaking on a current controversial issue, something is wrong. The lack of attendance at last week's informative CIV on the Olympic boycott was appalling. But what is even more shameful is the neglect of the people involved in organizing and presenting the program. They failed to even try to attract an audience. There was nothing on "On Campus Today," no posters in the Post Office or Pearsons, no notes in mailboxes – nothing. Although no Echo was published the Thursday before the program, it is doubtful it would have carried any notice, since the Communications Office was not even informed about the CIV until Friday. This barely gave them enough time to send a hasty release to local newspapers. The only people who even knew a CIV was being offered were those privileged enough to hear about it by word of mouth at the last minute.

This is not the way communications on this campus should be conducted.

But time and time again it happens. Something worthwhile is planned, then falls flat because no one knows about it. Something is changed, and misunderstanding runs rampant. Something happens, and people wonder why it was never mentioned in the Echo. The facilities for communications at MC are fairly comprehensive, yet many things still pass unnoticed. Why is this?

The people in charge of communications on this campus are not superhumans. Their range of knowledge is naturally limited. Judy Mizell and her staff in the Communications Office are to a large degree dependent upon others for information. Likewise, the Echo obtains some of its material from unsolicited sources. Such material is always welcome. Believe it or not, the editor does not always know everything that needs or deserves coverage in the paper. It is regrettable that newsworthy items occasionally go unrecognized simply because I am uninformed.

The Echo could be an extremely effective channel for campus communications, if used to its fullest advantage. To do this, however, requires that effort be made not only by the editor but by the entire college community. Those who have recognized this and have taken the initiative to offer me information (even by way of schedules and programs) have seen the results in print. Those who have not have played a game of hit-and-miss. I for one would prefer a game based on skill rather than chance.

There is no excuse for a communications disaster like last week's CIV to occur again. The ears and eyes of this campus are open and available to all who wish to get their message across. If this is recognized and the facilities for communications are used properly and regularly, Maryville College could indeed become a well-infomed community.

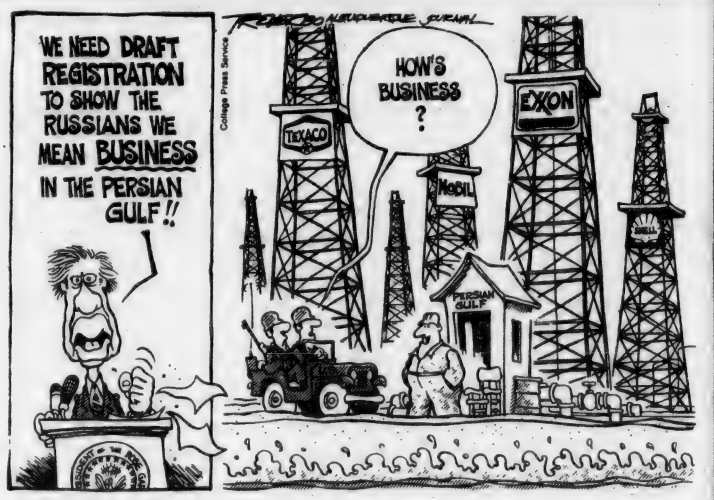
The Eglevsky Ballet will perform in residence at the University of Tennessee Clarence Brown Theatre on April 15 and 16, 1980, at 8:15 p.m. Sponsored by the Cultural Attractions Committee with assistance from the Southern Arts Federation and the Tennessee Arts Commission, the residency marks the first appearance of the Eglevsky Ballet in Knoxville. Reserve tickets are $5.00. A free lecture-demonstration will be held on Monday, April 14 at 8:15 p.m. in the Clarence Brown Theatre.

STUDY IN DENMARK OFFERED

A new opportunity for study in Denmark will be offered this fall when Scandinavian Seminar begins its one-semester program for college students and other adults. The program will start at the end of July and extend over the fall months till mid-December.

After a short introductory course, the students will participate in an intensive two-week language course and then spend some time with a Danish family practicing the language. From early September the students will live and study among Scandinavians at Danish folk schools (small residential liberal arts schools), where they will further improve their language skills and immerse themselves in the Danish life and culture.



On the basis of a detailed written evaluation, recommendation for credit will be sent to each student's home college or university. The fee, covering tuition, room, board, and course-connected travel in Denmark, is $3,500 for this five-month program. Interest-free loans are granted on the basis of need, as are a few small scholarships. Applications for the program will be accepted until May 15th.

UT PRESENTS LECTURE ON MIDEAST

Herman Eilts, American diplomat and recent Ambassador to Egypt, will be speaking at UT's University Center Shiloh Room on April 10, 1980 at 8:00 p.m. He will speak on America's present situation on the Mideast, and how the energy crisis has affected the Mideast both politically and economically.

Mr. Eilts is a member of the American Foreign Service Commission, Middle East Inst., and Royal Central Asian Society.

Echoes from the past

The MC track team won third place in the 1937 state tournament, finishing behind U.T. and Southwestern. Heavy rains that spring had hampered track practices. (from the May 15, 1937, Echo).

Black Culture Week encourages understanding

by David Mitchell

Dick Gregory will be the featured speaker in a week-long series of events planned for Maryville College's annual Black Culture Week, April 14 through April 19. Gregory, well known for his controversial and stimulating presentations, will speak on social problems on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Chapel. This program, like the others planned for the week, will be free.

Other events include the Trinidad Steel Band in two performances on Wednesday. The first show will be in the cafeteria at noon and the second in the Chapel at 8 p.m. Other events include a fashion show on Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Chapel, with students from MC and U.T. participating; and the hilarious Richard Pryor movie, Which Way is Up, on Friday at midnight in the P.E. building. Refreshments will be offered.

A picnic in the mountains is scheduled for Saturday. All those who wish to go should meet in front of the P.E. building no later than 9:30 a.m. The return to the campus will be on or before 6 p.m. Those who can use their cars to help transportation are urged to contact Ricky Turner in Anderson.

The week's events will conclude with a dance in Pearsons Dining Room on Saturday evening from 10 p.m. until 1 a.m. The featured D.J. will be the "Cisco Kid" from Memphis, also known as Ocie Wallace.

Black Culture Week is designed to promote understanding through cultural exchange. Its success depends upon participation not only by Black students but by all members of the Maryville College community, including faculty and administration. Ricky Turner, Coordinator of Minority Affairs, says about the week's events, "The input from the community and all MC students is vital to the success of the week. So far, I have been receiving assistance from all of the students. I feel that if this support is continued the week will be a great success."

The opportunity to hear a speaker of Dick Gregory's stature is a rare one for MC college students and faculty. Gregory is a prolific activist whose titles include author, recording artist, social satirist, actor, lecturer, critic, philosopher, and political analyst. Gregory combines his talents to serve in the cause of human liberation and to alleviate human suffering. Dick Gregory was born in St. Louis, Missouri. He was an outstanding track runner and attended Southern Illinois University on a track scholarship. He entered the entertainment field and quickly rose to become one of the best in the business. Gregory was considered a champion when he ran track and now he is considered a champion in the entertainment field. However, Gregory's description of a champion is quite different from American society. Says Gregory, "The real champion, I have come to understand, is the man who has risen to the crest of life's highest purpose – singular and complete devotion to serving one's fellow man." In all that Gregory does, whether it be fasting, running or lecturing, he ardently pursues his definition of a "Champion."

Cartlidge publishes book

Recently Dr. Cartlidge, the professor and chairman of the religion and philosophy department has co-authored the book Documents for the Study of the Gospels along with Dr. David Dungan, a professor of religion at UTK.

This book is compiled of little known texts which would be useful in the study of the gospels such as miracle stories, the Coptic Gospel of Thomas, and pagan materials. These various texts were translated by Drs. Cartlidge, Dungan, and some of their friends from Greek, Latin, Coptic, Aramic, Hebrew, and German.

Many of these translated writings have appeared before in other forms and books, but his book is a combination of all previous publications plus some new materials.

The book is divided into three main sections. The first section is a collection of unfamiliar early Christian writings that depict the various ways Jesus Christ was portrayed.

The second section focuses on Jewish, Greek, and Roman parallels of the four gospels. It includes materials such as miracle stories, wisdom sayings, certain chosen philosophers' teachings, and apocalyptic predictions.

The third section contains mainly non-Christian writings, pagan equivalents of the gospels.

The Collins Publishing Company published it in February, 1980. It is being used by Dr. Cartlidge in Religion 201 at Maryville. Some other universities using the book are Columbia University, Yale, Harvard, UTK, University of Minnesota, and certain theological seminaries.

Finance seminar to be held here

On April 14, 21, and 28 a seminar series will be held in the Maryville College Proffitt Dining Room which will focus on "Personal Financial Planning for the Small Business Owner." The seminars are sponsored by the trust department of Blount National Bank in cooperation with MC.

Gene White, professional manager with Management, Inc., Knoxville, will lead the seminar on the first night from 7 pm to 8:30 pm speaking on "Business Organization and Planning." He will be followed by Knoxville attorney H. Wynne James III who will discuss "Problems and Opportunities in Small Business" from 8:45 pm to 9:45 pm.

The next seminar, April 21, will be taught by three businessmen. A realtor, Louis Veal, Jr., will speak on real estate investment, Merrill Lynch account representative, Bill McCall will discuss business investment opportunities, and Sam J. Furrow, company chairman of the Tennessee Bar Association, will speak on other aspects of business investment opportunities.

The third and final seminar will include lectures on "Income, Estate, and Gift Taxes-The Tax Acts of 1976 and 1978" and "Wills, Trusts, and Methods of Transfering an Estate at Death." Dr. Frank Watkins, a public accountant, and T. Michael Knies, vice presidents and estates officer of Blount National Bank, will be the leaders for this seminar.

Dear Ms. MC

Dear Ms. M.C.,

My journeys into the depths of Carnegie have left me speechless, breathless, and very often in a fits of near insanity. Unfortunately, this state is not caused by the attention of a Carnegie resident, rather by the absence of a ladies' restroom! Do you know what i'ts like to be caught at 3 a.m. with no place of sanction! Help! Please send advice or my love life will literally be flushed away.

Signed,
Anita Relief (quickly)

Dear Relief,

Your predicament seems to be common among many Maryville College females. It is quite uncomforatable and often embarrassing to use the male facilities in the Carnegie residence hall. Your problem seems to be the hour of your need. For now, I suggest that your male friend escort you to the restroom during visitation hours. If you have the need of a ladies' restroom after visitation hours, then remember that restraint is a virtue! Further investigation into installation of a ladies' restroom in Carnegie will be done.

Sincerely,

Ms. M. C.

Minimum wage hike could hurt job-seekers

(CPS) – The increase in federal minimum wage standards from $2.90 to $3.10 per hour as of Jan. 1 will probably lead to a decline in job opportunities for college students, a number of educators predicted last week. They also forecast that the students who will be hardest hit by the cutbacks will be the students least able to afford them.

Rodney Harrison, financial aid director at Ohio State University, has heard "rumblings" that the number of student jobs in Columbus will decline even before the wage increase becomes effective July 1, the start of OSU's fiscal year.

"The great majority of research shows that the net effect of increasing the minimum wage is reduced employment," adds Jim Ragan, assistant economics professor at Kansas State University. He adds that "non-students are probably hit a little harder than students."

Yet, all worry that the increase could make life harder for students on work-study programs.

Under federal work-study guidelines, students can earn only so much during a school year. The new minimum wage, says University of Wisconsin Budget Director Glenn Watts, could mean that students risk earning up to the limit before the academic year expires. If they stop working, their eligibility for work-study funds can be endangered. If they try to stay under the limit by working fewer hours, they could end up working less than the minimum number of hours needed to qualify for the work-study program.

Watts also fears that the expected general reduction in employment will also mean there will be fewer work-study jobs available.

"We budgeted at the higher wage for the entire year," says Financial Aid Director Dan Hall at Northwestern University. Hall recalls that the increased minimum wage was instituted at Northwestern last fall, and additional work-study funds have kept student employment at the status quo.

Handicapped and disadvantaged students stand to lose the most from the increase in wages, says Charles Whitehead, president of the State Technical Institute in Memphis, TN. He points out that jobs traditionally open to them are those at the minimum wage level, where fewer jobs are expected to be available.

Phi Mu Alpha reactivated

The Xi Rho Chapter of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia is being re-activated on the Maryville College campus.

Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia is a national professional fraternity for men in music.

The Xi Rho Chapter has been inactive for several years but Gene Taliaferro-Jones, faculty advisor, and a group of MC students have recently displayed a desire to get the chapter active again.

The fraternity is open to any male MC student interested in music, willing to work, and having a 2.5 GPA.

If interested, contact Gene Taliaferro-Jones (TJ) in the Fine Arts Center.

EXPEDITIONS SEARCH FOR STUDENTS

Expedition Research, Inc., a placement service for adventurers and explorers, is now accepting applications from college students, photographers, scuba divers, mountain climbers, archaeologists, ocean sailors, scientists, and other explorers who want to be placed on various scientific and exploratory expeditions worldwide.

Over 100 expeditions have approached ERI for team members. These projects range from archaeological excavations to Himalayan mountaineering, from oceanographic surveys and cave exploration to scientific investigations on all six continents. Some expeditions award salaries, commissions, and royalties to team members; others require cost sharing. Expeditions last from several days to several months.

Expeditions registered with ERI have been endorsed by such organizations as the Explorers Club, National Geographic Society, the National Speleological Society, the Smithsonian Institution, various universities, and outing clubs.

ERI members receive monthly issues of EXPLORATION, a newsletter which lists expedition opportunities and summer and career job opportunities in the outdoors. Registrants also receive resume forms which are placed on file to fill urgent requests.

Students may register by sending $15 to Expedition Research, Inc., P. O. Box 467R, Cathedral and Franklin Streets, Annapolis, Maryland 21404, or write for further information.

WASHINGTON FORUM '80

During the spring and summer of 1980, the Washington Center for Learning Alternatives will conduct a series of four symposia which examine national policy making and news reporting.

This year, Washington Forum '80 is offered during May and August to accommodate student summer employment schedules. Each of the four options provides undergraduate and graduate students with a unique opportunity to observe the inner workings of government and media, and to interact with a variety of individuals operating within the Washington policy making scene.

Students desiring further information should contact the Echo, Box 2820.

New 1980-81 MC calendar approved

The Instructional Program Committee (IPC) has recently approved the 1980-81 calendar recommended by Dr. Al Perkins, Dean of Academics. The new calendar differs from the present one in three major ways: fall term begins two weeks rather than one week after Labor Day, as the holiday falls on September 1; Thanksgiving vacation has been extended from five days to nine days, beginning the Friday before Thanksgiving; and all classes will meet on Tuesday and Wednesday of the first week of each term.

The extension of Thanksgiving break will require that all dorms be closed over the nine-day vacation for energy reasons. This proposal has met opposition from students far from home who normally stay at school over Thanksgiving. A survey has been conducted to determine student feeling on the matter.

Following is the calendar the IPC voted on.

Ralph Boston, Olympic gold medalist, and Stan Huntsman, coach of the U. S. Olympic Track and Field Team, offered comments on the U. S. boycott of the Moscow Games in a panel CIV discussion.

Ramifications of Olympic boycott discussed by panel

Ralph Boston, Olympic gold medalist and former world champion long jumper, and Stan Huntsman, track coach at UT and of the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Team, were the featured speakers in a CIV April 2 dealing with the U.S. boycott of the 1980 Summer Olympic Games in Moscow.

Dr. Terry Bunde, Charles Bronson, Chris Cervenka, Jack Grantham, and Rodney Nelson also participated in the panel discussion of the boycott.

Many aspects of the boycott were brought up in the discussion. The idea of establishing a permanent site in a neutral country for the Olympics was one of the first questions to be brought up. Both Boston and Huntsman agreed this might be the best way to avoid future controversies over both political and technical matters such as times, records, and facilities.

Concerning the possibility of holding alternate games if the U.S. boycotts, Hunstman stated, "At present time I would say the alternate games are in limbo and very highly doubtful." He pointed out that, although President Carter has submitted a proposal to the International Olympic Committee (I.O.C.), they have shelved it until June. He also said that, if the U.S. delegation boycotts, no U.S. athlete could enter the Olympics on an individual basis. Individual entries are impossible under the I.O.C.'s regulations.

Neither Boston nor Huntsman expressed any sense of control or influence over the decision to boycott. "The debates we're having are after the fact. Usually, the debates come first, then the decision is made," Huntsman commented. He believes the boycott to be linked to patriotism. Boston said over and over again. "I wish there was another way."

Political interference with the Olympics is not a new development, according to the panelists. When Germany hosted the Games in 1936, the I.O.C. had to force Hitler to allow Jews to participate as athletes and administrators. Boston sees the current situation as part of a snowball that began with South Africa, Czechoslovakia, and Rhodesia. Furthermore, Boston does not believe that action taken by the I.O.C. will have any impact on getting Russia out of Afghanistan.

One alternative to the boycott that has been suggested is for the U.S. team to go but not participate in the opening ceremonies or medal presentations. Boston does not feel this is a viable alternative, as it would rob the athletes of the pride of representing their country and would be extremely difficult for them.

When asked if a U.S. boycott of Russia in 1980 would cause a Russian boycott of the 1984 Summer Games scheduled for Los Angeles, Huntsman replied this was "almost a certainty." He also said it was possible that the I.O.C. might remove the games from Los Angeles and choose another site to avoid just such a situation.

The CIV was organized by a group of MC students, and was financed through a Mellon Foundation Grant.

Echo seeking photographer

The Echo is looking for a good photographer to join its staff for the remainder of the current school year. Applicants should have a sound working knowledge of black-and-white film and paper processing and manipulation. Those interested should drop a note in Box 2820. Interviews will be given at a later date; applicants are requested to bring contact sheets and good prints to their interview.

National aid to middle-income students cut

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS) High interest rates and President Carter's new anti-inflation program may soon make it harder for middle-class students to get federal financial aid.

Carter's anti-inflation program includes a proposal to stop aid to 450,000 of the 1.8 million students currently covered under the Middle Income Student Assistance Program, which went into effect in November, 1978.

Bowman Cutter of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) says the administration hopes to expand aid to students from poor families as it cuts assistance to middle income students.

Before the middle income student program, only students from families earning less than $15,000 per year could qualify for aid. The new law raised the limit to $25,000. As a result a record number of students are now getting some form of federal aid.

Most of the aid distributed to middle income families has come through guaranteed loans. The student arranges for a loan from a local bank, while the government guarantees that the loan will be repaid. The student makes no payments on the loan until after graduation, when he or she pays seven percent interest. The government pays the difference between seven percent and the interest rate the bank normally charges its non-student customers.

The guaranteed loan program has become increasingly costly for the government because recent student loans, Cutter says, average 15 percent interest. The government consequently pays more interest – eight percent – than the student, something Cutter calls "unacceptable."

Cutter adds that "a disturbing" number of students have borrowed more money than they actually needed for college under the program because the interest rate is so low.

"They can get seven percent money under the guaranteed loan program," he explains, "but they can't get loans at less than 14 or 15 percent elsewhere. We fear that some students are trying to use the federal government as their bank. That is not the intent of the program."

An aide to Rep. William Ford, who heads the House postsecondary education sub-committee, says that inflation has weakened the effort to help middle income families. "The act was intended to help families decrease the percentage (of their income) they must use for education," the aide recalled.

"Because of inflation, the percentage is going up or staying the same. Either colleges are charging more, or people are getting cost-of-living increases that push them over the ($25,000) limit. Those who might have benefited (from the program) may no longer be qualifying for it."

The Carter administration is, moreover, trying to cut the average amount of the loans from $2200 to $1600.

The administration also wants to concentrate more on making direct loans to students. Cutter says the advantage is that direct loans are "easier to collect," and that they can be more readily funnelled to students from poorer families.

"We want to focus our student assistance on the poor," he stated.

The sun rose at 6:16 a.m. Easter morning. On hand to greet it were the MC Choir, the brass ensemble, and a variety of worshippers.

And you thought our art department stunk...

KNOXVILLE, TN (CPS) – A University of Tennessee policeman, making his rounds just past midnight, noticed an awfully curious smell coming from the university's Art Center last week. Sure enough, upon investigation he found an unusual exhibit: a dead dog in the lobby encircled by a careful display of black beans and rice. Nearby was a similarly artful display of a dead skunk.

Art Department Chairman Donald Kurka later told the UT Daily Beacon the animals "were arranged like a display. The main problem was the smell."

The smell was so bad that, despite the efforts of a fumigation team, classes had to be moved out of the building for a day.

"I assume it was someone's idea of art," Kurka told College Press Service. "It's not mine, though."

So it goes...

Soccer team kicks off winning season

The MC Scots ripped Cumberland (KY) College 4-0 last Wednesday in the spring soccer opener at Honaker Field. Striker Mark Plate had a "hat-trick" (3 goals) in an outstanding performance for the Maryville squad.

The Scots dominated from the start; the visitors rarely tested goalkeeper Larry Wright in the first half. However, MC missed several key opportunities to score and it wasn't until late in the half that Plate headed in a loose ball in front of the net to give the Scots a 1-0 lead. Moments later he netted his second goal from the left wing to end the half.

Early in the second period, Plate took an excellent pass from Frank Burns and nudged it across the line for his third score of the afternoon. Later, a Cumberland player committed a hand-ball violation in his own penalty area, and Carey Starnes beat the helpless visiting goalkeeper off a penalty shot to complete the scoring.

The Scots' defense preserved the shutout with strong games from Dave Franssen and Shin Tanaka. Starnes controlled the midfield game well. Wright shared the duties in goal with freshman Tom Ginsburg.

held at the Masonic lodge in Louisville. According to Mrs. Householder, administrative assistant of the Dogwood Arts Festival Committee, Louisville was once the metropolis of Blount County until two floods caused problems for the area. A walking tour guide will be given out at the fish fry to those interested. Tickets are $3 and may be purchased through Louisville Masonic members, the Chamber of Commerce, or at the door.

"Old Timer's Day" is next on the schedule. On April 13 everyone is invited to bring their instruments to the Greenbelt Park behind Blount County Courthouse between 1 and 5 p.m. for an afternoon of picking and grinning. There will be guest appearances by The Sullivan Family and Steve Kaufman. Down Yonder will furnish the announcers. All groups are welcome to participate.

On April 15 an "Old Fashioned Wagon Wheel Square Dance" will be held in Midland Center Parking Lot from 7 to 10 p.m. This is a public square dance with guest performances by the Wagon Wheelers, demonstrating Western style, and Ed Hall and Band, demonstrating Appalachian style and clogging. Refreshments will be sold by Xi Gamma Delta.

On April 16 an old- fashioned spelling bee will be held at Sam Houston Memorial Schoolhouse from 10 a.m to 2 p.m. The spinning wheel and natural yarn dyes will also be demonstrated. Everyone is welcome to bring a picnic lunch.

"An Evening of Music and Champagne" is scheduled for 8 p.m. on April 17 at the Bijou Theatre in Knoxville. Featured are two former MC Affliated Artists, Karen Roewade and Philip Steele, and the current Affliate Artist, Faith Esham. Tickets are available at the FAC or the Bijou for $25. This performance will help support the Affliate Artist program at MC.

Events planned for April 19 include a model plane showing at 2 p.m. at Pole-climbers Field in Alcoa, a concert by the McGhee Tyson Air Force Band at Midland Center from 1 to 3 p.m., and an Antique Car Show from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Twin City Buick Company. The MC Playmakers will present the play, "Wizard of Oz" at 7:30 with the help of the MC Preparatory School Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for students.

On Sunday April 20 there will be a choral concert in tribute to Dr. Harry Harter at New Providence Presbyterian Church starting at 3 p.m. The MC Choir, Heritage High School Singers, and the New Providence Church Choir will unite to present "Oratorio St. Paul" by Mendelssohn. They will be accompanied by orchestra and organ. Solists are Faith Esham, Almeda Brakebill, Don Brakebill, and Floyd Eaddy. Ken Hawkins will be directing.

From April 21 to 26 a special movie will be shown at the Palace Theatre at 7 p.m. daily for $1.00. There will be a 1 p.m. matinee on April 26. The title will be announced later.

Places are available to go on a five-mile hike to Metcalf Bottoms Circuit in the Smoky Mountains with Margaret Stevenson at 9 a.m. on the 22nd. On the 23rd there is a wildflower walk with Dr. Randolf Shields at 1 p.m. This trip is full now, but names are being taken for a possible second group. Call 983-2241 for reservations and more information about either trip.

The "Performing Artists Concert" on April 24 features Faith Esham accompanied by Sally Schoen. This is a free performance held at 8:15 p.m. in the FAC.

The "Dogwood Bicycle Race" rounds off the program on April 26 at 10 a.m. Beginning at the Springbrook Recreation Center in Alcoa, there will be five divisions with marked trails. Awards will be presented. Call 983-9244 by April 25 to register.

The Dogwood Arts Festival ends on April 27 with an art exhibit at Laws Interiors, Inc. Every effort has been made to see that the festival will contain something for all.

Baseball Scots hold 3-game winning streak

by Dave Ierulli

In one of the most dramatic come-from-behind victories in the history of Maryville College baseball, the Fighting Scots overcame a 5-point deficit to beat Carson-Newman, 6-5. Freshman pitcher Mike Wortman started on the mound for the Scots, going the full 9 innings and allowing only 8 hits.

The Eagles, behind the pitching of Rick Sinard, were keeping Maryville batters off the bases. C-N's offense also exploded early, jumping out to a 5-run lead. However, the Scots started to turn things around in the fifth inning, scoring 2 runs. The first was scored by Wyche on Dave Ierulli's single. Then shortstop Jimmy Reese followed with another single, scoring Wortman form second, making the score 5-2.

Mike Wortman, after allowing C-N 7 hits over the first four innings, held the Eagles to only 1 hit over the next five innings. In the sixth inning, with one out, Mark Talley singled and Ronnie Wyche hit a 2-run homer. This closed the score to 1 point as Carson-Newman went into the seventh inning leading 5-4.

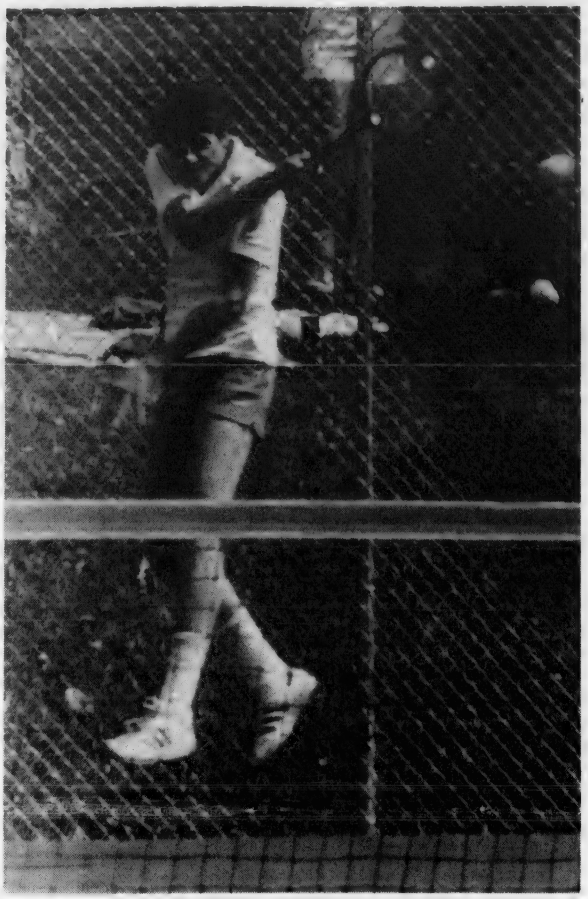
The Scots struck again in the seventh, tying up the game 5-5 with third baseman Andy Limone's run. The Scots took the lead for good in the eighth inning when Jay (Todd) Kohlbusch rapped a single to right field and advanced to second on a throwing error. With two outs, Jimmy Reese knocked Kohlbusch in with a single to give the Scots a 6-5 come-from-behind victory over the Eagles.

On Friday, the Scots played a doubleheader at Stinnett Field against Bryan College. They won both games, 9-1 and 10-6. Larry Sheeley opened the first game for the Scots, allowing Bryan only 2 hits and striking out 6 batters.

Maryville opened the scoring in the first inning. With bases loaded by Jimmy Reese, Dave Osborne, and Mark Talley, Jay Kohlbusch grounded to the shortstop to force Talley out at third but scoring Reese.

The Scots added another run in the second inning. Designated hitter Leonard Moreland singled and was followed by Wortman's double. Jimmy Reese's grounder to the shortstop was mishandled, allowing Moreland to score.

With the score 2-0, the Scots exploded for 7 runs in the third inning. Andy Limone led off the inning with a single and was advanced to second by a walk. Dave Osborne and Jay Kohlbusch both walked, loading the bases for Moreland, who doubled in 3 runs. Ronnie Wyche then walked and was followed by Rich Sandberg's single, scoring Moreland. Wyche and Sandberg both advanced on a wild pitch. Jimmy Reese then singled, scoring both Wyche and Sandberg. Reese stole second, where Limone singled him in to give the Scots a 9-0 lead. The Scots held Bryan College to 1 run, defeating them 9-1.



In the second game of the doubleheader, freshman pitcher Mark Beyer started on the mound for the Scots. Bryan jumped off to a 1-run lead in the top half of the first inning. The Scots responded with 5 runs of their own in the bottom half. Walks to Jimmy Reese, Dave Osborne, and Mark Talley loaded the bases. Then bases on balls to Dave Ierulli, Mike Wortman, and Jay Ierulli, Stewart Van Duzer grounded out but drove in Wortman to end the inning.

The Scots added more runs in the bottom of the second. With two outs, Dave Osborne walked and then moved to second on a stolen base. Mark Talley's fly ball to left field was dropped, allowing Osborne to score and putting Talley on third. Dave Ierulli followed with a double which scored Talley. Mike Worman added a single, scoring Ierulli and ending the inning.

At the top of the third, Junior pitcher Jeff Cheeks relieved Beyer. Bryan managed to score 5 runs. Dave Osborne and Keith Martin were called in to finish the inning pitching.

The Scots scored twice more in the bottom of the sixth. Both Moreland and Osborne came in, ending the scoring at 10-6 in the Scots' favor.

The Scots now have a season record of 3-4. Their next games are Thursday (1:30) at Tusculum and Friday (1:00) at Cumberland College.

John Sanders gives his all in a recent tennis match.

Tennis swings into action

On March 11, 1980 the Scots' men's tennis team travelled to Sewanee and dropped a 9-0 decision to a very strong University of the South squad.

MC got its first win against King College, winning 5-4. For singles competition, Randy Shackleford of the Scots defeated Jim McDowell, 6-2, 6-2. Larry Durand beat Tad Reeve, 6-4, 5-7, and 6-0. Steve Arnold downed Mark Ramsay, 6-2, 6-0. In doubles play, Arnold and Randy Massey defeated Thomas and Harrison of King, 7-5, 3-6, 6-3, and Dan Gray and Junichi Kasuya of the Scots beat Ramsay and Scott, 6-1, 7-6.

On March 30 against Centre, the Maryville team did not fare well, going down 7-0 to the Colonels. MC Coach Joe Rigell remarked: "The match could have been closer. Shackleford played a good match, although he lost. Maybe we'll do better against them later in the year."

The Scots lost a close decision to Tennessee Wesleyan on April 1, 5-4. Randy Shackleford swept his singles match 6-2, 6-2; Larry Durand won 6-2, 4-6, and 6-4; and Steve Arnold came out on top 6-2 and 7-5. In doubles play, Randy Massey and Steve Arnold won 1-6, 7-5, and 7-6.

Knoxville College came to Maryville on April 2, and the Scots swept the visitors, 9-0. MC took every set, as Randy Shackleford won 6-1, 6-4, Randy Massey triumphed 6-4, 6-4, Larry Durand came out on top 6-2, 6-0, Les Baron won 6-0, 6-3, Johnny (B.) Sanders won 6-3, 7-5, and Dan Gray was victorious 6-0, 6-1.

The Scots also swept Knoxville College in three doubles exhibition matches.

A soleful mugger?

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA (CPS) – The University of Virginia community is being plagued by a strange mugger who oddly enough, only steals the clogs off women's feet.

The thief, according to the Cavalier Daily, has knocked down and stolen the clogs off of at least six women during the first two months of 1980. The count would have been higher, but in early January one victim batted the thief away with an order of hot chili she was taking home.

"He's a strange dude," said city police Lt. James Haden. "I don't think he's aware that this is robbery by force," Detective Phil Waufle told the newspaper.

Police say they did search the home of one suspect, but found none of the stolen clogs. There were no arrests.

Linda Wiley stars as Dorothy in the upcoming production of "The Wizard of Oz" by the MC Playmakers and the Prep School. She and "Toto" watch Scarecrow Tim Fitzgerald perform. The show is set for this Friday and Saturday nights at 7:30 p.m. in the MC Theatre. Tickets are $1.00 for students and $2.00 for adults.

Parents welcomed this weekend

by Jeana Webb

"Reflections, Reality, and Reverie." This is the theme for the 1980 Parent's Weekend at Maryville College. This year Parents' Weekend falls on April 19-20. Activities have been planned that the entire family will find appealing.

To start off events at 7:30 p.m. in the Theatre, on Friday, will be a performance of Wizard of Oz. Next, there will be a Coffee House in Pearsons Dining Hall, beginning at 9:00 pm.

Saturday morning registration for all parents will be held from 9:00 a.m. until 12:00 noon on the front veranda of Pearsons Hall. After the registration, parents are invited to have coffee and visit with the faculty there.

After this, the parents will be taken on a tour of the campus buildings. The guides will comment on reflections of Maryville's past, sharing MC's future, and what we dream about for the future. Then the parents will attend a brunch in Pearsons.

After brunch, Dr. Wayne Anderson will hold a forum with the parents which will give them a chance to get to know Dr. Anderson better and learn more about Maryville.

Saturday afternoon, the Maryville baseball team will host our arch-rival, Carson Newman College, in what promises to be an exciting game which everyone should enjoy. If baseball is not your bag, there will also be another tour for those who missed the first one.

Ending the afternoon's activities will be a Hole-In-One contest sponsored by the Maryville Scots Basketball team. This should be a very interesting contest.

Bringing Saturday to a close, after dinner is another performance of The Wizard of Oz.

Sunday morning, parents are free to attend the church of their choice. Sunday afternoon there will be a presentation of an oratorio by Mendelssohn entitled St. Paul. This presentation will be in honor of Maryville's Chairman of Music, Dr. Harry H. Harter. This will bring the 1980 Parents' Weekend to a close.

Blount County's Dogwood Arts Festival is going on now and will be in full swing the weekend of April 19-20. Many kinds of flowers such as azaleas and daffodils will be in full bloom, lending a flair of color and beauty to the festivities. Also, the dogwood and red-bud trees will be bursting with color.

The campus has put on her spring coat to welcome parents to Maryville. All the trees are budding and the grass is a lush green, there is a myriad of wildflowers dotting the grass with deep purples, yellows, blues, and whites.

Parents' Weekend is an annual event at Maryville College and is held so that

Oratorio to honor Harter

The New Providence Presbyterian Church in Maryville has planned an oratorio to honor Dr. Harry H. Harter, Fine Arts Department chairman here at MC, for "his choral contribution to the community." The oratorio will be performed on Sunday, April 20 at 3 p.m. in the church sanctuary.

The oratorio consists of soloists, a chorus, and an orchestra all combining to perform Felix Mendelssohn's "Saint Paul." Featured soloists will be Soprano, Faith Esham; Alto, Almeda Brakebill; Tenor, Don Brakebill; and Bass, Floyd Eaddy. Faith Esham, the ALCOA Foundation Affiliate Artist for this year, has performed at the White House, with the N.Y. City Opera, and with other operas across the nation.

The MC Choir will be combining with the Heritage High Choir and the New Providence Chancel Choir to form the chorus for "Saint Paul." The orchestra is provided by New Providence.

Since coming to Maryville College in 1947, Dr. Harter has taught voice and directed the choir. He became a full professor upon receiving his doctoral degree in 1961. He also directs the annual College-Community presentation of Handel's "Messiah."

In 1974 he was commissioned jointly by the Tennessee Arts Commission and the National Endowment for the Arts to compose an original piece for chorus and orchestra. This work, entitled "Fantasia on Shape Note Tunes," premiered in May,1976, as part of Tennessee's Bicentennial Celebration.

Seventeen of his choral works have been published and several of his larger orchestral and choral works have been performed by the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra, conducted by David Van Vactor.

Dr. Harter served as chairman of the music advisory panel of the Tennessee Arts Commission from 1967, when it was established, until 1973, when he took part of a year off to tour outstanding choral organizations in Sweden, France, Germany, and Spain.

Invitation to all students and faculty

Is there something you would like to say to the Maryville College Board of Directors? The Board will be on campus next weekend for its annual spring meeting, and the Echo would like to let them know how you feel. If you have a question, comment, plea, complaint, or opinion to express on any subject that might be of concern to the Board, this is your chance to speak up. The Echo will devote a special section of next week's paper to your statements.

Address comments to: The MC Board of Directors, c/o The Highland Echo, Box 2820. All submissions must be signed, and should be typed if at all possible (please). They must be recieved not later than 12:00 noon Monday, April 21.

Harter's era draws to close

Years as dedicated department head end

At the end of this school year, Dr. Harry Harter will be stepping down from his position as head of the MC Fine Arts Department. Under his able leadership, the fine arts at Maryville have flourished and grown steadily stronger. To many, Dr. Harter's resignation as department head represents the end of an era.

Dr. Harter's association with Maryville College stretches back to 1947. This gives him one of the longest terms of continuous service to the College of any present faculty or staff member. He was named department head in 1964. His accomplishments over the past 32 years have been many and varied. His greatest achievement, however, and what he is most fondly regarded for, is his superb directorship of the MC Concert Choir.

Dr. Harter has taken the Choir over 55,000 miles to sing in more than 500 cities. Over the years, they have sung in Carnegie Hall, throughout most of the Eastern United States, and in various parts of Europe. This December, the Choir will tour Poland. These tours represent some of MC's most far-reaching and effective promotional efforts. All were personally arranged and managed by Harry Harter. Literally millions of ears have listened to the voices of MC singers, and many have been moved to find out more. Some current students trace the beginnings of their interest in Maryville to hearing a touring concert. It is a safe bet that Dr. Harter has extended the invitation to attend MC to more people than any other faculty member. His recruitment record puts even a football coach to shame.

Fortunately, Dr. Harter is not relinquishing his association with MC altogether. He will continue teaching full time, and will still be directing the Concert Choir. Dr. Bloy will be assuming the responsibilities of Fine Arts Department Head.

Dr. Harter has poured a great deal of time and energy into the fine arts at Maryville College during his sixteen years as department head. Although Dr. Bloy will no doubt prove a competent and able leader, we can only note Dr. Harter's resignation with a degree of sadness.. However, we anticipate that Dr. Harter's remaining years of association with MC will be every bit as fruitful as his previous ones.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor–

Early during the long winded A.C.C. debate over the proposed new athletic policy, was a lengthy discussion on the role of winning in our Athletic Philosophy. When the dust had cleared, the common consensus was to downplay, "but not eliminate," the ideal of winning in the M.C. brand of athletic excellence.

This de-emphasis, rather than re-emphasis, on winning is the guarantor of, at best, a mediocre showing for our program in terms of wins and losses. Since a sizable chunk of our general fund is endowed by athletically sympathetic alumni, we cannot afford a substandard won-lost record

The money we save by maintaining a mediocre program would surely be offset by a decline in alumnal donations due to lousy box scores. The benefactors, in their generosity, are more concerned with successful athletic teams than they are with equitable teachers' salaries. Teachers, in turn should recognize that winning teams could bring the extra endowment needed to put bread on their tables.

Taking the hard road, and coincidentally, the one less travelled by, we might better serve the extended college family by paring our athletic structure to those programs that are most cheaply made excellent. In this case, "excellent" includes a strong emphasis on winning.

Shrewd diplomacy and a frugal, but acute, set of athletic priorities could change a future nemesis into a highly contributive facet of the Maryville College reputation. Just as the student is provided the means for academic excellence, so should he be given the same opportunity athletically. In the liberal arts tradition, good coaches and equipment go hand in hand with good teachers and books. The "win" means no less than the "A." Let the campus remember the balance that means liberal arts and the pride that means Maryville College. To repeat the borrowed words of one college president, let's take the road less travelled by. We can all win with change.

Earnestly,
Gregory Hosler

Harbinger Press is editing for publication an anthology of college student poetry. This anthology, edited for expression and content, will be distributed to college and university libraries in every state and to more than 500 public libraries and review publications, including "Books in Print" and the "Cumulative Book Index." This first edition, a perfect bound softback book of 500 to 1000 pages, will be indexed by students' names.

Colleges and universities from each state have been selected for invitation. Any college student is eligible.

Submitted poetry to be considered for inclusion in this anthology is due at HARBINGER PRESS by May 15, 1980. Acceptance notification will be mailed directly to student's address by May 31st. The completed book will be published in early fall.

All poetry submitted must be typed on standard 8½ X 11 typing paper with your name, address and school attended on each typewritten page. One to three poems may be submitted. Our publishing guidelines limit the length of any one poem to a maximum of 20 lines. However, longer poems of an exceptional nature will be considered. Poems cannot be returned.

Each college and university with a student included in "Other Voices in American Poetry - 1980" will receive a copy for their library.

Dear Ms. MC

Dear Ms. M.C.,

My problem is probably rather common, especially during spring term, but it is keeping me from concentrating on my studies or anything else productive. All of my mental energy is focused toward a certain male on this campus. This certain male is in one of my classes, but we have never spoken together. How do I go about making him realize that I'm alive and worthy of his attention without having to resort to cavewoman tactics? Please hurry! My grades are rapidly failing. Your help in this matter will be sincerely appreciated.

Sincerely,
Distressed Damsel

Dear Distressed,

Don't be afraid to make the first move. These days people more easily accept women's assertiveness. I suggest you start a casual conversation with him. Then invite him to play raquetball or to study together. You shouldn't neglect your studies for passion's sake. It is common for college students to make a relationship their primary goal, while it should be their education. If this relationship sparks and starts a fire, then don't let it burn out of control. But if he shows no interest, then he will never know what he missed!

Sincerely,
Ms. M.C.

After Dr. Harter received his B.A. in 1942 from San Jose State, he entered the U.S. Army Air Force. His service as a chaplain's assistant included considerable time spent in training and developing choral groups both in the service and in communities where he was stationed.

Following World War II, Dr. Harter enrolled at the University of Nebraska. While at Nebraska, he won the Alpha Rho Tau award for his choral compositions, and in 1947 he received the Master of Music degree.

In addition to his degrees, he has studied composition under Roy Harris and Normand Lockwood; conducting under Nicholas Slonimsky, Lowell Powell Deveridge, and Ifor Jones; voice under Maurine Thompson, Arthur Westbrook, and Lucius Metz; and coaching under Coenraad (cq.) V. Bos in New York.

In June, Dr. Harter will be stepping down as the Fine Arts Department chairman to return to full time teaching.

Playmakers, Prep School unite in "Wizard Of Oz"

by Lois Boney

After the dramatic production of Abelard and Heloise, MC students may be ready for some theatre on the lighter side. If so, then The Wizard of Oz, which will be performed April 18 and 19 at 7:30, is just what you're looking for. Directed by Sharon Crane, Oz is a joint production of the Maryville College Playmakers and the MC Preparatory School for the Arts. Rosemary Ahmad, artistic director of the Prep School, is the musical director for the production. Also, contributing to the production is MC's Dana Paul, who composed music for the show.

Playmakers in the production include Linda Wiley, who plays Dorothy; Tim Fitzgerald, who plays the Scarecrow; Allen Evitts, who plays the Tin Woodman; Sarah Findlay, who plays Glenda, the Good Witch of the South; Lois Boney plays the Good Witch of the North; Vanessa Logan is Madam Winkie; Muff Sawdon portrays the Wicked Witch of the West; Tim Stuart is the Soldier with the Green Whiskers; and Bill Thomas is Oz, the Great Wizard. Frank Fiore, a freshman from Poughkeepsie, New York, plays the Cowardly Lion.

Since the cast and crew of Oz are seldom associated with waist-high persons, the show has been a great experience for the "big kids" as well as the children. For the past three Saturdays, the college students involved in the show have been working with the children in making and assembling their costumes, working on the set, and showing the children how to apply their makeup. There are nearly forty children in the production, ranging in ages from preschool to junior-high.

Those not acquainted with the stage production of Oz will find some variations from the movie. For instance, the play incorporated Winkieland and the Monkey People into the plot. Also, in the movie Glenda and the Good Witch of the North is one person, whereas in the play they are two separate characters. The Wizard of Oz appears in four forms in the play: a man, a woman, a beast, and a ball of fire. The stage version of the Oz story is fun, colorful, and refreshing. For any student interested in a journey down the yellow brick road, The Wizard of Oz this Friday and Saturday will be there for your travel at the price of $1 per student.

Women's softball off the ground

Maryville's Women's Softball Club has officially started its season. After getting off to a slow start against Hiawasee, the ladies swept a double-header against Morristown 15-12 and 7-1. Morristown had problems finding a pitcher as Maryville walked 20 times in the first game. MC pitcher, Candy Nutter, held Morristown to just five hits in the second game while MC rallied for 11 hits.

On April 9th, Maryville played its first home game against a strong Bryan team. Due to many errors, the ladies were defeated in the first game 15-11. In the second game, Maryville came back to beat Bryan 6-5. MC was led offensively by Kim Allen with 6 hits and Ivy Hinton and Kathy Spurlock with 5 hits each.

Maryville was scheduled to play a tournament at Milligan last Saturday, but it was cancelled due to the weather. The ladies next outing will be at Maryville on Friday, April 18, against Tennessee Temple. Game time is at 3:00 pm.

Shelley Kingsbury keeps her eye on the ball in Friday's women's tennis match against Bryan College.

Scots split against Tech

On Friday the Scots hosted Tennessee Tech at Stinnett Field. In the first game of the doubleheader, pitcher Larry Sheeley allowed Tech to jump out to a 5-run lead. Maryville scored its first run on a grounder by Jimmy Reese, scoring Dave Ierulli from third base; however, Maryville was unable to score more until the sixth inning.

With Tennessee Tech leading 8-1 going into the bottom of the sixth, the Scots added 3 more runs. With 2 outs, Dave Osborne walked. This was followed by another base on balls to Mark Talley. Mike Wortman followed with a single to score Osborne. A walk to Ierulli loaded the bases for Jay Kohlbusch, who singled. Both Talley and Wortman were scored. The Scots added another run in the seventh, but it wasn't enough as Tech beat Maryville, 8-5.

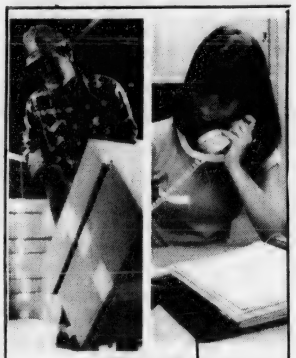
In the second game of the doubleheader Mike Wortman started pitching for the Scots, allowing Tech only 4 hits as he went the full 7 innings. With Tech leading 1-0, the Scots tied the score up when Ronnie Wyche reached first on a base on balls and was moved to third on Osborne's ground to the shortstop which was errored. With runners on first and third, Osborne stole second, allowing Wyche to score from third.

The Scots added 2 more runs in the sixth inning when Kolhbusch singled and was moved to second on Stewart Van Duzer's walk. A walk to Reese loaded the bases for Ronnie Wyche's single, which scored both Kohlbusch and Van Duzer. The Scots went on to defeat Tennessee Tech, 3-1.

The Scots are now 4-5. They play at home Friday against Fisk (2:00) and Saturday against Carson-Newman (1:00).

Soccer fails goals

The soccer team lost two games last week, facing a 6-0 clubbing by the University of Tennessee and a 5-3 decision to Lee College.



The Scots simply could not generate an offense against the Vols, who kept pressure on the MC defense, getting 3 first-half goals. In the second half, a defensive error and 2 penalty shots gave UT the 6-0 win.

On Saturday, the Scots delighted the home crowd by jumping out on top of the talented Lee side with Ken Davidson's header off a rebound of a Carey Starnes' blast. Two costly errors gave easy goals to the visitors, and Davidson beat the Lee goalkeeper for his second tally to make it 2-2 at intermission.

Lee scored quickly to take the lead in the second half, but the Scots came right back on a score by Ed Davalos. The visitors added two goals to end the 5-3 shootout. The match was physical, and the Scots seemed to outplay Lee, but made several mental mistakes and could not put Lee away when they were down.

Maryville's spring soccer record is 1-2.

Pitcher Mike Wortman does his stuff for the Scots in Friday's doubleheader against Tennessee Tech.

Women's softball off the ground

Maryville's Women's Softball Club has officially started its season. After getting off to a slow start against Hiawasee, the ladies swept a double-header against Morristown 15-12 and 7-1. Morristown had problems finding a pitcher as Maryville walked 20 times in the first game. MC pitcher, Candy Nutter, held Morristown to just five hits in the second game while MC rallied for 11 hits.

On April 9th, Maryville played its first home game against a strong Bryan team. Due to many errors, the ladies were defeated in the first game 15-11. In the second game, Maryville came back to beat Bryan 6-5. MC was led offenssively by Kim Allen with 6 hits and Ivy Hinton and Kathy Spurlock with 5 hits each.

Maryville was scheduled to play a tournament at Milligan last Saturday, but it was cancelled due to the weather. The ladies next outing will be at Maryville on Friday, April 18, against Tennessee Temple. Game time is at 3:00 pm.

Shelley Kingsbury keeps her eye on the ball in Friday's women's tennis match against Bryan College.

Scots split against Tech

On Friday the Scots hosted Tennessee Tech at Stinnett Field. In the first game of the doubleheader, pitcher Larry Sheeley allowed Tech to jump out to a 5-run lead. Maryville scored its first run on a grounder by Jimmy Reese, scoring Dave Ierulli from third base; however, Maryville was unable to score more until the sixth inning.

With Tennessee Tech leading 8-1 going into the bottom of the sixth, the Scots added 3 more runs. With 2 outs, Dave Osborne walked. This was followed by another base on balls to Mark Talley. Mike Wortman followed with a single to score Osborne. A walk to Ierulli loaded the bases for Jay Kohlbusch, who singled. Both Talley and Wortman were scored. The Scots added another run in the seventh, but it wasn't enough as Tech beat Maryville, 8-5.

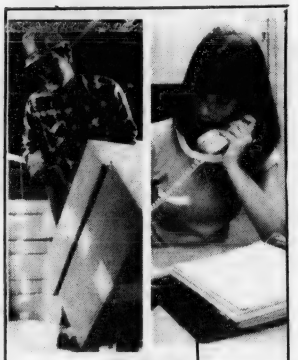
In the second game of the doubleheader Mike Wortman started pitching for the Scots, allowing Tech only 4 hits as he went the full 7 innings. With Tech leading 1-0, the Scots tied the score up when Ronnie Wyche reached first on a base on balls and was moved to third on Osborne's ground to the shortstop which was errored. With runners on first and third, Osborne stole second, allowing Wyche to score from third.

The Scots added 2 more runs in the sixth inning when Kolhbusch singled and was moved to second on Stewart Van Duzer's walk. A walk to Reese loaded the bases for Ronnie Wyche's single, which scored both Kohlbusch and Van Duzer. The Scots went on to defeat Tennessee Tech, 3-1.

The Scots are now 4-5. They play at home Friday against Fisk (2:00) and Saturday against Carson-Newman (1:00).

Soccer fails goals

The soccer team lost two games last week, facing a 6-0 clubbing by the University of Tennessee and a 5-3 decision to Lee College.



The Scots simply could not generate an offense against the Vols, who kept pressure on the MC defense, getting 3 first-half goals. In the second half, a defensive error and 2 penalty shots gave UT the 6-0 win.

On Saturday, the Scots delighted the home crowd by jumping out on top of the talented Lee side with Ken Davidson's header off a rebound of a Carey Starnes' blast. Two costly errors gave easy goals to the visitors, and Davidson beat the Lee goalkeeper for his second tally to make it 2-2 at intermission.

Lee scored quickly to take the lead in the second half, but the Scots came right back on a score by Ed Davalos. The visitors added two goals to end the 5-3 shootout. The match was physical, and the Scots seemed to outplay Lee, but made several mental mistakes and could not put Lee away when they were down.

Maryville's spring soccer record is 1-2.

Vol. 65 No. 23 May 1, 1980 Maryville College Maryville, Tennessee

MC Board meets: Recap of decisions

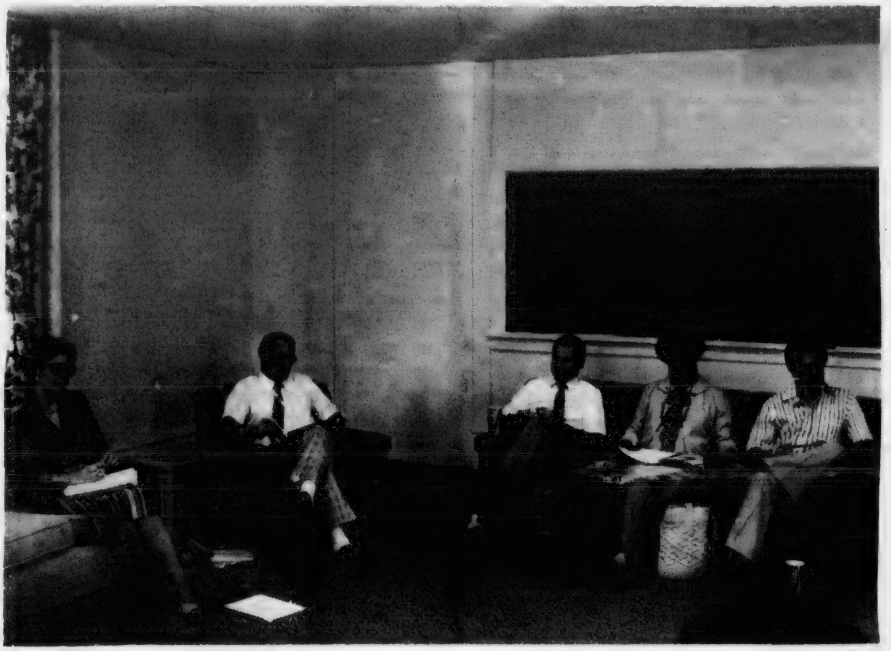
The Maryville College Board of Directors, meeting on campus Friday and Saturday, adopted a 1980-81 budget of $4,632,000, which is an increase of $303,000 over last year's budget.

The approved budget for 1980-81, part of a five-year financial plan the board reviewed last year, includes a 10 percent increase in the faculty salary budget and a 7.5 percent increase in the staff salary budget.

Included in the budget is an 11.8 percent tuition increase for next year, which is less than the 20 percent increase many institutions are implementing, MC President Wayne Anderson noted.

The increase will bring the total fees for students living on campus to $4,750, which is "well below the average charge for private institutions," Dr. Anderson stated.

In other action, the board accepted a new athletic policy which restates Maryville College's continuing interest in and support of intercollegiate athletics "at a level appropriate for the College."



The crux of the new athletic policy, developed over the past two years with extensive input from faculty, students, staff, alumni, and directors, will enable the College to provide an intercollegiate, intramural, and club athletic program consistent with the values of a church-related liberal arts college.

Sent to the board by the All College Council, the new policy also outlines sports' organization at MC and their rules and regulations, including eligibility, financial aid, recruiting, Title IX, fund-raising activities, financial affairs, affiliations, and practices.

The MC directors decided that squad size, number of contests, and number of coaches will be determined by what is economically feasible within the athletic department budget.

The board also discussed the environmental educa-

MC students were given a chance to get their input to the Board of Directors by meeting with the Student Services Subcommittee on April 24. Also on hand with the Board members were Dr. Larry Mangus, Dean of Student Services, and Bruce Guillaume of the MC Counseling Center.

Student issues aired in forum

by: Ruth Reese

An open forum with the Student Services committee of the Board of Directors was held on Thursday, April 24. Approximately twenty people showed up, including students, faculty, and Board members. The meeting began with an invocation by Board member and MC graduate Jim Callaway. In spite of the small attendance, some important topics were discussed.

The ACC's recommendation to place a non-voting member on the Board of Directors to represent the student viewpoint was the first item discussed. Because the Board meetings are closed, some students feel they may not be taken into consideration when major school policies are formed. None of the Board members at the meeting seemed to oppose the idea of student representation, but they pointed out that ACC's recommendation has yet to be voted on by the Board and would be approved or disapproved at a later date.

The athletic structure at MC underwent a heavy debate when it was protested that the ODAC conference took teams too far away, causing MC to spend more on gasoline. It was said that other conferences would schedule games just as far away, since a local conference no longer exists. It was also mentioned that, without a conference, football games are hard to schedule. Small-scale sports came up next. Many present felt that soccer should become a varsity sport, as interest in it has already been proven. The funding of track and wrestling was criticized as no teams exist for these sports, and it is possible that they may be cut from the program. It was also recommended that the baseball field be given the name Stinnett Field in memory of former Coach Ken Stinnett.

The last topic discussed was the possibility of fire in Carnegie. Craig Corey's article in last week's ECHO gives the details of existing fire hazards. He pointed out that the fire-fighting equipment in Carnegie is obselete or non-existent. Most of those present agreed that Carnegie should be shut down for good, but there is no indication that it will be.

MACCO/Rich perform tonight

Warren Rich, world renowned concert pianist, will be appearing in concert with the Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra (MACCO) tonight in the MC Wilson Chapel. Concert time is 8:15p.m.

Mr. Rich received his B.S. and M.S. degrees from the Juilliard School of Music and has studied and performed extensively throughout Western Europe. He has also performed on radio and television on many occasions in both the United States and Europe.

The concert will open with MACCO, under the direction of Mr. Eugene Taliaferro-Jones, performing the Russian Choral and Overture, based on Tschaikowsky's Op. 39, No. 34 and Russian folk tunes.

Mr. Rich, assisted by the orchestra, will perform Concerto No. 12 K. 414 in A Major, written in 1783 by

Handwriting on the wall—

Can dorm damage be cleaned up?

Maryville College is the home of what is liable to be the greatest assemblage of men's room graffiti (and more than likely, women's room graffiti, too!) in East Tennessee. Poetry, prose, social and political commentary – all can be found on the wall of a stall.

Even though our institution's "men's room Molieres" provide us with some entertaining reading material and amusing anecdotes, one must keep in mind the graffiti is vandalism. It is a mild form indeed (depending upon what is written, I suppose), but none-the-less, it is destruction of property.

This idea of "destruction of property" has come to mind as the curtain falls on the 1979-80 academic year. I look forward to the middle of the summer when I shall receive (via U.S. Mail) a calling card from the MC Business Office requesting $30.07 (personal checks preferred), a set of Firestone radials, and the promise of my first-born son, just to cover dorm damages.

This brings us to the question, "Why do people go around spray-painting doors, shooting off fire extinguishers, punching out ceiling tiles, and knocking down exit signs?" And as for throwing chairs from the balconies, anyone over the age of six who hasn't yet realized that chairs cannot fly shouldn't be in college to begin with.

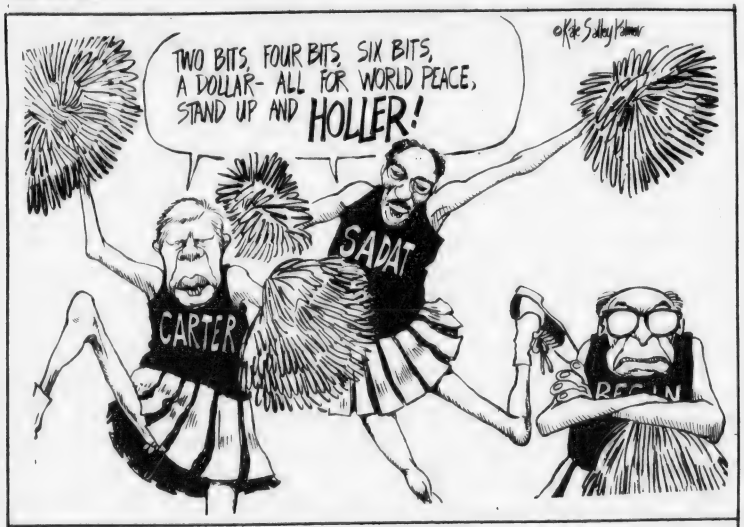
We could approach the MC psychology department with the problem and they could give us an explanation of frustration-aggression, or something like that. But would that really help the situation?

Now, I am not a psychologist (just ask Dr. Pickens), and I really have no conclusive answers concerning the destruction of college property and dorm damage. What I do know is that this stuff really bothers me and something must be done about it.

Such destruction should bother us all, particularly those of us in the two male dorms on campus. The money that has to pay for such idiocy comes out of our pockets. Also, how about the permanent damage to the dorm, for it seems that the dollars we pay don't all go back into the dorm. . . .

Could this destruction and annihilation of community property (yes, community – we all have to use it) have to do with disrespect, a lack of care and concern for others, the absence of a feeling of community within the dorm?

I believe it is important to consider these questions and attempt to ascertain answers – for if a feeling of community cannot be acheived within the dorm; how can we expect a feeling of effective unity to be enacted on our campus as a whole?



Well folks, what are we going to do? I believe that sending a notice to dorm residents each term regarding damages is not enough. What should we stress?

Are we going to have to turn our dorms into miniature police states, so one has to go past "check point Charlie" and crawl over sandbags just to get to the toilet? Are we going to remove all of the doors, fire extinguishers, ceiling tiles, and exit signs, just so they won't get painted, shot off, punched out, or knocked down? Could we put a greater emphasis on a feeling of community within the dormitory? If so, how?

Indeed, there are many questions, requiring many answers. But we need to think about them, talk about them, examine them, and see how we can implement our answers.

Some may say, "Why should I care what happens? Mommy and Daddy shell out the bread for me to come to this place anyway. . . ." Well, maybe that's the kind of attitude that breeds destruction.

"Here I sit broken-hearted. . . ."

Letters to the Editor

To the editor:

The administration of the College, particularly Mr. Crawford and I who are directly responsible for fire safety, share the concern expressed in the editorial of April 24, 1980. In response to that editorial we offer the following information:

The Carnegie fire inspection report of February 28, 1978 is out of date.

Thaw Hall, regrettably, has no sprinkler system.

Windows over the fire escapes in Carnegie are in poor condition, but do open for exit.

All fire extinguishers in Carnegie are of the ABC type and will extinguish various types of fires as required by fire regulations.

The College has recently purchased extinguisher re-charging equipment so that all extinguishers can be kept up to date. All extinguishers are checked regularly.

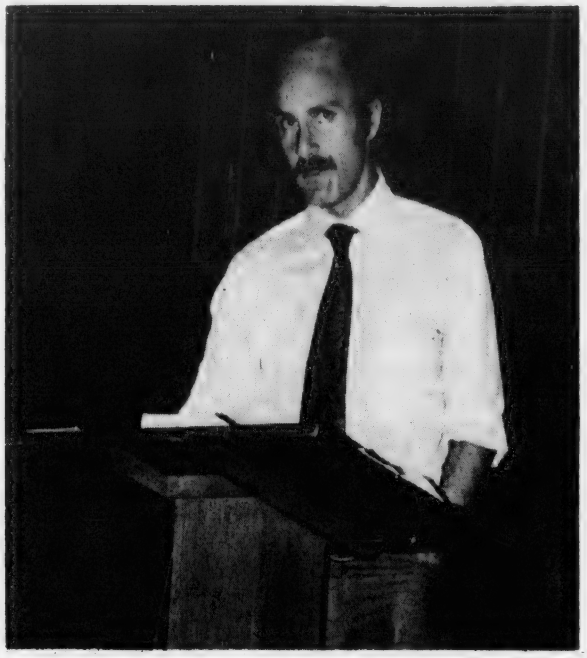
Hoses in Carnegie are in operable condition, and all were new as of nine months ago. One nozzle has been stolen, but a replacement is on order.

Stairways in Carnegie are enclosed with one hour fire rating doors and walls.

New fire door signs have been placed in all residence halls including Carnegie, indicating that fire doors need to be kept closed in order to be effective. (Quite often, on inspection, we find these open.)

Cabinets for fire hoses and extinguishers in Carnegie have been locked, but could be accessed by breaking the glass front. The cabinets are now unlocked.

The Carnegie fire alarm system works as designed. There are heat detectors in the attic and store rooms, and fourteen smoke detectors are located on the first three floors.



We appreciate very much the cooperation of all members of the campus community in matters of fire safety, and Mr. Crawford and I welcome any input on behalf of fire safety through our offices.

Sincerely,
Raymond I. Brahams, Jr.
Vice president for Administration

Echoes from the past

The May 30, 1929, Highland Echo featured an article on the unusualness of the annual spring trip to Tremont. It seems that about 25 students were on the swinging bridge which spans the Little River waiting for the train to be readied when they suddenly heard "a scraping sound—and then before anyone realized what had happend we were 'breaking the ice' on the Little River." Injuries included one broken ankle, one broken arm, and several cuts and bruises. Those who were hurt were sent back to MC, the others changed into dry clothes, and the trip to Tremont proceeded.

CIV deals with Doublespeak

Dr. Stewart Justman spoke out on "Doublespeak" at the April 23 CIV.

Wednesday, April 23, a crowd assembled in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall to hear Dr. Stewart Justman speak on the moral issues of "Doublespeak." Dr. Justman's visit was sponsored by the Mellon Foundation and an MC group developing a new course in ethics.

Dr. Justman is an assistant professor of English at the University of Montana. He is currently working under a Rockefeller Foundation Humanities Grant at the University of California-Berkely.

He received his B.A. degree in 1972 and his Ph.D. in 1976 from Columbia University in New York City. He served as a teaching assistant at Columbia and was later appointed assistant professor of English at the University of Montana. At that time he was working under three grants: an F.J.E. Woodbridge Distinguished Fellowship (1975-76), a Whiting Fellowship (1976-77), and a University of Montana summer research grant (1977).

At the present time, Dr. Justman is working on "Language Management and Moral Values: Censorship, Propaganda, and Semantic Distortion in a Depersonalized World." His CIV topic stemmed from this project.

Doublespeak is a systematically distorted language. During his lecture, Dr. Justman tried to disprove the traditional idea that thought precedes speech. He says that a lot of people say things and think about them later. He gave some examples of writers who held the traditional view about speech such as John Locke who wrote that an infant has to learn to think before it can learn to talk. Locke wrote that an infant sees its mother, its nurse, and other people; eliminates the aspects that are not like its mother and nurse, and comes up with the aspect of a man. He said that the same was true when distinguishing man from animals. Dr. Justman says that this theory is totally wrong. He says that an infant can identify animals as early as he can identify man.

Justman teaches that thought and thoughtlessness are both expressed by speech. Dr. Justman used no prepared text so that "he could hear what he was saying and think about it as he went along." He noted that Nazi German is a good example of doublespeak. It was its own language and only Nazis could understand it. Those who spoke it could not communicate with anyone else because it was all they knew how to speak. He also gave examples of how store ads were written so that they are barely understandable to the common man. He pointed out the unclarity of such "Doublespeak" and emphasized that people should be aware of its purpose and effect.

Parker and Cunningham to speak on humanities

Two special programs will be presented at Maryville College on May 5 and May 9 as part of a grant from the Tennessee Arts/ Humanities Support Program. Everyone is invited free of charge but the programs are especially designed for the out-of-school adult.

On May 5 the speaker will be Dr. Russell Parker, professor of history at MC who recently published a book review for the winter issue of the Tennessee Historical Quarterly and an article in the East Tennessee Historical Societies Publication.

Dr. Parker's specialty is antebellum U.S. history and he has studied Scottish immigration patterns as a contributing factor to the formation of the Southern "mind." In his presentation, he will trace the main outlines of Scottish history, distinguish between the Scots and the Scotch-Irish, and suggest certain Scotch contributions to American and regional culture. A feature of the program will be a demonstration of the bagpipes and the Scottish tartan.

This presentation will be held in the Fine Arts Center lounge at 7:30 p.m.

On May 9, Janice Cunningham will head a program entitled "A Night of American Opera." It will be presented in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall at 8:15 p.m. The main subject to be discussed will be the upcoming production of Carlisle Floyd's "The Sojourner and Mollie Sinclair."

The evening will involve several aspects of American opera including discussions of and selections from Floyd's opera and a discussion of styles in American opera by Victor Schoen.

tion program at Tremont in the Great Smokies which MC has operated in cooperation with the National Park Service since 1969.

"Under the present conditions, the College is not able to operate Tremont on a break-even basis," Dr. Anderson explained to the board. "The College cannot continue to lose money on the program, however significant to the area it is, and therefore will not operate Tremont under the existing conditions," the MC president stated.

However, he added, "We are open to cooperative ventures with any group or organization that may utilize the Tremont facilities in the future in the interest of environmental awareness and education."

The board accepted a proposed statement of purpose from the task force of faculty, students, staff, alumni, and directors appointed in the fall of 1979 to study the role of MC as a church-related institution.

The revised statement clarifies the institution's existing policy in the first step of a two-step process, Dr. Anderson explained. The next step, he added, is to devise a means of carrying out the policy.

In addition, the Board approved five persons for promotions and two for tenure. Promoted were: Dr. Elizabeth Fowler, associate professor of English, and Dr. William Dent, associate professor and chairman of the math-physics department, to professors; Dr. Marilyn Pollio, assistant professor of education and director of the Learning Center, to associate professor; Dr. Harry Howard, instructor in political science, and Michael Ketcherside, music instructor, to assistant professors.

Receiving tenure were Thelma Bianco, assistant professor of art, and Choi Park, instructor in periodicals and acting MC librarian.

Ladies 'Tennis mixes triumph

On Monday, April 21, the MC Women's Tennis Team lost to Roane State Community College by a score of 6-3.

MC won three out of six singles matches, but failed to capture any of the doubles matches. Winning at singles for MC were Shelley Kingsbury, Pattie Berkau, and Lynda MacCall.

On April 24, the team left for the Division III Women's State Tennis Tournament, which was held the following day at the University of Tennessee at Martin. Sharon Wood, playing number 3 singles for MC, qualified for the region tournament by defeating Dana Love of Southwestern by a score of 6-3, 7-5.

In the finals, Sharon lost a tough match to Sewanee's Susan Chenault by a score of 7-6, 6-1.

By placing second in the state at her position, Sharon, a freshman, qualified to participate in the region tournament to be held in South Carolina during the second week of May.

In other matches in the state tourney, Janet Helwig was defeated by Southwestern's Lucia Ovellette by a score of 6-2, 6-2; Shelly Kingsbury lost to Southwestern's Patty Bowen by a score of 6-1, 6-2, and Pattie Berkau lost to Southwestern's Kay Batey, 6-2, 6-6-4. Liz Barrie extended her opponent to three sets before losing a close match to Sewanee's Jane Tillman, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

In other singles play, Lynda MacCall was defeated by Sewanee's Becky Davis by a score of 6-1, 6-0.

In doubles, Janet Helwig and Sharon Wood were defeated 6-4, 6-1 by Sewanee, while Pattie Berkau and Shelley Kingsbury lost to Southwestern by a score of 6-0, 6-2. Liz Barrie and Cynthia Cunningham also lost to a tough Southwestern doubles team by a score of 6-1, 6-0.

The overall team championships were won by Southwestern at Memphis, who captured first place, and by the University of the South at Sewanee, who placed second in over-all competition.

Once again, congratulations to Sharon Wood, who qualified for the Region Tournament.

The MC Women's Softball Club was engaged in two contests on Saturday, April 26. MC was downed by Morristown in the first game by the score of 17-10. In the second game, MC lost in extra innings to Milligan, 8-6. Candy Nutter pitched for MC against Milligan. B.J. Sallade pitched for the ladies against Morristown.

MC Soccer falls to Lee

The MC soccer team was defeated 5-1 last Saturday at Lee College in Cleveland, Tn.

The Soccer Scots scored their only goal in the first half on Mark Burnett's first tally of the year, assisted by Andy Steinbeck. MC could not contain the Lee club however, and watched their spring record fall to 2-3.

Dedicated to the perpetuation of madness, the whole madness, and nothing but madness.

Reynolds named Affluent Artist

special to the Echo

Actor and superstar Burt Reynolds will serve as Maryville College's Affluent Artist for 1980-81, College officials announced today.

The selection of Reynolds, who has netted millions from his hit movies, including "Gator," "W.W. and the Dixie Dancekings," and "Smokey and the Bandit," is a "slight" change from the College's previous Affiliate Artists programs. Rather than be sponsored by a foundation, Reynolds will sponsor himself.

In another departure from past practices, Reynolds will not visit the MC campus but rather will send checks instead for each of the 56 days of his non-residency.

He will be known as the Burt Reynolds Affluent Artist not presented locally by Maryville College.

Should Reynolds change his mind and/or pass through Maryville during one of his famous movie car chase scenes, he will stop on campus long enough to make appearances with the MC Playmakers and the MC Playhouse.

Arrangements for Reynolds non-visits to MC were made by Affluent Artists Inc. of Hollywood, Calif., a corporation whose sole purpose is to provide monetary enrichment for communities previously unheard of by famous wealthy movie stars.

These nude sunbathers were caught in the field behind Lloyd last weekend. When questioned, they said they were just bacon in the sun.

Anonymous gift brings Muppets

An anonymous donor has presented Maryville College with an anonymous gift to be used anonymously over an unspecified period of time, an unnamed College official would not announce today.

Anonymous sources, however, reported the gift will be used to establish visiting professorships in the fine arts and sciences for the 1980-81 academic year.

Expected to be named initial recipients of these professorships are Jim Henson, creator of the world famous Muppets, and his associates.

When contacted in England by a transalantic call, Henson confirmed that he and the Muppets were coming to Maryville College in the fall and are looking forward to their visit.

According to Henson, each Muppet has been asked to submit a proposal for an area of involvement to include both academic and campus life activities at MC.

Kermit the frog, undisputed leader of Muppetland, hopes to polish his management skills by serving an internship in Anderson Hall and participating in Higher Education Management Institute (HEMI) seminars.

The left-flippered felt amphibian also expects to cross over into the academic realm by teaching banjo in the regular music curriculum and in the Preparatory School's music program.

The MC music program will also receive a boost as pianist Rowlf the dog and Dr. Teeth and the Electric Mayhem join the College's music faculty for the year.

Dr. Teeth, Sgt. Floyd Pepper, Janice, Zoot and the everpopular Animal are expected to electrify the MC jazz ensemble and the Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra. Rowlf will also serve as featured artist for at least one MACCO concert.

Sutton Science Center has been mentioned as home away from home by several Muppets. Bunsen Honeydew and his assistant Beaker are hoping for the roles in the chemistry department while the perpetually insecure Fozzie Bear is expected to donate himself to the psychology department for testing and study. The crew of the Swinetrek, Capt. Link Hogthrob and Dr. Julius Strangepork, are hoping to work with the math/physics department.

The Swinetrek's first mate, Miss Piggy, will probably forego the science area to pursue her interest in theater with the MC Playhouse, the Playmakers and the College's opera program.

Henson associate Frank Oz noted that Miss Piggy is also hoping that their stay at MC will have a romantic effect on Kermit and they could hold her much-hoped-for wedding to the frog in the College Wood's amphitheater.

Statler and Waldorf are discussing plans to reserve seats in the balcony in Wilson Chapel to caustically comment and otherwise heckle any and every event held there.

The Swedish Chef is already compiling recipes for use at MC if ARA will subcontract meal preparation out to him.

Henson said he is certain

Mass transport proposed

The MC traffic committee has announced a change in campus traffic and parking regulations.

Beginning fall term, only those students, faculty, and staff who can afford to buy gasoline will be permitted to drive cars on campus.

Because of the anticipated sudden drop in the number of cars allowed on campus coupled with the equally sudden increase in the number of persons needing transportation, the traffic committee is exploring the possibility of a campus bus system.

Reportedly a consultant from Lake Placid, N.Y., will design a transportation plan for the College at no charge.

The Echo and its editors, 1975-80

The laugh's on us

Spring 75-Spring 76: Gary Sloboda and Dave Haimbach

Nicknamed "The Abott and Costello of the Highland Echo," these two legendary Pearsonites produced some of the most outlandish and humorous papers on record. One of their front pages proudly boasted, "Paper put together in 15 minutes." They published 27 May Madness issues.

Quotation: (stating policy for soliciting information for articles) " . . .We considered many alternative plans to provide news incentive. One such plan was to print a lot of slander that would force people to speak up in order to save their reputation. However, we have decided to forego this idea for now. So don't push us." (Vol. 61 No. 1)

Last rumored whereabouts: Sloboda working in a chemical plant in the northeast; Haimbach editing a country club newsletter and freelancing in Atlanta.

Most notable achievement: added a welcome breath of humor to the last of the Dark Copeland Ages.

Spring 76-Spring 77: Tim "Abstract" Rahn

Widely considered "The Father of the Modern Literary Movement at Maryville College," this gangly, buck-toothed, frizzy-haired Pennsylvanian is credited with inspiring and reorganizing both the poetic and journalistic forces at MC. Rahn's papers were very high-brow and occasionally mistaken for Victorian poetry. Rumor was that Rahn himself didn't understand half of what he wrote. Not content with only one outlet for his voluminous creativity, Rahn created Impressions to take up the slack. Late at night, Rahn's ghost may still be seen in the Echo room shadows.

Quotation: "Newspaper, at all levels – from a metropolitan daily to a high school monthly – have the same duty: to confront the issues head on. Once confronted, a succession of reporting follows where the issue is objectively featured and then debated on its merits as they are relative to the community." (Vol. 61 No. 18)

Last rumored whereabouts: technical writer in Pennsylvania, and working on his second novel.

Most notable achievement: set a journalistic standard to challenge even his most dedicated successors.

Spring 77-January 78: Bill Gannon and Laird Weaver

Defeating Rahn in his bid for a second year as editor, these two History majors tried their hand in the literary world and came up short, as the Echo folded in disgrace in January. Notorious for missing deadlines, they changed their day of publication every week. Critics generally agree Gannon carried the brunt of the load, while Weaver looked on from his cloud of smoke.

Quotation: "The fact that we had no advisor will not be used as our scape-goat. Although if we had one, there probably would not be the situation that exists now." (Vol. 61 No. 11)

Last rumored whereabouts: Weaver in law school in Ohio; Gannon at Maryville finishing up his degree.

Most notable achievement: abused the generosity and services of the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times, almost severing relations between the Echo and its publisher.

March 78-April 78: Tim Rahn

Sympathetic to the pleas of the Communications Committee, Father Rahn emerged from retirement to resurrect the Echo. He helped organize a hasty three-week seminar to train a new staff and editor. His disciple, Bob Bishop, had never written a news article in his life.

May 78-May 79: Bob Bishop

In his own words, this "tall, dark, debonaire Yankee" plunged blindly into the Echo's Reconstruction Era. He went through two assitant editors and three business managers in his quest for stability, and managed to weather the stormy "Winter of Mangus." Displaying pronounced Rhanian tendencies, Bishop incorporated a poetic column called "Desert Kids" into his papers, where he printed much of his own work under various pseudonymns.

Quotation: "There will be times when this paper will insult people. This is the price it must pay to become a paper worth reading versus one that is excellent for the bird cage." (Vol. 64 No. 4)

Last rumored whereabouts: struggling editor of the struggling Knoxville Free Press.

Most notable achievement: successfully reorganized the Echo as a journalistically sound publication.

Fall 79-Spring 80: Shelley "BS" Ballenger

This Ohioan, trained over numerous six-packs, is known for her beautifully composed 600-word editorials saying nothing of substance and supporting no particular view. Her continuing interest in the saga of Tellico Dam has filled many empty Echo pages. The only female in the last five years to brave the Echo's helm, Ballenger spent the first two weeks of her reign cleaning the office.

Quotation: "Spring fever is no respecter of persons. . .It is oblivious to the obligations of its victims. Its call is urgent, incessant, undefiable. Even newspaper editors are prone to its follies." (Vol. 65 No. 16)

Last rumored whereabouts: Bob Bishop's apartment.

Most notable achievement: maintained journalistic standards and achieved a steady production with high readership.

Editor's note: The Echo is currently accepting applications for next year's editorship. As Gary Sloboda eloquently stated in his parting editorial, "Anyone who wants this job can have it and anyone who takes it is crazy."

Henry resigns; controversy rife in Athletic Department

by Mike Weiss

The Maryville College Athletic Department erupted in turmoil last week, with the resignation of Athletic Director Billy Henry and allegations of unscrupulous recruiting practices by newly-hired football coach Dan Zaneski. The Henry resignation marks the third major athletic position relinquished this year; head football coach Steve Fickert left in January for Wayne State Univ. in Detroit, and head basketball coach Rick Byrd quit last month to join the staff at Tennessee Tech.

Henry's reason for leaving was what he termed "no administrative support for athletics at Maryville College," evidenced, he said, by the recent faculty meeting in which the athletic staff was questioned in a lengthy session over the integrity of their program. "I couldn't in good conscience direct a program at a school that I didn't think was a quality program," said the Lenoir City, TN, native.

MC President Wayne Anderson released a statement May 2 commenting on Henry's resignation: "Billy Henry has rendered very valuable service to Maryville College during the past 3½ years. We wish him well in future endeavors."

Henry has indeed accumulated an impressive record since 1976. The football program has been highly successful, winning 28 games in four years without a single home loss. The girls' volleyball team went to the national AIAW championship tournament after winning the state and regional titles. The basketball team won more games (15) than any Scots squad in 31 years. Perhaps Henry's crowning achievement was MC's entry into the Old Dominion Athletic Conference.

Yet, despite these glowing achievements, there was a prevalent feeling on campus, among students and faculty, that the athletic department was closed to the rest of the school – that it was self-serving, and perhaps was taking "too large a piece of the pie." There was a sort of alienation felt. A member of the Athletic staff noted that, at most colleges, members of the academic departments tend to be jealous of the athletic department. "But you don't see the English department telling the Biology department how to run their program," the staff member added.

However, many on the MC campus felt that Henry was directly or indirectly responsible for this alienation. There was talk of some programs, notably football, going over their allotted budgets, and of priority given to athletes over other students in the

Sunday, May 11	2:00 pm "Pink and White Sunday"
	5:00 pm Food, bluegrass, games, Whopper-eating contest, sidewalk painting contest

Every year about this time crazy things start happening at MC. Students attend wine and cheese parties, watch a three-ring circus of actors and actresses, Run for Hope, paint sidewalks, and throw everything from eggs to water balloons. This disease is called May Madness by those who know what's going on and it is about to strike once more. The theme this year is "Send in the Clowns" and that's what will happen.

Friday will focus on "Bottled Foolery" or alternatives to alcohol. Beginning at 3:00, Social Committee will hold a Wine and Cheese Party, a Fabulous Fruit Party, and a Terrific Treats Party. The food and drinks available will include some made with alcoholic products and others that taste-like-but don't-have alcoholic ingredients. At 4:00, a parade will form down at the theatre consisting of the Commedia troupe, a large Chinese dragon (legs needed!), and anyone else who would like to don one of the theatre's costumes and join in. If you would like to participate, please be down at the theatre by 4:00. The parade will leave to go around campus at 4:30 and will proceed to Pearsons. There, the mime troupe will perform, the May Madness T-shirts will be raffled, and a taste test for alcohol will be held.

At 5:00, a Picnic Dinner will be served by faculty and administration and music will be provided by the Commedia orchestra. Afterwards, at 9:00, a Benefit Concert for the Blount County Center for the Handicapped will be held in the theatre. Check signs for details.

Saturday morning at 9:00 the World Concerns Committee is sponsoring a Run for Hope with the proceeds going toward the Fred Hope Fund and Haiti. There will be 1 and 3-mile courses, the entry fee will be $4.00 before the race and $5.00 the day of the

Commedia is 3-ring joy

What better time is there for a circus at Maryville College than during May Madness? That's exactly what will be happening with the theatre program during May 9-11.

Don Thomas, director and head ring-master, is constructing the three-ring circus with the idea of pure fun in mind. The circus is based upon the Commedia dell' Arte, an improvisational type of theatre that flourished in Renaissance Italy. The Commedia was built around three major stock characters: professionals, lovers, and servants, or zanies. Actors developed a repertoire of characters and often traveled in a company performing their shows, which often focused on the vulgar and ludicrous side of life.

Masks and period costumes were worn, making characters such as Harlequin, Pantalone, and Pulcinella well known and expected. Spontaneity of the scenarios was the key to the success of this art form, with the players not only surprising their audiences but also each other.

Also incorporated into the Commedia theme, will be mimes, clowns, Punch and Judy puppets, Renaissance musicians, acrobats, and "animal" acts, with interpreters for the deaf playing a major role. Various performances and events will be occurring during the course of the May Madness Weekend. Check the following schedule, choose the events you'd like to see or participate in, and ENJOY!

The classic duel over a woman is portrayed by Allen Evitts and Frank Fiore in this weekend's Commedia.

Forum addresses campus concerns

by Lois Boney

The administrative forum held on April 29 in the lobby of Lloyd Hall was comprised of administration, faculty, staff, and around twenty-five students. Present for discussion with the students were President Anderson, Dr. Alfred Perkins, Mr. Dan Zaneski, Mr. and Mrs. Tilman Crane, and Mr. Jim Campbell. The forum, which lasted about two hours, proved to be an informative communication channel between the students and administration present.

President Anderson opened the forum with a discussion of how to make students aware of the possibility of danger when walking alone late at night. Ms. Jane Richardson stressed the need of having an escort and encouraged students to pass the word to be careful when out at night. Students suggested improving lighting in potentially dangerous areas, such as the Fine Arts Center, and installing pay phones in buildings such as the FAC and Sutton Science Center.

Students voiced much objection over the proposed 1980-1981 calendar, which calls for a nine-day break between fall term and interim. The students noted the hardship caused by the expense of paying for transportation home for both Thanksgiving and Christmas vacations. However, the faculty and the registrar's office would have problems in completing fall term's grades if there was no break after fall term. Dr Alfred Perkins, Academic Dean of the College, aggreed to look further into the calendar matter.

Other issues of concern brought up by students included dorm damages, recognition of students who make the Dean's list, reissuance of the "zoo-book," raising funds for the Chilhowean, and the use of alumni donations. President Anderson brought up the idea of an all-college honors banquet where academic honors and student awards would be presented.

The subject of intramurals, especially budgeting and scheduling, recieved much discussion. The fact that there are only three bases to accommodate all the intramural softball teams was brought up as an example of the need for new equipment. Also mentioned was the problem of running into conflicts with activities scheduled in the gym by off-campus groups.

Floyd finalizes opera cast

The cast for Carlisle Floyd's opera, "The Sojourner and Mollie Sinclair," set for May 15-17 at Maryville College, includes an MC music teacher, two professional opera singers and a University of Iowa music teacher, Dr. John VanCura, who represents a change in the original cast.

Delores Ziegler, mezzo soprano, will sing the role of Mollie Sinclair, a determined woman from Scotland who realizes she must start a new life in America since "We kinna go back to a time or place an we kinna stradle the ocean."

Ms. Zeigler, a 1973 MC graduate, holds a master's degree in voice from the University of Tennessee where she studied under Edward Zambara. She is a recipient of the Oscar Philip Steele Award at MC and the Grace Moore Graduate Fellowship at UT, and has sung with several orchestras including those in Maryville, Knoxville, Muncie (Inc.), Johnson City, Oak Ridge and cities in Canada and along the east coast of the U.S.

Last year she was a top winner of the Metropolitan Opera Auditions on the Metropolitan stage in New York City.

The sojourner Dougald MacDougald, another Scot who, unlike Mollie Sinclair, tries to keep his heritage and homeland traditions intact, will be played by Dr. John VanCura, University of Iowa voice professor.

The baritone, who received his doctorate from Florida State University before going to the University of Iowa, has performed extensively in opera, oratorio and concert performances.

Lachlan Sinclair, son of the adventurous Mollie Sinclair, will be portrayed by Michael Ketcherside, MC assistant professor of music and coordinator of the College's opera program.

Ketcherside received his master's degree from Florida State University in opera production and performance. While there, he worked with Floyd in that institution's production of "Susannah," one of Floyd's tenor and recent recipient of a Mellon Foundation grant for faculty development, Ketcherside sang several roles at the Seagle Opera Colony this summer in upper state New York.

Karen Roewade, a former Affiliate Artist presented by MC, will portray Jenny MacDougald, daughter of the traditionalist, Dougald MacDougald.

Ms Roewade, a soprano who also spent a year as Visiting Artist at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, has given numerous concerts across the U.S. and overseas. She has soloed in New York and is now involved in an opera-musical theater quartet and her own solo concert work.

Ms Roewade spent four years with the Long Island Opera da Camera and has toured extensively with the New York City Opera's Title III group.

race, and T-shirts will be awarded to finishers.

The Commedia circus is on stage at 10:30am with the clown and mime shows, at 1:00 pm with the actors, and at 3:00 pm with both shows. Throughout the day there will be games and minor shows in progress. Lunch will be served in the style of a carnival with students being able to take their food outside. At 2:00, the Chilhowean will sponsor an auction of furniture, food, and other items. Saturday night from 9:00 to 1:00, there will be a dance in the Pearson's courtyard with Lloyd Hall's D.J.'s Julie Wickstrand and Colleen Wagner.

"Pink and White Sunday" closes May Madness with activities from 2:00 until 5:00. Attractions include a Sidewalk Painting Contest (a la Mary Poppins), ice cream sundaes, cotton candy, a bluegrass jam session, a Whopper-eating contest (2 representatives per dorm), and an egg toss and watermelon toss.

May Madness wil bring a carnival flair to MC's campus and everyone is invited to "join the circus."

WHAT COULD THE ARMY POSSIBLY OFFER A BRIGHT PERSON LIKE YOU?

Drop your guard for a minute. Even though you're in college right now, there are many aspects of the Army that you might find very attractive.

Maybe even irresistible. See for yourself.

MED SCHOOL, ON US

You read it right.

The Army's Health Professions Scholarship Program provides necessary tuition, books, lab fees, even microscope rental during medical school.

Plus a tax-free monthly stipend that works out to about $6,450 a year. (After July 1, 1980, it'll be even more.)

After you're accepted into medical school, you can be accepted into our program. Then you're commissioned and you go through school as a Second Lieutenant in the Army Reserve.

The hitch? Very simple. After your residency, you give the Army a year as a doctor for every year the Army gave you as a med student, and under some conditions, with a minimum scholarship obligation being two years' service.

INTERNSHIP, RESIDENCY & CASH BONUSES

Besides scholarships to medical school, the Army also offers AMA-approved first-year post-graduate and residency training programs.

Such training adds no further obligation to the student in the scholarship program. But any Civilian Graduate Medical Education sponsored by the Army gives you a one-year obligation for every year of sponsorship.

But you get a $9,000 annual bonus every year you're paying back medical school or post-graduate training.

So you not only get your medical education paid for, you get extra pay while you're paying it back.

Not a bad deal.

A GREAT PLACE TO BE A NURSE

The rich tradition of Army Nursing is one of excellence, dedication, even heroism. And it's a challenge to live up to.

Today, an Army Nurse is the epitome of professionalism, regarded as a critical member of the Army Medical Team.

A BSN degree is required. And the clinical spectrum is almost impossible to match in civilian practice.

And, since you'll be an Army Officer, you'll enjoy more respect and authority than most of your civilian counterparts. You'll also enjoy travel opportunities, officer's pay and officer's privileges.

Army Nursing offers educational opportunities that are second to none. As an Army Nurse, you could be selected for graduate degree programs at civilian universities.

ADVANCED NURSING COURSE, TUITION-FREE

You get tuition, pay and living allowances.

You can also take Nurse Practitioner courses and courses in many clinical specialties. All on the Army.

While these programs do not cost you any money, most of them do incur an additional service obligation.

A CHANCE TO PRACTICE LAW

If you're about to get your law degree and be admitted to the bar, you should consider a commission in the Judge Advocate General Corps. Because in the Army you get to practice law right from the start.

While your classmates are still doing other lawyers' research and other lawyers' briefs, you could have your own cases, your own clients, in effect, your own practice.

Plus you'll have the pay, prestige and privileges of being an Officer in the United States Army. With a chance to travel and make the most of what you've worked so hard to become. A real, practicing lawyer. Be an Army Lawyer.

ROTC SCHOLARSHIPS

Though you're too late for a 4-year scholarship, there are 3-, 2-, and even 1-year scholarships available.

They include tuition, books, and lab fees. Plus $100 a month living allowance. Naturally they're very competitive. Because besides helping you towards your degree, an ROTC scholarship helps you towards the gold bars of an Army Officer.

Stop by the ROTC office on campus and ask about details.

UP TO $170 A MONTH

You can combine service in the Army Reserve or National Guard with Army ROTC and get up to $6,500 while you're still in school.

It's called the Simultaneous Membership Program. You get $100 a month as an Advanced Army ROTC Cadet and an additional $70 a month (sergeant's pay) as an Army Reservist.

When you graduate, you'll be commissioned as a Second Lieutenant, but not necessarily assigned to active duty. Find out about it.

A BONUS FOR PART-TIME WORK

You can get a $1,500 bonus just for enlisting in some Army Reserve units. Or up to $2,000 in educational benefits.

You also get paid for your Reserve duty. It comes out to about $1,000 a year for about 16 hours a month and two weeks annual training.

And now we have a special program to help you fit the Army Reserve around your school schedule. It's worth a look.

A SECOND CHANCE AT COLLEGE

Some may find college to be the right place at the wrong time for a variety of reasons. The Army can help them, too.

A few years in the Army can help them get money for tuition and the maturity to use it wisely.

The Army has a program in which money saved for college is matched two-for-one by the government. Then, if one qualifies, a generous bonus is added to that.

So 2 years of service can get you up to $7,400 for college, 3 years up to $12,100, and 4 years up to $14,100. In addition, bonuses up to $3,000 are available for 4-year enlistments in selected skills.

Add in the experience and maturity gained, and the Army can send an individual back to college a richer person in more ways than one.

We hope these Army opportunities have intrigued you as well as surprised you. Because there is indeed a lot the Army can offer a bright person like you.

Club softball record mixed

Last week the Maryville College Women's Softball Team traveled to Temple College and returned with smiles on their faces after defeating Temple 2 games to 0. In the first game the Lady Scots scored 11 runs in the first inning. The final score of that game was 19-6. In the second game the Lady Scots defeated Temple 7-0. The women's team also defeated Temple here at MC twice.

This past weekend the Lady Scots traveled to Milligan College for the State Tournament. The tournament was a double elimination tournament and three teams participated: Maryville College, Milligan College, and Bryan College. The Lady Scots played Bryan twice and were defeated by the Lady Lionettes both times. In the first game MC had only 4 hits and lost 2-1. In the second game MC and Bryan were tied 6-6 until the bottom of the seventh inning, when Bryan scored with two out and bases loaded. The final score of that game was 7-6.

The Lady Scots ended their season with a final record of 13 wins and 7 losses. They are now eligible to participate in Regionals, since Bryan eliminated themselves from the compe competition due to school closing.

The Maryville soccer team went down 5-1 to the powerful UT Vols last week, and their spring record fell to 2-4.

financial aid process, although no positive proof has ever been presented concerning these allegations. Still another point of ill-feeling towards the athletic department was the soccer club's struggle to gain recognition in the athletic program and elevation to varsity status. At every turn in their hard-fought advances, club members seemed to find Henry in determined opposition to their cause, always seemingly anti-soccer. A final friction point over MC athletics was the deterioration of the track and field program and the once-proud wrestling team during Henry's tenure.

Brick Brahams, administrative vice-president of MC, has been named acting athletic director until a new director can be found. He will be responsible for supervising the search for a director and for new athletic coaches.

The other bombshell in MC athletics came last week when the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times released an article citing a New Hampshire newspaper story that reported former Plymouth State coach and newly-hired MC mentor Dan Zaneski had resigned under fire from former assistants, the New England Athletic Conference, and his own players. The story reported that Zaneski resigned after a faculty committee investigation of "charges that Zaneski had systematically engaged in unethical coaching practices."

A former assistant coach to Zaneski said there were "nine allegations of recruiting and coaching irregularities made against the coach, and all were substantiated by the (faculty) review board." However, the assistant would not specify the charges. The Times quoted the New Hampshire paper which raised specific questions over spring practice violations and the recruiting of Plymouth State players to Maryville, a violation of NCAA rules. Indeed, four Plymouth State students have applied for transfer to MC.

Commenting on these allegations from his office, Zaneski stated emphatically that there was "no validity whatsoever to any of the statements or charges made." He cited the fact that the Plymouth State president had called the charges "overblown and exaggerated," and pointed out that none of the charges could be specified by his former assistant. He stated that the assistant coaches had resigned from under him because of jealousy and hurt feelings, and asserted that the coach who made the charges had ambitions to become head coach at Plymouth State. He acknowledged the violation of the spring practice rule, but said that he misunderstood the rule at the time because of his short tenure in NCAA Division III. He added that he halted the workouts once he discovered the specifics of the regulation. Finally, answering the question of the Plymouth State transfers to MC, he said that written permission to talk to the players had been given by Plymouth State, in full accordance with NCAA rules.

Zaneski made a further point that the MC administration had learned of the charges after his hiring, and had fully investigated the matter, finding the accusations to be without foundation.

Alpha Gamma Sigma recipients recognized

Twelve Maryville College students who have been tapped for membership in Alpha Gamma Sigma senior scholastic honor society were recognized in a CIV program on Wednesday, May 7.

Dr. Alfred Perkins, academic vice-president of MC, gave the address at the ceremony.

Students named to the honorary include Lea Adcock, interpreting major from Knoxville; Virginia Andrews and Donna Hurst, English majors, and Jill Kinsinger, HPER major, from Maryville; Robert McCulloch, business administration major, Rodney Nelson, history major, and Judy Norris, English major, from Knoxville; Kymme Taylor, interpreting major from Farmingdale, N.J.; Sue Wenkstern, interpreting major from Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Susan Williams, history major from Alcoa; and Nancy Winslow, psychology major from Oak Ridge.

David Widner, history major from Alcoa, was also selected for membership as the highest ranking member of the junior class.

New recruits announced

One of Coach Zaneski's incoming football recruits, from Detroit, Michigan. "He's got everything," the first year coach said, "great size, speed, strength, and power steering with front disc-brakes and optional air conditioning."

Coach Dan Zaneski has just completed a banner year of recruiting for Maryville College football. Below is a summary of the prize recruits and their impressive credentials: Steve Glotorpeckzn, 6'1", 245, guard, Klutztown, Ohio: very strong; can bench press 380 with his nose. Enjoys macrame as a hobby, also fond of roller disco. Once wet his football pants and was placed on injured reserve. Bobby Bill Buford, 6'3", 260, defensive tackle, Americus, Georgia: voted "player of the year" in the Robert E. Lee Conference last season. Listens to Conway Twitty and drives a camper with a Confederate flag license plate and fish decals on the side. Kevin Canyon, 6'0", 195, quarterback, Rodondo Beach, California: Kevin completed over 100 passes last year. Is also supposed to be a pretty good football player. Once gained 85 yards on a bootleg play and got every cheerleader's phone number as he dashed down the sideline. Marie Capetti, 5'11", 210, linebacker, Turnpike, New Jersey: likes to break the fingers of opposing players. Rides to games in a black limousine. Saw "Rocky" 37 times. Will probably transfer when he tastes ARA spaghetti. Tommy Tater, 6'7", 350, offensive line, Moonshine Cove, Tennessee: Tommy was the captain of the football team and "bisquit eating champion of East Tennessee." Is this worth your time?

Dr. I. Zon Watch, internationally known scholar of Secondology, presented a CIV last Saturday night at 10:52 am in Sutton Science Center 301. His program, entitled "The Manifestations of Popular Time Distortion Among Persons Aged 18-22 in Small Private Liberal Arts Church-Related Institutions in the Southeastern United States During the Spring Months," was an interesting account of one of the most puzzling afflictions facing MC students today.

Dr. Watch began his discussion with an explanation of why time seems to pass more slowly between 1:10 and 2:20 pm if one is in class, compared to if one is outside lying in the sun. He stated that certain light-sensitive cells in the skin increase or decrease the number of chemical messages sent to the brain according to how many rays one is able to snag. This effectively distorts the sensation of time passage.

Dr. Watch next considered how a student can have an entire evening free yet still not find time enough to do homework. The explanations for such an event are numerous, according to Dr. Watch. They include the sub-conscious misreading of clock dials (he has found subjects who consistently notice the second hand on "7" rather than the hour hand on "10") and the popular belief that no work should be done so long as any trace of daylight is visible.

Dr. Watch concluded his presentation with a question-and-answer period. There were no questions, however, as the entire audience had fallen asleep.

Middle East Choir Tour cancelled

The MC Choir's planned tour to the Middle East has been cancelled because of the current conflicts with Iran.

The 53-member choir had originally planned a 10-day swing through Pakistan, Afghanistan, Iran, Iraq, Oman, North and South Yemen, Bahrain, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Jordan, Syria, Turkey, Lebanon and Egypt.

"We knew the trip would be grueling with the number of countries involved and our rigorous concert schedule, but we were willing to go anyway until the Ayatullah Khomeini refused to consider the president's suggestion that each choir member accompany an American hostage home," Dr. Harry Harter explained.

In a related story, the MC interim to Tehran has been postponed indefinitely pending a go ahead from the U.S. Department of State.

MUPPETS, continued from somewhere

the Muppets will fit easily into the MC community from all reports he has heard, and if next year's visiting professorship program is as successful as anticipated, filming of The Muppet Movie II at Maryville is a possibility.

"I understand," the Muppet mentor added, "there's enough action, comedy, drama, mystery and suspense at Maryville in one faculty meeting to provide the basis for several movie scripts."

College officials would neither confirm nor deny the visit by Henson Associates (HA), but did want to thank the anonymous donor, John Sebastian, for his generous gift.

You never know where they'll put one of these things next . . .

Vance negotiates MC truce

Former secretary of state Cyrus Vance will visit the Maryville College campus next week for a top secret meeting, the Highland Echo has learned.

The Echo has also learned from reliable sources that Vance is responding to a request from MC President Wayne Anderson to negotiate a truce between the warring academic and athletic factions at the College.

Vance, who resigned last week in a policy dispute with President Jimmy Carter, has agreed to tackle the MC problem, sources said, because "I was looking for a greater challenge, and the current Maryville stalemate is just the type of war of words I prefer to handle."

Vance reportedly is confident he will find a solution in the next decade or two or three if both sides can agree on his proposed 54-point plan.

The former Carter cabinet officer may or may not present a Community Issues and Values lecture next week while here on his by now not-so-secret meeting. For additional details about the CIV, look for publicity notices on campus. . .maybe.

Nuclear replaces pyrolosis as MC miracle fuel source

Maryville College has temporarily shelved plans for burning wood for energy because of continuing problems with the prototype wood pyrolysis unit.

"In light of ever escalating energy costs, we will continue to pursue alternate energy sources," College officials said. "Meanwhile, we are considering an alternate plan which we will unveil as soon as we can figure out how to move the slightly defective reactor from Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania," the MC spokesperson added.

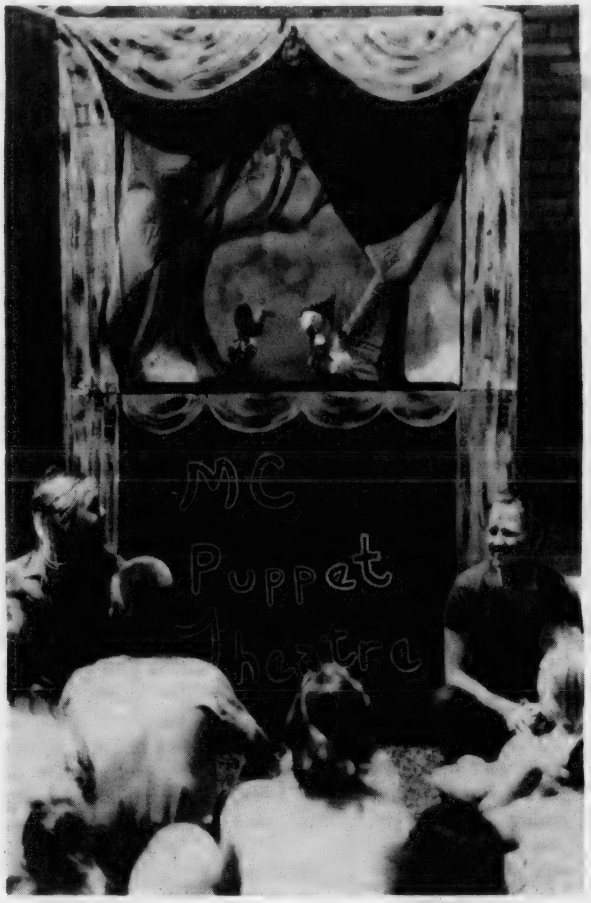
Sojourner and Mollie Sinclair opens tonight

One of America's contemporary composers, Carlisle Floyd, whose opera, The Sojouners and Mollie Sinclair is set for May 15-17 at MC, gave the title "How Do You Write One of These Things" to his remarks at last Monday's CIV. He was referring, of course, to operas.

Floyd, who writes his own lebretti (text or words) as well as music, has composed four full-length operas, three one-act operas and a number of pieces for the piano, orchestra and voice. He is a member of the faculty at the University of Houston and co-director of the Houston Opera Studio which is sponsored by UH and the Houston Grand Opera. He is the recipient of the Guggenheim Fellowship in 1956 and other awards.

During CIV, Floyd stated that an opera composer needs two basic elements: instinct and craft. Instinct is that native ability that is either there or not, but craft can be developed.

Craft is important in deciding which material can be used for opera, writing the libretto and the actual composing. An opera must possess active and passionate characters involved in dramatic situations where they are free to express their feelings. Every element must contribute to the story or be eliminated. Songs will then emerge naturally as the result of great emotional tension.



Floyd, whose visit at MC was sponsored by the Tennessee Arts/Humanities Support Program, concluded with the idea that the precise alchemy for opera will remain unknown.

Allan Evitus will sing the role of the Spokesman of the old Scottish immigrant who, along with MacDougald, attempts to preserve the Scottish traditions in a new world. Understudying the role of Mollie Sinclair is Wren Griffin, a freshman voice major from Louisville, Kentucky. Lesa Payne, a junior voice major from St. Petersburg, Florida is understudying the role of Jenny MacDougald. Other students in the cast include:

Bill Bender
Stephen Burnett
Frank Fiore
Sayers Green
Wren Griffin
Karen Henderson
Karen Kotz
Lesa Payne
Betty Schuster

FREEMAN TO SPEAK

David Freeman, Chairman of the Board of TVA, will speak in a CIV program at MC next Wednesday, May 21, at 9:20 a.m. Details of Mr. Freeman's presentation are not yet available.

The Punch and Judy Puppet Show was one focus of the Commedia last Saturday afternoon during May Madness.

Dr. Arda Walker and Rev. John Driskill clock in as winners of the over-fifty bracket in the "Run for Hope Mini-Marathon" last Saturday morning. Over $200 was raised for the Fred Hope Fund, which goes to help Haiti this year.

West named new admissions director

Larry West has recently been named to replace Rick Ziegler as MC's director of admissions. Ziegler has resigned to accept a post with Phillips University in Oklahoma.

West comes to Maryville from Westminster College in Missouri, where he was director of admissions for three years. Westminster has about the same enrollment as Maryville. Prior to Westminster, West was director of admissions at Phillips University, assistant director of admissions at Baylor University, and assistant director of admissions at Southern Methodist University.

West received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from Baylor University in Texas. He also taught English at Baylor while serving on the admissions staff there.

MC's new director has been active in several national college organizations. He is a former president of the Great Plains Association of College Admissions Counselors and a former treasurer of the Missouri Association of College Admissions Counselors.

Larry West will assume his position at MC beginning June 2.

Why not move calendar back two days?

The proposed calendar for next fall term has sparked considerable controversy between students and administrators. The objections on both sides are clear-cut and rational. But they are not irreconcilable. It seems ludicrous, therefore, that a simple compromise suitable to all has not yet been worked out.

The proposed calendar calls for fall classes to begin on Tuesday, Sept. 16, and end on Friday, Nov. 21. This in itself is strange. Last year's fall classes also began on a Tuesday (Sept. 11) but ended on a Tuesday as well (Nov. 20). In fact, fall term has run from Tuesday to Tuesday for the past several years. Why has this been changed? Whatever the reason, this alteration is the source of the current problem. If next fall's schedule had been left to follow the pattern of previous years, none of this would even have come up.

But unexpectedly, it was not. The IPC voted to let us out on Friday and have us come back nine days later for Interim. Because of the length of this new Thanksgiving break, dorms will be shut down— another important change.

This arrangement imposes a serious hardship on students who must travel long distances home, twice within a four-week period. With the cost of transportation skyrocketing, this is no small matter. A fourteen hour (one way) drive to Florida or a plane ticket to New Jersey runs into big bucks. Students are understandably upset that the administration is so slow to realize this fact—especially after they have imposed an 11% fee increase. The energy saved by closing the dorm will be squandered several times over on transportation. The college, however, doesn't have to pay that bill.

When it was clear that this arrangement would not be accepted by students, an alternate plan was made, calling for no Thanksgiving break at all. Fall term will end on Friday, Nov. 21, and Interim will begin Monday, Nov. 24. No classes will be held on Thanksgiving Day itself, Nov. 27. Under this plan, Interim will end on Dec. 12, giving students a whopping 3½ week Christmas vacation.

This plan has upset the faculty and staff, who need time to grade exams, figure averages, and get ready for their new classes. It has not met with great enthusiasm from students, either. A certain amount of mental let-down follows the end of every term, and neither faculty nor students relish the idea of starting up again without some reprieve.

Neither of these schedules is a good one. It seems to us that another alternative is in order.

If classes were to begin on Thursday, Sept. 18, and end on Tuesday, Nov. 25, the five-day Thanksgiving vacation which we are accustomed to would be possible. The number of school days would be exactly the same as in the other two plans. The entire calendar would simply be set back two days. Students who live close enough to warrant a five-day trip home could go; those who don't could stay in the dorms. Faculty and staff would have time to prepare for Interim. The whole idea is so amazingly attractive that we wonder why it is not one of the alternatives being considered.

The administration cannot afford to close its eyes to the monetary difficulties that the nine-day, closed dorm Thanksgiving break will cause for students. On the other hand, the no-break alternative is really no alternative at all. We believe that setting the calendar back two days and providing the usual five-day, open-dorm break will please both students and faculty. In a world of compromises, this surely is not too difficult to arrange.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

During Winter Term Wayne Anderson hired Dan Zaneski to coach both football and track. Aware of the fact that track practice needed to begin, Zaneski was promptly given the signatures of approximately 25 athletes interested in participating on the track team.

Winter Term passed by without any evidence of there ever being a track team. Finally, by the second week of spring term a track team consisting of eight athletes was organized. (Using the word loosely). The first practice began with a boom—— Coach Zaneski never showed up. The second practice consisted of the team stretching, then Zaneski shuffling us off so he could attend "voluntary" conditioning drills. The third day Mr. Zaneski cancelled the track season, using the excuse that he was worried about our record. The question is, was he trying to save his face or our reputations?

His procrastination permitted him to pass on excuses to Wayne Anderson about the team's inability to prepare for the season. We were prepared for the season. Our workouts included shuttle runs from Anderson Hall to the gymnasium trying to convince someone to form a track team.

The real problem rests in the hands of Wayne Anderson. We convinced him we were ready, but still he left Zaneski to do as he pleased. We were willing, with the backing of Coach Henry, to participate on our own, without a coach, but Dr. Anderson said no.

So Dr. Anderson and Mr. Zaneski should be aware that their actions and inactions have lowered the esteem of Maryville College in the eyes of five seniors who will never have the opportunity to run as an organized unit again.

Richeson Quartet to jazz up MC

The Tom Richeson Jazz Quintet, featuring Nancy D'Andrea, will perform at MC next Tuesday, May 20. The concert will include jazz compositions of all types, including be-bop, swing, fusion, classical jazz, Latin, modals, and blues. It will begin at 8:15 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall. There is no admission charge.

The Quintet consists of Tom Richeson on trumpet, fluegelhorn, and percussion; Nancy D'Andrea on vocals and percussion; William Scarlett on Soprano and tenor saxophone; Charles Rule on keyboards; Keith Brown on drums; and Tom Williams on acoustic and electric bass.

Tom Richeson is the founder and leader of the group. In recent years, he has toured with such groups as The Jackson 5, The Spinners, The O'Jays, Dianna Ross, Tom Jones, The Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, and many others. He is currently a graduate student and part-time instructor at UT. Richeson has also taught part-time at Maryville.

Nancy D'Andrea has sung professionally all over the world on tour with the Tony Pastor Orchestra. She was offered a spot in the original production of "West Side Story," but was forced to turn it down because she was pregnant with her daughter, Cynthia.

Bill Scarlet has been on the faculty at UT for nearly twenty years, teaching a variety of subjects. Charles Rule, Tom Williams, and Keith Brown are all seniors at UT.

The Tom Richeson Jazz Quintet plays regularly at Chantilly's Piano Lounge in Knoxville on Friday and Saturday nights from 10:00 p.m.-2:00 a.m. Their appearance at MC was partially arranged by the U.S. Recording Companies Fund.

Lewis, Hardwig get grants

Two Maryville College instructors have recently been granted fellowships for further study in their respective fields.

Dr. John Hardwig, lecturer in the religion and philosophy department at Maryville College, has been awarded a National Endowment for the Humanities grant for a summer seminar at Williams College, Mass., from June 18-August 12.

Under the direction of Rutger's professor Amelie Rorty, Dr. Hardwig will study teachings of Descartes, Spinoza, Hume and Rousseau during the seminar, entitled "Moral Force of the Passions."

A magna cum laude graduate of Yale University who studied "Autonomy and Rationality in Shared Moral Decision," for his dissertation at the University of Texas, Dr. Hardwig has special interests in interdisciplinary research and teaching, and in ethics and social/political philosophy. He taught various philosophy and ethics courses at the University of Tennessee-Knoxville for seven years prior to joining MC.

Dr. Wallace L. Lewis, associate professor of history at Maryville College, has been awarded a National Endowment for the Humanities Fellowship to study at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

This summer's seminar from June 16-August 8, is "Inequality and Contemporary Revolutions." The interdisciplinary seminar will draw on philosophical, historical, economic, sociological and political approaches to inequality and revolution.

Dr. Lewis, whose interest in political science has been pronounced since his undergraduate days, has taught an interim course at MC on contemporary revolutions and hopes to develop another based on this summer's study.

After receiving his B.A. from the University of Akron, Dr. Lewis received his M.A. and Ph.D. from University of Iowa where his dissertation involved a study of the German navy and the outbreak of revolution in 1918.

In the past, the MC professor has received two other NEH Fellowships. In 1973 he studied the history of socialism under Warren Lerner at Duke University and in 1977 he studied the history of China from 1644-1949 under Jonathan D. Spence. In 1978, he received a Mellon Foundation faculty development grant for a study tour of China last summer.

"Night and Fog" to cover campus

The final movie in a series of three classical films being shown at MC will be aired Wednesday, May 21, at 8:00 p.m. in the Theatre. The film, Night and Fog, is a documentary on the Nazi concentration camps.

This half-hour film, directed by Alain Resnais, juxtaposes color scenes from the present day ruins of Auschwitz with black and white archive material recording the reality of the camps.

Instead of isolating the death camps as a single historical event, Resnais has tried to create a reminder of an ever-present threat to humanity. The commentary in the film is by Jean Cayrol, a victim of deportation.

Admission price to the film is $1.

NOTICE: The Playmakers will be holding auditions Sunday in the Theatre at 7:00 p.m. to fill the positions of those not returning. Auditioners should bring a song and short audition piece, wear comfortable clothes, and be prepared to participate in improvisation pieces.

For sale now til May 30: baseball, basketball (men's and women's), volleyball, football, wrestling, P.E. uniforms, and sweat suits. Available in equipment room. Priced between $2.00-$10.00.

Caps, robes, and graduation announcements are in the Bookstore. Please pick up these items as soon as convenient.

Scots wind up season, 8-10

The Scots ended their season last week by playing Fisk College, Carson-Newman, and Bryan College.

Against Fisk, Larry Sheelley got revenge on an earlier 1-0 loss to Fisk this season. Sheeley held Fisk to only 6 hits while allowing only 1 earned run.

With Fisk leading 1-0 going into the bottom of the second, Mark Talley led off with a single. Dave Talley followed by reaching first on a fielder's choice. Jay Kohlbusch then walked placing runners on first and second. Rich Sandberg then delivered a run scoring single to tie the game. Jimmy Reese, Andy Limone, and Dave Osborne all followed with singles for a 5 run outburst. The Scots went on to win 15-2. Ronnie Wyche and Dave Osborne both had two hits apiece. Wyche added to his home run record by hitting his second of the season.

On April 20th, Carson-Newman got revenge on an earlier 6-5 loss to the Scots by beating them 9-3. Mike Wortman started on the mound for the Scots who were the victims of a 5 run rally in the 6th inning, as C-N sent 10 batters to the plate. C-N pitchers limited the Scots to 4 hits. Dave Osborne's double was the Scot's only extra base hit all game.

The Scots ended their season by visiting Bryan College in a double-header. In the first contest, Duran Williams, starting pitcher, allowed Bryan one earned run over the first four innings. The Scots managed only four runs which all of them coming in the 4th inning. A walk to Mark Talley, single by Dave Talley, and another walk to Jay Kohlbush loaded the bases for Jimmy Reese who singled in the Talley brothers. Andy Limone followed with a double scoring both Kohlbush and Reese. However, that was not enough as the Scots left 10 MC base runners stranded as Bryan game came back and won 6-5.

In the second game of the double-header, Bryan jumped to a 5-2 lead. In the top half of the 7th, Osborne led off with a single and then stole second. Dave Talley followed with another single scoring Osborne. Ronnie Wyche walked and Leonard Moreland delivered a single scoring Talley and Dent as the Scots exploded for 5 runs to defeat Bryan 7-4.

Ensemble performs

On Wednesday, May 21, the Maryville College Wind Ensemble will present an informal pops concert on the Fine Arts Center patio.

Under the direction of Mr. Gene Taliaferro-Jones, the ensemble will play a program of light music, including several Sousa marches; Gershwin's An American in Paris; McBeth's Masque; a march entitled Light Cavalry; and The Pusillanimous Pussy Cat.

Tom Hudson, president of the MC chapter of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, and a member of the Wind Ensemble, will conduct a selection entitled The Sinfonians

Concert time is 4:15 p.m. and the entire campus community is invited to attend.

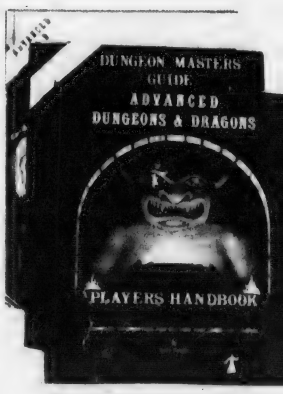
The fantastic world of swords and sorcery in the original adult game of fantasy role-playing!

DUNGEONS & DRAGONS



An incredibly popular fantasy role-playing game where players, using a variety of books and "modules" to supplement the basic game set, assume mythical characters and embark on dangerous quests to the depths of a many level dungeon in search of adventure and hidden treasure. Along the way they must defend themselves from monsters of all descriptions and must decide the best course of action when confronted with trap doors, quagmires, skeletons and the like. The adventurers combat these difficulties with an assortment of weapons, booty and magic spells, plus their individual character traits.

The basic DUNGEONS AND DRAGONS set provides an adventure module, a beginning book of guidelines which describes the characters (dwarves, clerics, elves, halflings, fighting men, magic users and thieves), character traits (strength, intelligence, wisdom, constitution, dexterity and charisma), types of monsters (orcs, doppelgangers, griffins, blink dogs and grey ooze, to name a few), levels of spells, strengths of attack and other possible strategic outcomes. These are all determined by rolling in turn one of the five multicolored, polyhedra dice, included. One player acts as the Dungeon Master, plotting the dungeon layout before the game, filling in both the story behind the quest and the details of the environment as they go along. Though the Dungeon Master secretly rolls the dice to determine what may next befall the adventurers, it is the players themselves who shape the course of the game, making choices based on the given elements in each situation.

DUNGEONS AND DRAGONS is a cerebral game, a test of wits and ingenuity. It provides a framework for a fantasy world in which seemingly real-life choices and challenges to character and intelligence shape and create the excitement of the game.

Beyond the basic DUNGEONS AND DRAGONS set, there are three hardcover books, PLAYER'S HANDBOOK, MONSTER MANUAL and DUNGEON MASTER'S GUIDE, and nine Adventure Modules (various locales beyond the dungeon) for advanced play. The books greatly expand on the available methods of play, the variety of monsters and the role of the Dungeon Master.

DUNGEONS AND DRAGONS, at all levels, will appeal to fans of J.R.R. Tolkien's Middle Earth, swords and sorcery sci-fi enthusiasts and all those who love games of strategy.

Choir "pops" up in park concert

The Maryville College Concert Choir will have a Pops Concert on May 22 at 7 pm, in the Greenbelt Park by the Courthouse. The concert will be divided into three parts, each containing a different type of music.

The first part of the program will open with several numbers including "Son of a Gambolier" and two rousing spirituals, "Ain'a That Good News" and "Ride the Chariot." This section will end with "The Tennessee Wig Walk" and "Dry Bones", a number involving instruments and sound effects.

Bryan McFarland, a sophomore choir member from Roswell, Ga., will sing a solo between parts One and Two, accompanying himself on the guitar. Part Two consists of a medley of tunes from the musical West Side Story, which are semi-choreographed and acted.

Audience participation is an important part of the last section of the concert. The choir will sing various familiar tunes in which the audience is invited to join in. These numbers include: "Getting to Know You" from The King and I, "Do-Re-Mi" from The Sound of Music, "Day by Day" from Godspell, "Wunderbar" from Kiss Me, Kate, and "He's Got the Whole World in His Hands."

The choir will be accompanied during the West Side Story medley and the sing along section by Judy Grahl, a junior piano major from Maryville.

The Pops Concert will also provide an opportunity for the public presentation of the coveted Presser Scholar Award to Bryan Ashley. Ashley, a junior applied organ music major from Ridgewood, New Jersey, is Maryville College's third Presser Scholar.

The prestigious Presser Scholarship of $1,000 is provided by a special grant from the Presser Foundation of Bryn Mawr, Pa.

The award is made to an outstanding music major entering the senior year and is based on high academic achievement and performance.

ACC restructured for next year

In a lengthy meeting on Monday, May 12, the ACC voted to accept the ACC Task Force's proposals to revamp and restructure the All College Council. These proposals have three primary aims: to free the ACC from programmatic trivia, giving it more time to deal with policy-making business; to improve campus communications; and to make the ACC more efficient.

The Task Force began its work in Spring, 1979. It sought input from the College community and from the governance systems of other colleges. After reviewing and discussing its findings, the Task Force made a series of far-reaching recommendations to the ACC.

One of the most important recommendations was that the current consensus system by which the ACC operates be abandoned in favor of a parliamentary system. This suggestion stems from a widespread feeling that decisions reached through consensus are often too watered-down and unclear to be of much concrete use. It is hoped that the parliamentary system, which will be based upon Robert's Rules of Order, will encourage expression and consideration of wide differences of opinion and allow clear, definitive decisions to be made.

The Task Force also recommended that a student and a faculty member, elected from their representative groups, should be named non-voting members of the Maryville College Board of Directors. It is believed that these representatives will insure that the Board understands how students and faculty stand on issues involving them, and that they will also help improve communications and relations between the Board and the College community.

The most sweeping changes were made in the committee structure of the ACC. By organizing the various committees under three general councils, the Task Force hopes to free the ACC itself from its current burden of dealing with trivial committee concerns. The three major councils will be the Academic Life Council, the Student Life Council, and the Religious Life Council.

The Academic Life Council (ALC), which replaces the Instructional Program Committee, will be composed of five faculty members, three students, the Registrar, and the Academic Vice-President. It will oversee and review the work of the following committees: Independent Study, Interim, CIV, Individualized Major, and Teacher Education.

The Task Force originally placed the Financial Aid committee and the Admissions committee under the jurisdiction of the Academic Life Council. However, these measures were not approved by the ACC. The Financial Aid committee will remain solely an administrative body and will not fall under the ACC's authority at all. The status of the Admissions committee will be studied in the fall.

The Student Life Council (SLC) is an entirely new body. It will be composed of eight students, the student co-chairman of the ACC, two faculty members, two administrators, and the Dean of Student Services. It will oversee and review the Community Standards

New housing alternatives needed

The MC campus received a nice little shock Monday at 10:00 p.m. when the room selection policy for next year was announced. Room selection is always an anxious and unpleasant process, but this year promises an overflow of headaches, controversy, and complaints.

The closing of Carnegie Hall is, of course, the biggest change. This decision means that all upperclass men on campus will be forced back into what have traditionally been considered freshmen dorms, and that there will be no distinctly upperclass male dorm. According to the proposal, Copeland will be 58% upperclass guys and 42% freshman guys. Dorm I will be 30% upperclass guys, 49% freshman guys, and 21% upperclass women. Pearsons will have its usual small number of upperclass coeds. The projected figures allow for 133 upperclass guys and 102 freshmen guys, for a grand total of 235 males on campus.

All of this has squeezed the girls a bit too. Lloyd Hall will have a whopping 94 upperclass female residents—approximately 25 more than this year, and nearly double the figure for two years ago. Dorm I will have only 23 upperclass women and no freshmen girls at all. The option of a coed dorm for freshman girls has therefore been removed altogether. Davis, as usual, will be almost entirely freshman girls. But this year it will be the only dorm for them-which means there can only be 94 entering female students. Add this to the projected 164 upperclass women to get an allowance of 258 females next year.

The closing of Carnegie is in itself an upsetting prospect to the guys living there. Carnegie has a character, an identity, that the "brick triplets" just can't match. But all sentimentality aside, it does not appear as though satisfactory arrangements for relocation have been made.

For one thing, the projected number of students looks unrealistically small. With this plan, the College is saying it only has room for 493 boarding students. Either this figure is pretty far off or the place is slipping faster than anyone thought. Only 94 freshmen girls? We better hope and pray there'll be more than that. But if there are more, where will they go?

Where indeed? It just doesn't seem safe to assume that three floors of double-occupancy rooms can be shut down and all the residents therein accomodated by squeezing everybody else together. We feel other options should be considered.

First of all, what is going to be done with Carnegie? If it's closed, is it going to just sit there and rot? Is it going to be rennovated? Or is it going to be torn down? If it is going to be revamped and reopened eventually, it seems that the first and possibly the second floors could be kept open while the upper levels were being worked on.

If Carnegie is going to be permanently crossed off the list, there are other buildings on campus that bear looking in to. What about Bartlett Hall? Although much of this building is just open space, we might be able to get two floors of dorm rooms out of it.

Or what about Willard House? Or even the House-in-the-Woods? These two buildings, granted, are more valuable and delicate than average dorms. Residents for them should therfore be carefully selected. Perhaps one or the other could be used as an upperclass honors dorm. A few years ago, Willard House was used in an experimental alternate college lifestyle program. Students cooked their own meals and were responsible for cleaning and keeping up the house. This might be an interesting project to try again.

Finally, it seems only reasonable that if space on campus is going to be limited, the restrictions on living off campus should be relaxed. If the College is not able to provide adequate satisfactory housing (and satisfactory, to a large number of students, means having a single room), students should be allowed to make their own housing arrangements. We would suggest that seniors be permitted to live either on or off campus as they choose, without explanation, and that juniors be allowed to live off campus with permission from the Dean of Students' office.

The housing plan announced Monday night represents a radical departure from that of previous years. The challenge it presents and the hardships it will create demand innovative thought and treatment. The "tight squeeze" plan does not seem up to meeting this demand. Alternative housing plans, including relaxed off campus regulations and/or the use of other campus buildings, would appear to be more viable solutions.

A little leftover madness...

Echoes of the future

The April 30, 2820, Murvulle Thud reported that the Board of Directors had approved the Curriculum Review Committee's proposal to accept proficiency in the Jupitarean tongue as fulfilling the college's foreign-language requirement. Accordingly, upper-level classes in Jupitarean were to be offered in the fall. Proponents of the change pointed out that the foreign language requirement was very difficult to fill, since French, Spanish, German, and English had all become dead languages.

Underworld Expeditions, Ltd., is offering a discounted tour of Hades for students this summer. The tour will depart from "The Gateway to Lower Regions," Washington D.C., on June 15, 1980. No return date is guaranteed.

A gondolla trip on the Styx River will be the featured means of transportation for the tour. Students are requested to bring a copy of Dante's Inferno to use as a guidebook during their visit.

Students will be given the opportunity to meet a number of world-reknown personages on the tour, including the original Adam and Eve, the god Pluto, and Dr Faustus.

Cost of the tour will be arranged following a thorough assessment of the value of each student's soul.

Students desiring more information concerning the tour should contact Underworld Expeditions, Ltd., P.O. Box 892 Hades, 37801.

MC relinquishes Tremont

About three weeks ago, in a message to the Board of Directors, President Wayne Anderson announced that Maryville College would be relinquishing operation of Tremont Environmental Education Center. The Center, he declared, had ceased to be financially feasible for the College to operate.

MC has had a working agreement with the National Park Service, who owns Tremont, for a number of years. Maryville's primary use of the Center has been to provide an environmental education program for fifth-grade students from various school districts throughout the Southeast. Actual use by undergraduates has been slight.

Tremont Center, however, has been closed down since September. The dormitory buildings and the bridges leading to the Center were condemned nearly two years ago. Although construction is now well underway after a lengthy search for a contractor, it is not yet clear when the Center will be sufficiently refinished to allow reopening.

When it is, Maryville College will not be there. With two years lost, many of the school districts who used to send their fifth-graders to Tremont have found other camps or environmental centers. Even if the Center is ready for reopening this fall, the dormitories do not have the capacity level that many schools require. A study conducted by Tom Devaney found that most school systems were not willing to pay the substantially higher costs that MC would have to charge when the Center reopens. To revitalize the program, therefore, would require a great effort and a large amount of money from the College.

In the final analysis, President Anderson decided the program was not worth this effort and money. Although Tremont has paid for itself in the past, he and the Community Advisory Council determined that it would no longer do so. Dr. Anderson, therefore, felt MC had no choice but to cease operation of the Center.

Hopefully, another organization will undertake operation of the fifth-grade program.

Meanwhile, Dr. Anderson has received the Park Superintendent's assurance that Maryville College students will still be permitted to use the Tremont facilities. If students, faculty, or staff are interested in developing a program at the undergraduate level, the Tremont Center will be accessible to them. At present, no such program exists. But, according to Dr. Anderson, development of one should not be hindered by MC's relinquishment of the fifth-grade program.

The sign to the Tremont center looks empty since the Maryville College sign has been removed.

Just what does that new athletic policy say?

The Maryville College Board of Directors finally adopted a long sought-after athletic policy last month. Dr. Wayne Anderson, MC president, commented on the background of the new policy: "The new broad policy on athletics – approved unanimously by the Directors – gives the College reason for optimism about the future of the athletic program at Maryville College."

"The new athletic policy articulates the College's philosophy that liberal arts should involve physical growth and development as well as intellectual and spiritual, and outlines numerous specific institutional as well as personal benefits for students, faculty, staff, alumni, and the community from a broadbased program of recreation and athletics," Dr. Anderson stated.

The Statement of Athletic Policy provides a foundation for Maryville College athletics lacking in the past. It sets forth responsibilty for budgeting and administration of the athletic program, makes policy on conference, NCAA, AIAW, and College rules concerning personnel, eligibility, recruiting, financial affairs, financial aid, fund raising, practicing and scheduling specific and clearly defined. The policy also outlines a broad-based program of Intramural, Club, and Intercollegiate athletics.

The new policy stirred up somewhat of a controversy in some circles on campus over two specific points of the statement, one concerning the number of sports offered, and the other concerning College policy on winning.

On the number of sports offered, the policy states: "Maryville College seeks to make the benefits of varsity athletics available to as many students as possible. Thus, Maryville College is committed to offering breadth of experience rather than concentrating on a few sports."

Some feel that MC should concentrate its athletic program and strive for excellence in a few sports. Yet the policy states that a broad-based program is more consistent with the liberal arts concept.

The statement on winning reads as follows: "It is recognized that winning is an important goal in athletics. However, at Maryville College, 'winning' is not the most important goal. At Maryville College, winning comes within the bounds of the College's purpose and philosophy, its statement of athletic policy, and the requirements of its conference and national affiliations. It has been demonstrated that conduct of the program within this framework can be successful. When losses come, as they inevitably have and will, they are accepted, as are the wins, as a natural part of the endeavor with the clear understanding that valuable lessons are learned from both."

The statements above would probably make Vince Lombardi turn over in the grave, but they are really not much of a departure from past policy.

In any case, Maryville College now has a specific athletic policy, something that may help to stabilize the athletic department now in a state of flux.

Brennan named new library director

Mrs. Exir B. Brennan, assistant professor and coordinator of library instructional programs at the University of Alabama-Tuscaloosa, has recently been appointed director of the Maryville College library.

Mrs. Brennan replaces Mrs. Choi Park, who has been acting librarian since the library directorship was left vacant by the illness and death of Jane Warren Savage last fall. The new MC librarian will hold the rank of associate professor when she assumes her duties in August.

A native of West Point, Miss., Mrs. Brennan received her B.A. in English and her master's degree in library science from the UA-Tuscaloosa.

$175,000 donated by nameless source

An anonymous donor has made a $175,000 pledge to the College's current Toward Century III $5 million campaign, MC President Wayne Anderson announced today.

The contributor, a former MC student, said the gift would be paid over a three-year period and "is for unrestricted use by the College."

Dr. Anderson said, "We deeply appreciate this generous gift and hope that it will stimulate others to consider making similar gifts to the College at a crucial time in its history. If we are to continue our movement forward, while it is to the benefit of the College and the community at large, we need further support of this kind."

"An unrestricted gift is especially helpful and timely because it enables us to meet our highest priorities." The College plans to use the gift for the central features of the campaign, namely, faculty support, student aid, and renovation of facilities.

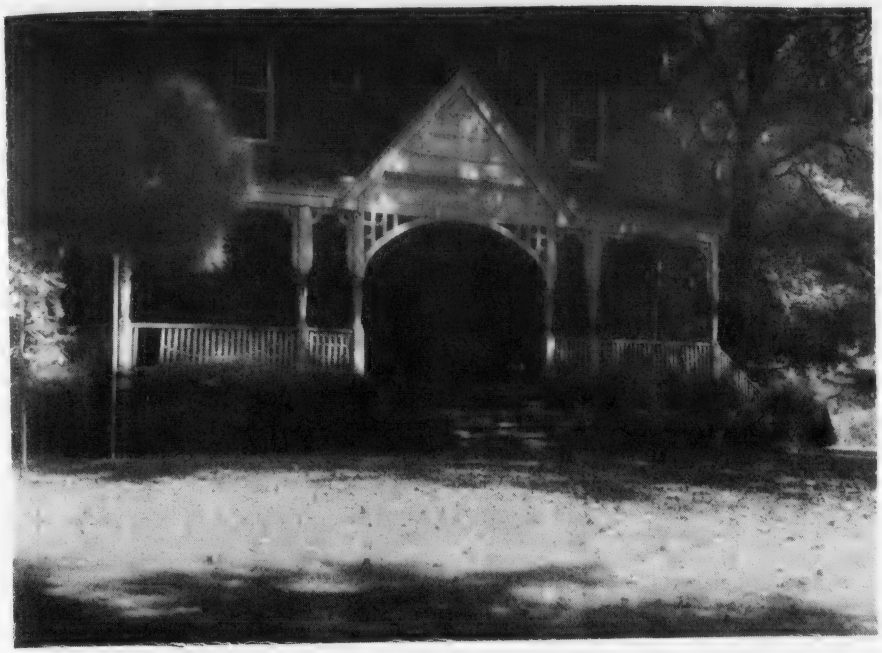
A glance around campus

Late May slips upon us, and the end of school is near. In spite of exams and term papers, students find their paces relaxed, their spirits lifted. Although Maryville College is beautiful in the fall, it's breathtaking when it blossoms in the spring. It's a place that's strangely hard to leave, now in the quiet elegance of early summer.



Days begin early, with bright sunlight streaming through dorm windows. A-hour is much easier to attend than it was winter term, E-hour much harder.. People gather around the P.O. during break and on the steps of Pearson's after lunch. Softball games follow one another in the afternoon heat. Ice cream is the most popular offering in the dining hall. After dinner, soft southern twilight lingers on and on, fading ever so slowly into night. Honeysuckle scents the air. Finally, the moon rises, the stars come out, and the end of school is one day closer.

These are days meant to be held and cherished forever. To help preserve them, the Echo wishes to offer you this glance around campus.

Liberal arts majors now fare better in job market

(CPS) – "Don't talk it up too much," begs Karen Blakey of the U.S. personnel Corp. in Washington, D.C. "Too much talk could make it go away."

She is talking about a slight improvement in the long-depressed job market for liberal arts majors this spring. "With a bit of hustling and concentrated job seeking," counsels Gordon Gray, Career Services director at George Washington University, "a liberal arts graduate should be successful.

"The average liberal arts major has it much better than his predecessors of the last six or seven years, especially in private sector hiring," he adds.

Experts point to several factors that have improved, at least tenuously, liberal arts majors' job prospects. One is that students have stayed away from liberal arts so long that they've created a shortage.

The phenomenon is most noticeable in education. Ralph Graves of Maine's State Education Commission says "Until about 1977, we had people pounding down the doors" for jobs. Then "it levelled off for a while, and now it's a problem of actively recruiting to keep quality (of education) up."

Other areas of the country are also reporting current or imminent teacher shortages, especially in the Sun Belt states. The Southern Regional Education Board expects its "current oversupply of new teachers" to dwindle into a teacher shortage by the end of the decade.

Still another reason liberal arts are doing better in the marketplace is that liberal arts curricula have become more "practical." A number of schools, like the University of Utah, now hold regular job workshops for their liberal arts majors, to show them ways to adapt their course schedules to market demands. The emphasis is on a "creative" course development.

More corporations are apparently agreeing. John Sussman, a reasearcher at Korn-Ferry Personnel in Los Angeles, expects more businesses will start choosing liberal arts majors with experience over more narrowly educated business majors.

Business, he says, is getting more complex, and requires more general skills to cope with complexities. "The technical aspects of business can be learned inside the corporate structure, but the thing learned from liberal arts can not be learned on the job."

Indeed, General Motors has begun a pilot program aimed at recruiting "the best" liberal arts majors from eleven schools this year despite layoffs of semi-skilled and blue-collar labor at several of its plants.

Yet job hunting for liberal arts majors largely remains a catch-as-catch-can proposition. The federal government, traditionally the biggest recruiter of liberal art majors, has a hiring freeze. Most state governments have drastically reduced hiring. So in general a liberal arts major must "look for blips in the market" to find gainful employment, says Illinois' Bechtel.

Dear Ms. MC

Dear Ms. M.C.,
Why can't Bartlett Hall be used as a dormitory?

Curious

Dear Curious,

The major reason for Bartlett Hall not becoming a dorm is money. Bartlett Hall is in very poor condition and with new construction methods building a new and safer dorm would be cheaper. Another problem would be relocationg the Maintenance staff's working areas. Bartlett Hall will probably not become a dorm. You would have better success in converting Willard House into a dorm.

Dear Friend,

I have been exposed to an abundance of talking heads on this campus. However, I am well versed in the New Wave group "Talking Heads." I recommend their music to any connoisseur of serious rock.

Students attend symposium

Four Maryville College students recently attended the second annual Undergraduate Research Symposium at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in Blacksburg, Va.

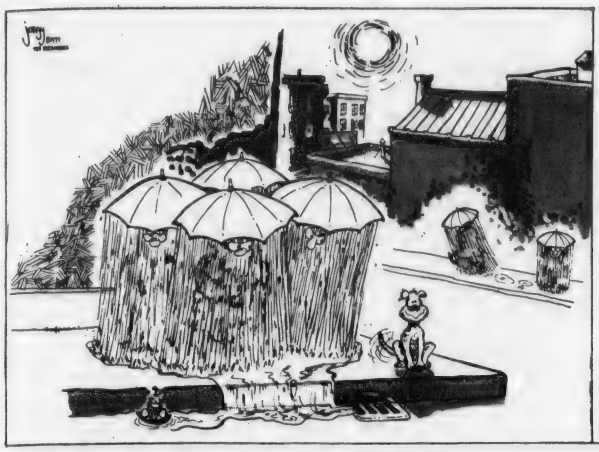
Dr. Robert Naylor, associate professor of chemistry and chairman of the Maryville College chemistry department, accompanied the group of senior chemistry majors.

Tim Poole of Maryville; Charles Brooks of Miami, Fla.; Randy Watson of Huntsville, Ala.; and Mike Cherskov of Palos Park, Ill., each presented 20-minute papers in the symposium, designed to provide a forum for students to present research projects in a professional atmosphere.

Brooks presented "The Bacteriostatic Effects of Three Synthesized Sulfonamides;" Cherskov's paper was entitled "Potentials of Wood Distillation"; Poole spoke on "Analysis of Lithium Salt Levels in Plasma and Erythrocytes and its Relationship to Lithium Salt Therapy"; and Watson's topic was "The Determination of the Concentration of the Trace Elements Cadmium, Lead, and Aluminum Released from Point and Nonpoint sources into the Little River and Pistol Creek."

Twelve colleges and universities were represented at the symposium. Several major chemical companies also provided exhibits and financial support and had representatives available to talk with participants about careers in the chemical industry.

MACCO gives pops concert this Sunday



The Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra (MACCO) will present a Spring pops concert in the Hannum Springs Park (across from Maryville Towers and the new library) on Sunday, May 25. Concert time is 4:30 p.m.

Under the direction of Mr. Gene Taliaferro-Jones, MACCO will perform a program of light music including selections from the music of Barry Manilow, Neil Diamond, some pieces by Leroy Anderson, and some Sousa marches.

Everyone is invited to come and bring a picnic lunch to the free concert. In case of rain, the concert will be held in the MC chapel.

For the 1980-81 concert season, MACCO has scheduled six subscription concerts, including a performance with Gov. Lamar Alexander as featured pianist on January 26, 1981.

Season tickets for the 80-81 season, going on sale in July, will be available for $15 for a family ticket, $10 for an individual ticket, and $2.50 for a student ticket.

Sports awards given out

by David Ierulli

Football linebacker Tony Ierulli and basketball/volleyball champion Bobbie Jo Sallade were named Maryville College Co-Atheletes of the Year in the annual Sports Awards Banquet held Monday, May 14, at Heritage High School. Both Ierulli and Sallade received the J.D. Davis Outstanding Athlete Award.

Fullback Ken Adair and safety Steve Moffet were acknowledged for receiving All-American Honorable Mention in 1979. Tailback Alvin Nance and Moffet got the football team's Most Valuable Player awards. Bill Wheatley was named the Most Valuable football freshman.

Coach Sharon Brown saluted her women's volleyball team, which won the state and regional titles and competed in the national tournament in Los Angeles, finishing with a 38-11 record. Donna Owens was named Most Valuable Player and Holly Harton received the Most Improved award for the volleyball team.

"I won't be associated with a finer bunch of guys," Coach Byrd said of the basketball team. Team captain Rodney Nelson, choked with emotion, presented a special plaque to Byrd.

Another highlight of the banquet was the induction of Dr. David H. Briggs, William Baird, Jim Hitch, Benny Monroe, and Kenneth Stinnett into the Maryville College Wall of Fame. Ken Stinnett's uniform was presented to his wife by the baseball team to show their love and appreciation for him.

Player awards in other sports included:

Men's basketball—Rodney Nelson, Most Valuable Player; Murray Smith, Most Improved Player; Rich Suttle, Coach's Award.

Women's basketball—Dee Dee Chapman, Most Improved Player.

Baseball—Dave Osborne, Most Valuable Player; Mike Wortman, Rookie of the year; Jimmy Reese, Ken Stinnett Award for "Love of baseball and Maryville College."

Men's tennis—Steve Arnold, Most Valuable Player; John Sanders, Most Improved Player; Larry Durand, Coach's Award.

Women's tennis—Sharon Wood, Coach's Award.

Wrestling team captain Ed Davalos was recognized for giving Maryville College its first Old Dominion Athletic title. Davalos won the NCAA Regional tournament in his weight classification and competed in the nationals.

Dr. Wayne Anderson, commenting on the new athletic policy recently adopted by the Board of Directors, said the policy is a "mandate for excellence in athletics." Anderson also listed four reasons for optimism about Maryville College's athletic future: players, coaches, the new policy, and community support.

Recently resigned Athletic Director and baseball coach Billy Henry received a standing ovation for his hard work and devotion to Maryville College.

and Residential Life, Social/Recreation, Athletic, Dining Hall, Traffic, Student Publications, Judicial Policies, and Clubs and Organizations committees.

The first five of the above-mentioned committees are already in existence, although the Athletic committee will undergo extensive modification. The Student Publication committee factors out the Communications committee, and the Clubs and Organizations committee replaces the former Ways and Means committee. The Judicial Policies committee will not act as a judicial body but will deal solely with creating and reviewing judicial policies and practices.

The Religious Life Council (RLC) will coordinate the work of the following committees: Worship and Religious Programs, Community Outreach, and World Concern. The RLC will be composed of the Chaplain and the chairmen and co-chairmen of these three committees.

A study currently underway may result in changes in the committee structure of the Religious Life Council.

Two other points were made by the Task Force in their recommendations. They suggested that, to facilitate policy-making and program planning, the ACC, its councils, and its committees be given access to necessary budget information. They also urged a clarification of the role and responsibilities of the ACC in policy-making and the ACC's relationship to the Board of Directors.

Finally, the Task Force reaffirmed the recommendations it made in its preliminary report to the ACC on May 2, 1979. These included recommendations that council reports be made available prior to ACC meetings to allow sufficient time for consideration; that minutes of ACC meetings be posted prominently around campus; that limits on campus elections be lifted to encourage more interest in campus politics; and that a standard measure for removing inactive ACC, council, and committee members be established.

Phonathon elicits big response

The first nation-wide phonathon at Maryville College, a two-week effort that ended last Thursday evening, raised $56,135 in pledges, which will be applied to a National Endowment for the Humanities Challenge Grant providing matching funds.

MC students, alumni, faculty and staff tried to reach some 7,300 MC alumni via 20 telephones over a two-week period beginning May 5.

Phonathon volunteers were able to publicize upcoming events at MC and give alumni personal contact with the College, according to Ben Hancock, phonathon coordinator and director of development and alumni relations at MC.

"We have been really pleased with the response of not only alumni we have called, but also to the volunteers who donated so much time in this effort," he said.

Hancock recognized the efforts of various alumni, student, faculty and staff groups, especially the Blount County and Knoxville chapters of the Alumni Association, the MC football team and the MC chapter of the American Chemical Society. Other groups included the soccer team, Tri Beta, Pearson's Hall, and others.

Hancock noted that, although phonathons were held at MC in the past, this year's effort marks the first time the College has tried to contact all alumni at one time.

Tennis nets 8-6 season

by Janet Helwig

The Maryville College Women's tennis team recently ended its 1980 spring season with an overall record of eight wins and six losses, which is a marked improvement over the 1979 record one year ago. During the course of the season, MC defeated Milligan College, Bryan College, and Tusculum College, and was forfeited to by Tennessee-Wesleyan College. Other schools played include Carson-Newman College, The University of the South, and Roane State Community College.

The entire 1980 season has been an overall improvement over previous years. This is evidenced both by the increased number of matches played and by the overall higher quality of competion. In addition, this year was the first time the MC women's team participated in the Division III state tournament in Martin, Tennessee. The team this year consisted of two juniors, three sophomores, and two freshmen, so the outlook for the next couple of years looks quite promising.

Once again, many thanks to Coach Caroline Haynes, and Assistant Coach Holli Eckert, who devoted a great deal of time and effort into making the 1980 season a success.

Janet (J.J.) Weston demonstrates true pitching form as she adds another win to Wasted Again's record. Playoffs for the Women's Intramural championship are to be held this week.

Women's intramurals playoff

Last week the Cowgirls, Private Joke, Team One (Lori Bowers'), Davis Girls, Wasted Again, and F.I.S. teams finished their intramural softball season by making up games which had been rained out a few weeks before. Monday, Davis Girls forfeited to F.I.S. On Tuesday, an exciting game took place between Wasted Again and F.I.S. Wasted Again was leading 8-7 at the bottom of the sixth inning. In the top of the seventh, Wasted Again got up to bat and scored 9 more runs, winning the game 17-7. Thursday, Wasted Again played Davis Girls and won; while F.I.S. beat Lori Bowers' team, ending the round robin tournament.

The softball season records for each team are: Cowgirls-capt. Sandy Rabun, 5-0; Wasted Again-capt. Bev Woeber, 4-1; F.I.S.-capt. Sue Wenkstern, 3-2; Team One-capt. Lori Bowers, 2-3; Davis Girls-capt. Rebecca Cole, 1-4; and Private Joke-capt. Su Spence, 0-5.

Playoffs for the chan pionship are currentl underway. Cowgirls playe Private Joke and Davis Gir played Wasted Again o Monday, Tuesday F.I.S played Team One. O Wednesday the playof game for third place wa held. Today, the battle fo the championship seedin will take place.

Soccer team goes out with a kick

The soccer Scots destroyed the Blount County Booters 6-2 last week to end their spring season on a winning note.

MC jumped to a 4-0 lead in the first half over the hapless Blount County club. Carey Starnes opened the scoring with a 35-yard blast that found the left corner of the net. Ken Davidson scored moments later off of a nice assis from Shin Tanaka. Gre Hosler knocked in rebound and Starnes got h second before the ha ended.

After the resumption o play, Kevin Stewart score his first of the seaso from the left wing, an Davidson struck for hi second tally of the evening

The Scots' spring recor ended at 3-5.

Dean Mangus resigns

by Shelley Ballenger

Dr. Larry Mangus has resigned his position as Dean of Student Services at Maryville College, which he has held since September, 1978.

Dr. Mangus has accepted a position at the University of Maine in Presque Isle as Vice President of Student Affairs. This post, which he accepted Tuesday, May 27, also gives him full status as a professor of education. Although he will essentially be an administrator, Dr. Mangus will have some teaching responsibilities as well.

When questioned about his reasons for leaving Maryville College, Dr. Mangus replied that his own professional career and his family's well-being were the primary factors. The University of Maine offer represents a great increase in salary and benefits. Dr. Mangus said he "felt it was an appropriate time" to leave Maryville and that he is "very excited about the opportunity" that his new position offers.

Dr. Mangus stated that the controversy over the new athletic policy had nothing to do with his decision to resign. He did say, however, that he is upset over all the resignations in the athletic department and the turmoil this situation has created.

Dr. Mangus handed in his resignation to Dr. Anderson on March 7. It was not, he said, prompted by any specific issue.

Dr. Mangus' first year at Maryville College was marked by a serious breach of understanding between students and the Dean's office. Much of this was prompted by several cases of alleged marijuana use brought before the ACC Judicial Board, with Dr. Mangus acting as the prosecutor. Due to poorly-defined procedural policies and a general lack of knowledge concerning these policies, the Judicial Board's operation was hampered and questioned at virtually every turn. One case was returned with an inconclusive decision, due to theft of the evidence from Dr. Mangus' office. In other instances, students were convicted of "use and possesion" and dismissals resulted. In a few cases, aquittals were granted.

The situation was finally alleviated by an open conference between students and Dr. Anderson, a closed ACC meeting, a massive town meeting which brought several administrators, faculty, and staff in direct confrontation with students, and the timely intervention of spring break. As a result of the win-

The seasons go by, one after another, as endless as time itself. We are here for now, but, transient beings that we are, we too will pass through and go on. We obey our cues, play our parts, then step off the stage and let others take our places. Only our memories of this time and place and all it meant to us will be left to carry us into the future.

161st commencement coming up

The 161st Commencement ceremonies at Maryville College will begin this Monday, June 2, at 10:30 a.m. in Wilson Chapel. Mahbub ul Haq, an internationally reknown economist, will be the featured speaker.

Approximately ninety-five students will walk through the graduation line Monday morning.

Dr. Edward Long, Jr., will be presented with an honorary L.H.D. degree at the ceremony. Dr. Long is currently engaged as a professor of Christian ethics at Drew University, and is widely recognized as a prominent ethics instructor. He has taught at a wide variety of American colleges, universities, and seminaries. Dr. Long presented a CIV program here on ethics in January.

Two honorary Doctor of Laws degrees will be awarded. The recipients are Mahbub ul Haq and Algie Sutton. Sutton, a 1929 MC graduate and the principal donor for the Sutton Science Center, is a retired insurance executive. He has been active in a number of church and charitable organizations. Sutton was a member of the MC Board of Directors from 1964-1974, and has contributed to a number of the college's campaigns.

Mahbub ul Haq is currently serving as director of the policy planning and program review department of the World Bank in Washington, D.C. He has studied at Panjab, Pakistan, Cambridge, Yale, and Harvard universities.

As this year's principal commencement speaker, Dr. Haq will discuss "The Uncertain Decade."

Thanks in order

What a year this has been...

I sit up in the Echo room on a Saturday afternoon, much like all the other Saturday afternoons this year except for one thing — this is the last. The view out the window is much the same as it was those first Saturdays in September, when I was certain I would never survive until May. But here it is, time to go, and apparently I made it.

If I have strived for anything this past year, it has been to make the Echo an effective channel of communication between all the different facets of the "college community." I hope that my efforts have led to a little more awareness and understanding between administrators, faculty, and students. I also hope they have fostered a sense and desire for co-operation rather than antagonism and division. Although criticism and dissention are valuable in their place, I believe that, on the whole, a constructive attitude promotes positive change better than a negative one. All along the way, I have tried to suggest as well as criticize, in the hope that some good will come of it. Whether I have succeeded at this I will leave up to you to decide. Now, at the end, I at least have the satisfaction of knowing I could not possibly have worked any harder or given any more than I did.

But the Echo is the result of a staff, not merely an editor, and this year's staff has been excellent. I would first of all like to mention Clarence Maslowski, who has done a tremendous job as photography editor. He has worked selflessly many long hours, tolerating my often vague requests and frequently working one step ahead of me. His work, though sometimes marred in the printing process, is indisputably top quality.

Mike Weiss has worked hard as sports editor and done a very good job of it — not easy in this year of controversy and transition. His clear writing style has graced the sports page as it has not been graced for years.

Barbara Booker was something of a lifesaver when she stepped into the Echo office the first night of layout. Without her I'm not sure how we would have gotten the paper out. Kathy Fitzell and Mary Lowry picked up the basics quickly. I don't mind saying I'll miss the Tuesday night looney sessions more than anything else.

Dr. Fowler has proofread the copy every week except one, when she was still in the hospital. Our many thanks go to her for this time-consuming job. Dr. Blair has been very helpful in shaping the writing style of several reporters.

I would like to thank Betty Schuster, whose diligent efforts have kept my mind free from financial worries; Bryan McFarland, who has toted his camera to countless CIV's and intramural games; Linda Wiley, who, amid all her other responsibilities, took time to proofread articles and help me write headlines; Keith Mathews and Yogi Yen, who folded 600 copies of the paper every week; and all the reporters, without whom there couldn't have been a paper.

My appreciation also goes to the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times, whose staff has typed headlines, screened photos, reduced ads, printed the paper, and given me friendly advice along the way. Glenn Orr, Paul Bales, and Freddie Tipton have been especially helpful.

And, finally, I would like to mention Tom Hudson, who will inherit this post from me. Tom has assisted in virtually every aspect of the Echo's production at some point during the year, and I am confident in his ability to assume responsibility for it. He has an ear for news, a talent for writing, and a good head on his shoulders. And my best wishes.

Well, that seems to do it. My native town beckons me home for the summer, and my family awaits. It will be good to relax with them for awhile. I hope this year has been as unforgettable, as challenging, and as rewarding for you as it has been for me. No one needs to remind you, now, to cherish your times at MC. May your days ahead hold only the best.

Campus notices

REMEMBER: All students need to fill out forwarding cards at the Post Office before the end of the term. Make sure your mail reaches you this summer!

The bookstore will be open Saturday, May 30, from 9a.m.—12 noon. They will be open regular hours on Monday, June 2. The business office will be open 8a.m.—12 noon on Saturday.

Echoes from the past

The January 14, 1929 Echo reported that a new Home Economics course for men was to be offered. Entitled "Problems in the Selection of Food and Clothing for Men," the course was designed to teach senior men to be "the perfect host . . . unobtrusively well-mannered . . . able to prepare a simple and palatable meal . . . correctly dressed at all times . . . and to observe the little courtesies that distinguish the true gentleman."

The April 22, 1929, Echo included these comments from the men who took the course: "It is what every man, whether married or single, needs," and "To me it has been the most practical and enjoyable course of my entire college career."

HAVE A GOOD SUMMER VACATION!

Music awards bestowed

Each Spring the Maryville College music faculty presents scholarships to some of the outstanding music students at the college. This year, six students received awards.

Karen Harville, a rising sophomore majoring in organ, received the Lowell A. Burge Scholarship in Music.

The Ellen Mapstone Scholarship was awarded to William Bender, a rising sophomore voice major from Danville, New Jersey.

Bryan Ashley, a rising senior organ major from Ridgewood, New Jersey, was awarded the Presser Foundation Scholarship.

The Dan H. Kinsinger Memorial Scholarship in Voice was awarded to Lesa Payne, a rising sophomore voice major from St. Petersburg, Florida.

The Oscar Philip Steele Award was given to freshman music majors Karen Henderson and Karen Harville. This award was established by Mr. Philip Steele, affiliate artist at MC 1971 through 1973, in honor of his father.

The Davies Fine Arts Scholarship will be presented to Judy Grahl, a rising senior music major from Maryville, on June 1 at 4 pm in the Fine Arts Music Hall. This award was established in 1960 in honor of the Rev. and Mrs. George Davies, parents of Miss Katherine Currie Davies, who was Chairman of the Department of Fine Arts from 1936 to 1964.

All of these awards were or will be presented publicly.

Timing of Turkey Day break settled

The Administration has reached a final decision concerning the status of Thanksgiving break next fall. Under the final plan, classes will be cancelled on Thanksgiving Day itself. There will be no other break.

According to Dr. Wayne Anderson, one element that influenced the decision was the student forum held on April 24. The opinions voiced in the forum were strongly against the nine-day Thanksgiving break plan and, ultimately, against the existence of a break altogether. The administration felt this indicated that the student body would rather not have a break at all. They therefore rejected both the nine-day plan and suggestions for a return to the five-day plan.

Dr. Anderson believes the faculty are largely pleased with the final arrangement.

The schedule for next fall is:

Tuesday, Sept. 16 . . . . . Fall Term begins

Friday Nov. 21 . . . . . Fall Term ends

Tuesday, Nov. 25 . . . . . Interim begins

Thursday, Nov. 27. . . . . No classes

Friday, Nov. 28. . . . . Classes resume

Tuesday, Dec. 16. . . . . Inerim ends

Tuesday, Jan. 6 . . . . . Winer Term begins

ter's event's, the operation of the Judicial Council was reviewed and a copy of its procedures and the rights of accused students distributed to every student.

Another source of controversy was the rental of racquetball courts to non-students. Conflict arose over the number of courts to be rented and the times they would be made available to the community.

When questioned about his reflections on these events, Dr. Mangus replied that he believes Maryville College "is a better institution because of last winter." He stated that there was great confusion over the expectations for student behavior. He feels that MC was given the opportunity to clarify its rules, regulations, and standards, and that this clarification was a healthy process.

Dr. Mangus added that this year has been "incredibly quiet."

A search for a new Dean of Student Services is currently underway. The position should be filled by the time MC students return in the fall.

trained as a professional economist, Dr. Haq has been described by the international press as "the most articulate and persuasive spokesman" for Third World nations.

Prior to commencement, a Baccalaureate Service will be held for graduating seniors and their parents. The Service will be held at 8:00 p.m. on Sunday, June 1, in the Chapel. Charles Fowler is the featured speaker. A reception will follow.

David S. Freeman, chairman of the board of TVA, stated that it was up to this generation to develop energy options for the future.

Freeman stresses energy conservation, development

by Jeana Webb

On Wednesday, May 21, S. David Freeman, chairman of the board of the Tennessee Valley Authority, discussed "Energy Options for the 1980's."

Mr. Freeman gave a very interesting lecture. He stated that the energy crisis is a question of ethics. It is his belief that the United States will become a perpetual hostage because we get our energy from other nations and without them we would have no energy. He said that Americans had painted themselves into a corner because we were borrowing the energy from future generations and there would be none left for the future. Mr. Freeman stressed that it was up to the younger people (our generation) to start trying to conserve energy. He mentioned that oil companies are buying up all the resources and they need to be stopped because they are taking their orders from the Arabs and not the United States Government.

Mr. Freeman also mentioned what stripmining is doing to the mountains.

In giving some suggestions on what might be done to help people who can't pay their electric bills, Freeman said that welfare is not the answer. Instead the money should be used to help fix up the houses of the poor so their electric bills will not be quite so high.

Mr. Freeman said that Americans have lost their freedom of action because we need the resources of countries run by despots and dictators.

After the speech there was a question and answer session. When asked about whether solar energy would be the answer, Mr. Freeman said yes. He said the big trick was to learn how to make solar energy into electricity to cool and heat houses and to run electric cars. He said that TVA is doing more to advance solar energy than anyone.

Mr. Freeman was also asked whether he thought it was ethical to strip people of their heritage and land in relation to the Tellico Dam project. His reply was, "Yes." He said that there is no way you can do a project without giving the government complete authority. It may be harsh but it has to be done. He stated individual rights can not be put before national rights.

In closing, Mr. Freeman said that parents are learning from their children. He says that he has not entirely given up on his generation, but the future of our energy depends on the generation of today.

Business dept. adds Downey

Sidney Downey, presently assistant professor of economics and business administration at Hope College in Holland, Mich., will join the Maryville College faculty this fall as assistant professor of business administration.

Downey, who received his B.S. from High Point College in North Carolina, received his MBA degree from Indiana University Graduate School of Business while majoring in personnel and organizational behavior, and management and administration. He is currently working toward his Ed.D. degree in educational leadership.

Prior to joining the Hope College faculty, Downey served as center director for the Junior Achievement organization for high school students in Holland, Mich., and was assistant director of the business placement office of Indiana University.

A recipient of a Mellon Faculty Development Grant, Downey has received the Jaycee Distinguished Service Award and a District Award of Merit from the Boy Scouts of America.

Personals

Peggy Joyce Stewart and Edward Charles Herbert invite all Maryville College students, faculty, staff, and administration to share in the joy of the beginning of their new life together when they exchange marriage vows on Friday, May 30, at 4:00 p.m., with their reception to follow. The ceremony will take place in the Chapel courtyard.

To the MC faculty, staff, and students:

For your many expressions of love and concern during my hospitalization and convalescence I am deeply grateful.

The Highland Echo

MARYVILLE COLLEGE MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE Vol. 66 No. 1 September 25, 1980

Mr. Bill Strickland, an MC alumnus, has taken over the helm of the Office of Student Services.

MC adds new faces

As the summer sizzles out and fall brings hopes of cooler weather, a new year begins for Maryville College. New students bring new faces and personalities to the campus. Just as each new year brings a change of students, the faculty also changes. This year MC has gained several new faculty members.

Sid Downey, former assistant professor of economics and business administration at Hope College in Holland, Michigan, has joined the MC faculty as assistant professor of business administration.

Downey, who received his B.S. from High Point College in North Carolina, received his M.B.A. degree from Indiana University Graduate School of Business while majoring in personnel and organizational behavior, management, and administration.

The new MC faculty member is currently working towards his Ed. D. degree in educational leadership.

David Allen Cooper, cum laude graduate of the University of Georgia at Athens who is a candidate for the Ed. D. at that institution, has joined the MC faculty as instructor in health, physical education, and recreation.

Cooper, who received his master's degree in special education as well as his B.S. in physical education and health from the University of Georgia, has worked as a graduate assistant and assistant wrestling coach at that institution. He was also a teacher in the Athens school system, and an instructor at Clayton Junior College in Morrow, Ga.

Dr. Richard D. Parke, former assistant professor at Randolph-Macon Women's College in Lynchburg, Va., has joined the Maryville College Staff as assistant professor of music. His responsibilities will include teaching voice and directing the opera program.

Dr. Parke received his B.A., M.M.A. and D.M.A. with honors all from Yale University in New Haven, Conn.

David E. Irwin Jr., previously of Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass., has Joined the MC faculty as instructor in fine arts and coordinator of the band and Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra program.

Irwin, who was a music instructor and conductor of the Academy Orchestra at Phillips Academy, received his Bachelor of Music degree from Florida State University and his Master of Music degree from Yale.

Debbie Nichols joined the MC faculty assuming the important position of circulation librarian.

Also, seven part-time lecturers have joined the MC faculty. Marvin Peek will teach a course on blackness in America; Robert Fisher will teach psychology; Barbara Handler will teach Math; Dr. Raymond Stroughton will teach chemistry; Kristin Prough will teach advanced French; and Nancy Hottel-Burkhart will teach English as a second language. This winter term, Dr. John Shell will teach psychology.

MC grad returns as Dean

If you have seen a tall stranger in Anderson lately who is not a freshman football player, then you have probably met William R. Strickland, the new Dean of Students at MC. A firm believer in a liberal arts education, Strickland says that student affairs, which he is heading, should work hand-in-hand with the academic program to make MC the best liberal arts college possible. He feels that classroom activities should be extended into student life and cites student self-government as one area in which that could and is being done. He also would like to see the enrollment increase to about 1000 or 1200 students as a result of aggressive and selective recruiting. He explained that this number would support the faculty better and make it possible to provide a broader range of departmental offerings.

Mr. Strickland, an alumnus of MC, is coming to us from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where he was the Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Development. He is also a candidate for a Ph.D. at Chapel Hill and expects his degree in December 1980. His range of experience is broad, and includes teaching secondary school in Tehran, Iran, pastoring a Presbyterian church, and holding the job of principal at Chapel Hill Senior High in North Carolina.

A well-rounded person, Mr. Strickland enjoys music, reading, traveling, spending time with his family, and cooking. He likes athletics, both as spectator and participant, and in fact, was to have played professional football before making the decision to teach in Iran.

Getting to know people is another hobby of his, and he says he wants to meet all kinds.

Mr. Strickland made the decision to come to MC because he was interested in directing a whole program of student affairs. He states that he will enjoy not having to fight the structure of a big university in order to create a small college atmosphere among the students. "In the future," he says, "the most exciting things are going to be done in small colleges."

TOM COLUMNS

Great Scots! Another academic year is underway here at Maryville College. We're all another year older, another year wiser (if the liberal arts system is performing effectively for us and we for it), and these changes shine forth with great potential for MC.

Some profound individual once said, "The only thing which remains constant is change." (He obviously never had to do his laundry on a college campus.) The 80-81 year is indeed a year of change at Maryville College, and it could very well prove to be a year of promise. Many well-needed adjustments have been made -- a new food service, a new Director of Athletics, and in my estimation the most important, the naming of a new Dean of Students. (In a way I'm sorry L.M. is no longer aboard the S.S. Anderson Hall -- He would have provided me with a "hull" of a lot of satire to share with "yawl").

MC has received what it desperately needed -- a transfusion of new blood in the form of new faculty and staff members, new students, and the fresh ideas these folks bring in with them. Sure, it's too early to definitively judge how effective this new wave of ideas will be, but it is this type of change, the augmentation of the existing, the updating of the established, that the liberal arts concept is all about.

One of the changes for the 80-81 MC academic year will come in the form of this publication, The Highland Echo. We have our fair share of new blood -- the new blood comes in the new editor take over, on campus and off campus events change, and so the publication must inevitably be adjusted.

This year's Echo is going to be a different type of college campus newspaper. It will be more lighthearted than in the past, a bit more lively in some respects. There have been some requests to make the paper a bit more "controversial" (I prefer the word "lively" myself).

Even with a little more humor, journalistic standards need not be sacrificed--The Echo will not engage in "yellow journalism," but it won't look at this campus through rose-colored glasses either.

However, one of the greatest stumbling blocks for an editor on a campus as small as ours is to present newsworthy items that the readers are not already acquainted with. (like the story on Dr. Blair being last year's Homecoming Queen. How they beat us to press on that one I'll never know. . .).

The Maryville College grapevine has never been "concord" and never will be. The best the Echo can do is to present the MC campus community with important news in an honest, documented, readable, and enjoyable fashion. It is imperative that the news be dealt with seriously and earnestly -- but nine times out of ten solemnity is an almost certain drawback.

As editor I look forward to a good year -- a year of challenges, of new experiences, of change, of reciprocal service with the college community. And after all, that's what a good columnist strives to be -- a "pillar" of the community.

Letters to the Editor

(Editor's Note: We have no "Letters to the Editor" this week. The editor realizes this is the beginning of the academic year, and everyone is getting the old scholastic wheels to turn again, but let's get on the ball, shall we? This is your space, O ye people of MC – use it to "article"–ate your views. Letters to the editor should be addressed to The Echo, Box 2820, and should be signed by the writer.)

In lieu of "Letters to the Editor" this week's Echo offers its readers a chance to speak out on the new MC food service. A lot of talk has been floating around campus concerning food quality, quantity, et cetera. What do you think about it?

Below is the 1980 Echo "Meat the Press" Food Survey. Simply circle the response which you deem most applicable, clip out the survey coupon, and drop it into the Suggestion Box in the Dining Hall. Results will be revealed next week.

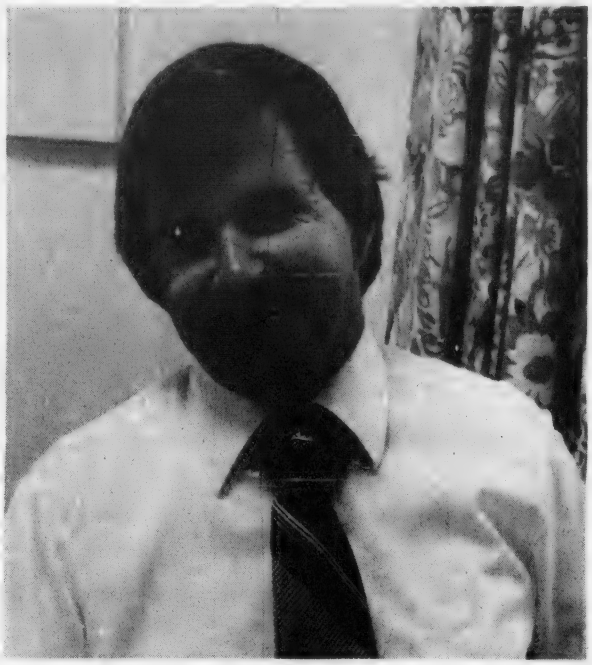
MC welcomes the class of 84

The Maryville College class of 1984 began its first college year Tuesday, September 9, with a week long freshman orientation. The freshmen participated in activities such as assemblies, study groups, placement tests, receptions, recreation, special group meetings, and social events.

The freshmen were welcomed to MC in an assembly Tuesday. The speakers included Dean Strickland, President Wayne Anderson, Dr. Alfred Perkins, and Dave Ierulli. Later that day, students learned the Alma Mater and MC's fight song and were then assigned to study groups.

The study groups met several times throughout the week to learn about and discuss MC policies as well as the pros and cons of a liberal arts education.



All entering freshmen then gritted their teeth and chewed their nails off during the required placement tests.

There were several receptions throughout the week. The Chilhowee Club sponsored a reception for freshmen, parents, and faculty on Tuesday. Refreshments were served in the library following a library activity on Thursday and at the President's reception following convocation on Monday evening.

A volleyball tournament among the study groups was the main form of recreation. The championship game was played Sunday at Wesley Woods between group 1 and group 6. Group 6 won the tournament with pizza as the prize.

There were some special group meetings including a presidential scholars meeting, a foreign students meeting, a meeting for the new student choir, and for group activities.

Several social events were sponsored. The favorite for many freshmen was the Playmakers' Dinner Theater. A movie was shown Thursday night followed by a dance Friday night. Wrapping up orientation on Sunday afternoon, the new students went to Wesley Woods for swimming, volleyball, a picnic supper, and vespers.

Mr. Joe Powell of Morrison's wants to "do everything possible to satisfy the students."

Cherokee honored by drama in MC theatre

Author Sarah Traylor and theatre expert Don Thomas have pooled their talents in the chamber theatre production, Give Us the Wind, scheduled as part of the Celebration of the Cherokee festival in Blount County and at Maryville College the week of September 21-28.

The September 26 production, presented by the Summer Playhouse of Blount County, takes its title from a Cherokee hunting prayer and is based on 50 years of recorded history on the Cherokee Indians.

Scheduled to begin at 8:15 p.m. in the MC theatre, the production will entertain community people as well as students from the Tuckalla Boundary in North Carolina who will enact some Cherokee legends. The Poach Band Dancers will also be featured. The theatre production Friday evening is free and open to the public.

Mrs. Traylor, a 1929 MC graduate, is a veteran author and lecturer who has written books, plays, and pageants on Tennessee historical subjects.

Morrison's comes to MC

Morrison's Management Services, Inc. has replaced ARA as the Maryville College food service. College officials decided to replace ARA after costs became prohibitive and the quality of service unacceptable.

Mr. Joe Powell, the new food service manager, explains that Morrison's is a different type of service for the college.

"Both ARA and Saga operated on profit/loss contracts—we don't. We're not here to make a profit but to serve the school."

The previous services were given funds by MC to run their operations within budget guidelines. What they had leftover was their gain. The contract with Morrison's is different in the respect that all monies put into the food program stay there and the college monitors and reviews the entire program.

There has been much discussion over the absence of "seconds" with the new food service and Mr. Powell is aware of this. Steps are being taken to offer seconds on some entrees—seconds are now offered with spaghetti, frankfurters, tacos, tomales, as well as some breakfast items. Additional helpings of plain bread, salads, and beverages have been offered since the beginning of the year.

Seconds on all other entrees can be obtained for the price of cost.

"These entrees are priced accordingly," emphasizes Mr. Powell.

Soon to be placed in the Dining Hall will be a menu board listing the meal selection and the cost of an additional entree.

This year's service is not costing the MC student much more than last year's service. In a price breakdown, each student paid $2.51 a day for food and dining hall labor in 79-80. For 80-81, the cost will be $2.78 a day.

"If the college sees a profit with this," says Mr. Raymond "Brick" Brahams, instrumental in the service switch, "the money goes back into the food program."

Mr. Brahams stressed that Morrison's is a consultant and management service. "The college is ultimately in charge."

When asked about the new food service Mr. Brahams replied, "We bought quality with Morrison's."

Mr. Powell is concerned with quality also.

"I am open to questions and suggestions. I want to do what the student wants."

Mike Weiss and Greg Hossler really get into the action during a recent practice for the Soccer Scots season opener against E.T.S.U.

Soccer Scots start Varsity season Sat.

The Maryville College varsity soccer team began practice last week under coach Randy Pasqua. This year marks the beginning of varsity-level soccer at Maryville.

The Scots will face tough competition this year, including S.D.A.C. member Hampden-Sydney, Bryan College, and U.T. on homecoming weekend. MC opens the season September 27, against East Tennessee State, at Maryville.

Standout players returning from the former soccer club include winger man Greg Hosler, Striker Ken Davidson, fullback John Lacava and goalkeeper Tim Fitzgerald. Athletic trainer Mike Saliotelli is assisting with the coaching duties. Saliotelli has wealth of past soccer experiences both playing and coaching, and should make an important contribution to the team.

Split record held by Scots

Sophomore running back Kevin Skipper rushed for 161 yards to lead Maryville College to a 23-12 come-from-behind victory over Centre, September 13.

During the Scots' first possession of the game, the offensive unit wasted little time before Skipper scored his first touchdown of the season. Bruce Lane added the extra point to give MC a 7-0 lead.

In the second quarter, Centre moved deep inside Scots' territory to the 21-yard line. However, an unyielding MC defense forced the Colonels to settle for a 38-yard Lambert Willet fieldgoal. With the Scots leading 7-3, Centre again moved deep into MC territory. The Scots' defense again repelled the Colonels from advancing beyond the 10 yard line. A 23-yard fieldgoal attempt proved successful and the half ended with the score at 7-6, Scots.

Centre struck first in the third quarter. Aided by two 15-yard penalties, the Colonels drove down to the MC 7 yard line, where half back Allen Corley slipped in for the score. The two-point conversion attempt failed and the Colonels led 12-7.

The Scots regained their lead on their next possession. Taking control of the ball at their own twenty, the Scots moved the ball down to Centre's 28 yard line. There, quarterback Kevin Bradley connected with wide receiver Gene Wheatley for the touchdown. Lane again added the extra point to give MC the lead, 14-12.

On the Colonels' next possession, MC defensive back Bruce Harkelrod picked off a pass at Centre's 42 yard line. From there the Scots drove down to the Colonels' 15 yard line where they were stalled. However, kicker Bruce Lane added a 32 yard fieldgoal giving the Scots a 17-12 lead.

The scoring ended in the fourth quarter as running back Vince Clemons sprinted four yards to give Maryville a 23-12 victory over Centre.

The Fighting Scots did not fare as well in their contest with Carson-Newman on September 20, losing 41-9.

The Eagles ran the first kick-off back 97 yards; MC never recovered from the blow. C-N's Van Williams led the Eagle attack with runs of 17 and 20 yards to set up C-N's touchdowns, and finished the day with a gain of 123 yards on 12 carries.

Although MC did not play superbly, the Scots did have some outstanding plays. Kevin Skipper was the game's leading rusher with 172 yards on 31 carries, and defensive end Gregg White caused two fumbles and recovered another. Also having outstanding games were center Bill Harvey, noseguard Alex Albert, and defensive back Jon Watson.

The Scots are 1-1 for the season and face Bridgewater College next Saturday at Bridgewater.

Meet hosted by Lady Scots

The 1980 Volleyball season is off and rolling and so are the Lady Scots. On September 9th, Coach Sharon Brown began practice which included tough six-hour sessions. Most of the players are returning from last year's squad, including three All–State and two All–Region players.

Last year, the Lady Scots were State and Regional Champions and competed in the National Volleyball Championships in Los Angeles, California.

This year's returning seniors include Sandy Rabun, Holly Harton, and All–State Carol Neal. Other returning players are junior, All–State, All–Region Donna "Awesome" Owens, sophomore, All–State, All–Region Rachel Reese, junior Dee Dee Chapman, and sophomore Bonnie Dobson. New players include senior Vadonna Moffett, sophomore Robin Rimmer, and freshmen Kay Julian an from Knoxville, Ellen Smith from Texas, and Sally Dobson from Florida.

This year's season promises to be an exciting one. Along with some fine players, the Lady Scots have another edge going for them. They have already qualified for the 1980 Southeastern Division III Volleyball Tournament. The Lady Scots are guaranteed this spot because MC will be the site for the tournament.

The Lady Scots are the team to beat this year and Brown says, "We have a big job ahead of us." The job of winning will be made more difficult this year for the V-ballers because tougher teams have been added to their schedule. "I think the schedule will be harder than last year." said Brown.

After going to the National Tournament in 1979 and seeing the caliber of competition among the West coast teams, Brown was heard to say, "I don't think the team or myself could settle for going on the way we were. We've got to get better. The only way to get better is to play better teams."

The Lady Scots start the 1980 volleyball season with a tri-match with host Tennessee Temple and Covenant. The home season begins with the Maryville College Invitational Tournament on Sept. 26-27. Among the eight participants will be last year's runner-up, Vanderbilt, the 3rd place team in MC's region, Radford, and North Georgia, a 1979 National tournament participant.

Another big meet takes place October 1, when MTSU and ETSU come to Maryville for a tri-match.

Singer Con Hunley opens MACCO's new season

Popular country music star Con Hunley and his band will be guest artists at the 1980-81 opening performance of the Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra (MACCO) Saturday, Oct 4.

Acclaimed as one of the field's brightest new stars, Hunley's hits include "Cry, Cry Darling," "Weekend Friend," "I've Been Waiting For You All My Life," "Since I Fell For You," and "I Don't Want To Lose You." He and his band have been touring recently with the Oak Ridge Boys.

The concert, as all MACCO concerts, begins at 8:15 p.m. in the Wilson Chapel. Admission will be $6 cash at the door.

Following the concert, a reception will be held for Hunley and his band at 9:30 p.m. at the Green Meadow Country Club. Hors-d'oerves and champagne will be served.

The other five MACCO concerts will feature flutist Frank Jones, Dec. 15; Maryville native and pianist Gov. Lamar Alexander, Jan. 26; a winter concert, Feb. 26; a concerto competition concert, April 23; and the final concert comprised of Broadway Show tunes, May 24.

This year's schedule marks MACCO's first year under the direction of David E. Irwin Jr., who replaces Gene Taliaferro-Jones.

MACCO is an all volunteer orchestra whose membership is composed primarily of Maryville, Alcoa, Blount County residents, and some MC students.

General admission tickets are $3 for each performance except for the appearance of Hunley and Gov. Alexander. Season tickets for all six performances of MACCO are $2.50 for students. A check or money order for the season tickets may be mailed, along with a self-addressed, stamped envelope, to Ms. Cindy Larsen, general business manager, MACCO, Box 1704, Maryville 37801, or Darlene Gilman, P.O. Box 2771.

Mr. David Irwin will mount the podium for the first time as MACCO's conductor in Saturday night's concert.

Student Life Retreat held

by Barb George

While most MC students were busy either finishing-up orientation week or moving back into dorms the weekend of September 12 - 14th, four returning MC diehards–Liz Barrie, Carol Coffey, Kathy Culpepper, and Barb George–along with faculty representative Lee Shamblin met with representatives from three other schools--Knoxville, Tusculum, and Warren Wilson Colleges–at Tusculum for a weekend of trouble-shooting and planning regarding the religious life or lack of it here on campus.

This retreat was sponsored by the Synod of the South to study the present state of religious affairs on the four campuses, projecting realistic goals for future programs, and strengthening ties between the four colleges.

As most students realize, there has been very little organized and supported religious activity on campus in the recent past. This is in part due to the fact that we have no full-time chaplain or religious coordinator. The acquisition of a person to fill this void was recognized as a most urgent need for MC.

Other plans arising from this retreat include a

ACS outstanding

Maryville College's Student Affiliate Chapter of the American Chemical Society has been designated an "outstanding chapter" by the national ACS for its activities during the 1979-1980 academic year. This marks the seventh time in eight years that the MC group has been awarded this honor.

The ACS, which sponsors the largest scientific and educational program selects student chapters for special recognition each year. The Maryville chapter was one of 28 out of 473 recognized as outstanding this year.

The ACS Student Affiliate program is designed to provide students interested in chemistry and chemical engineering greater insights into these fields. The program affords students in these fields an opportunity for intellectual stimulation arising from professional interactions, for obtaining experience in preparing and presenting technical material before chemical audiences, and for fostering a professional spirit among its members. The program is also designed to help develop an awareness of the responsibilities and challenges of the modern chemist.

Faculty advisers for the MC group are Dr. Robert Naylor and Dr. Terry Bunde. Randy Watson, a 1980 graduate of MC, served as president for the 1979-1980 academic year.

TOM COLUMNS

The results of the 1980 Echo "Meat The Press" Food Survey are in! After many exhausting hours of tabulation, the final figures have been recorded --

Total No. of responses: 11

Total No. Not responding and/or starving to death: 592

I believe that the quality of this year's food is: Excellent: 1, Good: 2, Good to Fair: 1, Fair: 5, Fair to Poor: 1, Poor: 1.

I believe that the portion size is: Too Big: 1, Too Small: 7, Just Right: 3.

The additional comments were as follows: Decrease the repetitiveness of the meals; serve hotter food; provide seconds on more entrees; provide more fruit, better bread, and skim milk; improve the serving and I.D. procedures; and have an egg grill.

All of the comments are, I believe, constructive. They provide helpful suggestions for Mr. Powell and the food service to improve their operations.

The comment that I enjoyed the most was: "Everything is excellent -- I love it . . .fine dining experience." I don't mean to sound pessimistic, but come on now. This is Pearsons Dining Hall, not Trader Vic's.

After having meticulously counted and recorded the results (not once, but a second time after discovering with much dismay that I had run out of fingers), I realized that this survey could serve a two-fold purpose. One, to examine student feelings and opinions about the dining hall service (the original goal of the survey), and two, through the lack of response provide an excellent spring-board for a tirade on campus apathy.

Not too long ago I was talking with an MC professor about campus attitudes of the 60's and 70's. This faculty member stated that the student attitude today is much different than that of ten years ago -- the students seem to be less in touch with (for the most part), and less concerned with what is going on around them.

I really didn't want to buy that, but now I feel I must reluctantly concede somewhat . . . .

Now, no one is being chastised here, niether is activism to the point of throwing stink bombs in the kitchen being promoted. But shouldn't we sit back and examine what we can do to constructively enact change and improvement instead of just sitting back?

Probably one of the most eye-opening experiences in regard to this "sit back-ism" phenomenon came to me this summer. Abbie Hoffman was preparing to turn himself in, the media was eating it up, so one reporter decided to ask a group of "young adults" what they knew about Abbie Hoffman. This newsperson cornered a college age fellow on a New York street and asked, "Do you know who Abbie Hoffman is?" and he replied, "Uh, yeah. Isn't she running for senator?" Unbelieveable . . . .

Okay, what's the point to all this? Well, one day we all hope to get out of MC, out of the liberal arts system, and "make something of ourselves." We want to get out into the world and "go somewhere." How can we go anywhere if we don't know where we are, or where we've been? We needn't be white knights on shining steeds, but we do need to be concerned about what is going on around us and how it affects us.

It starts out with seemingly small things like food surveys, curriculum changes, campus government revisions, and other things that are a part of our immediate existence here at MC, and it grows into bigger issues such as national and international actions and policies.

Must it come to a scenario such as this -- Two chaps are in the snack bar looking at the sports page when one says:

"Hey, lookit this! It says here on the front page that the city Board of Elections anticipates a low turnout among younger voters this year and plans to install voting booths here in the campus center, next to the Dolly Parton pinball machine, to encourage a greater response."

"Big deal! Did you hear that the Vols . . . ."

"But that's not all! It says that the majority of students are ignorant about what's happening politically and are apathetic. What do you think they mean by that?"

"I don't know, and I don't care . . . ."

"This is going to be an interesting presidential election -- Ronald Reagan is a born-again Christian, John Anderson's a born-again Christian, and President Carter is a born-again Christian. We don't need a born-again Christian. What we need is a born-again president -- like Lincoln, Jefferson. . ." -- Johnny Carson.

Mr. Art Ogden has taken over the helm as the MC Athletic Director.

Ogden heads athletics

Mr. Arthur G. "Art" Ogden, 34, assumed the job of athletic director at the College last July. His duties also include assistant football coach (defensive coordinator), men's tennis coach, and instructor of physical education.

Ogden comes to MC from Courley County Community College in Arkansas City, Kansas, where he taught English and served as assistant football coach. An athletic and academic standout of a New Jersey high school, Ogden was an all-conference football player at Ursinus (Pa.) College. He has held numerous teaching and coaching positions on the high school and college levels, and brings impressive credentials as well as a wealth of experience to MC.

Interim to N.Y. open

Dr. Charlotte Beck of the English Department is sponsoring an Interim entitled "Drama in New York," for upperclassmen, including transfer students; mature freshmen, and Continuing Education students. If at least twelve students sign up and pay the $50.00 deposit by October 15, this will be the third such group to participate in an Interim which combines reading of plays and study of the fundamentals of drama on campus with the actual viewing of six plays in New York City. In addition to the plays, there will be post-performance interviews with actors and directors as well as tours of such theater-related institutions as the Museum of the Performing Arts and Joseph Papp's New York Theater Project. For details, including approximate costs, see Dr Beck (Anderson 221) at once.

Cherokee

by Allison Perry

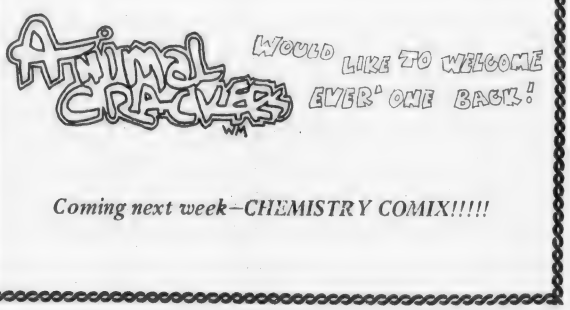
This Friday evening, Maryville College was honored with the presentation of "Give Us the Wind," a play written by Sarah M. Traylor and directed by Donald Thomas.

"Give Us the Wind" depicts the western flight of the Cherokee Indians. Through this presentation, we understand the hardships and injustices brought upon the Indians by our forefathers--the white men. The principal people—the Cherokee—are seen not as illiterate savages, but as honorable people, trying to survive in a world changed by the white man.

The cast included members of the Summer Playhouse of Blount County. Interested members, of a variety of ages, joined in this worthwhile biography of the Cherokee people.

"Deep Water," a beautiful ballad written by Mike Weiss, was sung by Brian McFarland. McFarland's performance made us understand even more the plight of the Cherokee People.

The audience was also entertained with Cherokee Legends performed by the students of Cherokee High School. Their performance was enjoyed by the entire audience, especially the children in the crowd. These young performers did a remarkably humorous job of depicting animal legends of the Cherokee people.



To end the night, "The Poarch Band of Creek Dancers" performed. Though not Cherokees, they did an excellent job illustrating the primitive styles of dancing used in Indian folklore.

Festival closes well

"Quiet Room" with reading material available to be open 24 hours a day for students to go to meditate, browse, or just get away from the pressures of school; a meeting room for a weekly fellowship group as well as seminars on current issues such as genetic engineering, the arms race, or abortion, etc., and informative programs by faculty and community members on topics of their own special interest.

We hope to get many more students involved as well as faculty and staff members and administration. We want to achieve total campus input as well as involvement, so if anyone has ideas, suggestions, possible chaplain prospects, or even complaints, please feel free to contact Dr. Anderson, Mr. Bill Strickland, or any of the students involved in the retreat.

Speaking about the War of 1812, Dr. Isaac Anderson, the founder of Maryville College said, "We should arm ourselves in the fear of God for battle, for we have not sinned against Britain but Britain against us. . .the call of country is the call of God."

Winning season ahead for Lady Scots' V-ballers

by Birdie Hill

The 1980 Lady Scots Volleyball season is in full swing, and so far the V-ballers have compiled a 7–0 record. September 22, the ladies traveled to Chattanooga where they defeated Tennessee Temple. Game Scores were 15–10, 16–4, 13–15, and finally 15–13. Coach Brown commented that "the team did not play well; I was not pleased with their performance. The talent was there, but we needed more team cohesion."

The ladies ironed out the wrinkles, and came back this past weekend to win the Maryville College Invitational Tournament. Friday night the team defeated Vanderbilt 15–11, 15–3. They also beat their rival, Bryan College, 15–9, 12–15, 16–14. Saturday, the Lady Scots played a young Carson–Newman team and added another win, 15–8, 15–13. They also downed Emory and Henry, 15–2, 15–17, and 15–12. That victory placed them in the semi-finals with Radford, whom they defeated 17–15, 15–9.

The championship game brought Maryville up against Bryan once again. Maryville was the only undefeated team at this point in the tourney. The ladies performed extremely well in the finals with a match score of 15–6, 17–15. MC was awarded first place, Bryan College received second, Covenant College came in third, and Radford – fourth.

Many of the games the Lady Scots played were won by only two points. In one game they were down 11-2, but managed to come back and pull out the win. This shows that they play very well under pressure – a "come from behind" team.

Coach Brown was quite pleased with the team's performance at the tournament. She feels that "the team knows how to win. We gave up a lot of points on serve misses. We'll need to practice serving. We have a tough double–header this week with East Tenn. State Univ. and Middle Tenn. State University, and then we'll be going to a hard tournament at the University of Tennessee at Martin. We needed this experience. I was very happy and proud of the girls."

The volleyball team would like to thank everyone that attended the tourament, and say that they appreciated the support Maryville gave them.

Lady Scot Carol Neal goes up for one in the Maryville College Invitational Tournament last weekend.

Soccer team downed 3-1

by Mike Weiss

The MC soccer team opened their season with a 3–1 loss to East Tennessee State last Saturday. It was one of the strangest soccer matches ever seen at Maryville, with 6 yellow caution cards given by the referees, the Scot goalkeeper reprimanded for his display of theatrics, and even the ball boy tossed out for his articulate choice of language.

Shin Tanaka gave the Scots the lead in the first half when he streaked goalward from midfield and blasted a rebound past the ETSU goalie. Soon afterward, the visitors tied the match with a goal off a corner kick. Shortly before the end of the half, the Buccaneers took the lead with a shot from the left wing.

In the second half, the circus began. An MC defender commited a foul in the penalty box, and ETSU was given a penalty shot (an unmolested kick 12 yards from the goal). Scot's goalkeeper Tim Fitzgerald, who is also an MC playmaker, tried to psych the shooter with a wild tirade, removing his jersey, waving it in the air, and yelling like a madman. A bewildered but delighted home crowd roared their approval. The referees did not, cautioning Fitzgerald and threatening to remove him from the contest. The ETSU shooter, amply psyched out, ripped the ball into the upper corner, making the score 3–1.

Later, on another penalty shot, a ball boy was thrown out for his alleged comments to the shooter. This time, the ETSU player missed.

The Scots could generate no offense, and the visitors held on to win. MC, 0–1, faces Tennessee Temple University on Saturday at Maryville.

Scots mauled by Eagles

The MC football team fell to 1 - 2 last Saturday with a disappointing 24 - 0 loss to the Bridgewater Eagles. Kevin Skipper was once again the lone bright spot for the Scots, gaining 129 yards on 22 carries.

The 'Scots' ground game was potent, outrushing the Eagles 193 to 123. Yet the offense self-destructed with numerous mistakes, including 6 interceptions, 5 lost fumbles, and 70 yards in penalties. Bridgewater gained 140 yards in the air, including a 55 yard touchdown pass.

The game was the first ODAC (Old Dominion Athletic Conference) contest for Maryville football. The Scots will try to even their conference and overall record and keep intact their 3-year home unbeaten streak on Saturday when they face Emory and Henry College. The conference leaders are Bridgewater and Washington & Lee, both at 1 - 0 in the league.

LATE BREAKING NEWS: C-N FORFEITS MC GAME

Because of a mix-up in transfer eligibility credits, Carson-Newman College has been forced by the NAIA (National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics) to forfeit its games with Central Florida University and Maryville College, games both won on the field by C-N.

The player in question was star Eagle running back Van Williams, a transfer from East Tennessee State. Williams apparently did not hold enough credit hours to be eligible for NAIA competition, C-N being an NAIA member school. Williams played an extremely important role in the Eagles' 41-9 victory over the Scots, gaining 123 yards.

The Scots' official record now stands at 2-1, rather than 1-2.

MARYVILLE COLLEGE MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE Vol. 66 No. 3 October 9, 1980

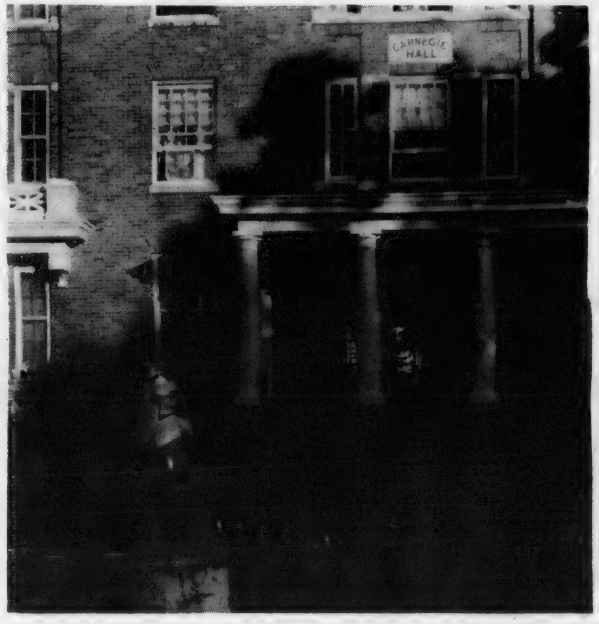
Part of the "Anderson Hall Gang" listens intently to the concerns of students at the recent Administrative forum.

Do you hear what I hear?

On September 30, the MC "big brass," including President Anderson, Deans Perkins, Strickland, and Richardson, among others, were present at an open forum for students to air comments, complaints, etc. Many issues were discussed by the large turnout of students and adminstrative representatives.

As might be expected, the food issue was the most widely discussed. Joe Powell of Morrison's was present to take note of the complaints, comments, and suggestions. A general consensus seemed to exist among students that the quanities of food were too small and the quality unsatisfactory. Nutrition was also a major concern. However, many had favorable comments, and basically the criticism was constructive rather than allusive. Mr. Powell exhibited a genuine desire to be in touch with student feeling toward the food situation.

Other areas discussed were the need for a new or renovated student center, the housing problem, and the athletic situation. Nothing specific was promised concerning the student center, but the problem was acknowledged. No plans were given for Carnegie Hall, the housing situation was addressed, and the need to rectify this year's confusion was specified. The wrestling program has been officially dropped at Maryville, and Varsity soccer and Women's softball have been added.



These forums are an opportune time for students to have input into affairs that affect them, and will be continued in the future.

Carnegie Hall—Will It Rest In Peace forever?

Is the fate of Carnegie Hall up in the air? It would seem so from the response received from representatives of the administration. As of now, the Dorm is officially closed. Carnegie was first closed at the end of spring term, but was reopened during the summer for band camps. Intrigued to know why Carnegie was deemed livable for band camp members, but unlivable for Maryville College students, I asked Associate Dean of Students, Jane Richardson about this. "In allowing band members to stay in Carnegie, the College was honoring a previous contract," she answered. "The money received from this went to the College's overall budget," she added. Jane went on to say that, "future bands using the College's facilities have been informed that Carnegie will no longer be available." Jane expressed a desire to reopen Carnegie, yet before it can be reopened it will require extensive repairs and renovation.

What kind of repairs are desperately needed in Carnegie? Heat is grossly inefficient, so a large amount of energy is wasted. Lack of fire escapes on the wings of Carnegie create a potentially dangerous situation, which is a main reason Carnegie is closed. Also, insurance companies and fire marshalls were starting to become concerned. Minor problems such as broken windows, unhinged doors, and peeling walls all contribute to the expensive repair costs. Apparently the administration is aware of the problems but, at this time, has not reached a decision about a remedy. Decisions will have to be reached soon, however, with the expectant increase

Coming soon: Rage Cage

Are you mad as hell, and you're not going to take it anymore? Well, try taking it just a little bit further, to the Lloyd "Rage Cage." Pending comfirmation from the Dean of Student Affairs, the "Cage" should be operational by mid-October providing padded walls and other unbreakable objects to assist students in venting their hostilities.

Brain child of the Lloyd staff, the "Cage" is nestled down in the depths of Lloyd's concrete catacombs, providing a socially acceptable enviroment for students to scream, stomp, rip and tear away the frustrations and aggressions resulting from crowded living conditions, academic pressures, and college life in general. While the idea of a "Rage Cage" may be cause for amusement, the proposal is no joke and has received the support of the campus Counseling Center and the residents of Lloyd dorm. So, the next time you have an overwhelming urge to dismember your roommate or set your professor on fire – run, don't walk to the "Rage Cage" 'cause there's more than one way to spell relief.

The prolonged crisis in Iran has brought to light many questions concerning international relations. The protection of embassies seems to be a major point, and the military strength of our nation is also being pondered at home and abroad. But a more important issue, "American Imperialism," must be discussed.

The foreign policy known as imperialism has become, in these times, an undesirable label for a nation's foreign policy. Why? Is "imperialism" a bad word? I say it is not. The United States, through its imperialistic policies, has spread the doctrine of "liberty and freedom for all " throughout the world, an idea that the Iranians are ironically supporting. Yet, they are the most obvious hypocrites.

In one breath, the Iranians demand personal freedom for themselves then deny it to American citizens--the hostages. The Iranian demands for personal freedoms and guarantees for non-intervention should be applauded--they resemble, in a perverse way, our own cry for independence in 1776. But they make their demands by imprisoning the hostages thus denying their own cause.

I am not saying that the U.S. is innocent from interfering in Iran's affairs--we did interfere. But aren't the Iranians wrong in what they are doing? Through their actions they are denying their own words and are engaged in a two-faced policy they accuse the U. S. of being guilty of.

Another point to ponder is this: As the nations supported by the United States begin to set forth on their own, should we maintain an enforced alliance, or let them depart and be free? Any nation that wants to be free of U. S. influence is in that way supporting our most basic ideal--freedom to be free. Our ideological struggle with oppression and tyranny is thus furthered. Then, if a nation under tyrant wishes to leave our sphere of influence simply because the tyrant says so, the people may topple his regime in time, as did the Iranians.

The U. S. has achieved its goal in Iran. Having kindled the fire of liberty in Iranian hearts, we should stay out. In time, less fanatical and more intelligent leaders may come to power, and we could be viewed once again in Iran as the champions of liberty. But, Iran must support her own words and free the hostages, for not long will the champion of liberty allow the liberty of her citizens to be denied.

Although I am totally opposed to wars of imperialism, I will fight in the name of liberty, though with great reluctance, and only after all other means of settling disputes have failed,

Mark Beyer

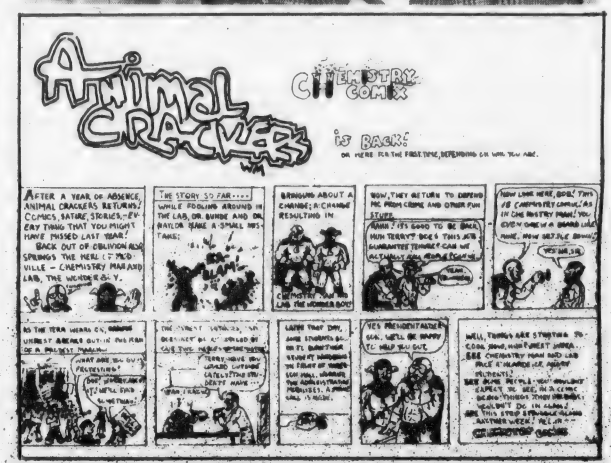
New year for publications

The staffs of the MC ident publications,The ilhowean, The Highland cho, and Impressions are eady at the grindstone eparing for the 80-81 ar.

The Chilhowean is the C yearbook. This year's itor, Sidney Bright, stated, am planning to improve e quality of The Chilhow-n."

There are about 13 ople on the staff. Even ough the yearbook does come out until the end the year, the staff is busy taking pictures of the fall activities and organizing class photos.



The Chilhowean is subsidized by the school and therefore works within a limited budget. In order to provide a nicer yearbook, there will be several fund raising drives throughout the year.

Tom Hudson, editor of the Highland Echo said, "This year's Echo is going to be a different type of college campus newspaper."

The Highland Echo is published weekly and is free of charge to the students. There are about 15 students currently on the staff. However, they still need someone to do typing. Anyone interested should contact Tom Hudson or Mary Lowry.

Impressions is the college literary magazine that publishes poems and some prose submitted by the students. Dave Widner, editor, asks that any student wanting work published in Impressions should contact him.

The question of what do about Carnegie Hall plagued the Administra- for some time now. dently, though, the inistration was late in coming to grips with the problem. It has been learned that Carnegie could have been closed last fall, but because students were already living in the dorm it remained open.

Carnegie, built in 1910, is one of the oldest buildings on campus. Six years later it was destroyed by fire and rebuilt that same year.

CIV is music to the ears

On Tuesday, September 30, there was a welcome change of pace when Frieda and Stephen Manes presented a program of pieces for four-hand piano. The Manes' opened the recital with a performance of Schubert's lively Marche Caracteristique in C Major, Op. 121, No. 1 (D. 886). Other pieces included Schubert's Fantasy in F Minor, (D. 940); Persichetti's Concerto for Piano, Four Hands (1952); and Dvorak's Slavonic Dance in A-flat Major, Op. 72. Brahm's Sixteen Waltzes, Op. 39 ranged from light and quick to slow and dignified. The closing number of the evening was Mendelssohn's Allegro Brillant, Op. 92.

Scots sting Wasps

The Maryville College Fighting Scots football team came from behind to capture their nineteenth straight home victory against the Wasps of Emory and Henry.

Maryville's Kevin Skipper ran for 152 yards on 26 carries during the game. Skipper is currently the number 1 rusher in the NCAA Division III with a 154 yards per game average. Another Scot running back, freshman Chris Stanfill, had a fine day gaining needed yardage on key plays.

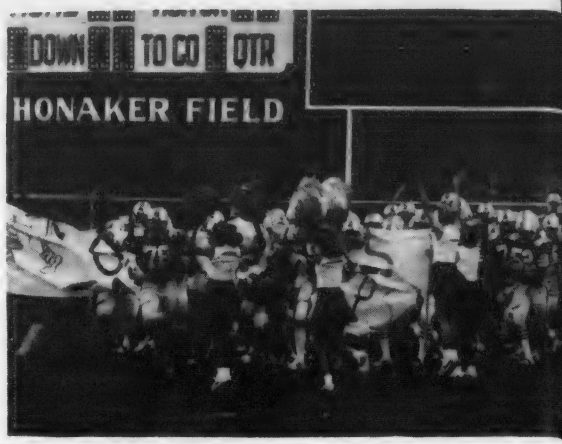
Although Skipper and Stanfill both played key roles in the victory, it was not just a 2 man show. According to coach Dan Zaneski, the win was a total team effort. "Our young team is showing signs of growing up," said Zaneski. "I was pleased to see the strong defensive effort. They hung in there and started putting things together and came up with some big defensive plays to turn this game around."

Six fumble recoveries and 2 interceptions were a few of the big plays the Scots' defensive team came up with during the game.

Emory and Henry scored first, driving 63 yards in 14 plays during the first series of the game. The Wasps missed their extra point attempt leaving the score at 6–0 with 8 minutes left in the first quarter.

The remaining series of plays for both teams during the opening quarter ended with turnovers on fourth down punts.

In the second quarter, however, Maryville got on the scoreboard twice. The first score occurred when the Scots took an EH punt at the 50 yardline. Skipper ran for 15 yards, quarterback Bob Boda ran for 9, Stanfill for 4, 2 more short runs by Skipper, a penalty on Emory and Henry, and a 10 yard touchdown pass from Boda to Gene Wheatly tied the score at 6–6. Bruce Lane converted the extra point and Maryville took the lead for good. The second score in the quarter was a 24 yard field goal by Lane, that the result of an Emory and Henry fumble on their own 14.



Emory and Henry's only scoring threat in the second quarter was a missed field goal from 30 yards out that was the result of a Maryville fumble on the Wasp's 40.

The Scots went in at halftime with a 10–6 lead over the Wasps.

Tim Topham caught the Wasps' Marty Browder for an 11-yard loss that took them to their own 9 yard line. The Scots defense forced EH to punt out. Taking the punt on the Wasps' 43, the Scots got down to the 20 on a Stanfill run. Failing to move the ball much farther, the Scots settled for a 35 yard field goal from Lane.

In the fourth quarter the Wasps had 3 more drives that were halted by turnovers. The first occurred 8 yards out from the goal when James Neely recovered an EH fumble. The next was a Peter Barron interception of a Wasp pass at the Maryville 27. The final turnover happened when Topham intercepted a pass with 3 minutes remaining in the game.

The next game for the Scots is Saturday at home against Hampden-Sydney.

The MC Fighting Scots tear onto the field and into a 13-6 v tory over a well "bee-hived" EH Wasp squad last Saturday.

Soccer Scots split scores

The Scots lost a disappointing soccer match to Johnson Bible College, 4–3; and came from behind to tie Tennessee Temple 2–2, last week.

MC jumped to a 3–1 lead in the first half against JBC last Wednesday on goals by Ken Davidson, Scott Jones, and Glenn Stout. Unfortunately, the Scots played charitably in the second half, allowing 3 goals, including the tying score with 29 seconds left in regulation. The deflated Scots could do nothing in the overtime periods, and a defensive error allowed the visitors to notch the winning tally.

The MC lethargy continued through most of the first half against Temple on Saturday, as the Scots fe behind 2–0. However, th second half saw a renewe team take the field. Shi Tanaka and Scott Jone both got their second goa of the year to knot th score. That's the way i ended as the overtim periods produced no scor

The defensive play o sweeper Andy Steinbec was stellar, and Ed Davalo was effective in controllin midfield. Tanaka and Jone both gave fine performa ces. Goalkeeper Tim Fitzgerald was again splend in the nets, making seven key saves in both game

The Scots embark on 4–game road stretch befor facing UT here on Hom coming weekend, Octob 25.

Lady V-ballers keep busy

The Lady Scots felt the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat this past week as they won a big match against MTSU, but dropped four to other division I schools, making their season record 8–4.

MTSU and ETSU traveled to Maryville earlier this week for a tri-match. Maryville faced a tough MTSU team. They lost the first game 12–15, but came back to win the next two, 15–7, 15–6. Coach Sharon Brown was very pleased with her team's performance.

The V-ballers didn't fare as well against ETSU. East Tennessee's offense was more than the Lady Scots could handle, and they were defeated 15–5, 15–5.

This past Thursday, the volleyball team traveled to the Univ. of Tenn. at Martin for the UTM Invitational Tournament. The Lady Scots' first match was against U.T. Martin. They lost both games 15–10, 15–8. The Lady Scots never seemed to get off the ground. They had a hard time getting their offense going, too.

The next match was against Mississippi State. The Ladies won the first game 15–10, but they were defeated the next two games, 15–9, 15–7.

Their last game was against Jackson State. The V-ballers lost both of these games 15–9, 15–4.

This past weekend was a let down for the Lady Scots, because they felt that they could have defeated any team in the tournament. But, the Lady Scots are known as a team which doesn't give up. It is still early in the season, and the V-ballers hope to use this weekend as a learning experience.

Tuesday, the Lady Scots will host Carson-Newman and Bryan College in a tri-match; and Thursday, they will travel to Covenant College. This weekend they'll travel to Virginia for the Emory and Henry Invitational.

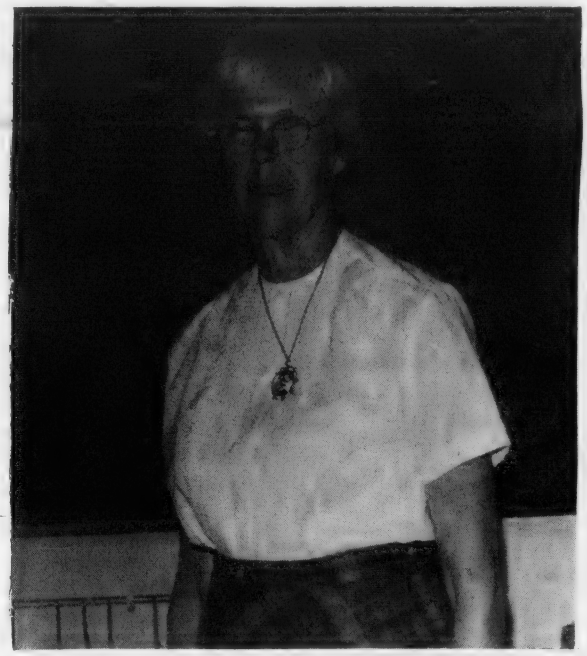
Stevenson assumes position as religious coordinator

by Ruth Reese



"Religion is search for finding out what is meaningful to me," says Margaret Stevenson, the new Religious Co-ordinator for MC. Mrs. Stevenson will be working with the Worship and Religious Programs Committee in co-ordinating activities with the community, such as finding ministers to conduct vesper services.

Students will find Mrs. Stevenson a comfortable person to talk with, largely due to an open mind and an intriguing personality. At 68 years old, she hikes in the Smokies 5 to 6 days a week, a total of 3000 miles a year. Having hiked virtually all the trails in this area, she serves as an unofficial guide to the Smoky Mountains. Although she first started hiking as a Campfire Girl, it was after her three children were older that she started on her present regimen. She says hiking keeps her in shape and closer to nature at the same time. She loves wildflowers and knows most of them by name. (Even on days she can not hike, she takes walks around the neighborhood.)

Mrs. Stevenson also enjoys letter-writing and reading which goes along well with her hiking. After a long walk, she says that it's nice to be able to sit down with a good biography. Homemaking is another favorite activity, especially shopping, which she does with her knapsack. Afterall, it's good practice for hiking.

Mrs. Stevenson, who teaches the Sr. High class at New Providence, says she is looking forward to working with college students. She believes there is a need for students to talk to someone older whom they can trust. "Life can just open up for them when they begin to hear new ideas and beliefs," she says.

She mentioned the importance of exploring one's own faith by thinking it through oneself. Although she talks of accepting even the narrow-minded person, she believes that a person becomes blocked in when he says he will never change. She says, "It's valuable to MC students to understand people of all faiths, not just the Christian religion."

Margaret Stevenson is looking forward to working with MC students.

MC Board directs attention to campus

by David Mitchell

The Maryville College Board of Directors will hold its fall meeting October 16 to 18 here at the college.

On Thursday, Oct. 16, the Student Affairs Committee of the Board will hold an open forum in 201 Fayerweather from 4 to 6 PM. Students and faculty members are urged to attend and air their views.

Other Board committees will also convene on Thursday, but these meetings are not open to the public.

On Friday, Oct. 17, the Board will begin its regular meetings at the House in the Woods, and will conclude Saturday. Friday at 5 PM the Board will dedicate the Jane Savage Fiction Room. All are invited to the ceremony and a reception will follow.

During its three day meeting here at MC, the 27 member Board will act on a variety of issues including alumni citations and honorary degrees.

Recently, the Synod of the South of the United Presbyterian Church U.S.A. appointed two new members to the MC Board of Directors. Mr. Tutt Bradford, owner and publisher of the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times, has previously served on the Board (1974), and has been named Man of the Year two times in Maryville (1958, 1973).

Mr. Daniel M. Sullivan is new to the Board this year. He is the president of Frost & Sullivan, a New York City consulting firm for international businesses.

The Maryville College Board of Directors meets twice each year. Their next meeting will be this spring.

Dunaway talks at CIV

by Jeana Webb

"I am deeply concerned about the problems of East Tennessee and of our entire country and feel that we need new leadership in Congress to solve these problems." These are the words of Dave Dunaway who is the Democratic candidate for Congress in the 2nd district of Tennessee.

Dave Dunaway was the guest speaker for CIV on Wednesday, October 8. He gave an interesting speech, although some of the students found it hard to agree with some of his statements.

Most of the speech was spent comparing his campaign promises to his opponent's, the eighth term Congressman John Duncan.

Mr. Dunaway believes that we should start finding other fuel resources and quit relying so heavily on foreign oil. He believes nuclear power would work if it were more controlled.

Probably one of the biggest beefs MC students have had this year is with the food service. It has been a great source for discussion and debate (the "Kitchen Debate"). It was a topic of discussion at the Administrative Forum a few weeks back and will probably be brought up at this afternoon's students affairs forum with MC Board members.

Questions of quality and quantity are brought up -- are we really getting our money's worth? I believe we are. Each student pays $1.78 per day for the food we get here. That's pretty inexpensive.

However, many students literally throw their money away by tossing their food down the hopper. Other students waste their money by not picking up after themselves -- leaving their trays and trash for dining hall employees to pick up. This costs money.

Granted, the food isn't always superb, but what do you want for $1.78 per day? Also, Mr. Powell has been a lot more helpful and concerned than the past food managers.

It boils down to this. If we want exceptional food, we're gonna have to pay exceptional prices. Are we willing to pay more to get more? If so, let's speak up, but let's not turn it into something such as this --

It is the near future. MC students are protesting the food service by rallying in front of Anderson Hall and pulling the red stickers off the back of their I.D. cards. The college administration is in a frenzy.

"Dr. Anderson, there's a call for you on line one."

"Please don't bother me now, Donna. I'm in a frenzy."

"But Dr. Anderson, it's Mr. McDonald -- the call you've been waiting for."

"Oh, yes indeed! Thank you, Donna. Put him on please.

"Mr. McDonald? This is Wayne Anderson. Yes. Nice of you to call back so soon. Yes, we've thought about your offer to provide a food service for Maryville College and I believe we are going to take you up on it.

"Certainly, We have a list of your stipulations and we are acting upon them now. Yes. Well, at least some of them. Mr. McDonald, if you'll give me a chance to explain. Ron? Okay, Ron. . . . Well, we here at Maryville are indeed desperate for a highly popular food service, we know you can provide it, and I know the students won't object to paying $11.78 a day, but we feel some of the contract terms are, shall I say, a bit demanding.

"Oh, yes! We have agreed to meet several of your stipulations, Ron. To begin with, the college Business Office is now accepting bids to install the golden arches over the gate on Court Street. Yes, indeed. Secondly, you have been named to the college Board of Directors, and thirdly, Mayor McCheese will assist Skeeter Shields in announcing the football games.

"However, as desperate as we are, and even though we at Maryville College have 161 years of pride and effective education behind us and we're looking 'Toward Century III,' we will not place a sign stating 'Thousands and Thousands Served' on Anderson Hall. Nor will we change the name of the MC Board of Directors to the 'McBoard of Directors.'

"No, now hear me out, Ron. We've got principles to uphold here. Do you actually think we'd name someone like the Hamburglar as the Dean of Students? And as for having a group called 'McDonald's McDarlings' to escort prospective diners around, you've filpped your little red wig.

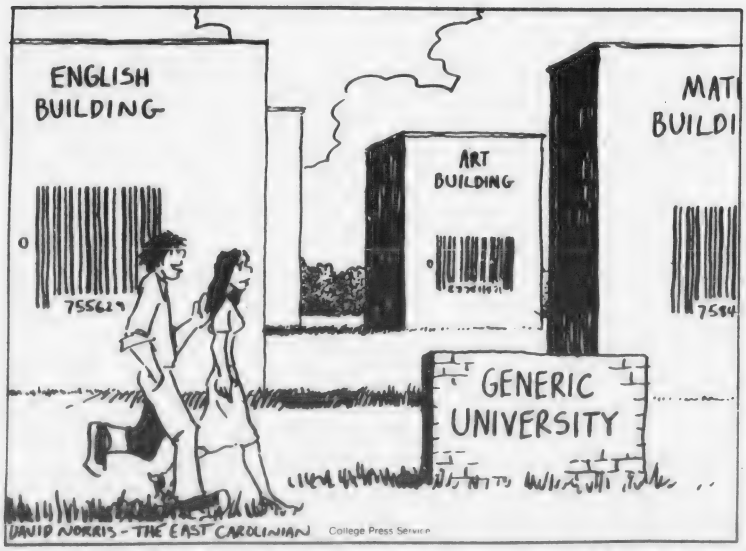
"And not only that, but we at Maryville College flatly refuse to change the school colors to Ketchup and mustard, or the school fight song to 'Send in the Clowns.'

"I beg you pardon? Um hmmm. I see. Well then, Ron. . . . Mr. McDonald? Okay, Mr. McDonald. . . the deal's off. Now it's not as if I didn't think this thing would work -- I just didn't want any of us looking like buffoons. Hello? Mr. McDonald, are you there?

"Well. . . . Donna, I'm off the phone now. Who have I got waiting to see me?"

"Uh, there's a king out here to see, you Dr. Anderson."

"A king? Oh, no. . .another fine pickle we've gotten ourselves into. . . ."



-----Letters to the Editor----------

Dear Editor,

A situation has developed in the CIV programs that is an increasing source of embarrassment to the College. Specifically, many of those who attend CIV feel at liberty to leave whenever they want. This is, simply put, rude. Those who leave early, moreover, seem to think they are getting CIV credit simply because they turn in their CIV attendance cards. On the contrary, cards turned in early are not counted as a CIV attendance.

The credit/attendance policy for CIV is as follows. CIV attendance cards will be distributed during the first fifteen minutes of the program. No attendance cards will be accepted prior to the end of the program unless there are extentuating circumstances that previously have been made known to the CIV committee. This seems to be a resonable expectation since CIV attendance is used for you would not leave a regular class early without first clearing it with the professor.

New whodunnit in Thaw

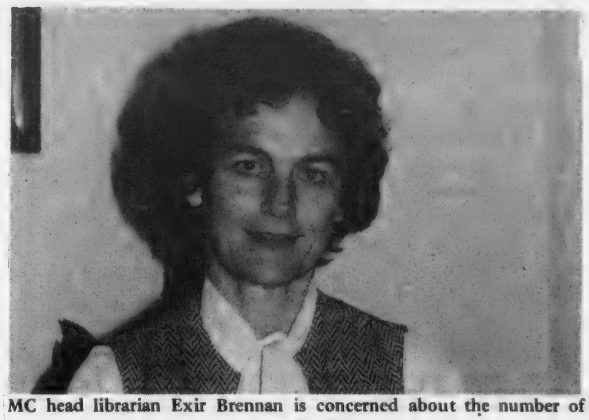
by Tommy Brown

Suppose a person is in the library and has been working on a paper for an hour or so. When he leaves, he forgets to replace the book he has been using and walks out of the library with it. Back in his room, he finds the book and puts it on his desk, fully meaning to return it. After a week or so the book is covered with papers and soon forgotten.

According to Mrs. Exir Brennan, head librarian of the Lamar Memorial Library, this incident occurs frequently. She feels that a majority of book thefts are not actually done on purpose, but rather as a result of forgetfulness.

However, the result of this accidental theft could be considered criminal. Brennan said, "The cost of replacing just one book could cost up to $40. This includes the price of the book and the hours of staff time involved." Magazines and pages from books and encyclopedias are also expensive to replace. Mrs. Brennan said, "It can cost up to $5 to replace one page of an encyclopedia. To replace a $2 magazine it could cost up to $10 or more."

Mrs. Brennan did not want to stress her point in terms of money, but it must be looked at when one considers the amount of money it would take to replace everything that has been taken from the library. The number of books and magazines that have been taken from the library is astounding. According to Mrs. Brennan, out of just one department (books concerning a certain area of interest like business) 75% of the 1979 copyright dates are missing. In magazines, within a period of 12 months, 89 volumes of bound periodicals were taken.



The reasons why people take the books or forget to return them are not known to Mrs. Brennan. She feels that laziness and ignorance are major reasons. She said, "I've seen so many frustrated people in the library who can't find what they want. They've looked in the card catalog and found the book there. When they look on the shelf, it's not there. Then they come to me or a library assistant and ask for help. We look in the shelf list and see that it is marked missing."

The shelf list is a file listing every book in the library. When inventory is taken each year, the cards of the missing books are marked. Usually 2 years are allowed before the card is pulled from the file. The reason the cards in the card catalog are not marked as to whether they are missing or not is because up to 8 cards would have to be marked for each book and time wise that is not possible.

Mrs. Brennan realizes that books and magazines are not always easy to locate in the library. Books may be on permanant reserve, which Mrs. Brennan is slowly doing away with, or they may be in the fiction area, which is in a beautiful room in the back of the building. Periodicals can be in 9 different sections of the library. As frustrating as it is to find the books needed for research, it can be even more frustrating if, after a long search, you discover the book missing.

Book theft is a menace to the educational function of Maryville College and any school. Mrs. Brennan said, "We can put up the gate and check book bags but the only way to change people is to raise the consciousness of all of us as to what to do about missing material." What we can do is to become more careful, less forgetful, and make people aware of the results of book theft.

If you look in your room and find a book—return it. For books overdue, the library will offer an amnesty week sometime this year during which no fine will be charged.

MC head librarian Exir Brennan is concerned about the number of books and periodicals missing from the library.

Mr. Dunaway stated that, particularly in East Tennessee, we should begin to rely on coal which is best obtained through stripmining. This issue prompted several students to disagree with him. Dunaway believes that there are too many restrictions and regulations placed on the stripminers, and that the government needs to remove these restrictions so we can get to the coal locked in the ground. When pressed about this during the question/answer period, he said that he was for restoration of the mountains and went on to tell about how he won an award for writing an environmental paper on pollution.

Mr. Dunaway is from LaFollette, Tennessee.

Scots down H-S 24-7

by Steve Arnold

On a perfect fall day for football, the Maryville College Scots extended their home winning streak to twenty games as they defeated Hampden-Sydney, the pre-season pick to win the O.D.A.C., by a score of 24-7.

The Scots, after taking the opening kickoff, marched 80 yards in 8 plays as Bob Boda passed 10 yards to Tony Fletcher, and after the Bruce Lane kick the Scots led 7-0. It was not until 3 minutes, 55 seconds left in the first quarter that there was another score as Lane kicked a 23 yard field goal and the Scots led 10-0. Hampden-Sydney wasted no time in their comeback attempt. Only 2 minutes after the Lane field goal, Hampden-Sydney running back Jim Jones broke three tackles and scampered 52 yards for the first and only score for the Tigers. After the kick, they trailed by only three points, 10-7.

That lead was taken care of in the second period as Scots' quarterback Kevin Bradley pitched out to running back Don Sawyer and he squirted through the left side, put himself in high gear and dashed into the end zone for 6 more Scots points. The point after was missed and the Scots led 16-7. Sawyer took over in the second period for the injured Kevin Skipper. Hampden-Sydney put on a late scoring drive until Tim Topham intercepted a pass on the 10 yard line and the Scots held on to lead at halftime 16-7.

In the third period, neither team could muster a drive. With 4 minutes left in the period, Gill Sallade picked off his first of two interceptions, ran it back five yards and the offense took over. With 1 minute, 19 seconds left in the period, the Scots had the ball on the one yard line. Vincent Clemmons squirted through for another Scots touchdown. Deciding to go for two points instead of one, Boda pitched out to Clemons and while running right, Clemons stopped and threw back in the other direction in the end zone to Boda. The Scots then led 24-7 and held off a late scoring drive by Hampden-Sydney. Sallade picked off his second pass of the day and the Scots held on for their second straight victory.

In the statistic field, MC had 21 first downs to H-S 10. MC rushed 67 times for 376 yards and Sawyer carried the ball for the Scots 9 times for 101 yards. Chris Stanfill carried for 92 yards. H-S rushed 36 times for 167 yards. MC passed 17 times with 6 completions with 1 interception for 63 yards. H-S passed for 48 yards completing 6 out of 17 with 3 interceptions. H-S lost 3 fumbles, the Scots lost 1. MC punted 6 times for a 31 yard average while H-S had 7 punts for an average of 38 yards. MC had 12 penalties that cost them 180 yards while H-S lost 76 yards in 8 penalties.

MC stands at 4-1 in the O.D.A.C. The Scots travel to Southwestern at Memphis on Oct. 18 and return home Oct. 25 for Homecoming against Millsaps.

MC goes head to head with H-S in Saturday's 24-7 Scots' football triumph.

Lady Scots are awesome

by Birdie Hill

The Lady Scots volleyball team is on an 8—game winning streak and can proudly boast a 16—5 record. In home games this past week, the V—ballers played Bryan and Carson—Newman. The Lady Scots could never really put it all together in their match against Bryan, and they were defeated 15—4, 15—11.

The Lady Scots played Carson—Newman in their next match. They won the first game 16—14, but lost the second, 14—16. They came back and won their last game 15—4, also winning the match.

Coach Brown stated, "We started to finally find ourselves in the last Carson—Newman game. It was a disappointing loss to Bryan. It was our first division III loss of the season."

Later in the week, the team traveled to Lookout Mountain in Chattanooga to play Covenant and Tennessee Temple. The Lady Scots won both matches. They defeated Covenant 15—9, 15—11; and Temple 15—5, 15—12.

This past weekend the volleyball team traveled to Virginia for the Emory and Henry Invitational Tournament. Not only did the V—ballers come away with the first—place trophy, they did not lose a match.

The Ladies' first match was with Liberty Baptist. They easily won the 1st game 15—6, but lost the 2nd game 10—15. They came back and stomped Liberty 15—1.

Next, the V—ballers played Concord. They defeated them 15—5, 15—4. Their 3rd game was against Virginia Intermont, winning 15—8, 15—7.

The wins brought the Lady Scots to the semi—finals against Lynchburg. They defeated them 15—2, 15—11. This win advanced them to finals with Concord, a team that had been beaten by MC earlier. The V—ballers won 15—5, 15—12, and came home with a first—place trophy.

Senior captain Carol Neal was injured early in the second game and was out the rest of the tournament. Outstanding performances were given by Sandy Rabun, Dee Dee Chapman, and Donna Owens.

Coach Brown was very pleased with the team's victorious weekend. She stated, "I felt we were the best team there. We knew if we played well we could win".

This week the team travels to Bryan to play Bryan and Covenant. Friday the team has a home game against Tusculum and Lees McRae.

1-1 for Soccer Scots

by Mike Weiss

The Soccer Scots dropped a 3—1 decision tc Bryan College last week, but came back on Saturday to earn their first win of the year, dumping the Blount County Booters, 2—1.

Ken Davidson gave the Scots a 1—0 lead against Bryan in Dayton, Tn., with his second goal of the year. That was all for MC however, as the hosts came back with three goals to win.

The Scots met their old rivals, the Booters, in a benefit night game at Everett Field in Maryville. A fairly large crowd saw MC jump on top in the opening minutes when Ed Davalos rifled a rebound past the opposing goalkeeper. The Scots overcame a rather lackluster performance thanks mainly to the defensive work of sweeper Andy Steinbeck and pointman Tom Walker. Goalkeeper Tim Fitzgerald thwarted many Booter scoring opportunities; and finally right wing Ben Stabley made it 2—0 by heading in his first goal of the season. MC trainer Mike Sabotelli, playing for Blount County, scored to make it somewhat hectic in the final minutes, but the Scots hung on to win.

MARYVILLE, THIS IS IT!

Homecoming '80

MARYVILLE, THIS IS IT!

Homecoming week is upon us here at MC. Today and tomorrow are filled with events associated with Homecoming.

The events involve students, alumni, and the entire Maryville community. The Homecoming events began yesterday evening with a piano recital given by Ms. Sallie Schoen in the FAC Music Hall. They continue today with a meeting of the Alumni Board of Directors in the Proffitt Dining Room.

At 4 PM the Homecoming Parade will grace the streets of Maryville. Consisting of a number of floats and to the music of the MC Highlander Band, the parade will begin here at the campus, travel through town, and return to the football field.

The Homecoming Bonfire and Pep Rally will be held at 8 PM by the P.E. Building. Led by the cheerleaders and with music from the band, this should really pep up school spirit.

Saturday is the "big day." At 8 AM the annual Scots Road Race will be held, starting at the P.E. Building. The race is open to anyone with the desire to run.

Alumni registration for Homecoming begins at 9 AM and runs to 2 PM. This will be held in the lobby of the P.E. Building. Also beginning at 9 PM is the Alumni-Faculty Coffee in room 162A of the P.E. Building. Everyone is invited to come. At 10 AM, the MC Scots soccer team will take on the University of Tennessee soccer team on the field behind the P.E. Building.

The events continue at 12 noon with the Homecoming Rally. This rally, which will be held next to Honaker Field, will include live entertainment and other activities. Lunch will be served to those with lunch tickets. Prepaid lunch tickets are $1.50.

At 2 PM, the height of the week's activities begins when the MC Scots football team takes to the field against Millsaps. During halftime, the Homecoming Queen for 1980 will be crowned, prizes will be awarded for the parade floats, and door prizes will be awarded.

After the game, the Honaker Club will hold its annual meeting. From 5 PM to 6:30 PM a student, alumni, and community dinner will be served in Pearsons Dining Hall. The cost will be $3.00 per person at the door.

It will be quite a weekend of activities. Let's all get out there and enjoy ourselves and shout, "Go Scottie Dogs! Arf! Arf!"

About the Candidates

Jill Flickenger, a physical education major from Maryville, TN, enjoys all types of sports, including raquetball and running. She is the intramural director for women this year and participates in intramurals herself. She especially enjoys teaching a non-credit course for small children and their parents. She has been a member of Phi Epsilon Rho, the Elections Committee, and the Chilhowean staff. She was also a representative to the Homecoming Court in her junior year.

A business major from St. Petersburg, FL, Kim DeMaat enjoys sports and sharing experiences with her friends. She has participated in cheerleading her sophomore and senior years, as well as intramurals, the Senior Committee, the Elections Committee, and Lloyd Hall Judicial Coundil. Next summer, she plans to marry Les Barron, and afterwards, pursue a career in Orlando, FL.

Wendy Magee, from Metuchen, NJ, has an individualized major in science journalism. In the past, she has worked for both The Highland Echo and Impressions. She is also currently vice-president of Lloyd Hall. As health and fitness are important to her, she is active in karate, dance, and exercise programs. She prefers the outdoors and would eventually like to work with the environmental sciences.

A political science major with an emphasis in psychology from Eau Gallie, FL, Mari Ann Masch is involved in intramurals and takes lessons in karate, ballet, and jazz dance. For the past two years, she has been an RA in Davis Hall. Mari enjoys reading the classics, being outdoors, and associating with other people. She would like to work with people to help solve the problems of today's society, Mari intends to work with the Peace Corps in Africa after graduation, and later obtain a masters degree in social work.

Nancy Freudenthal is an interpreting major from Nashville, TN. Her activities during the past four years include the Sign Language Club, Art Club, and all types of intramurals. In her spare time. Nancy likes photography, and horseback riding. In addition to all of this, she received an honorary resolution for working with a State representative during Interim last year. For the future, Nancy wants to work with the deaf as a counselor and advisor for vocational plans.

News from a Board

by Barb Booker

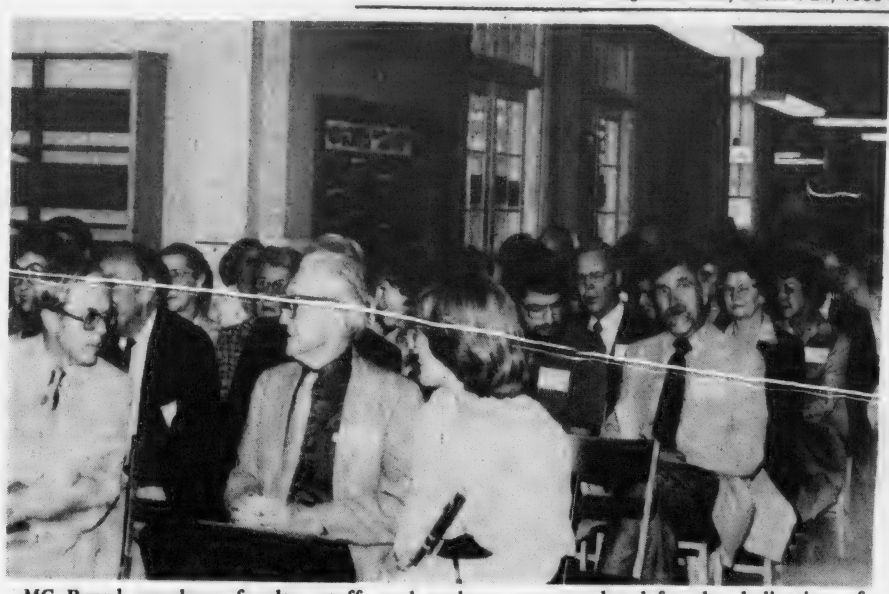
The MC Board of Directors conducted its semi-annual fall meeting last weekend here at the college.

The Board began its committee meetings on Thursday, Oct. 16. One of these committees, the Student Affairs Committee, held an open forum to discuss issues pertinent to students.

The meeting, held in 201 Fayerweather, was attended by the committee, Deans Strickland and Richardson, and five students. Once again, the topic of discussion revolved around food, and the main concern aired was one of quantity.

Dean Strickland stated that he observed that "the quantity issue is a real issue," and that the students have handled the situation in a "mature way." Mr. Strickland also stated that the administration was looking into several plans to supplement the meal program and hoped to reach a decision soon.

Both the students and the deans commended Joe Powell for being a help in opening up communications between students and the food service and for his genuine concern for student needs.



Also discussed was the fate of Carnegie Hall. Dr. Jim Calloway, chairman of the committee, stated that no plans were in order, but that about $500,000 would be needed to refurbish the dorm both structurally and cosmetically. He also said that the college Board and the administration would like to preserve Carnegie, but demolition was not entirely out of the picture.

In response to a question about what would be done if there was a substantial increase in new students next year, Dr. Calloway stated that the Board felt that the first step would be a "liberalization of off-campus living."

Also discussed was the possibilty of the use of Willard House as a pub and the presence of student and faculty representatives on the Board of Directors.

On Friday, Oct. 17, the Board began its regular meetings in the House in the Woods. At 5 PM, the Board attended the dedica-

Meet the Mystic Mansions

by Janet Helwig

For those of you, freshmen and otherwise, who haven't noticed several unoccupied buildings on campus, introductions should be made for Willard House, the Infirmary, and the Alumni gymnasium.

Willard House is the once beautiful three-story brick structure located beside Lloyd Dorm. The Infirmary, officially known as the Ralph Max Lamar Memorial Hospital, rests forlorn and lost beside Sutton Science Center. Lastly, the Alumni Gymnasium is the white, rambling structure located immediately behind Bartlett Hall. If you haven't been particularly aware of these buildings, it could be because they are partially shrouded behind trees, but probably because they are even more shrouded behind a cloud of obscure mysticism.

Willard House, built in 1890, was erected as a memorial to Dr. Sylvester Willard by his wife, and was originally designed to be the home of the Maryville College President. The house did indeed serve as the President's home from 1890 untill around 1950. The Dean of Women and other college notables then lived there until the seventies, at which time it was vacated. Earlier, the Development Office had been housed there for a short period of time, and a group of students also lived in the house for one term.

The Infirmary was built around 1910, and was used exclusively as an infirmary until the mid-seventies, when it was vacated due to disrepair.

The Alumni Gymnasium, the newest of the three buildings, was constructed in 1923, and served as the college athletic facility until 1971. From 1947 until 1954, when MC didn't have a chapel due to the destruction by fire of the Voorhees Chapel, the gym was also used for Daily Chapel, Commencements, etc.

As always however, times change, and the the building still projects an air of prestige, as its whiteness stands out in marked contrast against a bright autumn sky. The surrounding trees and shrubbery also seem to guard the "shell" as if it is a fragile legend, weakened by the passing of years.

The Infirmary too, looks a bit lonesome and hollow in the shadow of the relatively modern Sutton Science Center. The aging "hospital" is a two-story brick building with dark windows, dusty screens, and a creaky, unstable porch. The wood railings and steps leading to the entrances are badly in need of paint. Forgotten as it may be, the Infirmary also, is still surrounded by protective trees, and freshly-pruned shrubbery.

Willard House, like the Infirmary, is also in bad need of physical renovation. The leaf-covered porch is surrounded by unstable wooden railings that could use a few coats of paint. The interior of the house is still partially carpeted, but is only sparsely furnished. Nonetheless, this building also manages to maintain its artistic, mysterious reputation. Its size, three stories high with over changes have left their inevitable mark on these three

Those crazy campus games

When you began college this fall you probably did not fear being killed by your classmates. Surprisingly enough, there were students who did, and who actually looked forward to the challenge of trying to avoid the assassin. Insane, yes; but not really dangerous. These students are playing a new fad game called "Killing As An Organized Sport."

The game, which takes its acronym–KAOS–from the "Get Smart" television series, is derived from the 1953 science fiction novel by Robert Sheckley, The Seventh Victim. Players track down people on a hit list and are required to "kill" a minimum number of people weekly to stay in the game. The object of the game is to "kill" all of the players until there is but one survivor. The "murders" can take place in such surprising places as the shower, but classrooms and crowds are off limits.

The game enjoyed brief popularity at Oberlin College in the late sixties, but was then basically forgotten until 1976, when some University of Michigan students revived the game. Today "(y)ou see the field growing faster and faster, " understated Jamey Adams, and editor at Games Magazine. There are any number of imitators coming out with other role-playing games involving gangsters, King Arthur, (and) science fiction." Another game, which is to debut in stores in October, is a game developed by Jim Dunnigan that is adopted from the popular television series "Dallas." Dunnigan explains that "each player takes a character from the show, except one person who is the director."

But why this interest in spending recreation time by playing games that require a lot of concentration? Gary Alan Fine, a University of Michigan sociologist, reasons that it is a desire of the student "to move away from passive intellectual activities, notably television." After 18 months of research on Dungeons & Dragons, a game based largely on the works of J. R. Tolkein, and four other fantasy games, Fine found that the appeal in the "science fiction subculture" was the opportunity to live out fantasies that would ordinarily be experienced passively.

Tom Columns

This week, I'm going to make a "vain" effort to steer clear of the light-hearted. I had several ideas for this week's installment – like sending Dean Richardson to 21st century MC and calling it "Jane in Wonderland." As an alternative, I'd like to offer a few thoughts about Homecoming.

"The Event" of the year is already upon us. The orange and garnet leaves shine brightly against Chilhowee's lofty mountains and the southern blue sky.

Sounds a bit mushy and trite, does it? Well, it's a feeling of sentimentality, and such a feeling toward all of these things is part of what Homecoming is all about.

Alumni return to "The Hill" at this time of the year to show that they are still Scots and haven't forgotten what Maryville College means to them, what it did for them, or what it stood (and still stands) for.

Many people love this place we call MC. Oh sure, many of us now are just itching to get out, but I imagine that as time passes, we will come to realize just how important Maryville College was to our personal development. MC alumni hold dear to their hearts not merely the fond memories of the campus and its aging buildings, but how this bunch of buildings, this campus, its life, its people, and its attitude have touched and become a part of their lives.

This past summer I had occasion to meet, and talk with at some length, Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, the modern day prophet of positive thinking. The conversation eventually worked its way around to where I was attending college.

Well, Dr. Peale was acquainted with Maryville and complimented me on my choice of institutions. He commented that MC was "very much in touch with the spirit."

I don't know how well Dr. Peale is acquainted with Maryville, but I do in a way believe he was correct. I don't think he meant (nor do I) that we are all a bunch of stand-on-our-soap-box-Bible-waving-fire-and-brimstone fanatics. Maryville is in touch with "the spirit" through its goals, its ideals, and its tradition.

The attitude of openness and concern, striving for excellence, and an atmosphere of close-knit friendship is present here at MC, and I believe that it is this that puts us in touch with "the spirit."

Certainly, there are financial problems, there are disciplinary problems on occasion – every institution has them. But in addition to these, Maryville College has principles.

Many of us come here believing that this place owes us something. All it owes us is what we pay for – an opportunity for education, facilities to aid this, food, and a room. That's it; that's what we pay for. But if we open up and realize the schooling, the friends, the fellowship and good times, "the spirit," that MC can and does offer us, we can enjoy and cherish these things in spite of ourselves.

Enough with the sermonizing and brochure material. Let us all enjoy this Homecoming weekend and its spirit, and come to understand the meaning of "Maryville, This is It!"

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (CPS) Students complaining about professors who procrastinate before posting grades have met their match: it took Brown University freshman Edmund Baldwin 135 years to get his grades delivered in the mail.

Brown's public information office reports that Baldwin's report card -- originally mailed from Providence to Baldwin in Stratford, N.H. in December, 1845 – only recently turned up at the Manchester, N.H. post office. Baldwin's great niece received the letter, and forwarded news of it to Brown officials.

With the report card was a receipt for fall semester tuition, which amounted to $46.25.

Baldwin's grades, the university adds, were excellent. However, he did not return to the school, opting instead to become a lawyer in his home state, and then to become a prospector in California. He died on his way west in 1848.

Letters to the Editor

Mr. Editor,

I have read your article on the apathetic attitude of the college students at Maryville College. I agree whole-heartedly with you. I have had the same feelings myself in my rage of anger towards the lack of college spirit and participation in different social, cultural, and educational opportunities that the college has offered. I myself was at one time an apathetic student, but I have found that I could make a bigger dent in the mind of others if I got involved. On the other hand, I can empathize with the apathy of the students.

Often, getting involved means the giving of oneself and time, and sometimes this is hard to do.

Also, getting involved can sometimes put added pressure on academics, which can result in expulsion. Everyone cannot be leaders and everyone cannot be followers, but I do think political issues such as the "draft" and "voting" should get a greater response than what it has been getting from the "intellectuals" at Maryville College. This is an election year, do we care?

Maryville College is a place where one can be a big fish in a little pond. Try going to U.T. and see what a minnow can do in a big sea.

A concerned student,
Vanessa Logan

Picnic in the Theatre

by Lois Boney

The Maryville College Playhouse cordially invites you to attend Picnic, November 7,8,13, and 14 at 8:15, and a special matinee on November 12 at 2:45. Join Mrs. Owens, her two daughters, her school teacher boarder, her neighbor Mrs. Potts, and all their friends as they prepare for a Labor Day picnic in 1953. Be there when a stranger enters the small town and changes the lives of the people he meets.

Picnic, by William Inge, opened on Broadway in 1953, winning the Drama Critics Award and Pulitzer Prize for literature. Interested in Freudian motivation, Inge sought the approval of psychiatrists before his plays were produced. "The emotional conflicts of Picnic," says Don Thomas, director of the Maryville College Playhouse, "concern the agression released by the women toward their men, particularly the drifter."

Featured in the production are Playhouse veterans and seniors, Allen Evitts, Lois Boney, Linda Wiley, Peggy Herbert, and Bill Thomas. Joining the seniors are juniors Tim Fitzgerald and Heidi Warner; sophomores Linda Trostle, Sarah (Pee Wee) DeLoach, and Mark Beyer; and freshman, Dottie Carson. The technical staff includes Assistant Director Frank Fiore, Technical Director Mark Beyer, Lighting Designer Mike Clarke, Costume Coordinator Beth Manire, Properties Mistress Ruth Reese, and Sound Engineer Kevin Crothers.

The price of student tickets is $2 and will be on sale during the production.

Dr. Richard Parke, tenor, presented his first recital as a faculty member at MC on Tuesday, October, 4, in the FAC Music Hall. The recital consisted of a Schubert song cycle, Die Schone Mullerin. Dr. Parke was accompanied by Mr. Robert Bonham. A reception held after the performance was sponsored by the MC chapter of Delta Omicron.

Mrs. Exir Brennan, Maryville College head librarian, recently accepted the position of faculty sponsor for the Chilhowean, the MC yearbook. Mrs. Brennan replaces Mr. Carroll Barger who had been faculty sponsor of the yearbook for the previous two years.

The appointment of Mrs. Brennan was unanimously approved by the members of the Publications Committee.

The Danish Turnover

The Danish Gymnastics team is coming to MC to perform on Wed., Oct. 29, at 7:30 p.m. in the P.E. building.

The Danish program will feature male and female gymnasts in colorful folk dances, gymnastics, acrobatic floor exercises, balance beam, vaulting, tumbling and other skilled movements.

The majority of the Maryville College program will be accompanied by classical and modern music. The folk dances will be performed to old Danish folk tunes and the gymnasts will be dressed in national costumes.

Members of the team serve without salary, and most have taken time from their work to perform on the tour. Danish gymnastic teams have been visiting the United States since the first tour was organized in 1939.

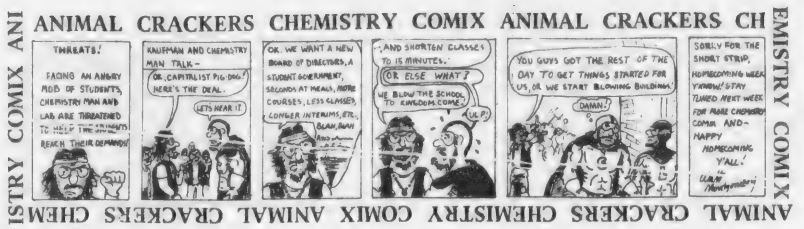
Doreen Dunn brings Broadway to MC

Doreen Dunn, the ALCOA Foundation affiliate artist, will share her talents in four visits to this area in the 1980-1981 academic year. Sponsored by the ALCOA Foundation, Ms. Dunn will be present Nov. 10-23, Jan. 9-15, April 1-14, and May 18-31.

Ms. Dunn has been acclaimed as "tops" and "intriguing" by several critics, including the Chicago Daily News. She was hailed as "a treasurable viola, spirited, vulnerable, and altogether winning" by the Chattanooga Times for her performance in Twelfth Night at the Clarence Brown Theater, Knoxville.

She graduated from Northwestern University in Chicago with an acting major and choreographed many summer stock productions.



Following her graduation, Ms. Dunn performed leading roles in various productions, such as Caesar and Cleopatra, The Three Musketeers, The Misanthrope, A Doll's House and Oh, Coward!

During her visit, Ms. Dunn will conduct "informances" to the local communities. An "informance" is an informal, entertaining performance that connects the artist directly to the audience, generally lasting 45 minutes.

Ms. Dunn and Affiliate Artists Inc., are eager to promote the interest and careers of young American performing artists.

If interested in an appearance by Ms. Dunn, contact Libby Rankin on campus or at 982-6412, or 546-6912.

Draft dodgers—tough time ahead

Resisters to participation in the military registration will probably start feeling the legal "heat" during October, according to a Selective Service System official.

The main priority of the Selective Service through October will be to get the 18- and 19-year-old non-registrants "into the data base."

The Selective Service normally identifies possible evaders to the Justice Department, who investigates and prosecutes them. "There is no way I can speculate what action the (Justice) department might take when it gets names from Selective Service," says Justice Dept. spokesman Dean St. Dennis. St. Dennis maintains that, without knowing what the case load might be, the Justice Department has not yet made any internal organizational moves to accommodate the added work.

Scattered reports indicate that the Carter Administration intends to defer energetic pursuit of evaders until after the November election. An anonymous "Selective Service official" was quoted in a July Wall Street Journal article as saying the government planned a "soft" approach toward non-registrants.

This report, however, prompted angered Selective Service Director Bernard Rostker to warn: "This is not Mickey Mouse. It's not 'ha ha' catch me if you can. A person who fails to register is a felon. Make no mistake about it. The kid who throws down the gauntlet to the government will be prosecuted."

Until then, however, the government is giving people the chance to register late.

Rumors that Selective Service plans to track evaders through Census Bureau, Social Security, and even school registration lists have been met by counterthreats. Census Bureau Director Vincent Barraba maintains that "information gathered through the Census Bureau will remain strictly confidential, as stipulated by law."

American Civil Liberties Union lawyer, David Landau, charges that using any other government lists would violate the Privacy Act of 1974. He promises the ACLU will sue if Selective Service makes the attempt. But Selective Service spokeswoman, Mary Ellen Levesque says her agency would seek a waiver of the Privacy Act "if it's really necessary."

"It would be premature," St. Dennis says, "to describe what the Justice Department will do when it gets evaders' names, regardless of how they're obtained." He points out that not all those cases turned over to the Justice Department would end up in trial.

Between July, 1964 and June, 1973, St. Dennis says, Selective Service referred to the Justice Department 186,711 names of possible draft law violators. Yet only about six percent of those were actually tried. Five percent of the total were ultimately convicted. Nearly 85 percent of the indictments during the era were dismissed before trial because the accused violators finally agreed to obey the law.

Active students at MC

by Mary Lowry

Boredom should not be part of your plans for the rest of the year unless, of course, you are a very apathetic person. The Student Activities Committee, renamed from Social Committee, is running in high gear planning activities for the year.

Shada Overton replaces Sharon Crane as director of the committee, and junior Vanessa Logan assumes Linda Wiley's position of Co-Chairperson. The committee consists of a representative from each dorm and each class plus any other students interested in campus activities, (about 20 students altogether).

The calendar of activities is made up by the students; Shada and Vanessa intervene with the administration for the approval of the activities.

So far the calendar for fall term has been flooded with student activities including two dances, two horror movies, a successful coffeehouse, a rollerskating party, and a hayride through Cades Cove.

Upcoming events consist of special Homecoming activities and a formal dance, and a Halloween dance and costume party.

The Student-Administrative forums that were started last year by Sharon Crane will be continued throughout the year. Other educational opportunities will be offered to the students, such as classes on CPR and "Student and the Law." These educational programs, according to Shada, "will help each student to develop new interests and give them a chance to broaden their horizons."

Long range projects that the committee has already begun working on are obtaining a bus for off campus activities and acquiring a current movie to be shown on campus. Plans in the wings include Winter and Spring formals. The committee hopes to continue with a dance or movie every weekend.

tion of the Jane Savage Fiction Room in Thaw Hall. Speakers included Dr. Harry Price and President Wayne Anderson. Mary MacPhee provided music on the flute, playing an Appalachian melody, "I Wonder as I Wander." A reception followed.

In full Board action, five persons were approved for alumni citations, six for honorary degrees, and Mr. John Magill and Mr. Earl Blazer were named honorary directors.

President Anderson announced to the Board that for the third year in a row, Maryville College has operated with a balanced budget.

Board chairman Carle Davis said, "I applaud the efforts of the College to achieve a balanced budget. It is a signal that the institution is well managed, and it is a spur to increased fund raising."

In regards to fund raising, Dr. Anderson reported that the past year's annual fund drive had raised a total of $2,087,186, just a fraction lower than last year's drive.

Also in full Board action, the MC faculty was commended in its cirriculum review effort. The Board also stated that it was pleased with the new MC staff changes.

One of the biggest issues to come down from the Board regarding student concerns was the addition of a second serving of entrees and desserts at dinner.

The college stated that it had no further funds to supply this, and the Board decided that it would be unfair to access the students for further funds, so several Board members donated the funds to provide this additional service.

The next full Board meeting will be in the Spring, 1981.

A note about Band

by Ed Brewer

The MC Band is starting out on a different note this year under the leadership of a new director, Mr. David Irwin, Jr. Mr. Irwin's priorities this year are to provide lively and enjoyable music for football games, be supportive of the teams, and prepare several wind ensemble performances during the course of the school year.

The band will march in the Homecoming parade tonight and participate in the half-time show. Also, a selection will be performed featuring the majorettes. A pep band will attend the final two home games of the season.

A January concert is planned that will feature American music from the turn of the century, primarily rags by Scott Joplin and marches by John Philip Sousa. It should be a fun and enjoyable concert. The date of the concert will be announced at a later time.

Mr. Irwin is "optimistic about the band and wind ensemble" this year. He encourages others to come and join the fun. It is not necessary to be a music major to be in the band. The band is meant to be, and can be, an enjoyable experience for everybody. There are 20 members at this time; and the more members that join, the more fun it will be for everyone involved. Practices are from 4:00 pm to 5:00 pm on Mondays and Fridays, and from 2:30 pm to 4:00 pm on Wednesdays. Anyone interested in becoming a part of this musical organization should contact Ed Brewer, Box 2074; or Mr. David Irwin in studio M in the Fine Arts Center.

Meet the MC Rah-Hahs

The 1980 MC Football Cheerleaders have been having a good season so far this year, and have plans to make it even better, according to rah-hah captain, Sissy Gravely.

The cheerleaders are using new cheers and chants this year, and even though they don't have new uniforms this year, Sissy says, "I think we have a whole new style."

As far as immediate activities are concerned, the rah-hahs plan to sell mums during Homecoming week, have a get-together with the football players before Friday's bonfire, and will be leading the cheers at the bonfire and Saturday's football game.

Later on this fall, the cheerleading squad will be involved with the selection of a basketball cheerleading squad.

The football cheerleaders practice on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays for about an hour and a half each time. They also spend a good deal of time painting signs and promoting school spirit.

"It's really a lot of work," says Sissy.

Ogden discusses future of athletic department

When Art Ogden came to MC last July from Kansas, he came to an Athletic Department in transition -- in the wake of coaching and administrative resignations, the addition of two varsity sports, men's soccer and women's softball, and the dropping of one, men's wrestling. Taking over for the resigned Billy Henry, Ogden has brought stability to MC athletics. The Highland Echo talked with the new A.D. last Tuesday.

T.H.E: What are your general impressions of Maryville College?

A.O: As an institution, I am extremely impressed with the academic integrity and the overall approach to the students that we have. As far as athletics is concerned, I feel that we are on the verge of having an overall outstanding program.

T.H.E: Does being both Athletic Director and assistant football coach create a somewhat awkward situation for you and (Head) Coach Zaneski?

A.O: It would be an awkward situation if Coach Zaneski and myself had not known each other for some time. It usually depends upon the individuals involved, and their personalities on a one-to-one level. He is my boss out on the football field, and in here, when it comes to athletic administration, I am the boss. We have no problems.

T.H.E: When will a baseball coach be hired?

A.O: Very, Very soon. It may be that by the time this interview is publihed, we will have one.

T.H.E: Are you aware of last year's turmoil in the Department, and if so, how do you think it has affected the program?

A.O: I don't really know all the intricasies and root problems of what happened last year. All I know is what I read in the newspaper, and what I picked up second and third hand. I can't help but believe that any crisis people have, and its results, depend upon how people react to it. I have to believe that if we handle a crisis situation in a positive manner, that positive things will result. I feel a lot of good came out of last year's situation, and I plan to follow up on those things.

T.H.E: How do you view the status of women's sports at MC?

A.O: The same way I view the status of men's sports. We are on the verge of building a solid, across the board program. If we have any increase or proliferation of sports, I would like to see them in the area of women's sports. Women's sports are just as important as any other aspect of the athletic program.

T.H.E: Do you have any long-term goals for the program at MC?

A.O: Yes. We have on our card, our placard, and our envelopes, "A winning Tradition." I'd like to see us build a winning tradition, so that people can associate Maryville's winning tradition in athletics with a winning tradition in athletics across the board. There are some other things that we need to do, some facilites that need to be expanded, and others that need to be built. As soon as football season's over, Dean (Bill) Strickland and I plan to put our heads together, and map out a strategy for the next few years.

T.H.E: You are also men's tennis coach. What do you see in store for the men's tennis team?

A.O: I really don't know that much about the men's tennis team, but I've heard a lot of good things about it. Along with my philosophy of wanting to produce outstanding teams, certainly we want to be representative in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference.

T.H.E: Why do you have a picture of Patton on your wall?

A.O: In this day and age, when there are so few heroes, I still cling to General Patton. At the risk of sounding trite, I like him behind my desk because I want him looking over my shoulder, to make sure I get the job done.

Southwestern stuns Scots

by Steve Arnold

What started out as a game of "Follow the Leader" ended with one team being a big leader as SAM won the game 39-16.

MC took the opening kickoff and marched 80 yards in 8 plays. Kevin Skipper ran in from 1 yard out, and after the Lane kick, the Scots led 7-0. SAM wasted no time as they also took their kickoff and marched 75 yards in 8 plays. Joe Cull ran in from 5 yds. out, and after the Andronlewick kick, the score was tied 7-7. MC got a 24 yard field goal from Lane and the Scots led 10-7. Then SAM got a 39 yard field goal from Andronlewick and the score was again tied, 10-10. SAM then scored on a 64 yard run by Cull, the kick failed and SAM led 16-10. SAM then scored on a fake field goal as Andronlewick threw 15 yards to Chip Kelley, the kick failed again, and SAM led 22-10. They scored again as Greg Peters passed to Mickey Mays for 17 yards. The extra point was good and SAM stretched its lead to 29-10. MC added a score before the half as Boda passed 28 yards to Avellino, the two pt. conversion failed, and MC trailed at halftime 29-16.

S'Western added a touchdown in the third period with Peters passing 13 yards to Cull and the conversion made the score 36-16. SAM added a 27 yard field goal by Andronlewick in the fourth period as SAM won 39-16.

In the statistics field, MC had 24 first downs to SAM's 21. MC rushed for 230 yds.; SAM rushed for 197. MC passed for 201 yards, hitting 17 out of 35 with 2 interceptions. SAM passed for103 yards hitting 11 out of 24 with 2 interceptions. MC fumbled 6 times losing 4; SAM fumbled 3, losing 1. MC lost 35 yards on 3 penalties: SAM lost 43 yds. on 3 penalties.

This Saturday, support the Scots as they host Millsaps in their 1980 Homecoming game. Game time 2:00. Pep rally and bonfire Friday night at 8:00.

Coach Dan Zaneski and his Fighting Scots were unable to down a persistent Southwestern team in Memphis last Saturday.

Soccer team suffers

by Mike Weiss

The Soccer Scots have not fared well as of late, as evidenced by two crushing losses last week, 6-0 to Tennessee Temple and 9-0 to East Tennessee State.

MC's offense has been non-existent, while beleaguered goalkeeper Tim Fitzgerald faced numerous one-on-one confrontations, which any goalie has a 50/50 chance, at best, of saving. The defense has been burned for a barrage of goals, but this is due in part to the lack of ball control by the midfield and forward line.

The young Scots have ample talent, but have been beset by an avalanche of injuries this year, their first of varsity competition. MC, 1-5-1, faces the hated UT Vols on Homecoming Weekend, when, as the cliche goes, "the won-loss record will be thrown out the window." The Scots came very close to upsetting UT last fall, playing to a 2-2 deadlock at Maryville. Game time is 10:00 A.M. behind the P.E. building.

Lady Scots—net results

by Birdie Hill

The Lady Scots' Volleyball team has had a short break from their busy schedule - a time for them to look back on their wins, and their 19-5 record.

Last Tuesday, the ladies traveled to Bryan College to play Bryan and Covenant College. Bryan had been beaten by Maryville in one match, and they came back to beat Maryville in another. Maryville stomped Bryan in both games 15-1, 15-4, and won the match.

Coach Sharon Brown was very happy with the win, saying, "The Bryan game was a big one for us. We played almost perfectly."

The V-ballers played Covenant in their next match. Covenant defeated MC in the first game 12-15, but the Lady Scots fought back and won the match 15-10,15-10.

Friday, Maryville was scheduled to play Lees-McRae and Tusculum, but both teams cancelled. The Lees-McRae game counted as a forfeit, bringing the Lady Scots' record to 19-5.

This week, the V-ballers will travel to Carson-Newman to play the Eagles and UTC. Thursday, they will depart for Milligan College for the Milligan Invitational Tournament. Sixteen teams will be competing from four different states. The Lady Scots won the tournament two years ago and were eliminated in the quarterfinals last year. We wish the volleyball team GOOD LUCK!

"Moonshining" seems to have been a popular synonym for a popula activity in the 1920's: courting. Professor Ellis, Librarian, was quo ted as saying,"It makes absolutely no difference to me how muc you young people moonshine, but the library is not th place to do it. You may sit together at the same table, bu you may not study off the same book"

Campaign '80

The Highland Echo

MARYVILLE COLLEGE, MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE

Vol. 66 No. 6 October 30, 1980

Decision '80— Trick or Treat?

(Editor's note: This week's Echo comes at an interesting time – Halloween and a Presidential election. This is the time of year when little children pretend to be ghosts and ghouls and go from door to door asking for goodies. 1980 being an election year, we're also nearing the end of the time when candidates pretend to be something they're not and go from town to town asking for votes. In an attempt to put forth a few issues in a clearer fashion than the candidates' presentations, political scientist Dr. Harry Howard offers the following thoughts for readers of The Highland Echo.)

Ronald Reagan proposes that the tax bill of the American citizen be reduced by 30% over a three–year period. Jimmy Carter proposes that taxes be reduced but at a substantially smaller level. John Anderson, however, proposes a .50 cents per gallon tax on the retail price of gasoline, the revenue of which shall be placed in the Social Security trust fund. On the basis of these issue stances, who will you vote for?

I could list other issue stands of the candidates to be taken into account in deciding who to vote for, but I am not sure how useful they all would be. The concern with issue stands as no surprise especially when you are talking with voters who are relatively well-educated. In fact, if you read Locke, Rousseau, and other democratic theorists who assert the notion of the rational voter, concern for the issues is the way the democratic electoral process apparently ought to work.

Yet voting studies for the last thirty-plus years make it abundantly clear that the large majority of American voters are not basing their electoral choices on the issue stands of candidates. Because of this, candidates gear their campaigns to a variety of factors that are non-issue in character. This, of course, is precisely the thing that the more educated and issue-oriented voter, such as one might expect to find at Maryville College, has criticized for years, for example, the candidates will not take a firm stand on balancing the budget.

I suspect, however, that clearer and more extensive statements by candidates regarding the issues will not help us all that much in making electoral decisions (note that, to date, presidential debates have not made any significant impact on how people vote). The reasons for this are at least three.

First of all, the salient issues of today are not necessarily the ones that will be of concern two or three years from now. The ones that will be of paramount concern later may well not be a part of the public debate right now during the campaign and election.

Second, the vast majority of issues that confront any president are unknown to us, the public, not because those issues are being hidden from us but because we are not interested in them. For example, how many of us were aware of, had a position on, and contacted public officials about our views on the sugar tariff bill of a few years ago? I suspect not many.

Third, it must be remembered that the presidency is but one component in a very fragmented, slow, and muddled policy-making process. This is so, not because of the people in the process, but because of the policy-making struc-

Customs of Halloween Past and Present

by Ruth Reese

Halloween, the night when evil spirits have free reign, is drawing closer. And not one of us is frightened. And why should we be? The worst that could happen is... a few eggs on the side of a brand new Mustang? Aggravating, maybe, but definitely not terrifying.

Suppose, for the moment, that Halloween really is a night of terror. It's the one night when the Lord of Death holds the earth in complete control. And for your own safety, he MUST be placated.

The date is October 31, but it is no longer Halloween. Today is Samhain, New Year's Eve. The cattle are in the barns again, for today is the first day of winter. The harvest season is over. You are preparing for a special meal. Your mother is coming tonight. It's been months since you've last seen her - she died of a fever last spring. Tonight, she'll be allowed to return with all the others who have died in the past year. Tonight, the Lord of Death judges the newly dead and decides if they will be allowed to return to earth as human beings, or as beasts.

Later, after the banquet, you make your way to the hilltop. There, the Druid priests have prepared a bonfire. Looking around, you recognize no one, for all are grotesquely costumed in order to ward off any evil that might be present. Some jump through the flames, screaming, as if being pursued by these evil spirits.

The Druids begin chanting to the Sun God and the Lord of Death. Suddenly, high priest raises his arms as high as he can. As if on cue, a horse built of wicker falls to the flames. Screams echo across the hilltop. The horse is a cage, and the bonfire becomes a partner to a human sacrifice.

You religiously watch until the flames die down to grey ashes. When not a flicker is left, you and all the others race down the hillside. The last one down will be in the Halls of the Lord of Death tonight.

So how did this ceremony change to a harmless children's fest-

tures that are reflected in formal and informal governmental and political institutions. Thus, given a clear understanding of a presidential candidate's stand on the issues, there is the subsequent question of whether or not he can deliver. It is for this reason that I think critics have been too harsh at times on Carter in suggesting that he has abandoned his issue stands of the 1976 campaign and that, therefore, he lied to the American electorate. I think it is more accurate to say that he was and is committed sincerely, say, to a balanced budget, but circumstances, the major one of which is Congress, have made it difficult for him to deliver.

Well, then, what should we look to in making an electoral choice on November 4? I would suggest three considerations.

First, in spite of what has been said thus far, I think a consideration of the candidates' issue stands is of some importance, not so much as a way of knowing what they will, in fact, do but as an indication of the other two considerations, both of which I think are far more useful bases for choosing a candidate.

Thus, the second consideration is the candidates' sense of the political. This includes such things as the ability to negotiate, compromise, persuade, and marshall political peers in pursuit of specific policy goals. Say what you will about such considerations, these are still the sine qua non conditions of the political process, especially a structurally fragmented one such as ours. In a word, a good president must be a first-rate politician.

Finally, there is the question of character and personality of the candidates. Actually biography is most useful in getting at these concerns. For example, and by no means exhaustively, is the person honest, dependable, and possessed with a sense of the ethical? Is the person one who can manage conflict and ambiguity without getting "up-tight"? If, for example, political reality is basically gray ambiguity, then I question whether a person who views the world in terms of sharp black and white distinctions is who we need as a president.

The reason why character and personality are so important is that they are the root predispositions with which one deals with the world. Thus, I am less concerned with the candidates' specific policy stands taken in the heat of a campaign that is aimed at a non-issue oriented electorate than I am with the fundamental personality and character of the candidates. The latter tells us much about how, if elected president, a a candidate will handle the yet unknown issues, be they major or minor. And the question of political skill becomes crucial; for the wisest, most well-disposed person who cannot marshall the fragmented policy process in any kind of coherent direction is doomed to failure in the presidency.

The position I am suggesting is one that is rooted in democratic experience and some political theory. That position is that we do not elect a delegate to the presidency who then reflects in some isomorphic way the policy preferences of the electorate, for once again the electorate has few coherent policy preferences that could give guidance to a President. Instead, we elect a trustee whose basic sense of, and capacity for, competent judgment and whose sense of and skill in the political are deemed the best. I know such a position runs counter to pedestrian concepts of democratic theory, but it seems to me that considerations of political skill, personal character, and personality tell us more about presidential potential than do specific issue stands taken in the midst of campaigns. On the basis of this, I have decided who I think is the best candidate for president, given the options. Who would you choose?

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

As sophomore class officers, we want to thank everyone who helped us with the sophomore class sponsored toga party/dance on October 11. We also want to thank everyone who came to the dance. Approximately 200 people danced to the chant of "Toga, Toga, Toga!" Items that were left at the dance were turned in to the Registrar's Office.

We are now planning a hat dance for November 7. See y'all there!

Sincerely,

Jean Plant

Homecoming: That was it

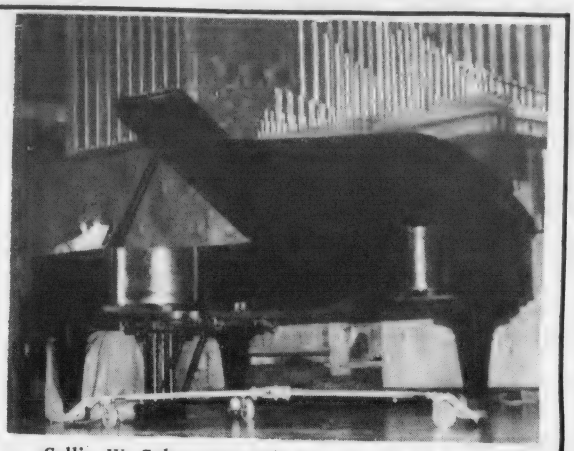
y Ed Brewer

One more Homecoming has arrived and departed nd things are beginning to ettle down again. The MC ampus was full of life and ventful for the weekend as lumni and friends visited. Many past experiences were elived, or at least remembered , as old friends from ears gone by were reunited.

Rain threatened to ampen the Homecoming pirit both Friday and Saturday afternoons, but moisure was not a problem for ny of the events as the in came between activies.

The Homecoming celeration started Friday afternoon with the parade hrough Now Town. The C band, fully kilted, led e way. They were foilowed by the Queen candites, the mayor of Maryle, 'Skeeter' Shields, rickland of MC, the floats, e court representatives, d various other people d vehicles. That evening ere was a short pep rally ound a big bonfire. The eerleaders led the rally th their cheers. Dan neski said a few words, d the band played a few nes.

Saturday morning began with the third annual fall Scots' Road Race. Prospective students then had an opportunity to find out a little bit about the college during "MC day." Different departments and several MC publications had rooms set up in Sutton Science Center where prospective students could talk to professors and students to find out a little about MC and take a tour of the campus if they wanted.



There was a tailgate party from noon until about 1:30 p.m. where alumni met to talk and eat lunch. The MC band provided entertainment there.

Then 2:00 p.m. rolled around and it was time for the game to start. The choir started this portion of the day off with their version of the Alma Mater. After the band played the Star-Spangled Banner, the team came out and the game began. Also during the pre-game activities, winners of the float and dorm decoration contests were announced. Lloyd won the prize for best float with their "beached whale." Copeland dorm won the prize for dorm decorations with their slogan "Make No Mistake MC" painted down the front lounge windows.

Finally, at halftime, came the big event of the day; the crowning of the 1980 Homecoming Queen. After much anticipation, Bobbie Jo Sallade, the 1979 Homecoming Queen, crowned Mari Ann Masch, MC's 1980 Homecoming Queen.

After the football game ended, things quieted down a bit as alumni, students, and friends dispersed. Some went home, some went elsewhere to continue conversations about "old days," and others prepared themselves for the dance. At 9:00 p.m., nicely dressed couples went to Pearsons dining hall to dance the night away. The band "Exit" provided music that was enjoyed by all. This final festive activity of the 1980 Homecoming celebration lasted until 1:00 a.m. Sunday morning.

The excitement has died down now and most of the alumni have gone back home. 1980 Homecoming will now be one of the past experiences remembered by alumni when this time of year rolls around again in 1981. That was it, MC – That was it.

Sallie W. Schoen, associate professor of music, presented a piano recital Thursday night, Oct. 23. Works performed included Mozart's Sonata in D Major, Sonata in B Minor by Franz Lizst, and the premier performance of Nancy Van de Vate's Sonata for Piano. This work was composed in 1978 and is dedicated to Sallie W. Schoen.

At the conclusion of the program, Mrs. Schoen received a standing ovation for her fine performance, as well as a bouquet of yellow roses presented to her by the MC chapter of Delta Omicron.

Circle K revives MC

by Kim Morris

What is normally white yet becomes orange when it gets caught up in the football spirit? (No,no! Besides an albino U.T. fan.) Give up? (Care whatsoever.?) Actually it's a member of Circle K, who, caught up in the excitment of painting the football field end zones. holds the paint sprayer backwards. (They say you can get the same effect by eating a bushel of carrots a day, but this was so much more dramatic.)

The painting of the end zones for the Homecoming game was done entirely by Circle K, a newly formed club on campus. Circle K is a service organization found on campuses all over the country, and is funded in part by the Kiwannis.

The MC club has plans to help serve both the campus and the community Present campus plans include renovating the college steps, building more wheelchair ramps on campus, building several bridges leading to the college amplitheatre, and renovating a long defunct picnic ground in the College woods.

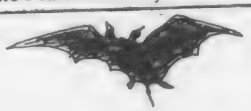
ll? When the Romans ok over Great Britain, y outlawed human sacice and substituted their n traditions for those of Druids. In ancient me, a festival was held the honor of Pomona, goddess of fruits and rdens. In some places this ht is still known as Snap Apple" or "Nutcrack ght". Parties are held be- a fire to roast nuts, eat ples, and tell fortunes.

As Christianity grew popular in the seventh and eighth centuries, November 1 was set aside as All Hallows or All Saints Day. The evening before was known as Halloween. During Medieval times, it was thought that witches, ghosts, and goblins prefered this night to all others. Spells were cast, and signs and symbols used to foretell the future.

Many people still use charms to discover the identity of their future mate. An apple peeling may be thrown over the shoulder to reveal his or her intials, or how a nut burns in the fire tells the quality of a person's love. Maidens, through the centuries, have walked down halls with a mirror in one hand and a candle in the other with the hope of catching a glimpse of their future husband. Young men were offered the choice of three bowls. If the bowl was empty, no marriage would take place. If it contained clear water, he would marry a young girl, and if it was muddy, he would marry a widow.

At first, no notice of Halloween was taken in America. It was not widely observed until after the Irish Potato Famine, when immigrants brought their traditions with them to their new country. Halloween became a mixture of old and new, of Christian and pagan religions. Today we celebrate it with "trick or treating", costumes, parties, and mischief. Remember the eggs on the side of the Mustang?



Gee, I wonder if they miss me....."

Kevin Skipper racks up the sole MC touchdown against Millsaps during last Saturday's game at Honaker Field.

Ladies win trophy

by Birdie Hill

As the state and regional volleyball tournaments draw closer, the Lady Scots volleyball team has chalked up more wins and now can boast of a 27–8 record.

In a tri-match with UTC and Carson-Newman earlier last week, the V–ballers defeated UTC 15–7, in the first game, but lost the second game 3–15. They came back to win the match 15–9.

In the loss to UTC, Coach Brown stated, "We couldn't get anything going. Our block wasn't up at all."

The V–ballers lost to Carson-Newman in the first game 7–15, but won the next two games 15–6, 15–11. The offense was the key to their victory.

This past weekend the Lady Scots traveled to Milligan for the Milligan Invitational Tournament. The V–ballers finished 3rd out of 14 teams from 4 different states.

In their first match the team was up against West Georgia. They won the first game 15–9, but lost the next two games 15–15–17, 12–15.

Next, the team played Brevard College. They easily won 15–12, 15–5.

Bryan College was Maryville's 4th opponent. They gave the Lady Scots a hard time in the first game, causing them to lose 10–15. Maryville bounced back and won the next two games 15–6, 15–13.

Maryville advanced and was up against West Georgia again – a team they had lost to earlier. The Lady Scots won the first game 15–10. but were defeated in the next 2 games 6–15, 11–15.

Maryville advanced to the semi–finals with Bryan. They were defeated 15–9, 15–8, causing them to settle for a third place finish.

The V–ballers seemed to have a hard time setting their blocks throughout the tournament. Unsteady play at times caused the team to lose some of their matches.

Scots squeezed by UT

by Mike Weiss

It was a gray Homecoming for the Soccer Scots as they were set over the powerful UT club were dispelled in a 6-0 rout at Maryville.

Those who braved the early morning cold saw MC play the Vols valiantly in the first half. UT scored a goal which was offside from practically everyone's standpoint except, unfortunately, the referee's. The Scots hit the crossbar once, but could not tie the score.

The second half saw old troubles return to haunt MC. The midfield and forward line could not conswarming Vols, and the defense, which played well earlier, was overwhelmed. Scots' goalkeeper Tim Fitzgerald once again put forth a fine effort that was wasted in a 5 goal second half bombardment. The Scots came close to scoring only once more, when Shin Tanaka hit the post.

The Scots, 1–7–1, closed out the home season on October 29 against Bryan College.

Millsaps Commands Scots

by Steve Arnold

Millsaps College, undefeated in 7 games and ranked in the top 20 of Division III, came to Maryville last weekend and ended the home winning streak of the Scots at 20 games as they defeated the Scots 17–7.

Millsaps held the Scots on their first possession and forced an MC punt. On their second play from scrimmage, Millsaps scored on a 55 yard run and after the kick led 7–0. The Scots then took the kickoff back to the 30 yard line where the offense started their comeback drive. With only 5 minutes gone in the first period, the Scots tied the score as Kevin Skipper took a pitch out from Boda and cut and weaved himself 25 yards for a Scot TD, and the Lane kick made the score 7–7. The Scots looked like they would put on another scoring drive; after holding Millsaps and forcing a punt, Avellino fielded the punt on the 35 yard line, returned it back across the field, picked up excellent blocks but was finally stopped by Millsaps after a 30 yard return. MC failed to score and Millsaps took over. Millsaps gave the Scots a scare at the end of the first period as they faked a field goal, threw the ball to the receiver in the end zone, who was wide open, but the pass was over thrown.

In the second period Millsaps jumped to a 23–7 lead but that didn't last long as it was called back on a penalty. MC forced a punt, took the ball to the 18 yard line where an attempt on a 28 yard field goal failed, and the score remained at 7–7. Millsaps got their biggest break of the game as they blocked an MC punt and during the recovery the ball was kicked backwards and was finally downed on the 2 yard line. The MC defense stood strong but on the 4th down 2 feet Millsaps pushed across the touchdown. The kick was good, and Millsaps led 14–7 taking that lead to the dressing room at the half.

In the third period with 8:20 left, Millsaps recovered a Scot fumble but failed to score a touchdown and settled for an 18 yard field goal for a 17–7 lead. The Scots drove late in the third period and on a fourth and one the Scots went for it, but the pass to Avellino in the endzone failed.

In the fourth period the Scots still tried to turn the game around as Jeff Skipper faked a punt on a fourth down then tossed a pass for 17 yards to Clemmons making a first down on the Millsaps 35 yard line. Again the drive failed as Bradley was intercepted. Neither team had a scoring threat and the game ended 17–7.

Statistics found Millsaps having 8 first downs to MC's 14. Millsaps rushed for 142 yards on 50 tries while MC had 87 yards on 39 attempts. Millsaps passed 16 times, completed 3 with one interception while MC passed 29 times, had 17 completed, 2 intercepted for 188 yards. Millsaps fumbled 5 times, losing 2 while the Scots lost 2 out of 3. Millsaps punted 9 times for a 35 yard average. Millsaps lost 71 yards on 6 penalties and MC lost 65 yards on 7 penalties.

LATE BREAKING NEWS

Buddy Gilbert has [illegible] baseball coach. Gilbert already is the football receivers coach for the Fighting Scots.

Gilbert said he was fortunate to be selected MC baseball coach because "this is something I have always wanted to do. I have a deep sense of obligation to Maryville College and now have a chance to return a little to my alma mater by teaching these young men how to play baseball."

Campaign '80 The Highland Echo Reagan

Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee; Vol. 66 No. 7 November 6, 1980;

* REAGAN GETS THE NOD **********

by Tom Hudson

Well, it happened. As Frank Reynolds of ABC-TV stated last evening, "The word is landslide...tonight for Ronald Reagan."

And landslide it was—at press time the figures were 469 electoral votes for Gov. Reagan, 63 for President Carter, and none for John Anderson. I've heard people say, seemingly out of desperation, "But the popular vote was much closer." Be that as it may, the electoral vote is what really counts.

It seemed as if President-elect Reagan had it pretty well sewn up from the word go, with the more important states such as Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Texas being projected for him fairly early in the evening.

As the night went on, it seemed almost hopeless for President Carter. About 10 pm, EST, President Carter made his public concession speech, stating that he would work with Gov. Reagan to insure a "smooth transition." In a way it's a shame to see the Carter-Mondale administration leave our nation's capitol—I've only just begun to recognize Vice-President Mondale....

There was quite a strong showing for the GOP in the senatorial races as well. As NBC-TV's David Brinkley said Tuesday night, "The liberal era is over...."

I've overheard a few conversations and the general thought of a number of people is that we will be going to war with a Reagan administration. I really don't know whether to believe this or not. The only thing we can really say right now is that we'll just have to find out.

At about 11 pm, President-elect Reagan came on the tube and spoke to a large and very responsive crowd of Reaganites. His speech was much like the rest of his campiagn—friendly, easy-going, with a few hard-line messages.

"I am not frightened by what lies ahead," said Reagan. He went on to say, "We're going to put America back to work again."

I sincerely hope that what Mr. Reagan means is that America will attempt to solve her problems in a confident manner, in a proud manner, but not in a manner that excludes rationality. President—elect Reagan may not lead us "into a war," but it is an attitude of self-righteousness and narrow-mindedness

Prsident Jimmy Carter, with 41.5% of the vote, decisively won the MC All-Campus Mock Election held last Friday.

Republican Ronald Reagan received 27.2%, closely followed by Independent John Anderson with 25.8%.

The Edward Clark/David Koch ticket received 1.8% of the vote, Gus Hall/Angela Davis, 1.0%, and Barry Commoner/LaDonna Harris, .8%.

The election was sponsored by the "Election '80" Inquiry Group, led by Dr. Harry Howard.

Feminist presents program

by Debbie Hall

For those of us who sat in the FAC lounge from 4:30 - 6:00 last Sunday, the day turned out to be remarkably enlightenting and interesting! Linda Tarr - Whelan came to talk about herself, her job, and how both fit together in the grand scheme of things.

Linda Tarr - Whelan is presently the Special Assistant to the Executive Director of the NEA, where she coordinates the 1.8 million member organization's activities. Previously, Whelan was Deputy Assistant to the President in the Women's Concerns Office where she also worked primarily for the ratification of the ERA and as a liaison for the White House Conference on Families

"There are," she says, "three basic reasons why the ERA must be passed." First, women do not have the protection of the Constitution: the Supreme Court has ruled that it is not discriminatory to have specific laws for one sex or the other. Secondly, the equalities that women do have are only legislative, thus they vary from place to place and could just as easily be voted out as they were voted in.

The third reason has to do with what she calls a "recognition of where we are today." With as many women as there now are in the job market, women earn, on the average, 59 cents for every dollar earned by a man. Why? Apparently the difference has nothing to do with education because a man with a high school doploma averages an income of $14,000 while a woman with a college diploma averages $8,000. Mrs. Tarr - Whelan attributes this diconcerting situation to sex stereotyping that has influenced our thinking, our habits, our laws, and last but not least - our paychecks.

Mrs. Tarr - Whelan said little that would support the fear that ratification would cause women to be drafted. Since the Congress has always held the power to draft both men and women, she feels that if the draft should come into effect then both men and women would be drafted due to legislation that would be passed by Congress at that time.

The majority of opposition lies in a misinformed public. The organized opposition forces are, at the present time, outspending the pro-ERA'ers 4 to 1...ERA needs money The movement also needs new ways to present the ERA as an all-inclusive, all-important proposition. "What we need now," she says "is to build reasons for political leaders to feel that this is their issue."

that will lead us into trouble every time.

We need to give the Reagan administration a chance, we need to give it our support. Let's face it—anyone in that position needs all the help and support he can get. It does us no good as a country for the individual to say, "Hey, I didn't vote for the guy...." Maybe you didn't—I know I didn't. But that doesn't mean our care and concern about the welfare of this nation should be diminished. If anything, I would think that a sense of care should be amplified and thus we should work to build up what we have, not tear it down.

For an election that people said was dull, uninteresting, and lacked a real choice of candidates, the American people sure made up their minds. To be honest, I was expecting Reagan to win the election, (based upon my own perceptions of an increasing trend toward conservatism in the U.S.), but I never dreamed it would be by such a large margin of electoral votes.

Well, whether your candidate won, or whether he lost, we must remember that this is still our country and that we should not be totally disheartened. Let us work together, in the spirit of unity, to help make concrete what George Bush said the other night: "America, as in the words of the song, is 'on the road again.' "

The following policy regarding academic dishonesty was approved by the All-College Council on October 1, 1980:

1. If a student is found cheating on a test or paper, the supervising teacher will give a grade of "F" in the course. The teacher should have a conference with the student, and should report the infringement to the Registrar, who will keep a temporary file of all such offenses and will inform the Academic Vice-President of them.

2. If a student is reported to have cheated in a second course, the case will be directed to the Dean of Student Services Office. Either that office or the Judicial Board will deal with the case, depending on the student's preference. If the student is found guilty, the punishment is dismissal from the college.

3. When plagiarism is present (as in term papers, research paper, etc.) because of a misunderstanding of correct documentation, the teacher will require corrections and explain the seriousness of such carelessness, but need not report a first occurrence to the Registrar. This leniency of procedure applies only to students who have not been informed of documentation procedures taught in English 105. Students who have had such a course will be dealt with as specified in no. 1 and no. 2 above.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Having been a student here for three years, I have seen many changes—most good, few distressing. One of the more distressing changes came last year, when the library built a turnstyle to prevent theft of books. This was quite understandable since the library lost a great deal of revenue from theft.

The entire college community sympathizes with the library, but now the security measures have gone overboard. Last week I was asked to surrender my personal property for examination upon leaving the library. When I refused the examination, I felt that this was a violation of my right to privacy. It was not that I had anything to hide, but rather a principle. I felt that if anything is sacred here, it is the right to his property.

It seems as if the Library is planning to buy one of those giant metal detector machines that one sees at the airports. The student body here at MC is not a band of theives, and should not be treated as such. After all, is this a learning institution or a penal institution? Let us all remember that without the right to privacy, we are no longer in a free society.

Craig Corey

Dear Editor,

As a student at MC, I wish to say that a few people on this campus are rude, inconsiderate, and very immature. I am basically talking about the Halloween Haunted Hour put on by the MC Playmakers.

On Thursday, Nov. 29 at the 10 PM show, there were a few people who acted as if they should have been in grade school. I have one thing to say to them: "You are now in college, children! You are supposed to be adult enough to act accordingly!"

During that presentation, a select few in the audience gave a wonderful performace of stupidity and immaturity. Many people were acting like they were in the dining hall by talking loudly and moving about so much that they were annoying the actors.

Near the end of the show, one "lady" saw a spider crawling nearby and instead of acting in an adult manner, she screamed and jumped back and almost knocked over the candle holder, If someone else had not been there to grab it, it would have fallen over and possibly caused a fire.

In closing, I would like to commend the Playmakers for their fine performance and for their patience toward the behavior of the audience. And as for the people who disrupted the show, I say: "GROW UP!"

Sincerely,
Nancy Mackey

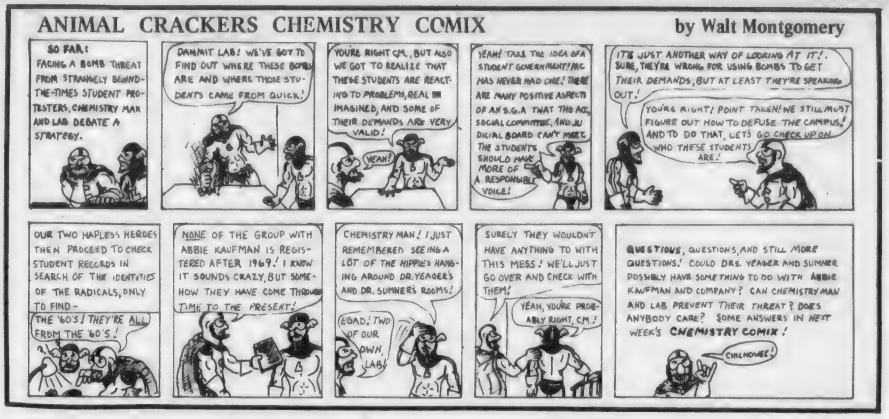
Interim filled with political cartoons

Once again MC is offering a different kind of interim to students. It is an extended interim in which the class meets during all terms except the 3-week interim. One of several such interims is Mrs. Bianco's interim "First Aid for MC's Art Collection." The purpose for this interim is to clean, document, store, display, and inventory MC's art work.

The fall term project involves the displaying of the late David King's political cartoon collection, which was donated to MC upon King's death.



King started collecting original political cartoons following his graduation from MC in 1925. He wrote letters to several cartoonists and visited local newspapers in Akron, Ohio, where he was living at the time. Most of the cartoons date from the 1920's to the 1960's. Several presidents are depicted in them, including Johnson, Kennedy, Eisenhower, and Truman.

Political cartoons have many characteristics, which are evident in the King collection. One involves use of wellknown characters in literature, such as Hamlet, Ichabod Crane, and others. Other cartoonists start with a well-known subject like a book or movie, and most of them have their own personal trademark as well. Many cartoonists also combine animal characteristics to create winged donkeys and other creatures.

The King collection includes drawings by syndicated and local artists, many of which are personally autographed. These cartoons are a good representation of the past 40 years of American history.

At the time of this writing, the exact number of cartoons possessed is unknown. The interim students are very busy sorting and counting them, and they hope to display them soon in various places on campus such as Pearsons and Thaw. They promise to be very interesting displays.

Individually, the students of the class are working on locating and identifying the Merrill collection. A few years ago, several thousand dollars was donated to MC for the purchase of art work. Many of the painting and sculptures bought are in storage or on display around campus. The students are working on locating them and, during the Winter term, they will work on improving and updating this collection.

Playmakers haunt MC campus

What has 28 legs and scares "innocent" college students? The MC Playmakers, presenting the famous "Haunted Hour" for the Maryville College campus.

The Playmakers presented this year's "Haunted Hour" last Thursday in Willard House at 8 and 10 p.m.

"Spectretors" sat on the floors of the candle-lit rooms to hear ghostly figures relate tales of woe, misfortune, and ghosts.

According to Sharon "Ma" Crane, the co-ordinator of the Playmakers, most of the stories were extracted from the books 13 Ghosts of Alabama and 13 Ghosts of Tennessee by Kathryn Windham. Two of the stories Sharon wrote herself.

Coming up this interim, from Nov. 30 to Dec. 10, the Playmakers will be touring Bristol, Chattanooga, Atlanta, and Asheville, N.C., performing before high school students and alumni organizations.

A knight with Arthur

by Mike Weiss

King Arthur, Merlin the Magician, the Knights of the Round Table, and the sword Excaliber were envisioned last Tuesday at MC. No, it wasn't a Monty Python movie, it was an evening CIV program delivered by Mr. James M. Batten, of Cornwall, England.

Mr. Batten, a retired educator and politician, and an expert in Celtic folklore, discussed the roots of Britain's national legend, King Arthur. The former mayor of Penzance in Cornwall was a tourguide for the 1976 MC interim entitled "In Search of King Arthur."

A slideshow was presented showing the countryside and monuments enveloped by Arthurian legend. Mr. Batten impressed all with his thorough knowledge and background in what is such an integral part of English heritage.

MC Faculty aided by Grant

The ALCOA Foundation has presented $125,000 to Maryville College for a five-year faculty development program, MC President Dr. Wayne Anderson and ALCOA Manager of Tennessee Operations Richard E. Ray jointly announced at a press conference Friday, Oct. 24.

The grant is part of the $5 million "Toward Century III Campaign" now in its second year. This gift brings the total amount raised in the campaign to more than $3.4 million.

The grant will be divided into two major categories. Funds will be available for special research and study activities and for especially meritorious performance.

Activities to be funded include academic leave projects during the summer and academic year, short term research and study, grants for new faculty, course development and support, materials development and support, retraining leave projects, and funds to replace faculty who take leaves of absence or sabbaticals under the projects.

The grants will enable faculty to keep abreast of developments in their areas of specialization and make significant advances in curricular programs and materials. The program emphasizes the importance of merit in the College's environment.

"After consulting with Dr. Anderson and members of his staff, it was determined that one of the College's highest priorities was a program to encourage and reward its outstanding faculty members," said Ray. "We are delighted that the ALCOA Foundation has supported our recommendation to help the College in this area."

Dr. Anderson expressed his deep appreciation for "yet another illustration of the ALCOA Foundation's deep interest in the people of this area and its commitment to assisting vital institutions of service which are located here."

The ALCOA Foundation has made $348,000 in grants to MC since the Foundation's beginning in 1964.

Soccer does the splits

by Mike Weiss

It was an up and down week for the soccer team, as they blitzed Bryan College JV 4-1 on Wednesday, only to go down 6-2 to Johnson Bible College in a poor effort on Saturday.

Greg Hosler paced the Scots in the victory with a two goal, one assist performance. The senior striker put MC in front early with a 25-yard blast that caught the upper right corner. Moments later, Hosler emerged from a goalfront scramble to beat the Bryan goalkeeper for his second tally. The visistors scored on a breakaway to make it 2-1 at halftime.

A few minutes after the second-half kickoff, Hosler set up Ken Davidson for a perfect breakaway goal, making it 3-1. Davidson was later ejected from the game, but the Scots scored while shorthanded on a goal by Glen Stout, with an assist from John Lacava. Lacava was also ejected after two cautions from the referee, and the Scots hung on with only 9 on the field to win. Andy Steinbeck and Mark Burnett had fine games in Maryville's best defensive effort of the season.

The MC side evidently forgot how well they had played on Wednesday, for on Saturday they were humbled 6-2 at JBC. Ken Davidson got both Scots' goals on penalty shots. The Scots are 2-8-1 on the year.

"Eight is Enough" for Lady Scots

by Birdie Hill

With a week to go in their season, the volleyball team has been setting goals for themselves. Not only to win the state and regional championships, but to go on to compete in the National Volleyball Tournament in Spokane, Washington.

The Lady Scots feel "Eight is Enough" and so far they are 26-8. The team only lost eight games last year, so they hope to keep their record as it stands.

On Tuesday, the V-ballers traveled to Montreat - Anderson. They won all 3 of their games 15-9, 15-7, 15-9. Coach Sharon Brown stated, "It wasn't a challenging match, but we enjoyed the win."

This past Saturday, the Lady Scots hosted UTC. The team won the first two games 15-9, 15-9, but lost the third 11-15. They bounced back and won the 4th game and the match 15-9. Coach Brown was very pleased with her team's performance. "UTC is a Division I school, and it always means a lot to us to beat a team like that."

This Saturday the V-ballers will travel to Kentucky to play Midway. The following weekend is the State Volleyball Tournament which will be held at Milligan College. Maryville will be the site for the regional tournament on Nov. 20-22.

Yellow Jackets sting Scots

MC lost its third consecutive football game last Saturday, falling to Randolph-Macon College of Ashland, Va., 34-21. The loss cost Maryville a tie for the ODAC Conference lead and put the Scots' record at 4-4 overall.

The host took an early lead on Allan Spivey's touchdown from the one-yard line. MC came back in the second quarter to tie it up on the first of quarterback Kevin Bradley's 3 touchdown passes, this again and missed the conversion to make it 13-7 at the half.

The Yellow Jackets scored again in the third quarter, and added a two-point conversion to make it 21-7, but the Scots came back to tie on Bradley touchdown passes of 42 yards to Perkins, and 9 yards to Keith Pilawski. However, two R-M field goals and a 23-yard touchdown run off a Bradley interception by Bob Stanley dashed the Scots' hopes of one finding Tim Perkins for six. Bruce Lane added the extra point. R-M scored a victory.

Richins gained 176 yards rushing for Randolph-Macon, while Kevin Skipper paced the Scots with 95 yards in seven carries. Bradley was 8 for 28 on the day, and threw 3 interceptions.

The Highland Echo

Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee — Vol. 66 No. 8 November 13, 1980

New MC baseball coach Buddy Gilbert has a lot of plans for this year's varsity squad.

Gilbert swings coaching job

by Bill Dent

(Editor's note: Last week, MC Athletic Director Art Ogden announced the hiring of a head baseball coach, Mr. Buddy Gilbert of Maryville. Gilbert replaces Billy Henry, who resigned last March as Athletic Director and head baseball coach. In addition to his coaching duties for baseball, Mr. Gilbert also coaches receivers for the football squad. The Highland Echo talked with Buddy Gilbert Tuesday afternoon.)

T.H.E: How do you feel about receiving the head baseball coaching job and are you looking forward to it?

B.G: I feel very grateful to the college for giving me this responsibility, and I want to try to do my best to do a good job for the college. I also want to try to make baseball a fun thing at Maryville.

T.H.E: Do you have any ideas on how you are going to coach the team, and what are your expectations for the team?

B.G: Yes, I've been thinking about it a lot these past few weeks. I'd like to have a meeting for all those who are interested in playing as soon as football season is over. I would also like to get the team's input into the matter before I formulate any plans for practice or anything like that.

T.H.E: But what are your expectations—what would you consider to be a good season?

B.G: Well, first of all, I would like to see the team play well enough to end up in the ODAC tournament at the end of the season. This tournament has the top four teams in the conference competing. My primary goal would be to end up in this season-ending tournament.

T.H.E: Do you expect to build the team around the returning lettermen and have any freshmen come up to you and said anything about playing baseball?

B.G: Yes, I do. From what I understand we had a good nucleus of players for a good team, but I understand they did not get to complete the games on the schedule last year, and there was some disinterest on the coaching staff on finishing the schedule. What I want to do is change all that at Maryville College. As for freshmen, I've had a number of boys come up to me. It really is a pleasure for me to see this, and when we have this team meeting I would like for everybody who thinks they can play baseball to come on out and let's give it a shot.

T.H.E: How will you handle practices?

B.G: I've seen a lot of practices in baseball and football, and I'm a firm believer in short, intense practices. At the University of Alabama, practices are limited to an hour and a half. I would like to have the short, intense practices that will be well planned and things will be kept moving. As for the gymns, Coach Ogden has assured me that

Swomley warns against draft

by Mike Weiss

"It is inaccurate to say that a volunteer force not provide this country with adequate defense protection." These are the words of Dr. John Swomley, professor of Christian Ethics at St. Paul Institute in Kansas City, and speaker last Tuesday, Nov. 4, in a CIV program. Dr. Swomley is the author of several books on ethics and the world nuclear menace, including Liberal Ethics, The Road to War, and America, Russia, And The Bomb.

Swomley claimed that the recent warnings from the Pentagon of Russian buildups and the call for more defense spending were "propaganda." He dismissed Soviet occupation of Afganistan by saying that the mountainous Asian nation had "always been in the Soviet sphere of influence." He compared the Afghanistan incident to the American invasion of the Dominican Republic in 1965. "Afghanistan," Swomley said, "is a convenient excuse for us to spend more on the military."

Dr. Swomley cited actual Pentagon statistics to assert that the U.S. is in fact equal to or stronger than the Soviets in most areas. He pointed out the pro-U.S. position of China, a formidable check against the Russians.

Swomley sees draft registration as a foreshadowing of an actual draft, a step towards war. He pointed out the racist implications in the call for a draft; many draft advocates feel that there is a predominace of "low socio-economic classes in the armed forces," i.e., blacks. Swomley said the blacks comprised only 12% of the armed forces. He criticized two of the congressional leaders for a return to a peacetime draft, Senators Sam Nunn of Georgia and John Stennis of Mississippi, as "hardly the leading proponents of civil rights in this country."

The time had come, as time had left. The decision was made and was irrevocable.

The streets roared with the tide of the populace. Like waves they pounded against each other—cresting in their emotions and rushing up on the sands of eternity. Their time had come.

A blind man, regretting what he had done, wept through unseeing eyes as he squatted beside a decaying tenement building. He prayed.

"Forgive me—forgive what I have done and save me!"

In his mind he knew that his time had come.

Next to an abandoned Ford stood a stooped old lady surveying the scene of chaos. In her heart she knew what was happening.

"Oh, I knew it! Dear Father, have compassion on our doomed souls. . . ."

Her words were drowned out by the cries of the crowd.

"Our time has come," she thought.

At that instant the darkened skies split open and the heavens unleashed the furies of Hell. An acid rain drenched the condemned — it seared their jostled bodies and dampened their rumpled souls.

Democracy lay dying in those trampled streets and the hearts of men no longer embraced the flame of liberty. Democracy and liberty, their time had come.

Those who had not heard the news watched from ancient windows framed with flower boxes or raced into the streets to seek the cause of the commotion. Some rejoiced, others wept when the answer was received.

Alpha and Omega—those words seemed to echo throughout the countryside with every voice, with every footstep. The beginning and the end—The time had come.

Gradually the disorder of the crowd dwindled from a bonfire to the flicker of a candle; they could do nothing about the situation at hand.

The time had come, as time had left. The decision was made and was now regretted. It had finally come to pass. Ronald Reagan had assumed office . . . .

Gerald Byerley, Blount Countian and former teacher at Knoxville's West High School, will have a one-man art show in the Maryville College Fine Arts Center gallery Nov. 10-21. His exhibit will feature collage and mixed media types of art.

In 1968 Byerley presented his works in the Dulin National Print and Drawing Show in Knoxville. His other one-man shows have been in Virginia, New York, Wisconsin, Colorado, and Canada.

The Maryville College exhibit will be open for viewing each weekday between 9 and 4.

The Highland Echo wishes to extend Happy Birthday greetings (though somewhat belated), to the beloved president of Maryville College, Dr. Wayne Anderson.

Last Friday, a party was given in honor of "Wonderful Wayne," where he was presented with an official MC rocking chair.

When asked for a few profound words on the occasion, Dr. Anderson got off his rocker and quoted from a book that had been given to him:

"You CAN teach an old dog new tricks."

Well, Happy Birthday, Dr. Anderson. Maybe the rocking chair was a hint. . . .

Dear Mr. Editor:

Having read The Highland Echo for the past seven weeks I am writing to say how pleased I am with the new "look" of this year's paper.

The quality of news seems to be of high standard and the dry wit and subtle humor of "Tom Columns" is enlightening.

I wish to congratulate you on your editorial efforts. Keep up the good work—your father and I are proud of you!

With love,

Artistic grads find careers

by Ed Brewer

Do you ever wonder what happens after graduation from Maryville College? Well, there is life after MC. A variety of job opportunities are available for MC grads, no matter what major was pursued. Many MC art majors have found employment in nunerous areas.

Tony Scalise (class of 1980) is working as a designer with the Magnavox Corp. production and design facility in Knoxville, Tennessee.

Laurie Allen Reynolds (class of 1979) is employed with Studio Three, Inc. in Atlanta as an artist and photographer.

Joel Flint (class of 1979) found employment as an arts and crafts instructor for Montvale Nursing Home in Maryville.

Courses in art education prepare students to qualify for state certification in all-level art instruction.

Greg Rogers (class of 1978) went on the pursue a graduate degree in art from the University of Illinois, and is working the the field of art restoration.

Lynn Rumbley (class of 1977) found employment with Trans-Tech, Inc., a producer of silk-screened goods.

Dave Carrick (class of 1977) attends the University of Pittsburg and is pursuing graduate work on art and archaeology. He is also employed at the Carnegie Institute Museum of Art, where he is involved in the preparation of exhibits.

Mark Ward (class of 1976), a potter, has gained nation-wide reputation for his work on raku. His pottery has been selected for display for the Renwick Gallery in the Smithsonian Institute, and his work has also been listed in Crafts World and Ceramic Monthly.

Art majors from Maryville College have also found employment in a variety of other fields involving art. Some job titles and areas followed by Maryville College art majors include jewelry design, weaver, photographer, portraitist, puppeteer, audiovisual director, slide curator, art therapist, interior decorator, art teacher, printer, and nursery school owner.

The degree program for art major at Maryville College emphasizes four major areas of study: studio art, art history, art education, and art therapy.

Courses in studio arts develop a student's natural abilities in the use of artistic techniques. Design, painting, printmaking, drawing, and sculpting courses are the backbone of this study since they provide the means by which works of art are created and the means by which artists are trained.

Courses in art history provide the student with an overview of artistic traditions of different ages, different cultures and different countries.

Handel's Messiah at MC

Handel's oratorio Messiah will be presented Sunday, Nov. 16 at 3 p.m. in the Maryville College Wilson Chapel. A 250-voice choir and a 47-piece orchestra will perform the musical.

Included in this year's presentation will be 50 students from Maryville's William Blount High School as well as representatives from the college and surrounding communities.

Dr. Harry Harter, professor of music at MC, will be directing his 33rd performance of the Messiah. Messiah was first presented at MC in 1933 under the direction of Frances Henry with only 100 local singers and a piano as sole accompaniment.

There will be no admission charged for the performance but an offering will be accepted at the door.

we will have a gym for early season practice.

T.H.E: What games are on the schedule?

B.G. As for the schedule, we have ourselves a toughie. We play teams such as East Tennessee State, Slippery Rock out of Pennsylvania, UT-Chattanooga, as well as teams from the Old Dominion. As for Carson-Newman and Tennessee, we are still dickering with Carson-Newman for a home and home series. We already have 32 games on the schedule but we are still in the air about Carson-Newman. Tennessee has 55 games scheduled and could not take us on. The SEC limits teams to 55 game schedules. In the future, I would like to play other teams in the SEC: Ole Miss, Vanderbilt, Georgia, anybody who wants to play baseball we'll take them on.

T.H.E: In the past, road trips seemed to conflict with class schedules. What are your thoughts on this touchy matter?

B.G: I realize that this subject is a very touchy matter. I think that anybody who plays sports at MC must realize that their primary purpose here is to get an education We'll try as much as possible to eliminate these conflicts.

T.H.E: Do you agree with college policy concerning class attendance?

B.G: I stand firmly behind any policy the college has. I believe that any administration is certainly cognizant of athletics and how important they are to the college and to the individual, and I believe any person playing sports here at Maryville College definitely has to be a good student if he or she is going to stay here. This should be a student's primary obligation. I'm not going to hold anybody's hand if they are on the borderline—if they cannot get their studies done, they have no business playing baseball.

Mary Frances Snook and Robert Nick very happily invite their Maryville College friends to their marriage Friday, November fourteenth at seven-thirty o'clock p.m. Rockford Baptist Church, Old Knoxville Highway, Maryville, Tennessee. Reception afterwards at church.

Dr. Swomley illustrated the effect that nuclear war would have on humanity and proposed worldwide disarmament He said the U.S. should take the initiative in such a movement, and all other nations, including the Soviet Union, would follow suit. America should divert her massive defense budget to the feeding of the world's hungry and the easing of domestic problems. The dependence on foreign oil, the primary cause of the tenuous world situation, should be eradicated through conservation and development of new, safe forms of energy.

Scots win with juggling act

by Steve Arnold

President Wayne Anderson (who was celebrating his birthday last Saturday) received presents of kisses from the MC cheerleaders at halftime. The Scots (who weren't celebrating a birthday) received a present anyway.

Gene "Almost" Wheatley juggled a catch in the end zone in the final seconds of the game as the Scots came from behind to defeat Washington and Lee 23-20.

After taking the opening kickoff, W&L put together a seven-play drive before they were forced to punt. On the punt, the snap was fumbled, Scots' Doug Knight fell on the ball, and the Scots took over. MC could not move the ball and were also forced to punt. W&L took over and marched to the Scots' 2-yard line using pass plays of 35 and 33 yards. W&L scored as they fumbled the ball into the air while crossing the goal and the ball fell into the arms of a W&L player in the end zone and after the kick, led 7-0. The Scots came right back on the running of Vincent Clemmons who in the scoring drive had two excellent runs, the last one being 25 yards for a Scots' touchdown. The Lane kick was good and the score was tied 7-7.

In the second period with only two minutes gone W&L scored on a 15-yard screen pass and after the extra point they led 14-7. Five minutes later, it was Bradley to Avellino for 25 yards before he was tripped up at the 15-yard line. With 3rd and goal, an offside penalty against the Scots backed them up 5 yards and the Scots settled for a 20-yard Lane field goal to trail 14-10. With 2:03 to go before halftime, a freak accident stopped play as the chain on the yard marker was injured. The reports had it that it suffered a broken link, but should be ready for the Guilford game. W&L made one final effort to score in the first half and with 10 seconds to go they fumbled the ball on the 2-yard line. The Scots recovered and W&L took a halftime lead 14-10.

Vince Clemons carries the ball in the Scots' last-minute come-from-behind victory over Washington & Lee last Saturday.

W&L scored first in the 3rd period as they intercepted a Bradley pass; and 2 plays later W&L quarterback took it up the middle for 22 yards. The extra point snap was fumbled and W&L led 20-10. With six minutes left in the period, MC tried to add 3 more points but a Lane 45-yard field goal failed. Jeff Carbonneau picked off W&L's first play pass and the Scots took over. On their first play it was Duda to Avellino for a 45-yard pass play and a Scot touchdown. The try for 2 points failed and the Scots trailed 20-16.

Three minutes into the 4th period, W&L fumbled a punt on their own 45-yard line and the Scots took over. W&L held, took over the ball, and marched to the Scots 11-yard line where Peter Barron recovered a fumble and the Scots took over again with seven minutes left. With four minutes left, Jeff Carbonneau recovered a W&L fumble and the Scots took over again. The Scots received the ball again with 1:17 left in the game. On the first play, a 25-yard pass was completed to Wheatley, establishing 1st down and 10. A pass to Avellino on the 3-yard line was dropped on the second play. Then, with 50 seconds to go, Wheatley caught a 17-yard pass, juggled the catch across the end zone, and, after the Lane kick, the Scots led 23-20. W&L made one final effort, they fumbled the ball, and the Scots took over for their victory after 3 straight defeats.

In statistics, W&L had 15 first downs as did Maryville, W&L rushed 43 times for 147 yards; the Scots rushed 41 times for 141 yards. W&L passed 30 times, had 13 caught, 3 intercepted for 158 yards. MC passed 29 times, had 10 completed, 1 intercepted for 155 yards. W&L punted 7 times for a 40-yard average; MC, 8 times also for a 40-yard average. W&L fumbled 6 times losing 5; MC fumbled once and lost it. W&L lost 34 yards in 3 penalties; MC lost 52 in 6. MC plays their last game Saturday against Guilford here at MC.

V-ballers head for tourney

by Birdie Hill

The Maryville College Lady Scots volleyball team lost two matches to Division II oponents, but beat Division III foe Midway as the Lady Scots concluded the regular season last Saturday.

First, Maryville lost to Xavier, Ohio 7-15, 14-16. The Ladies played a tough second game, but could not seem to pull it through. They were then defeated by Kentucky State 10-15, 4-15.

Maryville then rallied to down Midway 15-11, 13-13-15, 15-1. Midway is the top Division III power in Kentucky and the team the Lady Scots elminated from regional play last season. Maryville expects to meet Midway again this season in regionals.

The V-ballers will have one more week of practice before the state tournament, which will be held at Milligan College.

The Lady Scots record now stands at 27-10. All but two of their losses have been to Division I and II colleges.

The regional tournament will be held November 20-22 in the Maryville College Gym.

Zaneski Resigns

by Tom Hudson

Dan Zaneski has resigned as MC football coach effective immediately.

Zaneski, who cited personal reasons for the resignation, stated that he intends to remain in coaching and will look for employment elsewhere.

In an interview with Knoxville Journal Zaneski said, "This is not a spur-of-the-moment decision. It's been building up. I just wanted to look into some other opportunities. I have been looking into a few other things that I can't talk about now."

Zaneski came to MC last February from Plymouth (NH) State College where he was head coach. He had previously coached on the high school level and at Mattatuck (CT) Community College and the University of Louisville.

While at MC, Zaneski coached the Fighting Scots to a 5-5 record, setting a school record with the fifth straight .500 or better season.

In an official statement released by the College at noon on Monday, MC Vice President for Student Affairs Bill Strickland said, "Maryville College is appreciative of the work Dan Zaneski has done on behalf of the College and we trust he will be successful in his future endeavors."

When asked by the Echo if Zaneski's resignation was in anyway "forced" by the College administration, Dean Strickland replied, "I think it's only fair to say that he resigned because of reasons of his own."

When asked for comment, MC President Wayne Anderson stated, "I understand Dan's reason for resigning, and really wish him well."

Ladies are State Champs

by Birdie Hill

The Lady Scots volleyball team defended their state title this past weekend at Milligan College. Not only did they defeat the No. 1 seeded Bryan College, but they came very close to shutting them out in their last game, and they came away with the state champion plaque.

Maryville played Sewanee in their first game. The V-ballers had an easy time defeating Sewanee 15-8, 15-1.

Next, the team played the Milligan team. They won both games 15-11, 15-12. The Lady Scots' next game was with Carson-Newman. Again, the team won 15-10, 15-11.

The finals brought Maryville up against Bryan, a rival of the Lady Scots. Bryan and Maryville played a tough first game but the Lady Scots pulled through with a 15-12 victory. The V-ballers knew that if they won the 2nd game the state title would be theirs. With that desire, the team played an almost errorless game, and defeated Bryan again 15-1.

The wins this weekend brought the Lady Scots record to 31-10. The coaches and team were very excited about their big win over Bryan. Outstanding performances were given by Donna Owens, Sandy Rabun, and Rachel Reese. Both Donna and Rachel were named to the All-Tournament Team.

Coach Sharon Brown stated, "It feels just as good to win the second time around. Donna Owens had an outstanding offensive game. She was unbelievable! Everyone played well. Holly Harton and Carol Neal played excellent defense against Bryan. Rachel Reese played well, and DeeDee Chapman had some great sets against Bryan."

She also stated, "Robin Rimmer and Bonnie Dobson came in from the bench and both played well. It was a team win. We knew we were the most skilled team there. Teams with less skill and more desire can upset a team. We kept our poise and our skill and won. The girls have a lot to be proud of."

Thursday, the Regional Division III Volleyball Championships will be held at Maryville. Two pools of V-teams will be playing. Pool I consists of Maryville College, Bridgewater (at large), Columbia (at large), and Coker. Pool II will be Radford, Bryan (at large), North Carolina Wesleyan and the Kentucky State Champs.

The Lady Scots play Bridgewater at 7:00 Thursday night. Friday at 9:30, they will play Columbia and at 4:00, they'll play Coker. On Saturday the semi-finals and finals will be held.

Maryville students can see all MC games free of charge, but will have to pay $1.00 to see other tournament action. If anyone would be interested in working at the tournament, please see Sharon Brown in the P.E. office.

State of the Freshmen

Have you ever wondered how many of the 181 freshman at MC are from Tennessee? or Florida? or Georgia?

A list compiled by the Admissions Office, reveals that 69 Freshmen Scots hail from Tennessee, 45 from Florida, and 17 from Georgia.

New Jersey has contributed 19 students to the Class of '84, Massachusetts - 8, and 5 freshmen come from outside the U.S. The remaining 27 are from 11 other states.

On educational test scores, freshman women rank slightly higher than the men. On the ACT, women scored an average of 22, while the men achieved an average of 19. The gals took top honors in the SAT as well, scoring an average of 466 verbal, 466 math. The guys reailed behind with 447 verbal, 460 math.

As for high school class rank, 55% of this year's freshman females were in the top 5th of their class, while only 30% of the men were in the top 5th of theirs.

Tom Columns

Well, another term has gone by—we're another step closer to Winter Term.

Oh, the dreaded Winter Term! The mere mention of its name makes the blood of MC veterans run cold. Why? Because everything around this place gets DULL. You may think it's dull now, well, just wait a month or so and you'll see....

One can always tell the onslaught of Winter Term is just around the corner—it seems as if people start to get restless about the second or third week of Fall Term. Why else would anyone be doing something as boorish as waging warfare with food in the dining hall?

It's beginning to get out of hand. Last I heard Joe Powell was ordering riot gear for the employees. Now we all know that it doesn't go into a full-scale food fight, but it most certainly could if let go unchecked.

So let's stop messing around with flying food. The dining hall employees don't deserve the hassle....

Enough sermonizing—here's an item I received in the mail a few weeks back from some obscure group out in California or somewhere. Being that I really don't have time to write a full column, I thought I'd throw it in this week's edition.

11:53 A.M. Moscow time, the red telephone rings in Leonid Brezhnev's spacious bedroom, "It's President Carter to speak to you," says the dark-eyed operator Shimka Shostakovitch.

"All right, I'll talk to him," says the Politburo secretary, sleepily. "Put the translator on too. I wonder what he wants from me at this hour of the night. Maybe he's going to give me another auto."

"Leonid," comes the telephone voice from 5,000 miles away, "I've had some disturbing news. Rosalynn said I should telephone you."

"Jimmy, there must be some mistake. We've been bending over backwards not to cause any incidents. We're even serving Pepsi-Cola as a vodka chaser."

"No, Leonid, no problem. There, it's my stupid scientists. They tell me we're developing so many new weapons, that things are going to get out of control. Even the Republicans are getting worried."

"That's funny, Jimmy. I got the same message from my stupid scientists. They said the only way out was for one of us to surrender, preferably you."

"OK Leonid, if that's the way it has to be, let's flip a coin. . . Oh no. . . That would never go over with the Senate. They're even annoyed that I serve too much peanut butter at the White House Luncheons."

"I'll tell you what, Jimmy, you tell your Senate that we'll run a five mile race and I'll tell my Politburo we'll play a game of chess to see who surrenders."

"Leonid, you're a genius. Just for that, even if we win, I'll scrap the plan to turn Red Square into Kremlinland and to put advertising on the Moscow subway."

"Jimmy, you're a Southern gentleman. If we win, I'll cancel those big pictures of Karl Marx on the World Trade Center, and we won't plant cabbages on the Red House, I mean the White House [illegible]"

"Leonid, one good turn deserves another, After disarming, you can keep your Red Army and put them to work in your department stores and eliminate waiting lines in your next 5 year plan."

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

In the last two editions of "The Highland Echo" (Nov. 6 and Nov. 13) were two editorials that, to say the least, both shock and worry me. I am referring to the two articles on Ronald Reagan, our new President-elect.

I realize that Ronald Reagan is not, in the editor's opinion, the best man for the job, but the majority of the American people-myself included - believe that he is. The time has come for us to cease our harsh evaluations of President-elect Regan and to stand behind him, cooperating with him in every way possible. Continued criticism and unfair judgment of Mr. Reagan as we have seen displayed in the editorial column of this paper can only serve to further close the already narrow-minded attitudes that some Americans have toward our new leader. Ronald Reagan himself cannot make or break our nation—only we, the people, can.

Sincerely,
Lisa Smith

In an effort to make clubs and organizations more upstanding leaders on campus, and to create solidarity in regard to clubs and organizations as a whole, I have had little response.

In an all-out effort and with little response, I am deeply disappointed at the lack of consideration by any club or organization that has not at this time turned in any information to the Office of Student Affairs about their existence.

If there wasn't any need for our committee to put forth a sincere effort in trying to straighten out a problem, we would not have taken this position. But we see a problem that is in existence and are trying to solve it before it gets any worse.

All we ask is a little consideration on your part as mature adults to help us by turning in your list of officer(s), and faculty advisor(s).

Sincerely,
Ronnie Wyche
Chairman, Clubs and Organizations

Dear Editor,

Many thanks to the football team for a job well done. I feel honored to be connected with a team which ended its last game with a fight, while the band played "Hail to Maryville!" and the fans shouted encouragement.

I'm proud to belong to MC.

Bio majors take scientific approach to their careers

by Ed Brewer

Maryville College offers its students a variety of choices regarding their studies. Biology is a major in which MC students have unique opportunities to study and practice their individual specialties. These options are available because of the small size of the college, its variety of courses, and the college's proximity to so many sites of natural interest. Many career possibilities are available to those who major in biology.

Joe Sprigg ('80) and James Gonos ('77) are both working as teacher/demonstrators for Oak Ridge Associated Universities in Oak Ridge, Tennessee.

Jack Terry Pearson ('78) worked for a year as a biological research assistant at Vanderbilt University before entering the University of Tennessee Medical School in the fall of 1979.

Susan Smith Naylor ('79) is now employed as Supervisor of Labs at Webb School, a private, co-educational secondary school near Knoxville, Tennessee.

Sandra Chambers Reagan ('77) is now employed as a water quality specialist for the Environmental Health Service of the Tennessee Health Department.

David (P.C.) Vigh ('79) is pursuing graduate studies in microbiology at James Madison University in Virginia.

Other graduates from Maryville College have used their biology degrees to enter into a variety of careers and fields including the following: Physician, Dentist, Limnologist, TVA, birth defect specialist, computer program designer, TVA Forest Ecologist, Veterinarian, Director of egg hatchery, Environmental monitoring technician, Director of hospital toxicology unit.

Over 14 courses in different areas of biology are offered by the college, and classified by individual specialties. Students are not pushed into a standardized regimen of courses, but, rather, fitted with a custom-tailored schedule of courses upon recommendation of a major advisor.

Biology, chemistry, mathematics, and other courses are recommended for a student's total degree program on an individual basis, whether the student's interest may be in Microbiology, ecology, pre-medicine, pre-dentistry, biochemistry, or another interest.

This individual tailoring is at the heart of Maryville's biology program, and provides the student with special opportunities to plan a program suited to his/her specific needs. Students wishing to plan individualized majors for such career fields as technical writing, medical technology, and other fields may do so under the supervision of a major advisor.

Maryville College presently relates work with the Tremont Environmental Education Center, where course work is offered by special arrangement in numerous biological specialties. The Center is located inside the Smoky Mountain National Park - one of the nation's largest unspoiled natural areas - and offers a ten-week practicum program for those interested in environmental studies.

Mike Weiss was unable to reach Coach Zaneski for his comments on the resignation.

Zaneski's resignation makes him the third MC football coach to leave the College in the span of four years.

The recent "Amnesty Days" at the MC library produced positive results. 93 books, six periodicals, and one reserve item were returned. Many of these were long overdue, and some had been considered lost. Fines totaling $47.50 were waived.

This was the library's first experiment with the "Amnesty Days." Student and faculty response was very good, and the process has made many materials once again available to other users.

Handel's oratorio Messiah was presented last Sunday in the Wilson Chapel. This was the 48th performance of the work at MC and the 33rd directed by Dr. Harry Harter.

Give a gift, get a rock

by Angela Murphy

The theme of the 1980 - 81 fund drive for scholarships, faculty development, athletics, etc., is the Maryville College Cairn. A cairn is, by definition, a heap of stones, used as a monument or landmark. Cairns were often placed by Scottish Highlanders as a promise to keep their tradition alive.

This year, in a campaign which runs from July 1, 1980 to June 30, 1981, alumni and friends are being asked to donate monetary "stones" to MC. These gifts represent their desire to continue the Maryville tradition of quality Christian education.

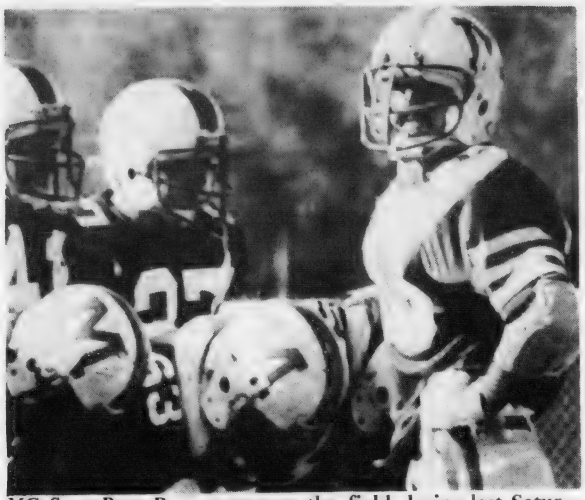
While all gifts will be greatly appreciated, special societies have been set up for the most dedicated supporters. The first is the William Thaw society. Named for the man responsible for MC's first $1,000 contribution, this society is for anyone who promises $100 or more each year. Contributors will be recognized in various ways throughout the year.

The second society is named for the man who raised the money to reopen the college after the Civil War. Members of the Thomas Jefferson Lamar Society are those who promise $500 or more per year. They also receive special recognition.

The premier group is the Isaac Anderson Society. Anyone who donates $10,000 in any one of several ways, or makes a deferred gift of $25,000 or more will become a member. Recognition will include an annual gathering for members only.

More information on the Maryville College Cairn and envelopes for donations are available in the Alumni Office.

Song and Dance break



This evening at 6:30 pm, when all MC students are, or should be, frantically cramming for finals, the MC Concert Choir will present a "Lemonade Pops Concert" in the Chapel.

The program will feature a medley from the musical "Oklahoma!" Soloists will include Bill Thomas as Curley; Karen Kotz and Sayers Green as Laurey. Mary Janeway along with a newcomer, Shada Overton, portray Aunt Eller, a woman with definite ideas. Peggy Herbert and Tammy Lytle will characterize Ado Annie, while Allen Evitts is Alli Hackem. Frank Fiore portrays Andrew Carnes, while Mark Beyer and Dave Kibben share the role of Ike. A welcome addition to the cast is Tim Fitzgerald as Will Parker.

During the dream sequence, Sayers Green and Allen Evitts will take us away with an original dance.

Refreshments will be served in the lobby after the performance.

MC Scot Pete Barron surveys the field during last Saturday's game against Guilford.

Scots crunched by Quakers

by Steve Arnold

Guilford College ended the Scots' season Saturday on a losing note as they defeated MC, 14-0. The game was the biggest defensive battle of the year as both defenses stood strong on the wet, slippery ground. However, there was a bright spot for the Scots—running back Kevin Skipper rushed to a new MC record, rolling up a total of 1008 yards for this past season.

Neither team could cross the goal-line in the 1st period and it was not until 5 minutes into the 2nd period that either team scored. Guilford forced MC to punt 22 yards to the Scots' 20-yard line. Guilford drove to the Scots' 5-yard line; with the aid of two offside penalties by the Scots, where running back Keith Milner ran across from the 1-yard line and the kick made the score 7-0. The rest of the 2nd period saw the defensive battle again and Guilford took a 7-0 halftime lead.

Defense again was the big factor in the 3rd period. With 8 minutes left in the period, the referees got into a flag throwing contest. After it was over the Scots faced 1st down and 40 to go. The Scots received aid from Guilford on a pass interference call that gave the Scots 1st down and 10, on the 50-yard line. Starting a drive, Boda threw 25 yards to Chris Stanfill who the Scots had a field goal made a diving catch to give the Scots another first down. Peter Crowley then took the ball up the middle for 20 yards to the 5-yard line. The Scots missed a chance to score as a pass to Tim Perkins in the end-zone fell through his arms. The Scots had to settle for a field goal attempt but the snap was fumbled, the kick never got off the ground, and the score remained 7-0.

The 4th period was also a struggle and it was not until the clock ticked down to 1 minute left in the game when Steve Wilner picked off a Boda pass. He returned it 39 yards for a touchdown and after the kick, Guilford led 14-0. The Scots made one final driving effort with passes to Avellino for 15 yards and Wheatley for 25 yards but could go nowhere past the 18-yard line. With 5 seconds left in the game, attempt blocked and Guilford took the win, 14-0.

In statistics, Guilford had 9 first downs to MC's 17. Guilford rushed 53 times for 83 yards. MC got only 1 yard rushing in 32 attempts. MC quarterbacks were sacked several times during the game. Guilford passed 9 times completing 3 for 30 yards. MC passed 45 times for 214 yards completing 18 with 3 intercepted. Both teams had a punting average of 36 yards, and both teams had 73 yards against them in penalties.

B-ball Scots fired up for winning season

After one of the most successful seasons in Maryville College basketball history, the Scots face a new challenge this year. After a 15-11 mark in 1979-80, Coach Rick Byrd left for an assistant's job at Tennessee Tech. He is replaced by Randy Lambert. MC will also be entering it's first year of competition in ODAC (Old Dominion Athletic Conference).

The Scots will be led by forward Rick Suttle, last year's leading scorer (16.2 per game) and rebounder (7.7 per game). Center Dale Watson (7.9 p.p.g., 5.2 r.p.g.) and forward Doug Tutin (7.3 p.p.g., 3.7 r.p.g.) return to anchor the MC frontcourt and middle. The Scots will miss the playmaking, scoring, and defense of Rodney Nelson in the backcourt, who played out his eligibility last year and now assists Lambert as coach. Hoping to fill Nelson's shoes at guard will be sophomore Andrew Baker (2.2 p.p.g., 1.0 r.p.g.), Tom Weston (3.3 p.p.g., 2.4 r.p.g.), and Jackie Carlton, a transfer.

The Scots open their 25-game schedule on November 24, at Centre (Ky.) College.

MARYVILLE COLLEGE, MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE

Vol. 66 No. 10

Tennessee Governor Lamar Alexander will perform light classical music and country music classics with the Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra (MACCO) on Monday night in MC's Wilson Chapel.

Governor to tune up MC

by Ed Brewer

Gov. Lamar Alexander, resident of Maryville and member of the Maryville College Board of Directors, will perform with the Maryville-Alcoa College Community Orchestra (MACCO) at 8:15 p.m., Monday, January 26, in MC's Wilson Chapel.

According to an article in the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times, Gov. Alexander had indicated his effort to bridge the gap beween classical and country to show concert-goers that beautiful melodies have come out of both styles of music. He also wants to show that "it isn't hard to enjoy a symphony concert."

The performance will include classical tunes as well as contemporary country music with such selections as: Chopin's "Prelude in A Major," and "Prelude in C Minor;" Bach's "Prelude in C Minor;" and Paderewski's "Minuet in G." Gov. Alexander will also play a medley of Nashville tunes including Hank Williams' "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry," Eddie Miller's "Release Me," Bobby Russell's "Honey," Curly Putnam's "Green, Green Grass of Home," and Randy Goddrum's "You Needed Me" arranged for Gov. Alexander by Gene Mullens, principal trombonist of the Nashville Symphony Orchestra.

In addition to the combined pieces, MACCO will perform Dvorak's 'Slavonic Dance No. 1 in C Major,' Shubert's "Unfinished Symphony," and Wallingford Riegger's "Dance Rhythms."

Tickets for the concert and reception that follows cost $5 each and can be purchased in the FAC office or various branch locations of area banks.

MACCO season ticket holders will have preferred seating for the concert and should check by the ticket counter in Wilson Chapel before 8 p.m. the night of the concert to pick up a seating ticket.

The performance will be a CIV credit for those

The 1981 edition of WHO'S WHO AMONG STUDENTS IN AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES AND COLLEGES will carry the names of 16 students from Maryville College, who have been selected as being among the country's most outstanding campus leaders.

They join an elite group of students selected from more than 1,300 institutions of higher learning in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and several foreign nations.

Outstanding students have been honored in the annual directory since it was first published in 1934.

Students named this year from Maryville College are: Bryan Ashley, Shelley Ballenger, Elizabeth Barrie, Patty Berkau, Lawrence Bidwell, Lois Boney, Meelora Bowers, Katherine Culpepper, Larry Durand, James Engel, Barbara George, Paul Heinze, Carol Neal, David Widner, Linda Wiley, and Larry Wright.

Ogden is coach

by Mike Weiss

The latest upheaval in MC athletics ended last Dec. 19 when Art Ogden was named head football coach, succeding Dan Zaneski, who resigned amid controversy.

Ogden came to Maryville last summer as acting athletic director, assistant football coach, and defensive coordinator for the Scots, and lecturer in physical education.

On his new appointment, Ogden commented: "I am highly honored Maryville College has selected me to lead the Fighting Scots football program. There are many proud traditions connected with this campus and we will strive to continue winning football as one of those traditions."

MC Vice-President Bill Strickland said Ogden was chosen from a list of 40 applicants because of "his administrative skills already demonstrated as acting athletic director and as assistant football coach, his knowledge of football, his concern for the broad spectrum of the Maryville College athletic program and its role within the larger context of higher education, his strong teaching qualifications, his organizational abilities, and his ability to motivate the staff and students."

The new coach has already begun efforts to recruit what he calls "the good student/athlete."

Ogden is the Scots' fourth coach in four years, but the MC mentor states, "I intend to remain here as long as the College wants me."

Phones have new ring

by Tommy Brown

A new centralized, computerized phone system has been installed on the Maryville College campus. According to Raymond "Brick" Brahams, Vice President of the Administration, the new system will provide much improved service.

The system's central switchboard is in the receptionist's office in Anderson. 120 extension phones are around the campus and can be reached by dialing a 3-digit number. An additional feature of the system is that all of the extensions are connected to the Watts Line and a Knoxville extension.

Someone calling the school will reach the central switchboard where the operator dials the extension number and the caller reaches the correct person.

According to Mr. Brahams, the system cost $70,000, but will pay for itself within the next 10 years by saving money on long distance telephone costs. In addition, when it is paid for, the system will belong to the school and not be rented from the phone company.

Well, Princeton, have it Yahweh....

PRINCETON, NJ (CPS) – God has applied to Princeton.

Hoping to be accepted to the Class of 1985, God wrote a "personal statement" in December to the Princeton Admissions Office stating that He would like to "experience first-hand what college life is presently like." He added that it would not seem right that He listen in on courses when He has not been admitted.

The application was brought to the attention of James Wickenden, Director of admissions, who reported to the Princeton Weekly Bulletin that the candidate entered his name only as "God." In describing Himself, God checked both male and female for gender and checked all possible ethnic origins, in addition to writing "You name it!" next to the ethnic origin response marked "other."

Wickenden said he was not surprised at the applicant's test scores – perfect 800's on both math and verbal portions of the SAT. However, He hadn't fared quite as well on the College Entrance Examination Board's achievement tests. An error on the relativity question on the physics achievement test dropped the score to only 760. On the application, though, God resolutely maintained "Einstein is wrong," perhaps proving that to err is divine.

In biology, He scored 770 because His answers on the evolution question were also marked as incorrect.

In the essay portion of the application, God wrote His academic and intellecual interests included "discreetly helping people and listening to prayers."

"I take advantage of dreams and apparent accidents or mistakes (the realization of the structure of benzene and the discovery of penicillin are good examples of each) and get to be of service to mankind," He elaborated.

Also included in his "non-academic activities" were "arranging the weather," which takes up 168 hours each week, as does "listening to prayers." Additionally, God reported spending 14 hours per week "turning day into night" and another 14 "turning night into day."

Although a federal privacy statute dictates that Wickenden cannot release any information contained in admissions applications, he told the Weekly Bulletin he thought it appropriate in this case to "be responsive to a higher law." He acknowledged that this application was "the first of its kind" that he had seen.

"A couple of fictitious applications have been submitted over the years," he said, "but those were of a different nature because they involved human applicants."

The admissions office has no idea where the application came from, but said that the question received much speculation from students. The director has not received any applications involving fictitious persons since that time, and does not expect that this incident will trigger any other practical jokes.

"Everyone regarded it as a clever ruse," he said. "I hope it made people laugh."

In releasing the information about the candidate, Wickenden noted that a separate application had been included in the envelope. Even God, it seems, cannot escape certain human conditions. He applied for financial aid.

Tom Columns

It's almost hard to believe -- after 444 days, 52 American hostages are on their way to freedom.

At the time of this writing, the former captives are flying out of Iranian airspace on the way to West Germany.

Sitting here in the Echo office, television on, being bombarded with imformation on the "freedom flight" and the inauguration that may just go down in the history books as the ceremony "most overshadowed," I thank God that this dark and very frightening episode seems to be coming to an end.

And as much as former President Carter must be credited for remaining a "cool head" and dealing rationally and sensibly in this crisis, I believe it may be said that the impending ascension of Ronald Reagan to the presidency could have been an important contribution to the swift conclusion of the U.S./Algerian/Iranian negotiations. As the prevailing campus anecdote states maybe the Iranians got the joke, "What's flat and glows? Iran on January 21."

At this time the final chapter of this crisis seems to be almost written on the pages of history. But what about future U.S. foreign policy? What will the swing to conservatism in America bring about?

Perhaps it is time for such a change -- in values, in perceptions. The people of the United States need to ask themselves some very crucial questions. Should the U. S. make a habit of bowing down to terrorism, if in fact that is what the transfer of billions of dollars to Iran in exchange for the freedom of U.S. individuals really is? Should the U.S. become a hard-nosed, unbending nation, ready to lob nuclear warheads on anyone who [illegible]

Are changes needed in the "American Way", and if so, should these changes be enacted from within the U.S., or from an external point of view?

As we begin this new year, and embark upon the leadership of a new administration, let us contemplate these points, and work together, that no more will the U.S. be put in such a position as the hostage crisis.

Historic house gets new lease on life from MC

by Ruth Reese

Thanks to MC students, restoration of the historic Thompson-Brown house is nearing completion. The house will be opened to the public following a dedication on March 3.

The two-story log house sits on property which was owned by the College prior to the winter of 1975, when it was sold to Blount County for the construction of a new health center. The college, which acquired the land in 1934, had operated a dairy there for some years.

The house had been weatherboarded by previous owners, the Browns, and few people knew about the original log structure. Dr. Sarah McNiell, then of MC's history department, was a descendant of the Browns. Suzanne Phillips, then chairman of the ACC, and Dr. Nichols, math department, joined with her to help save the house.

According to the 1975 agreement, the College had the right to remove the building and agreed to lease land to any organization which would assume responsibility for the restoration and continued maintenance of the house. A group of MC students organized a chapter of the Tennessee Anthropology Association; the organization originally had 250 members dedicated to restoring historical sites.

The group had planned to tear the house down and reconstruct it in the College Woods. With this in mind, some of the students, faculty, and staff members devoted Saturdays to dismantling the house and selling salvaged materials. These "Rip-off Days," as they were called, raised approximately $1,300 for the project.

The students and faculty involved began to feel that it was important to leave the house at its present site, so the historical value would not be destroyed. The Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times, the Chamber of Commerce, the Blount County Board of Realtors, and others supported the group in this proposal. The Blount County Quarterly Court gave its approval for the house to remain where it is.

Restoration has been going on in spite of setbacks due to lack of funds. Recently, the Smoky Mountain Tourist Building Association helped to get enough funds to finish restoration of the two main rooms. One of the rooms will be used as a tourist information center, and the other will be a museum of 19th century life.

The Thompson-Brown house, built before 1820, is probably the oldest house in Maryville. In 1815, William Thompson bought the land where the house now stands.

Men's B-ball update

by Rodney Nelson

"Lest auld acquaintance be forgot" are familiar words to people who bring in the new year with a fresh resolve to right wrongs and climb to new heights. The 1981 Basketball Scots have definitely brought in a new resolve which has produced 3 wins and 1 loss in the past week-and-a-half.

The last month of 1980 had the Scots at 3 wins and 3 losses; but the 3 victories which came consecutively were harbingers of future success in a new year.

Eastern Mennonite Royals, an ODAC opponent, unveiled their high scoring offensive show on January 9 before a quiet crowd.

Maryville, minus Rich Suttle (leading rebounder and scorer) to the flu, put on an impressive show with Dale Watson having 27 points and 11 rebounds, yet they fell victim to a 25-foot last second jumper 87 to 85. The Scots outrebounded their opponents 42 to 30, outshot them from the field 56% to 52%, but could only convert 13 of 25 free throws, which "was the major difference."

On January 12 the Scots met an "ole acquaintance" in southwestern at Memphis. SAM was rated 7th in the National Division III ratings. Southwestern, who lost their first game of the season the night before, was looking for a victory but seemed to be overconfident, according to Lynx cat quard, Matt Bakke. A balanced attack (Jackie Carlton 18 points, Richard Suttle 16 points, and Doug Tutin 15 points), stingy defense (SAM 36% from the field), and overall inspired play produced a Herculean upset 78 to 62.

After that impressive triumph the team took on a vastly improved Emory & Henry team in an important ODAC game. A flat first half coupled with ten minutes of inconsistent basketball in the second-half placed the Scots in a desperate situation. However, the play of Andrew Baker (6 of 8 pressure free throws), Doug Tutin, and Jackie Carlton in the last ten minutes pushed the game into overtime at 56 to 56.

The five minutes of overtime brought out a totally dominating Scotty Dog team. Clutch free throws and pin-point passing produced an overtime blowout which ended in a 69 to 62 victory for the Scots. Improving point man Jackie Carlton finished with 18 points and 4 assists; Richard Suttle tossed in 13 points, and grabbed 7 rebounds, while Dale Watson popped in 11 points while snatching a career high 16 boards.

January 15 saw Maryville at home playing before a noisy, spirited crowd as Centre Coilege, another "Ole Acquaintance," invaded the Scots territory. Maryville was seeking revenge for their initial season loss to the Centre College Colonels. The grudge match had Maryville winning 65 to 59 as freshman Bobby Rimmer fired in 14 points, dished out 4 assists, and pulled in 4 rebounds. Clutch free throw shooting (15 of 18) insured victory for the Scots in the last hectic minutes. Coach Lambert explained the current Scot resurgence in terms of greater intensity offensively and defensively, execution of basic offensive fundamentals, but most importantly, the emergence of greater team unity and team confidence. "The team has begun to play together with a consistency and a team cohesiveness that was missing the first 4 or 5 games," said Coach Lambert. Presently, the Maryville Scots stand 6 and 4 overall, with a 2 and 1 ODAC record.

Women's B-ball

by Brenda Babb

looking at a 5-3 record and looking forward to a promising year. Two of their three losses were 4-point defeats, one in double overtime to Fisk, the defending State champions, and the other to Covenant College, a Division II school.

Playing with only six players because of the volleyball team's trip to the nationals, the Lady Scots trounced Milligan, 75-67, rolled over Emory & Henry, 74-67, and then stumbled and fell hard to Tennessee Wesleyan, 96-62. The return of the V-ballers saw a hard-fought win over Warren-Wilson, 65-56, before Christmas break. MC picked up a charity win from St. Mary's via forfeit, and then brought in the New Year by soundly whipping Bryan, 76-46.

Then came the two heart-breakers with Covenant and Fisk, both which could have easily gone the other way if the Scots had cashed in on the free throw line. Brenda Babb had 23 points against Covenant and Sandy Rabun had 16. The Lady Scots had a balanced scoring [illegible] against Fisk; Brenda Babb led the scoring with 16 points, Sandy Rabun fired in 14, and Melissa Sullivan and Candy Nutter each contributed 12.

Coach Sharon Brown says she is generally pleased with the way her team is looking and is optimistic about the team's tournament chances. However, she is disappointed with their performance at the free throw line. She commented, "It is frustrating to miss free shots, especially when both of those games could have been won at the line. We're going to work on that."

Sen. Howard Baker addresses guests at the Blount County Chamber of Commerce banquet Friday.

Baker speaks at banquet

by Tom Hudson

Sen. Howard Baker, Jr. was the guest speaker at the annual banquet of the Blount County Chamber of Commerce held in Pearsons Hall's Margaret Ware Dining Room, Friday, January 23.

Baker, in his first major speech since the inauguration of Ronald Reagan, emphasized to the 500 persons in attendance the need for bi-partisan support in "quest for national solvency and the need to strengthen the "military defenses" and "diplomatic initiative which is now inadequate to the threat which exists external to the U.S."

In beginning his short address, Baker commented on the heritage of Blount County and how he was "proud of the traditions of this Strict, United Presbyterian" and commented Dr. Anderson on Maryville College and its work as a "truly great institution," adding that it was "a pleasure to be back at Maryville College."

After comments on the recent presidential inauguration and the "continuing of the unfolding of the American Dream," Sen. Baker spoke of the economic situation of the United States.

"I expect there will be difficult days ahead," stated Baker. He also stated that he did not "believe a Republican administration or a Democratic administration can effect change by itself."

Baker emphasized bipartisan support or the American system would be destroyed. The Senator also called "for less federal direction, more local control" if the U.S. strives for cost effectiveness.

In his address, Sen. Baker made no direct reference to the Iranian situation of the resolved hostage crisis, but stated that the U.S. as a nation needs to "reverse our trend toward weakness," both diplomatically and militarily, and called for the updating and modernizing of "reserve as well as active forces."

Baker stressed the need to "accumulate, reinvest, and re-arm," and closed his address by saying "America's future is still before it, not behind it."

"America will rise from these trying times stronger than our adversaries will dare imagine."

After his address, when asked by reporters for his comments on the Iranian situation, Sen. Baker stated that the treatment of the hostages "bordered on atrocity," but the U.S. must "let the wound heal" and "proceed cautiously."

Immediately after the program Sen. Baker left to return to Washington.

Coffeehouse perks up MC night-life

by Andrea Vousden

Winter term Coffeehouse was held January 24 in Pearsons Dining Hall with emcee George Cassutto. The varied acts ranged from singing and signing to a light pantomime and two readings.

Among the singing groups were Tim Fitzgerald, Zoe Parks, and Jeana Webb with their version of "The Rose." Teresa Perkins and Debbie Hall sang a selection from Godspell, "By My Side." Johnny Flush and the Commodes made a comeback after a year's absence and were aided by audience dancers, Paul Heinze and Dottie Carson, Glen Katz and Bob McQuade. Tim Fitzgerald and Mike Weiss joined to sing "Blowin' in the Wind" and "Starry, Starry Night."

Solos were sung by Cathy Carter, Jeana Webb, and Debbie Hall. Emcee George Cassutto made an "attempt at music" with a selection from Elton John, followed by a piano solo by Bill Bendor.

Monica Page and Howard Donaldson did a dance routine. Signing was done by Jean Plant and Donna Czegledi to "Celebrate," Sherry Laipply and Jean Plant to "9 to 5."

Our emcee did some faculty impersonations of Drs. Lewis and Beck and, with the help of Tim Fitzgerald, Dr. Kim. Tom Hudson read an article dealing with the effects of alcohol called "Predicate Junction."

Jean Plant put together a skit about the coherence of radio stations using a children's story, sports, exercise program, cooking, fashion, and music. The light pantomime was about Nancy Reagan's fifth child.

Cathy Angel organized the Coffeehouse with the sound system run by Mike Clark, Matt Cragle, Sharon Crane and Rich Battaglia.

"Little feet" cost MC big bucks

by Tommy Brown

Vandalism is not an extensive problem on the Maryville College campus. According to Hugh Crawford, [illegible]

Even though it could be worse it is still a problem, and it costs money to clean up. A recent example of unnecessary expense due to vandalism is the clean-up of some of the infamous footprints. It cost $125.00 to sandblast the paint from in front of Pearson's Hall and on the asphalt in front of the Post Office. There are also more footprints that have not been cleaned up. According to Crawford, he is not sure when the additional sandblasting will be done.

Most of the vandalism takes place in the dorms. Jane Richardson, Dean of Student Affairs, provided statistics comparing the cost of damage this fall to last fall and the overall cost for last year. Copeland has the costliest amount of damage this year with a total of $279.81 as compared to $55.00 last fall and a yearly total for last year of $657.00. This damage includes the cost of a broken back door, 5 straightback chairs thrown from a balcony, clean-up and refill of fire extinguishers, and $20.00 for cleanup of the lobby when it was excessvandalism. This year the total is $156.37 as compared to last fall with $177.75 and the total last year of $546.00.

Pearson's Hall has $74.50 in damage so far as compared to $301.50 last fall (a notable decrease), and $686.60 last year.

Lloyd has $43.00 this fall as compared to no damage last year. So the Lloyd women will have to pay for some damage this year.

Davis has the least amount of damage with none thus far this year, none last fall, and only $35.00 of damage for last year.

Who pays for these damages? Students do. In some cases the students who perpetrate the damage admit it or they are caught. If this occurs they pay for the damage. When the perpetrator does not pay, the students in the dorm have their part of the cost taken from their $50.00 dorm damage deposit.

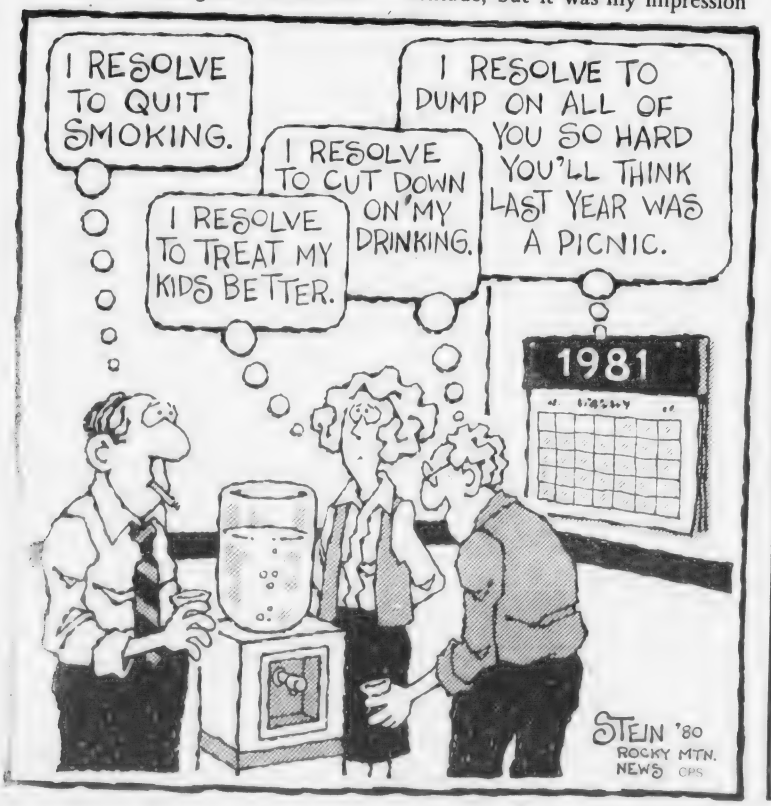
Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,



Once again someone writes to complain. That may seem typical during Winter term, but this complaint has been brewing over a period of two years of financial fretting. It seems to some of us upperclassmen that the administration is behind a giant conspiracy. What is this conspiracy? To rake in as many freshmen as possible. This is fine...but not when false insinuations are used and not when a student makes a commitment here and then, too late, realizes the [illegible] financial aid. In the last couple of years since Dr. Perkins has become Academic Dean, MC has tried to upgrade its academic standards. That goal is to be commended. However, the number and amount of academic scholarships that are awarded to upperclassmen is pitifully small.

I am aware of the Presidential Scholar program which was instituted in the fall of 1978. That still leaves a few remaining seniors this year who are keeping their grades up and trying to be active in the affairs of the school, yet are receiving no academic scholarships. Now, my question is: Where is the incentive? Why even try to keep grades [illegible] to give a damn anyway? After all, everyone who graduates gets the same sheepskin the same end result.

I realize that this is an idealistic attitude, but it was my impression (after four years of exposure to MC indoctrination and propaganda) that Maryville College is an idealistic institution striving for the best. Then, I ask, where is the reward for being and doing your best? I can see none.

To me, that doesn't say much about this school. What can you say about a school that gives the boot to a good number of students who have failed to attain a certain level of academic standing yet does nothing to reward those students become a four-year baby-sitting service for those who can afford it. It can be assured that MC will never get any money from this alumnus-to-be, because I know that the students who need and deserve it won't get it.

A Concerned Senior

"Mr. President, this new phone system you had installed in the White House seems to be working out rather nicely."

"Yes, I agree. You know, I believe an investment like this will really pay off in the long run. Especially the California line. Do you realize how much money will be saved?"

"Oh, a lot. But isn't it hard to operate—all those buttons I mean?"

"Well, not really. Here we have a list of extensions. But we don't use this list—that's last week's list. No, we use this one here.

"As you see, all departments have a number. I'm number 1, my press secretary is number 90, the War Department is number 17, and so on."

Tom Columns

"But sir, we don't have a War Department."

"Well, George, yes we do. That's the extension to the living quarters upstairs—it's Nancy's estension."

"Do I get one sir, an extension I mean?"

"Of course, George. And you don't have to call me sir. We're a team—we can be informal with each other. On the new list you are designated as number 2.

I thought that this would be very symbolic. Nancy wanted number 2, but I strictly forbade it."

"Wasn't she upset Ron, I mean did she get mad?"

"Well, sure she was, but everything's alright. No need to worry. I hid all the little bullets that go in her little gun. You know the one with the pretty engraving on the barrel?"

"Ron, you are indeed a man of high caliber."

"Well, enough small talk, let me show you how to work this phone system. The man from No-Tel Tel[illegible] the other day, it looked fairly simple. Said there may be a few bugs in the system, but they could be worked out.

"Well, let's call the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, they're on our list. We punch this number here—well, it's ringing....."

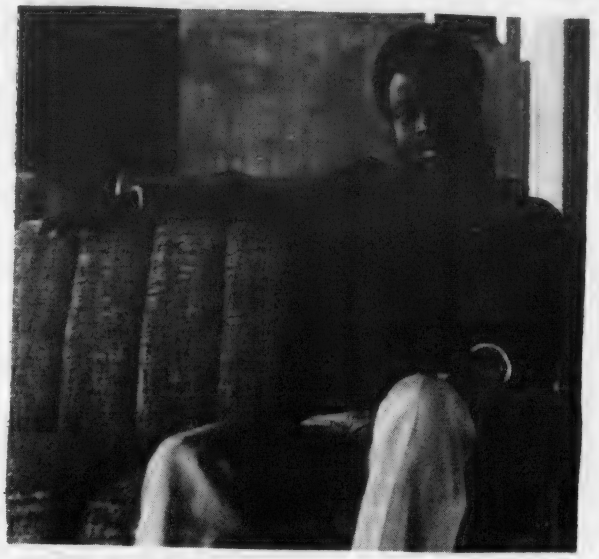
Morgan joins MC faculty

by Ruth Reese

The newest addition to MC's faculty is Dr. John Conteh-Morgan from Sierra Leone in West Africa. Dr. Morgan, currently teaching French 102, is part of an exchange program sponsored by the Phelps-Stokes Foundation in New York.

The Foundation hopes that student and teacher exchanges will help foster an understanding between the two cultures. Dr. Morgan was recommended to the director, and accepted the offer to teach French anywhere in America for two terms.

Dr. Morgan has done under-graduate work in France and graduate work in Britain where he got his Ph.D. in 1978. Since that time, he has been teaching at Fourah Bay College in Sierra Leone. This is his first visit to the United States.



The main difference between America and Europe, he says, is "What Europe has, America has ten times bigger." Sierra Leone is not as urbanized as either America or Europe, but is mainly agricultural with a few large urban centers. Subsistence farming is the usual way of making a living in rural areas.

Dr. Morgan says that Maryville's slow pace of life makes integration into the community easier. It would be much more difficult to get to know students and staff members in a large university setting. The only disadvantage is that the college is so far from cities such as Knoxville.

Dr. Morgan finds MC's French students enthusiastic and attentive. The only difference between teaching French at Maryville and at Fourah Bay is that French is not a major here, so there are no literature classes. Dr. Morgan will be at MC through spring term.

PERSONALS

Bobby Rimmer, Esq., will present a seminar on the Dale Carnegie course, "How to Win Friends and Influence People" Friday, 7:30 PM in Copeland 317. The program is free and open to everyone.

Dr. John Conteh-Morgan provides a welcomed addition to the MC community.

Search for Rev. revved up

by Kim Morris

What is a Church-related school without a Chaplain? (Don't even say "A day without sunshine.") A Church-related school without a Chaplain is what [illegible] many students are disturbed about it.

In the past two years we have had two Chaplains; this year we have none. (Wee, wee, wee all the way home.) I asked Carol Coffey, Sophomore and Co-Chairman of the Worship and Religious Programs Committee, what she believes are the biggest problems caused by our noticeable lack of a Chaplain. Aside from there being no one to turn to for religious counseling (a complaint heard from more than a [illegible] strong sense of unity now lacking on campus.

The committee formed to find a Chaplain is chaired by Dean Strickland, and is composed of three students, three faculty members, and one board member. The committee hopes to have a Chaplain installed on campus by Spring term.

When questioned as to the advisability of having a Chaplain who will also be required to teach, Dean Strickland replied that "major emphasis will remain on the Chaplaincy."

[illegible] the position of Maryville College Chaplain. The deadline for applications is this week. Strickland says he is aware the committee is moving slowly, but he hopes this slow, purposeful search will bring to Maryville College a Chaplain who will stay awhile. Amen.

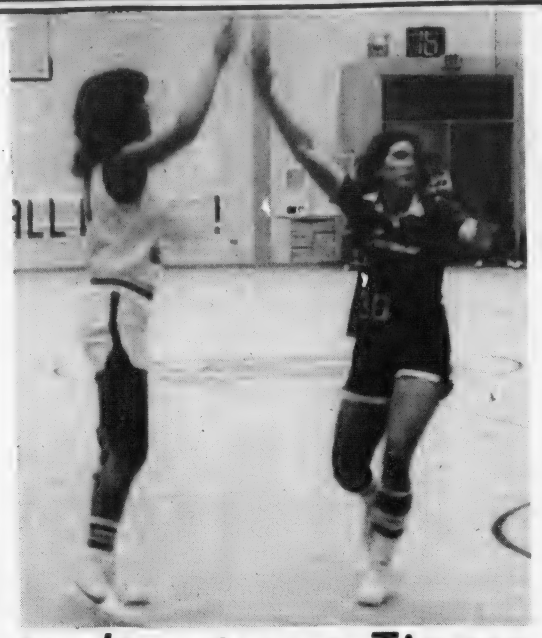
Scots hit winning streak

by Rodney Nelson

How about them Dawgs!! (Scotty dogs that is.) Maryville's cagers are riding high with an overall record of 9-4, an ODAC record of 3-1, and a rumor of a possible national ranking. Disregarding the rumor, the Scots have become a solid, hard-working team who have won 9 out of the last 10 games against fine competition.

This past week was no different than the two prior weeks, except MC wrested the victory laurels from Carson-Newman at C-N and gained a measure of revenge for the earlier football defeat.

Although the Lynchburg game was a game of greater importance, the whole week of basketball can be summarized thusly-Maryville vs. Carson-Newman. Intense school spirit, inflamed emotions and a fierce competitiveness marked both the crowd action and the game. A liberal supply of signs covered the For the ones who did not journey to Jefferson City the clincher as far as the game between signmakers is concerned was unveiled by Maryville Rooters. It asked the poignant question, "Carson-Newman, are you eligible?"



The Scots started fast jumping to a 4-0 lead only to see the Eagles gain a 9 to 8 advantage with fifteen minutes left. It was the last lead C-N held. The first half outside shooting of Jackie Carlton and Bobby Rimmer accounted for 20 points followed by big Rich Suttles' 10 points and 4 rebounds producing a 43-40 half-time score.

Maryville was offensively proficient in the first half with 65% shooting from the field while committing a miniscule four turn-overs—by far the best first half floor game of the young season.

The second half was virtually a repeat of the first half. The Scots continued to lead by either 4 to 6 points until around ten minutes wherein those "dawgs" put on a rush to forge ahead by ten with six minutes to go. At this point the Eagles put on an offensive and defensive show, outscoring MC ten to two in a matter of three minutes. Coach Lambert called time out while the Eagle rooters went wild. It was their last cheer. Maryville came charging out in the last three minutes of action with tough defense, patient offense and more importantly clutch free throw shooting down the stretch to win 81 to 76. Bobby Rimmer with 22 points, and Richard Suttle 18 points led Maryville in scoring, but all starters scored in double figures. Doug Tutin popped in 15-9 of 9 from the free throw line. Jackie Carlton played excellent defense, fired in 13 points and dashed out 7 assists, while Dale Watson put in 12 and ripped 8 rebounds.

The win over Carson-Newman is the third in a [illegible] effort and poise in trying conditions of the team, but he pointed to the Lynchburg game as more important than Carson-Newman as far as the ODAC was concerned. However, when pressed Coach Lambert did admit to a special satisfaction in disposing of the Eagles in his first attempt.

For all the excitement the Carson-Newman game offered it took thirty minutes of play before the Lynchburg game became an intense contest. Both teams were flat although Maryville appeared to be more involved in the first half. The Scots offense got a good shot every time down the floor and only sub par shooting kept the contest from being a first half blowout. In the second half the Scots quickly built a nine point lead with possession of the ball. This trip down the floor proved to be a turning point—for Lynchburg. A turnover produced a quick Lynchburg basket, followed by a point barrage that culminated in a Lynchburg lead of 65 to 58 with three and a half minutes to play. Once again the big "Mo" shifted but this time in the Scots favor. Maryville knotted the score at 69 all, then Jackie Carlton hit one free throw with thirteen seconds left in the game to provide a one point edge. Lynchburg missed the front of a one and one with ten seconds to go after a controversial foul was called on Carlton. Andrew Baker pulled down the errant [illegible] throws. The final score was 72-71. Doug Tutin led MC in points (20) and rebounds (8) while Andrew Baker popped in 15 points starting in place of an ill Richard Suttle. Also playing a strong role off the bench was Jeff Riley with seven points and some key boards.

Ladies tame Tigers

by Brenda Babb

The Lady Scots picked up another win Friday night as they defeated Sewannee 77-60. With four team members out with the flu, and the remaining seven less than healthy, it was questionable whether Maryville would be able to perform effectively. The Lady Scots took a slim three-point lead and several fouls into the [illegible] in the contest to present Sandy Rabun with the game ball as she hit the 1,000 point mark. She is the first woman athlete to achieve this in Maryville history.

The ladies erased all doubt after the second buzzer sounded and dominated the final half by managing to stay out of serious foul trouble and shooting a blistering 75% from the field.

Robin Rimmer turned in a fine performance running the offense while Rach[illegible] shooting for a total 21 points. Kim Allen and Candy Nutter gunned in 17 and 16 points apiece, respectively.

Dr. Loyd Langston, MC friend, dies at Morningside

by Ed Brewer

Dr. Loyd H. Langston, 89, retired business executive, former professor and author, died the night of January 26th at Morningside on the MC campus, his home since 1977. Morningside, the former home of MC Presidents, was bought by Dr. Langston in July of 1977 when Wayne Anderson, current President of MC, decided to find a home in the community as an act to draw the college and community closer together.

Dr. Langston, a MC graduate and substantial contributor to the college would have been 90 on January 28.

The 1913 graduate went on to receive his M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in economics and political science from Columbia University School of Business.

A native of Missouri, Dr. Langston taught high school classes in Missouri, North Dakota, and New Jersey. He also worked for the National City Bank of New York before becoming Director of Service and later President of the Benjamin Franklin Institute and the American Chamber of Economics.

In 1937, Dr. Langston joined Standard and Poor's in New York, and remained active in that corporation until 1967. Prior to that, the former secretary and treasurer of Standard and Poor's taught banking at the American Institute of Banking and at Columbia University for over 12 years.

Dr. Langston also wrote several textbooks on banking and economics which have been widely used by banks, colleges, and schools of business for many years.

The Mildred and Loyd Chair of Business Administration was established at the College in 1974 to honor them for their contributions to the college and to recognize their reputation in the business field.

In a statement made to the The Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times on Jan. 27, Dr. Wayne Anderson said,"The College has just lost a valued friend and supporter. We shall greatly miss his presence at so many college events and his wise counsel on a wide range of issues."

Dr. Loyd H. Langston is buried in Carthage, Mo. Services were held on Jan. 28.

Sports psych. to speak

by Ruth Reese

"It's an oversimplification, but the key to athletic accomplishment, outside of natural talent, may be the ability to deal with pressure." Those are the words of sports psychologist, Jack Llewellyn, a 1968 MC graduate.

Llewellyn, who will be conducting a CIV in the FAC Music Hall, Friday, February 6 at 9:20 a.m., is a teacher, writer, lecturer, and sports consultant.

Currently at Florida International University, Llewellyn is associate professor of physical education and director of the Motor Learning Laboratory. He has held teaching positions at Mankato State University in Minnesota and Old Dominion in Virginia.

His articles have appeared in Virginia Research Supplement, Research Quarterly, Weekend Coach, and Soccer Now. He is the editor and a contributor to the recent Sports Skills: A Handbook for Physical Activity Enthusiasts, and author of Pyschology and Practical Application in Sports to be published this year.

Llewellyn has appeared in instructional films on the perceptual-motor development of handicapped children, and on television and radio talk shows.

He has done extensive lecturing in the area of sports psychology and competition to groups such as Boys Clubs of America, American Youth Soccer Organization, National Recreation and Parks Association, and the National Pop Warner Football Festival to name a few. February Meetings to discuss life's passion

"A Passion for Living" is the theme this year, according to Mrs. Margaret Stevenson, coordinator of religious activities. Other visiting speakers include Father James Hickey of Nashville, Rev. Bill Murrah of Knoxville, Rev. George Worth of Americus, GA, and Dr. David P. Young, now of Atlanta but formerly professor of chemistry at MC. Ms. Genie Varker, a 1978 graduate of MC, will also participate.

The participation of Rev. Dr. Ray Nott is supported in part by income from the John Vant Stephens, Jr. Memorial Lecture Fund which was established by the family and friends of Dr. Stephens "to confront the learning community of Maryville College with Christian truth. . . ." Dr. Stephens and his wife, Ruth Carson Stephens, graduated from MC in 1915.

For more than a century February Meetings have been conducted on the Maryville College campus. This year, Dr. Ray Nott of Wyoming will be the featured speaker beginning on Sunday, February 22, at 7:00 P. M. Large and small group meetings, seminars, panel discussions, a communion service, and social hours are being planned through February 24.

Traditionally, this has been a time when the administration, the faculty, staff, and students have taken a break from normal activities to concentrate on

Tom Columns

In this week's column, I would like to preface a series of articles which will appear in the next couple of editions of The Highland Echo.

After some rather taxing digging and research, I have come across one of the most delicious books ever written – The Saga of the Dining Hall Meal, by Sir A.R.A. Morrison. It was finally by stroke of luck that I stumbled across this volume – it was hidden from view on the shelf in the Lamar Library, sandwiched between a copy of The Black Death - Killer of Millions, and Adios, Los Alamos.

Amazingly enough, the book isn't even listed in the library's card catalog.

Only after extensive research was I able to find any background on the book's author, Sir A.R.A. Morrison. He was born of British parents in 1892, while they were living in the small village of Beafe, Hungary. Shortly after his birth, Sir Morrison's parents moved to Liverpool, England, where his father opened up a butchershop.

In his early years Sir Morrison worked as an apprentice in his father's shop, but was dismissed when he backed into a meat slicer and got a little behind in his work.

Sir Morrison's teenage years are lost to the ages, but records of the University of Frankfurt show his enrollment there in 1914. Sir Morrison continued his study there for six years, then moved on to the University at Hamburg for his doctorate in bacteriology. The Dining Hall Meal is said to have stemmed from his doctoral work in Hamburg.

Somehow and soon after finishing up in Hamburg, Morrison returned to his birthplace at Beafe, and became good friends with a local count, Sir Loyne of Beafe. Sir Loyne had lived across the street from Sir Morrison's parents in Beafe, and used to pat Morrison on the head as a child.

Sir Loyne, being a historian, became greatly interested in Morrison's project and consented eagerly to help him in gathering information.

The two traveled the world extensively for three years, researching, probing, and asking questions concerning the dining hall meal. Unfortunately, on a solo expedition to the African jungles, Sir Loyne was captured by cannibals. According to tradition, these man-eating tribesmen became violently ill after their meal, and when Sir Morrison learned of all of this, quoth: "It's hard to keep a good man down."

For several years after the untimely death of Sir Loyne, Morrison labored alone to finish the manuscript, which was finally published by O. Leo Lahey & Son, of Basil, Switzerland in 1937.

Sir Morrison moved to Switzerland in 1939, and became a hermit living a life of seclusion in a chalet in the mountain village of Oskarr. The chalet was owned by the village's mayor who, familiar with Morrison's work, encouraged him to take up needlepoint.

The Oskarr mayor and Sir Morrison became close friends, even though Morrison apparently declined his occupational suggestions. It is the mayor to whom the second edition of The Dining Hall Meal (1953) is dedicated with this quotation from Alfred Lord Vennison: "It is better to have lunched and lost than never to have lunched at all."

The remaining 25 years of Sir Morrison's life were quiet and uneventful. Morrison returned to Liverpool in 1966 and remained there until his death in 1978, when he moved to Detroit.

How he got to Detroit remains a mystery, but his tombstone in Detroit's Our Lady of Colitus Cemetery bears this cryptic inscription: "I told you that I didn't want seconds. . . . . ."

Next week: The dining hall meal stemming from the Garden of Eden.

Women and the NCAA

(CPS)

The furor that greeted the National Collegiate Athletic Association's (NCAA) recent decision to try to take over women's athletics has settled into a guarded caution, as college athletic directors adopt a "wait and see" attitude about the NCAA's plan to sponsor national competitions for women.

"Everybody's trying to get a sense of how everybody else feels about the NCAA's decision," says Judith Holland, women's athletic director at UCLA. "A lot of schools are calling me just wanting to know what I'm doing about it."

For the last ten years, the AIAW has sponsored all 17 national championships for women. Under the NCAA's new program, officially adopted at the organization's convention in January, twelve of those competitions will also be sponsored separately by the NCAA, beginning next fall.

Holland suggests that larger schools will probably opt to retain membership in both organizations, which is allowable under the NCAA's new rules. She says that twelve of UCLA's teams will participate in the NCAA, while the five sports not included in the new program – including badminton, crew, and soccer – will remain with the AIAW.

Richard Perry, athletic director at University of Southern California, plans to operate his women's teams under AIAW rules, even if some of them compete in NCAA championships.

"The AIAW has a much more beneficial scholarship program," Perry notes, "but under the AIAW we cannot recruit. We'll retain membership in both until we decide whose rules are better for us."

Donna Lopiano, president of the AIAW, feels that despite the initial caution, schools will make their decisions very quickly. She cited the NCAA's practice of providing transportation to tournament participants as a big factor in the minds of many athletic directors.

"Who can pass up economic advantages like that?" she asks.

But in opting for such monetary advantages, schools will not be doing women's athletics a favor, Lopiano contends.

"I doubt whether women will be anything more than minor sports in the NCAA," she conjectures. "Women have a lot to lose in all this."

Above are some often-seen smiling faces: the 1981 Basketball Cheerleaders. These young ladies work hard to spread spirit thoroughout the campus community by their contribution at Scots' home basketball games.

The girls also spend much time making posters and practicing about 10 hours each week.

Members of the 1981 Basketball Cheerleading squad are: Lisa Cox, of Alcoa, TN., sophomore foreign language major; Kim DeMaat, squad captain, a senior from St. Petersburg, FL, majoring in business; Nan Elliot, co-captain, of Conyers, GA, sophomore, majoring in business; Ginger Harris, of Chamblee, GA, sophomore business major; Kim Hatfield, from Knoxville, TN, a freshman, majoring in math; Cindy Turley, of St. Petersburg, FL, a freshman majoring in biology; and Linda Wiley, a senior English major from Memphis, TN.

FINANCIAL AID GAME

The Financial Aid Game, 1981-82 edition, is now on the market and available to all interested players. For those familiar with this annual form of recreation, the players and equipment remain fundamentally unchanged from the 1980-81 edition. However, this year's version features some rule changes that should interest all participants.

Players:
1 Applicant
1 Financial Aid Officer
1 Federal Government
1 State Government (if applicable)
1 Needs Analysis Service

Equipment:
1 Financial Aid Form
1 Institutional Application for financial assistance

Object of the Game:
To obtain financial assistance via one or more of the following:
Basic Educational Opportunity Grant
National Direct Student Loan
College Work Study
Maryville College Grant
Guaranteed Student Loan Program

Game Summary:
1. Applicant submits the Financial Aid Form to the College Scholarship —this form serves as a needs analysis in obtaining the aforementioned objects of the game.

2. Applicant submits an Institutional Application for Financial Assistance to the Financial Aid Officer—in addition to obtaining miscellaneous information, this form serves as a student employment application and scholarship application.

Rule Changes:

One of the unique aspects of the Financial Aid Game involves the annual rule changes and revisions. For those acquainted with the Educational Amendmments of 1980 should serve to enhance the game.

Various rule changes include: the re-naming of the Basic Grant to the Pell Grant; an increase in GSL interest rates from 7% to 9%; an increase in NDSL interest rates from 3 to 4%; an increase in the aggregate amount one may borrow under the GSL program from $7500 to $12,500; and, the implementation of a Parent Loan Program, to mention a few.

All interested participants may obtain the new version of the Financial Aid Game from the Financial Aid Office in Anderson Hall.

Ladies win one, lose one

The Maryville Lady Scots posted their "sweetest" victory ever as they narrowly defeated arch-rival Tennessee Wesleyan, 65-63 in an emotion-filled game.

The ladies had travelled to Wesleyan early in the season minus half of the team, who were competing in the National AIAW volleyball tournament in Spokane, Washington. The remaining six could not keep up with the run-and-gun Wesleyan team who substituted approximately every five minutes. The Lady Scots went down 96-32.

When the Lady Bulldogs came to town, Maryville was ready for another chance and came on to the court tasting revenge. After a shaky start, the Lady Scots got down to business and set out to accomplish what they had come for. The second half saw some hot shooting, especially from the Maryville guards, but it wasn't an easy task. The contest came down to the wire as the teams traded baskets throughout the final half. The score was tied 63-63 with 24 seconds remaining on the clock. The Lady Scots went into a pattern to run off some time and were unable to penetrate until a Wesleyan player knocked the ball out-of-bounds. The in-bounds play worked as Sandy Rabun hit Kim Allen on a break for the bucket with five seconds remaining to seal the game 65-63. Besides the winning shot, Kim Allen had 10 more points for a 12 point total. Rachel Reese and Brenda Babb each had 14 points.

MC met Midway, the 1980 Kentucky state champions, the next afternoon, but were unable to play with the style and caliber of the night before. The quick Kentucky team saw a 13-point lead late in the final period before the Lady Scots made a comeback surge in the final four minutes. The effort was good, but not good enough; the Lady Scots dropped the game, 70-73. Candy Nutter led the scoring with 18 points, Sandy Rabun contributed 16 points and Brenda Babb had 14 points. It was only the second Division III loss of the year, the other being to Fisk in double overtime. Their season record stands at 8-4.

MC track stars place in marathon

by Tommy Brown

Maryville College may not have a track team yet this year, but many MC students run. Three MC students recently participated in the Orange Bowl Marathon in Miami, FL on January 17.

Senoir Pete Gardzina, junior Scott Wilson, and sophomore Randy Shackleford ran in the 26 mile, 385 yard event. This was the first marathon any of them had ever participated in, but it will not be the last. All three have plans to run in other marathons within the upcoming year.

Gardzina, a resident of Miami, said of his training for the run: "I've been running all summer and fall, though I didn't decide to run in the marathon until September.

Shackleford, who is from Columbia, SC, said that he trained for about four months prior to the race by running eight miles in the morning and eight more at night.

Wilson, who hails from Grosse Pointe Farms, MI, prepared for the race by running eight or nine miles a day.

None of the trio changed their diets in any way to get ready for the marathon, except for the week-end before the race. According to Randy, he stocked up on carbohydrates while at Pete's house.

Pete and Randy decided to run together in September and trained together. Scott is the only one of the three who had had no prior track or running experience, having become serious about running a year ago. Both Pete and Randy have been participating on track teams since junior high.

All three MC students finished the race in under five hours, good time for a first marathon: Randy finished in 4 hours and 4 minutes, Scott came in one minute later, and Pete finished in 4 hours and 20 minutes. Out of the starting field of 2,400, 625 runners dropped out before the finish in the Orange Bowl.

"The biggest rush I've ever had was running in to the Orange Bowl with 3 to 4,000 people cheering for you," said Pete describing his last few yards.

All three of the MC marathoners enjoyed their experience and plan to run more marathons, someday hoping to qualify for the big one—the Boston Marathon.

MC men split weekend

The men's basketball team split a pair of weekend conference road games last week, dribbling Bridgewater (81-74), and falling to Washington and Lee (77-64).

Senior forward Richard Suttle had a fine evening against the Eagles on Friday, netting 26 points. Speedy point guard Jackie Carlton added 20, and big center Dale Watson hit 13 points on perfect shooting from the floor. The Scots burned Bridgewater with 55 percent shooting from the field.

Saturday night was a different story for Maryville In a critical ODAC matchup, the Scots went flat against a good W. & L. squad. Suttle was held to 10 points, while Carlton managed only 8. Forward Doug Tutin led MC with 17. Watson continued his field goal accuracy, hitting five shots out of six attempts, getting 12 points total. As a team, the Scots shot only 38 percent against the Generals. MC coach Randy Lambert commented that the Scots were not able "to get in the game mentally."

The weekend split left the Scots 4-2 in the ODAC, 9-5 overall.

"Women are going to be hard-pressed to come into their own," Perry says, "unless they combine efforts with the men to get some of the national spotlight in these competitions."

For example, he foresees holding both the men's and women's national basketball championships in the same location during the same weekend within a few a few years. This would give women much broader television coverage.

Perry, a member of the NCAA committee exploring such possibilities, also envisions a single championship in individual sports, such as swimming, tennis, and gymnastics. In such a program, individual events would be single sex, with the scores of both men and women tabulated together to achieve a team score.

Perry, a member of both organizations, disagrees.

"If the NCAA hadn't also passed a proposal to reorganize the governance structure and include women in making their own decisions, we wouldn't participate in the NCAA," he says. "But because of the reorganization, we think the NCAA championships themselves will offer more to women participants."

Where did that old Valentine come from?

by Ruth Reese

Sometime after February begins, schoolchildren list friends and classmates to whom they will send Valentines. "Everybody must get one, even if you hate them," or so Mama says. Strange, adults only have to give them to people they like a whole lot.

The tradition of sending Valentines dates back at least to the Middle Ages. Early lists of Christian martyrs reveal as many as eight Valentines, all having feast days on February 14. The three most important were a priest of Rome, and a Bishop of Interamna, both beheaded by the Emperor Claudius in AD 269, and another who was put to death in Africa.

Legend has it that Emperor Claudius was having trouble raising an army because men refused to leave their wives and sweethearts. Angrily, he forbade any further marriages and broke off all engagements. Valentine, thinking this unfair, secretly joined several young couples, and was thrown in prison where he died.

Other legends tell of him healing the jailer's daughter of blindness, falling in love with her, and sending letters signed, "From your Valentine." Because of this, St. Valentine has become the patron saint of lovers.

More likely, Valentine's Day got its start at the Feast of Lupercalia in Rome. It honored the god Lupercus, who protected shepherds and their flocks from packs of wolves just outside Rome.

At this feast, the names of young maidens were placed in a box to be drawn out by young men, who were to protect them throughout the coming year. This festival was later Christianized to become St. Valentine's Day.

The custom of drawing names in England continued until Victorian times, although sometimes the names of Saints replaced those of girls. Presents of flowers, candies, and lace valentines were exchanged.

Other customs pertaining to Valentine's Day include the belief that birds choose their mates on this day and a superstition that the first person of the opposite sex one sees on Valentine's morning will be one's own true love.

By the 17th century, people were beginning to make and send their own valentines. The first commercial valentines appeared about 1800. Today, Valentine's Day ranks next to Christmas in the number of cards sent out. Presents are still often exchanged between lovers and friends, and it is a good excuse for a party. But then, what isn't?

MC performs Award-winning play

The award-winning musical, Man of La Mancha, will be performed by the Maryville College Playhouse on Friday and Saturday, Feb. 20-21 and Friday and Saturday, Feb. 27-28 at 8:15 p.m. in the MC Theatre.

The Broadway production ran for 2,329 performances from Nov. 22, 1965 to June 26, 1970. Written by Dale Wasserman, Mitch Leigh, and Joe Darion, the play's many awards include the 1966 New York Drama Critic's Circle Award.

In the play's opening, Spanish novelist Miguel de Cervantes, thrown in prison for an offense against the church, is awaiting trial before the Inquisition. His fellow prisoners hold a mock trial planning to confiscate Cervantes' possesions, including the uncompleted manuscript of Don Quixote. Taking a unique defense, Cervantes transforms himself and his manservant into Don Quixote and his ever-faithful squire, Sancho Panza, and both embark upon a crusade to right all wrongs and bring back the age of chivalry.

The Maryville College production of Man of La Mancha is directed by Don Thomas and stars Allen Evitts as Cervantes/Quixote, Lois Boney as Aldonza, the serving wench, and George Cassutto an Sancho. Sharon Crane is associate director, Cindy Jubran, assistant director, Tillman Crane, technical director, Linda Wiley, stage manager.

Dr. Harry Harter is doing the music for the show, Cheryl Van Metre, the choregraphy, and music accompaniment will be provided by Bill Bender and other instrumentalists.

Tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens.

Wind and Ragtime concert

The Maryville College Wind and Ragtime Ensembles will present a program of Sousa marches and Scott Joplin rags on Thursday, Feb. 12, at 8:15 in Wilson Chapel.

David Irwin, of the MC music faculty, will direct both groups in their initial concert of the year.

The purpose of the program is to show the harmonic and stylistic similarities between Sousa and Joplin, two great American composers, Irwin noted.

Included in the musical selections to be performed by the Wind Ensemble are the Sousa marches "Sabre and Spurs," "Stars and Stripes Forever," "New Mexico March," "Nobles of the Mystic Shrine," and "Black Horse Troop," as well as music from the movie The Sting.

The Ragtime Ensemble will perform a number of Joplin rags including "Easy Winners," "Ragtime Dance" and the ever-popular "The Entertainer."

Also included in the program are two ragtime duets performed by trombonists Ed Brewer and Tom Hudson.

The performance is free and all are invited to attend.

What's Going On?

Thursday, Feb. 12, 8:15 pm – MC Wind Ensemble and Ragtime Ensemble concert. In the Chapel, free admission.

Friday, Feb. 13, 2:30 pm – Students meet with Cirriculum Task Force. Fayerweather 201.

5 pm – Valentine's Day Buffet, Pearsons Dining Hall. Please dress nicely.

Saturday, Feb. 14, 9 pm – Chi Beta's Valentine Day Dance. Theme: "Shower the People You Love with Love." Semi-formal in Lloyd Lobby. $1.50 per person, snacks and mixers available, alcohol permitted.

Sunday, Feb. 15, 9 pm – Make your own sundaes. In Pearsons Dining Hall. 50 cents.

Tuesday, Feb. 17, 7 pm – Women's B-ball against Covenant. In the gym.

Due to the extreme drought in the peanut growing areas of the United States and the formidable increase in the price of peanuts, the serving of peanut butter in the dining hall will be suspended indefinitely.

According to Dean Richardson, the food service simply cannot obtain peanut butter

Tom Columns

(Editor's note -- In this week's column The Echo continues its series on The Saga of the Dining Hall Meal by Sir A.R.A. Morrison. Dedicated to the purpose of setting straight the "history" of the dining hall meal through exerpts from this text, the editor intends that the material in this series be taken with a bit of salt.)

In the Old Testament can be found numerous references to some form of primordial dining hall meal. So numerous are these that only a few can be listed and accounted for here. Sir Morrison found a total of 666 references in the Old Testament alone, and said of them in the preface to his book: ". . . only after much wrestling with the texts was I able to free all references . . . . . from the cloud of obscurity imposed by the ancients scribes. . .in their seemingly infinite wisdom."

Adam and Eve in the Garden. The book of Genesis tells us little about the Garden, but it may be viewed as an ancient fore-runner of Marin County, California, only with a much lower divorce rate.

Adam and Eve had it made, but they blew it by violating an edict of God. A commonly held misconception is that the two were evicted for eating of the Tree of Knowledge. More accurately, according to The Dininig Hall Meal, the problem stemmed from the pair going back for seconds on fruit during lunch.

The Story of Noah. This story has always been a favorite. How can you miss when you've got a cute little old man and a boat load of adorable animals? It is such a view of Noah that elevated him to the status of "patriark.'

As with the story of Adam and Eve, only a small portion of a reference to the early dining hall meal can be found in ancient texts. However, Sir Morrison did uncover an interesting anecdote.

The animals were complaining about the quality and repetitiveness of the food being served. Noah is said to have stood before the horde and exclaimed: "Okay, I hear you!! But we're all in the same boat. . . . . "

Moses and the Ten Commandments. Moses did indeed receive two tablets from Yahweh while on the mountain top, according to Sir Morrison. (We can all sleep better knowing that this is confirmed.) However, what is not as widely known or accepted is that Moses had eaten a primitive form of dining hall meal just prior to his ascent of the mountain. (History does not record, however, the manna in which this meal was served.)

The tablets which Moses received were actually Alka-Seltzer tablets. Also speculated is that this incident may have been the origin for the fast food slogan "Have it Yahweh."

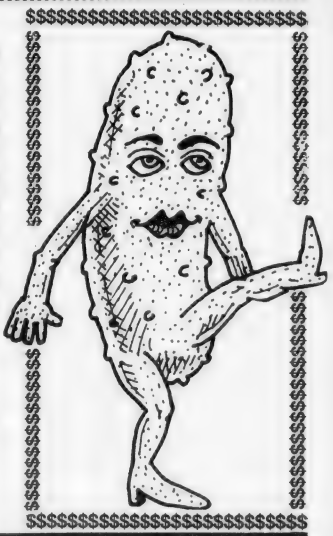
David and Goliath. According to Sir Morrison, " . . . . little David slew not Goliath with a smooth stone. It was a smooth, hard bisquit with which the Philistine was felled."

Next week: The dining hall meal up through the landing of the Pilgrims.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Due to certain circumstances occuring in the Physical Education Department, I feel that perhaps all athletic events and intramural games should be boycotted. Reasons for this boycott are in response to the newly appropriated rules concerning College ID's and intramural participation.



First, I feel that the continual verification that a student has a Maryville College ID at the gate of all sports events is totally unnecessary when the person checking the ID's knows a student personally. On several occasions the gate supervisor has tried to deny students entry into a sporting event even though it was known that these students attended Maryville College. I can understand the necessity of close gate observation for non-MC students, however, when the gate "guard" knows the student and will not allow them to enter because they did not bring their ID, I feel this is somewhat ridiculous.

As for the intramural situation, lately there has been a great deal of upheaval concerning participation rules. In the past, the program has run fairly smoothly. However, this year there has been considerable controversy over "picky" technicalities. I thought the purpose of the intramural concept was to bring MC students not presently involved in varsity sports together for a collaborated effort of physical activity and fun. The banning of one or two students from intramurals for breaking supposed "rules"creates dissention among the other participating students, totally defeating the purpose of the intramural program.

In conclusion, I feel that these two issues should be reviewed and corrected accordingly. I like to think of the entire MC community as my friends and I do not feel that friends should require identification. Lastly, if this school wishes to run an organized intramurals program then perhaps a committee should be formed and a list of rules devised. These should take into consideration the MC students and the whole idea behind the MC philosophy—to have all students actively involved in the college.

Sincerely,

A Concerned Student, with several backers

Unfortunately, time (about 93 years worth) has taken its toll on the window and the leading is buckling and sagging.

Well, what's being done about it? At the present time, it seems as if no affirmitive action is being taken, although people are concerned with the condition of the work.

In 1975, under the administration of former MC President Joseph Copeland, the College contacted the Willet Stained Glass Studios in Philadelphia, PA. Willet Studios wanted $3,800 to repair the window, but removal and shipping to Philadelphia was not included in this figure.

The studio valued the stained glass window at about $14,000.

Unfortunately, there seems to be no money for the restoration of the masterpiece, unless money is contributed from an outside source. It would indeed be a shame to see the window replaced by a piece of plate glass . . . . . .

MC tracks a running team

by John Rush

The waiting is over! After several years of pleading and waiting, Maryville College now has a track team. The decision was recently made to name Jim Davis as the head coach.

When asked what goals he had for the new team, Coach Davis named several energetic ideas for the program. He said his number one goal this year is to get the most out of every competitor. He wants to see all team members do the best possible job they can. Davis said that he would also like to make this first team a foundation for future squads. He added that once a program has started rolling, it becomes easier to get people involved the next year.

Coach Davis said that team practice will begin Feb. 16, but all interested participants should be training before then. The team will meet five days a week at 4:00, warm up together, then split into their different running groups. The first few weeks of practice will be basic conditioning, eventually leading to practice on an individual level.

Davis came to MC from Plymouth State College last fall as the football defensive coordinator. Besides his duties with football, he is also the athletic administrative assistant as well as head track coach. Davis feels this is a unique opportunity for him to better himself as a head coach. He feels that if the track team is to be successful then he has to make it successful. Davis played football four years at Plymouth State, and was the Captain his final year. He also has two years of high school experience and four years of college experience in track, where he threw the hammer and shot put.

Davis has been working hard setting up meets, and so far he has scheduled six. On March 25, there will be a dual meet with Centre at Centre. The 28th of March is an all-comers meet also at Centre. April 1, there will be a small meet at Milligan in Elizabethton, TN. April 4, Fisk University is having an invitational in Nashville. Next are the Dogwood Relays in Knoxville on April 9-11. The final meet is the ODAC Championship which will be held at either Bridgewater or Washington and Lee.

Coach Davis hopes that all interested people will come to the first practice on February 16. Help MC have a successful track team!

Kibben activates MC

by Tommy Brown

The College's social and recreation committee plans and organizes Maryville College social activities. Its new Chairman, senior Dave Kibben, says he does not want the committee to have the burden of thinking of activities to fill up the calendar. Instead he wants a committee that receives ideas from other organizations and then utilizes them to organize these activities.

So far, this has been a successful year according to Dave. A recent late-night roller skating event drew well over 100 people. Most other activities have gone over very successfully.

Twice a month, the committee meets to organize the calendar of the upcoming month, brainstorming activities to fill up the empty spots. According to Dave, it is not always easy for the committee to think of things to do, so ideas from any student or organization should be submitted to Dave, Shada Overton, or any committee member.

Events already planned for the rest of the year, though exact dates and times are not specific, are a square dance in Early March, a Coffeehouse during Spring term, parents Weekend in April, and May Madness. Many other activities will also be scheduled. When the committee finalizes the calendar for each month, it is posted around campus.

Doug Tutin pumps one in from the line as the Scots defeat C-N, 75-73.

Scots defeat C-N Eagles, Record soars up to 12-8

by Rodney Nelson

The past week provided a low point and a high point in Maryville College basketball fortunes. A low point was a loss to ODAC front-runner Roanoke College, while a high point was another action-packed triumph over Carson-Newman. Sandwiched between these games was a victory over Hampden-Sydney which ended a three-game losing streak by the Scots.

Roanoke College, ranked sixth nationally and first in the ODAC with a 6-1 record, presented Maryville with another opportunity in unseating a national power. On this night the magic wasn't there, as Roanoke defeated Maryville, 75-55.

Roanoke took advantage of the Maryville team's recent road trip – 3 games in 4 days – which took its toll in the last 8 minutes of the first half when Roanoke spurted to a ten point lead, 34-24. The second half was almost a carbon copy. Maryville cut the gap with a game defensive effort, but near exhaustion took over, resulting in the final score. Roanoke also won the rebound battle, 28-18. A bright spot was the play of senior center, Dale Watson who popped in 17 points, including a tremendous slam dunk. After this loss, Maryville needed a good effort to break their 3-game losing streak.

Friday night, the Scots provided the needed effort, especially in the second half, as they busted the Hampden-Sydney Tigers 61-55. A sluggish first half, similar to the Roanoke game, was not indicative of what was in store for the second half. Behind, 25-23, the Scots started quickly, sagged at ten minutes then spurted to an eleven point lead with six minutes to go. Hampden-Sydney fought back, but MC cashed in at the free throw line to preserve the 5th ODAC win against 4 losses. Individually, Jackie Carlton scored 13 to lead Maryville while Dale Watson and Rich Suttle hit 12 and 11 points respectively.

Coming off the bench to score 9 points, Tom Weston was instrumental in the second-half surge. The victory ripped MC's record to 11-8 and supplied new confidence for the Saturday night contest with Carson-Newman.

Excuse the cliche, but "spine-tingling" is a perfect description of the latest Scots–Eagles contest. Carson-Newman was out to avenge the earlier defeat, while Maryville sought to extend its winning streak over C-N to four straight.

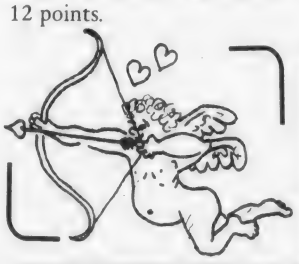
The soap opera question would be: Who would prevail? The downtrodden Eagles or the resurging Scots?

The answer was the Scots by a two-point margin, 75-73. It was a game of momentum shifts. Twice in the first half, the Eagles established five-point leads, but were unable to hold them. Maryville also built a five-point lead only to watch it melt to two at halftime. The second half was more of the same, until the Scots had a two-point lead with 40 seconds to play. At their crucial point, Maryville missed a free throw, but big Richard Suttle (14 points) tipped it in for the biggest play of the game. Jackie Carlton insured victory with four pressure-free throws that hit nothing but net. Individually, Jackie Carlton, who played with a sprained wrist, fired through 16 points while Bobby Rimmer chipped in 15 points. Jeff Riley and Tom Weston were instrumental in the victory with 9 and 11 points respectively. Coach Lambert singled both of these players out in postgame comments for their great play under pressure. The Scots are now 12-8 on the year. A pivotal road trip involving three ODAC games begins this Friday night at Hampden-Sydney, followed by clashers with Roanoke and Eastern Mennonite. Coach Lambert is hoping for some crucial victories which would help Maryville when the ODAC tournament brackets are drawn up.

Ladies split games

The Maryville College Lady Scots split their games on the road this weekend in Nashville.

The ladies avenged an early season double overtime loss to Fisk University, the defending state champions. MC downed the Lady Bulldogs, 55-49.



Maryville got off to a slow start due to Fisk's scrappy defense, but soon settled down to play a more organized game than their opponent. This proved to be the deciding factor in the outcome of the contest.

MC also took some notes from the last matchup with Fisk and cashed in at the free-throw line this time around.

Brenda Babb led the scoring with 20 points, followed by Kim Allen who pumped in 14 points.

In the second game of the weekend, Austin Peay State University proved to be more than the Lady Scots could handle. Maryville was defeated by the Division I school, 82-67. Candy Nutter had the hot hand for the ladies with 17 points, Branda Babb had 15 points, and Kim Allen and Melissa Sullivan each tallied 12 points.

A Passion For Living

by Ruth Reese

February 1, 1877, Dr. Nathan Bachman began a tradition which has lasted at MC for over a century.

The primary focus of the February meetings, however, has changed as years have gone by.

Dr. Arda Walker has traced the major purpose from one of Christian salvation for all, to the problems of the Christian dealing with world situations. In her booklet, From An "Ingathering of Souls" to "Who Speaks For Man?", she describes how changes in the college and its students have changed the nature of the February Meetings.

The statement of purpose now reads: "Administration and staff, faculty and students join in building and strengthening the campus community -- through caring for others on campus and beyond, and sharing genuine concern for the world. . . . ."

This year's theme "A Passion For Living" reflects that purpose, as do the topics centering on social change an alternative lifestyles. The word "passion", originally having to do with Christ's suffering on the cross, now denotes, according to Webster, an "intense emotional drive . . . that has an overpowering or compelling effect."

Rev. Ray Nott is the featured speaker for this year's series of meetings. Graduating from the University of Tulsa in 1950 and the Princeton Theological Seminary in 1953, Rev. Nott came to the Big Horn Basin to minister to isolated ranching and farming families. He has seven preaching points in an area of 15,000 sq. miles.

His work has been the subject of articles in Saturday Evening Post, Presbyterian Life, Concern and other publications. His mobile ministry was featured in Clair Cox's book, New Time Religion.

Rev. Nott has also directed over 130 camps in the Northwest for ranchers and Indians in isolated areas. He has served on the Northwest Community College Board of Trustees for 12 years, the last eight as President. From 1974 to 1977, Rev. Nott served as the only ordained minister on the United States Senate for the state of Wyoming.

On September 27, 1980, the National Christian University of Kansas City, Missouri awarded him the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters.

(Editor's note: Seeing as an entire page of this issue is devoted to the burning of Pearsons Hall, I believe it would be remiss not to include the editorial that appeared in the Feb. 18, 1972 issue of The Highland Echo. This editorial was written by John Powell, who was editor at that time.)

Thomas Jefferson once used the metaphor "as ominous as a fireball in the night" to describe an event. Following last Sunday night's fire in Pearsons, Maryville College became aware of just how ominous and awesome a fireball or siren can become.

The burning of Pearsons marked the end of an era for the College. Ninety-four people survived the fire only to face the chaos of displacement. The residents lost their possessions and the College lost its dining facilities. Miss Ware had dedicated thirty-seven years of her life to the College in this building. (Editor's note: Miss Margaret Ware was the College cook at the time of the fire.)

Today, the fire's been out almost a week. Yet, the scars, both physical and psychological, remain. These scars will take a long time to erase and to change. What can be changed in the wake of such a tragedy, however, is the way we respond. An awesome event demands an awesome response.

Some people have already ceased to make a sacrifice. Others are all too ready to be dominated by their misfortune. These responses seem a bit selfish. Quite a number of people exhibited a great deal of selfless, individual courage during the fire. A week later, now is the time for all of us to reconfirm their courage as a group.

The end of one era marks the beginning of a new one. Life, however disrupted, must continue. If the College as a whole can maintain the selfless courage and dignity of its members in the face of adversity, then this new era can become one of Maryville College's finest. (Editor's note: In a way, it seems a shame to the editor that it takes such a harsh and tragic event to spur a "community" into a real sense of community. Even though the sense of unity felt on this campus at the time of the burning of Pearsons was fleeting, it was as deep and meaningful as it was fleeting. The Winter Term blahs have a way of throwing a wet blanket on a sense of campus unity, granted. But what about the rest of the year? At times, for a small group in such a close proximity as we are on this campus, it's indeed amazing how we don't care about one another. The editor is not advocating burning down a dormitory, but as corny as it may sound, calling for the lighting of a fire of comminity and oneness in all of our hearts; perhaps one could call it "a passion for living." How about "a passion for living as one?")

Letters to the Editor

Editor:

In response to the concerned student over the issues of ID checking at games and administration of intramurals, let me assure that student that my office is aware of the situation and is presently working on solutions.

Checking ID's at games is a formality we must observe, but not with the intent of personal indignation. If there is anyone who feels offended by past methods we do apologize for the inconvenience. The fault, I feel, lay in our method, not in our duty. We intend to make the necessary changes in method immediately. As a reference, please see page 19 of the present Student Handbook to understand the college policy on ID's.

I fully appreciate the affrontery and impersonality that some students may have experienced.

At the same time, we are aware that there have been some difficulties in rules interpretation in the intramural program. Let me assure you that Mr. Cooper, myself and the students who help administer the intramural program are working to formulate an updated written policy which we plan to present to the administration and to the Athletic Committee at our next meeting. There is a wiitten statement of policy for intramurals. Due to the lack of implementation in recent years, we are in the process of revising this policy. If you have any suggestions, I encourage you to share them with a member of the Athletic Committee.

In conclusion, I should like to point out that I share your concerns completely. In the future, I invite you to bring your concerns to my office – with "several backers", if you feel the need -- and help me work them out. The office of the Director of Athletics IS open! Also, in the future, perhaps you'll be proud enough of your letters and convictions to affix your name at the end.

Yours for better MC athletic programs,
Art Odgen
Director of Athletics

Holy Communion on Tuesday afternoon during February Meetings will include ancient prayers, hymns, chants, and creeds as participants express their Christian faith in sacramental worship.

Dr. Harry Howard, assistant professor of political science, will be the celebrant; Dr. Dean Boldon, associate professor of sociology will be liturgist. Leading the congregational choral responses will be MC faculty and staff members Exir Brennan, David Cartlidge, Richard Parke, Victor Schoen, Terry Bunde, Martha Hess, Jane Huddleston, and Charlotte Beck. Organist will be Dr. James Bloy; soloist will be Martha Hess.

Pearsons Hall: Up In Smoke

by Tom Hudson

On Sunday night, February 13, 1972, Pearsons Hall was gutted by fire.

The blaze, which was electrical in origin, began in room 426 and spread down the hallway and to the floors below.

The entire fourth floor was consumed, along with most of the third, part of the second, with the remainder of the building incurring severe smoke and water damage.

All 94 female residents escaped injury, but the impact that The Fire made on them that cold February night nine years ago was inescapable.

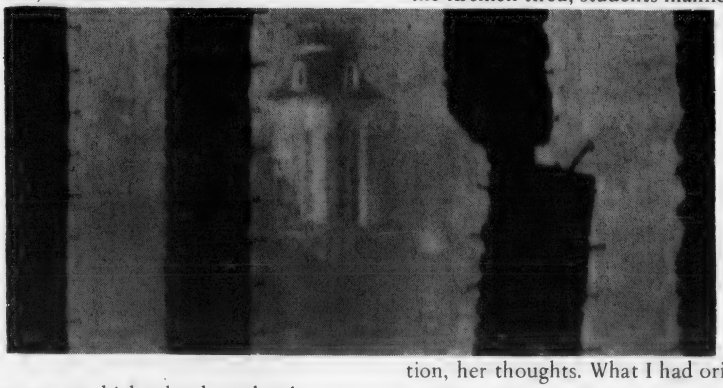
I talked with Sharon "Ma" Crane, who lost everything in her fourth floor room to the blaze, and asked her to share her feelings, thoughts, and memories about that night and The Fire.

"We could go on all night," she said as we stood together in the theatre's light booth.

A James Taylor album was playing.

"I'll always associate The Fire and James Taylor - maybe because he was popular and reflected those times. Just about every room in Pearsons had a poster or picture of him hanging up."

Ma explained to me that a dorm meeting was being held in the second floor lounge when The Fire was reported around 11 pm. Evacuation was simplified by this and most of the girls got out quickly.



Resident directors Rick and Delores Ziegler went through the upper floors checking each room to make sure all were out safely.

"I remember Delores was constantly checking through the list that night and looking in the crowd for a face," recalled Sharon.

Sharon was in Carnegie at the time The Fire broke out, and remembers being told that Pearsons was burning.

"We didn't believe him. We went outside and flames were shooting up from the "T" closest to Willard . . It went very quickly."

The Fire burned all night and into the daylight hours, eating up clothing, books other possesions, and memories.

"The most devastating thing I lost was my high school yearbook -- that and pictures of people."

"There was more emotion than confusion -- there were more tears than I can remember. We went from a state of disbelief, to a sick laughter to try to compensate, then to anger. Helplessness -- we were unsure what to do, where to go."

Ma remembers everyone huddled outside in blankets (most of the girls at the dorm meeting had their night clothes on), watching. When the firemen tired, students manned the hoses.

"It was the only time in my ten years of association with this College that there was a true sense of community." Sharon said, looking down into the theatre.

"If you needed someone to hold, they were there. All social lines and personal beliefs were erased."

As I listened, I began to feel sad; I began to share in Ma's emotion, her thoughts. What I had originally viewed as just the burning of a building was something much more than that -- something more than I could hope to fathom.

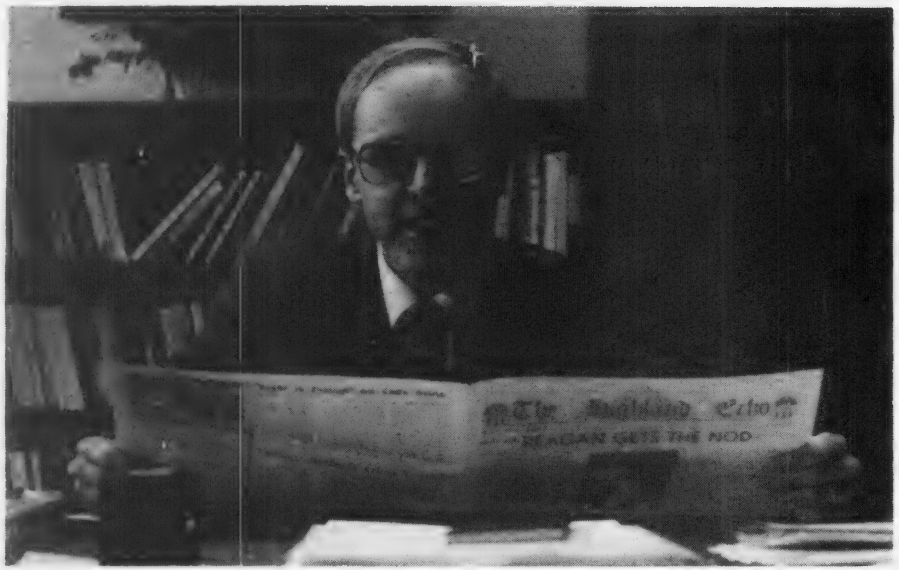
In a macabre way, the burning of Pearsons was symbolic -- it was a milestone, a separation of the old and new. Overnight, coed dorms were established, though not officially, to cope with the housing problem, and in was ushered an alternative form of lifestyle, according to Sharon.

"That's probably why I fight for alternative lifestyles here -- it may be why I'm still here. I'm very wrapped up in this school . . . . . ."

"Pearsons doesn't have the individuality it had -- the rooms seem sterile now.

"The school's different now," she added, leaning against the wall, feet propped up on the lighting board.

"I remember when they decided not to put the fourth floor back in, my friends and I vowed not to go back. I guess part of me burned that night. . . ."



It was a tragic blaze -- many possessions, many independent studies, many memories went up in smoke. Yet out of the ashes rose, even if somewhat temporarily, a sense of community and oneness in purpose. However, a lasting impact was wrought in the form of coed dormitories.

So we have not here the mere burning of a wood and brick structure almost a decade ago, but a milestone. And as I reflect back on what Sharon said to me the other night, a lot of memories, a lot of emotions.

REGRESSION:

A Disease of Today

BEFORE

be aggrevated by exposure to satire of indifferent quality. However, it must be realized that this is just a theory and has not yet been proven scientifically.)

What is Regression?

Regression (Infantis ad Infinitum) is a rare genetic disorder which pulls down the genes of seemingly healthy adult men and women, causing them to become younger and younger until they vanish entirely. There is no known cure, and other than the fact that they know it is not contracted from toilet seats or doorknobs, scientists have no clues as to the cause of this dreaded disease. However, what is known are the statistics. The disease afflicts at least 100,000 individuals throughout the world -- about 45,000 of these reported cases are in the United States alone.

Unfortunately, the disease has no warning signs -- Regression can start over night. In most cases, the disorder takes its toll over a period of many years. Such a case involves a former governor of the State of California, who has suffered from Infantis ad Infinitum for about 85 years, regressing him to the tender age of 70 years. However, the end for the victim can come mercifully quickly. Last year a case was reported in which a dean at a small, Church related liberal arts college nestled in the foothills of the Smoky Mountains vanished over the course of a summer.

Famous Man comes to MC

The cast for La Mancha is ready and waiting for opening night this Friday.

by Allison Perry

The set is ready, the costumes perfected - actors are radiant with energy for the opening night of Man of La Mancha.

The award winning musical begins Friday night on the Maryville College campus.

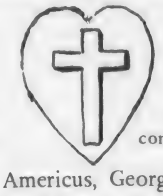
A fusion of talented artists is the cause of this menagerie of enjoyment. The cast alone varies from citizens of the community to local high school students. Of course, we could not forget the MC Playmakers and Playhouse.

Don Thomas, MC Director, has many reasons for bringing the Man of La Mancha to the area. Besides it being a personal favorite, he feels that this play is "the best combination of music and story that American Theatre has put out." La Mancha reminds us that romance and idealism are sometimes better guides to life than practical logic. Man of La Mancha is possible due to the diligent work of cast and crew. The set's conception and construction are products of Technical Director Tillman Crane. It is a colossal strata of wood, built to portray a prison enclosure in which Miguel de Cervantes reveals his misadventures.

Participation from MC Fine Arts Department has been invaluable to this premiere. Cheryl Van Metre is in charge of the choreography and the music is by Dr. Harry Harter.

Bill Bender will accompany on piano with the help of other instrumentalists for the production.

The star of La Mancha is Allen Evitts as Miguel de Cervantes. A demanding role moving from Cervantes to Alonzo Quijana, and Alonzo's dillusions bring forth a third transition to character Don Quixote.



His sidekick, Sancho Panza, is played by George Cassutto. Both embark on a crusade to right all wrongs and bring back the age of chivalry.

Lois Boney is Aldonza, a serving wench in the public's eye but a fair maiden to the demented Quixote.

The show begins Friday, February 20 at 8:15 p.m. Following shows are on Saturday the 21st, and the weekend of February 27-28 at the MC Theatre.

There will be a reception for cast, crew, and its audience immediately after the Friday night opening. MC students and staff are admitted on student rates, $2, for the first weekend of La Mancha.

A large attendance is anticipated from the college as well as the community. Man of La Mancha is sure to be, as one of the actors put it, "A perfect mixture of drama and comedy."

Is the old calendar dated?

by Mark Beyer

The Task Force on Curriculum Review and Design has developed a set of fifteen proposals dealing with the college calendar, class schedule, credit hours, graduation requirements, and the core program. The calendar has already been approved by the Academic Life Council (ACL), and that body has already begun deliberations on the other proposals. The proposals, if approved, would be enacted for the 1982-83 academic year.

The calendar is revised into a two term/Interim system. The Fall term would begin with classes on September 7 and end with final examinations on December 17. Included in the Fall term are two vacation weekends, October 29-31, and November 25-28 for Thanksgiving. Classes will end on December 12 and will be followed by a weekend review period and four days of final examinations.

The Fall term is followed by a three week Interim from Monday, January 10 to Friday, January 28th. This interim falls at a time when other schools generally have similar programs and would allow for exchange student studies.

Spring term is slated to begin with classes on February 1 and end with exams on May 19. A solid week of vacation is present in mid-March; a similar weekend review period precedes final exams this term as in Fall term. Commencement will be on May 23.

This calendar would make for a shorter academic year, as well as allowing for easier transfer into and out of this school into other schools with a similar system. Along these same lines is the proposal to change the requirements to graduate to a credit hour system; this would also permit a greater ease to transfer.

The new calendar, by decreasing the number of terms per year, causes for a reciprocal increase of class periods during the day. There would be 7 class sessions, 55 minutes in length throughout the day, meeting three to four times per week. A student would generally take more classes per term under this system than at present, but the length of class periods will be reduced by 15 minutes each. With the 7 period day, classes run through the lunch hour from 8:00 a.m. to 3:25 p.m.

It should be noted that all of these changes are proposals and are in no way definite at this time. A student forum with the Task Force will be held on Feb. 19 in 201 Fayer weather at 6:00 p.m.

Tobacco: A Grateful Tribute

by R.H.

When I graduate from Maryville College I will have mastered at least one technique; not the Maryville College outline, nor footnote procedure, but tobacco chewing. It started some four and a half years ago during my freshman year. My interim was Log Cabin Building. We arose with the sun each morning and collectively drove out to the building site with our Saga bag lunches in hand. The work was tedious, cold, and boring but it kept us busy. One afternoon while working on the roof, fellow worker Tim Topham offered me a chew of "Red Man." I figured, "Why not?", and dipped my hand into the bag and shoved a handful into my cheek. For the next several minutes, I felt like I was hovering 30 feet off the ground. It was the start of a whole new life. I chewed morning, noon, and night for the next several days.

But after a week or so the effects were wearing off. I needed something else. My roommate, John Bobo, who also had the same interim, gave me the answer one cold morning. He pulled a small can of "Happy Days" out of his back pocket and offered me a "pinch". The stuff looked like worm dirt but it knocked me out of the universe. I wasn't satisfied with the taste though. The problem was solved with "Skoal." It had a winter green taste and made your gums feel like they were on fire. At last I thought I was satisfied. The remaining year and following summer were spent with it.

But I had a surprise coming to me. One day after wrestling practice my sophmore year, my coach offered me a pinch of "Copenhagen." It looked like Skoal but sure didn't taste the same. It packed a punch better than Joe Louis. It was real tobacco pleasure. At last I had really found it.

The Dining Hall Meal

[Editor's note: This article appears as the third in a series of four articles presently being run in The Highland Echo.]

"History repeats itself . . according to some. I prefer to view it as a regurgitation – in this way one can more fully. . . .explain the dining hall meal."

So quoth Sir A.R.A. Morrison in the preface to the first edition of The Dining Hall Meal (1937), probably one of the most compelling books written in the 20th century. (George Bernard Shaw read The Dining Hall Meal and had only one criticsm: " [the] covers are too far apart.")

It is interesting that Sir Morrison should view history as "a regurgitation," for in the chapter on the Roman Empire he mentions the fact that the Romans stuffed themselves at great orgies, tickled their throats, and "orally expelled their food."

This is a falsehood. The Romans did indeed stuff themselves with food, but the food came forth of its own accord. The culprit was the younger brother of Caesar, Gastritus, who has the dubious distinction of having had the corner on the market in Rome as far as the dining hall meal was concerned.

Gastritus, who also came up with the Caesar salad, was killed for his "crimes" against the Empire, as were several accomplices. Gastritus' last words were: "Lettuce alone! Lettuce alone!"

Another falsehood uncovered by Sir Morrison was the fact that Joan of Ark was burned at the stake. In France at that time, it was considered a "high crime" to feed anyone any form of dining hall meal. In battle, out of food, and out of desperation, Joan served her troops a dining hall meal.

For this, Joan was condemned to death, (the fact that she heard voices was secondary), and was burned with the steak.

Years later in Germany, another religious figure was involved with the dining hall meal. Martin Luther, as part of the Reformation movement, protesting the "benign neglect" on the part the Church concerning the serving of the dining hall meal.

Angered that the Church would not speak out against such an atrocity, Luther nailed 95 feces to the door of the Pope's trailer.

About this time, in Italy, one of Gill Sallade's ancestors, Guido Sallade, proposed to Columbus that he take a dining hall meal on his voyage to India. Columbus was so angered that he had him thrown overboard, thus creating the first tossed Sallade.

Another unknown fact: the Pilgrims did not land at Plymouth rock. The rock that is connected with this event is not a large granite boulder at all – it is a large (and very hard) dining hall biscuit.

Peanut butter in a Jiff? No!

As many MC students and dining hall frequenters have undoubtedly noticed, peanut butter is missing from the roster of meal-time alternatives.

No, this disappearance is not an act of aggression toward the student body. Due to the failure of this year's peanut crop (one cannot help but wonder whether this had anything to do with the outcome of the '80 presidential election. . . .), the food service cannot obtain the students' stalwart staple in bulk.

According to Dean Jane Richardson, we can anticipate seeing peanut butter return to the dining hall in either June or July.

"It's a very real problem," says the Dean.

So, what are you going to do when you get into a peanut butter jam?

Iowa State Nutritionist Eusabeth Schaefer counsels that students panicked by peanut butterless grocery shelves and dining halls should not despair.

"Bologna and cheese are other sandwich fillers that are high in protein," she told the Iowa State Daily. "Other things you can put in sandwiches that are high in protein are tuna, chicken, turkey, ham, and other meats."

If only a nutty butter will do, try loading a do-it-yourself peanut butter-making machine - they're available at some hardware and toy stores - with walnuts or soybeans.

Walnuts and cashews can be made into a "butter" spread, Schaefer says, but it's "very expensive." Soybeans are a more economical choice, but the results could be less than satisfying.

"Soybeans would be of outstanding nutritional value," she told the student paper, "if only something palatable could be made out of them."

The MC Dating Game

by Angela Murphy

"What do you expect from a guy on the first date?"

"I expect him to try and see how much he can get away with."

"What's your idea of a fun date?"

"Dinner at a nice restaurant, then maybe a movie, but I'd have to get back early since I have to study."

No, this isn't an exerpt from a tape of Freshman Orientation; it's a sampling of the questions and answers from last Friday's Dating Game. The Junior Class, which sponsored the event, gave a gift certificate to Darryl's or T.G.I. Friday's to each of the winning couples.

Host Tom Hudson, stunning in a ruffled shirt, tuxedo jacket, and red shorts, kept things going through the four segments by giving the audience a hearty dose of humor. The backstage beat was covered by Junior Class VP Sidney Bright and Secretary-Treasurer Carol Carter.

Winners of the $15.00 gift certificates were Elizabeth Brown chosen by Kim Devane; Kenneth Marks, chosen by Monica Paige; Mike Weiss, chosen by Michael Mertes; and Allison Perry, chosen by Bob McQuade.

The Interim subcommittee of the Academic Life Council reminds students that they have two options for designing their own projects. Both options, however, have deadlines.

The first option allows a group of students to organize a project of their choice and to select a faculty advisor who will sponsor them. Interested groups must submit their proposals to the Interim Committee (Box 2863) by February 27.

The second option allows a student to plan his/her own independent Interim. Such an Interim can be on or off campus. To plan an independent Interim, a student must complete an application which the committee will make available the first of April, and turn it in by April 17, The student will also need to arrange for a qualified off-campus supervisor, plus a Maryville College faculty member who can verify the educational value of the project and award academic credit.

Coach Ogden ready for new year

by Mike Weiss

Art Ogden brings a new sense of purpose to the MC athletic department and football staff. He is an enthusiastic, hardworking individual with a strong loyalty to Maryville College. Echo sportswriter Mike Weiss interviewed the football Scots' new head coach last Thursday.

T.H.E.: What are your thoughts, feelings, etc. on being named the Scots' football coach?

A.O.: Well, I feel great about the opportunity. I think that the whole athletic department right now is on the verge of a really exciting new beginning with the changes that have taken place and the new people that have come in. There is an air of optimism, particularly in the football staff, and I feel really good about it.

T.H.E.: What style of football do you favor, and what sort of changes will the fans notice next year because of that style?

A.O.: I like for the teams that I coach to be just plain tough. By that I mean the ability to concentrate, to eliminate mistakes, to have a great deal of confidence, and to be able to direct all their efforts at that moment at the task at hand - a football game. That's my approach, and that's my style, if you will. If you want to pin me down to a specific offense or defense, that's kind of rough right now. If someone were to put in a word what my approach is, it's strategic. Every defense has to understand that it can do so much, and every offense has to understand that there's something the defense will give up.

T.H.E.: What are your short-term and long-term goals for the football program here at Maryville?

A.O.: My short term goals, of course, are to reorganize, reunify, and restructure the program so that the approach can be organized and there can be some type of continuity. Immediately, I want to put together the best staff available, and thus far I think we've been able to. Long term goals? We'd like to be the NCAA Division III premier program in the South.

T.H.E.: You spoke of continuity. Being the fourth coach at MC in five seasons, how do you think all the coaching changes affects the players' attitudes?

A.O.: The negative effects will be felt mostly among the upperclassmen, and those are the ones that we will have to pay a great deal of attention to. This year's freshmen will rebound much more quickly, because they really haven't gone through what the upperclassmen have gone through. I'm planning to stay here as long as the College will have me, and that in itself I hope will lend something to what we're talking about with continuity.

T.H.E.: How do you feel about the returning players and the recruiting that's gone on so far?

A.O.: I'm encouraged about both. I think that we have some outstanding personnel returning, and we have a good, solid core coming back. Concerning recruiting, I think we may even be surprising ourselves. The kind of responses we're getting here in the state of Tennessee and elsewhere are very encouraging. Maryville has a good, solid name, and it's easy to go out and recruit young men when you've got something to represent like Maryville College.

T.H.E.: Is there anything else that you would like to say that you think people on campus might like to hear?

A.O.: I'd really like to extend a note of thanks to all of the college community who have shown us so much support, encouragement, and enthusiasm. It's very, very heartening. I look forward to next year.

Scots protest ODAC loss

by Mike Weiss

The Fighting Scots basketballers defeated Eastern Mennonite 85-77 and lost a still-contested game to Hampden-Sydney, 68-67, in a weekend ODAC roadtrip.

In the controversial game at Hampden-Sydney, whom the Scots defeated at home, MC trailed by one with eight seconds to go. Sophomore guard Tom Weston sank the final shot of the game, but the officials had ruled that time had expired. MC coach Randy Lambert argued to no avail, then filed an official protest with the ODAC commissioners office.

Dale Watson led the scoring for the Scots against H-S with 14 points. The senior center was followed by Doug Tutin (12), freshman guard Bobby Rimmer (11), and senior forward Rich Suttle (10).

The Scots as a team shot 47 percent from the field and hit a fine 93 percent from the free throw line.

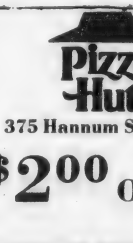
Maryville had to come back from 11 behind in the first half in the Saturday match-up with Eastern Mennonite. The Scots turned it around in the second half however, playing a tight man-to-man defense that forced E.M.C. into 15 turnovers.

Rich Suttle led MC with 18 followed by Tutin (16), and Rimmer (13).

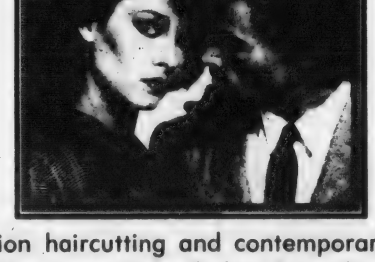
Ladies slighted by one

by Mellissa Sullivan

The Maryville College Lady Scots had a very impressive victory over St. Mary's this past week breaking the school record of 101 points. The new record of 109 was more than enough to defeat St. Mary's 109-30.



Coach Sharon Brown was impressed with the team's overall performance and several individual achievements. Mary Kay Seith tied Candy Nutter's school record scoring 32 points and pulling down 12 rebounds. Candy had an impressive night herself firing 29 points and grabbing 28 rebounds. Other Lady Scots in double figures were Melissa Sullivan with 17 followed by Kay Julian's 13 points and Robin Rimmer's 10 point performance.



On the next outing, the Lady Scots were not as fortunate as they were beaten this past weekend by Sewanee 70-65. Despite an 11 point comback to send the game into overtime, it was not enough to overtake Sewanee.

A balanced scoring attack was led by a 16 point performance by Candy Nutter. Kim Allen popped 14 points, Robin Rimmer and Brenda Babb scored 12 and 10 points respectively.

The Lady Scots begin a five-game home stand Tuesday night with Covenant. Game time is set for 7:00.

MC Choir heads North for Spring Break

by Spencer Mullins

The Maryville College Concert Choir is making ready for its 31st annual spring tour.

In the past 31 years, the choir has performed in 600 cities and traveled over 70,000 miles throughout the United States while other MC students enjoyed Spring Break.

This March 15th-22nd, the 43-member touring choir will perform at churches and high schools in New York, Connecticut, Mass., New Jersey, and Maryland.

Much time, effort, and months of rehearsal go into the making of the spring tour program. The effort is spearheaded by Dr. Harry Harter

Dr. Harter has devoted 34 years to the Maryville Concert Choir, and has coordinated each Spring tour. He also directs the annual College-Community presentation of Handel's "Messiah."

This spring the touring choir will present two different programs, one designed for church audiences, and one designed especially for high school assemblies.

The church program will feature selections by William Billings, Alessandro Scarlatti, Anton Bruckner, and J.S. Bach. Following these works, the choir will perform adaptations of American folk songs, spirituals, and folk hymns by modern composers of the United States.

The final part of the program presents contemporary choral renditions including "GLORY TO GOD IN THE HIGHEST" by Randall Thompson, and concludes with an African folksong, a religious processional titled "ANTYA LABA," accompanied by authentic African drums.

The high school program includes a wide variety of lighter selections including a semi-choreographed medley of tunes from the musical Oklahoma!

Closing the program, the choir will sing a concert arrangement of the College Alma Mater and fight song.

This spring, the choir will give 16 performances in six mid-Atlantic states over a 10-day period. In all, the choir plans to cover 2,500 miles on its 31st spring tour.

Man of La Mancha: A review and preview

by Mark Beyer

I was overwhelmed as my mind wandered in a madman's fantasy through the adventures of Don Quixote, the Man of La Mancha. As the musical's story-line unfolded I was lost in an experience of complete enjoyment.

Director Don Thomas said of the production: "I was more than gratified by the size and responsiveness of the audiences.

The title role, performed by senior Allen Evitts, is expertly done and surely the pinnacle of his amateur career. Sancho is played by junior George Cassutto, a humorous man put into a humorous role acheiving the result of hilarity.

These two actors shift back and forth from humor to tragedy in their roles, actually becoming the characters they portray.

Congratulations can be extended to senior Lois Boney in the role of Aldonza/Dulcinea. What Lois lacks in musical range she makes up for in her outstanding acting ability. Her trouble with higher pitches in the more difficult musical numbers is remedied by her resourcefulness in speaking the lyrics with intense emotion.

Compliments are further extended to Kathy Long, Sayers Green, Dr. Richard Parke, Frank Fiore, Tim Fitzgerald, and David Styles. The roles portrayed by these cast members are as believable as those of the leads without exception. Humor and tragedy are often created by these characters, who lend support and credibility to the leading roles.

There are many others to whom I extend congratulations—the chorus, the musicians, and the technical crew—bravo! The chorus more than emphasizes the soloists and contains many talented individuals. The fight scene of the second act, choreographed by Cheryl Van Metre, is a slapstick comedy expertly performed.

The set is very believable, definitely a prison, and the subdued lighting adds to the realism. Acknowledgment for the exceptional tech work should be given to Tillman Crane, Todd Fleming, Matt Cragle, Sharon Crane, and those injured in its creation.

To the cast, crew, and directional staff, a job well done!

MACCO makes music

by Allison Perry

Musical works from the Baroque, Classical and Romantic periods will be performed by MACCO in its winter concert, Thursday, Feb. 26, at 8:15 p.m. in Wilson Chapel.

The program begins with Hector Berlioz' "Rakocxy March" from "The Damnation of Faust" and "London Symphony No. 104" by Franz Joseph Haydn.

The Pachelbel "Canon" and John Strauss' "Blue Danube" are two popular selections included in the program.

Judy Grahl, an MC senior from Maryville, will play harpsichord with the MACCO string section for Pachelbel "Canon."

Tickets for the fourth concert in MACCO's 1980-81 season are $3 and will be available at the door.

Tom Columns

In this week's column, The Highland Echo concludes its series of articles on Sir A.R.A. Morrison's book The Saga of the Dining Hall Meal (Basil, Switzerland:). Leo Lahey & Son, Publishers, 1937).

In The Dining Hall Meal, Sir A.R.A. Morrison dedicates seven chapters to the dining hall meal in the U.S. since the American Revolution. As it would be impossible to share the contents of each and every chapter here, several incidents in the course of U.S. history have been gleaned from Sir A.R.A.'s work.

We are all familiar with the tale of George Washington cutting down his father's cherry tree with his little hatchet. After exhaustive research, Sir Morrison was able to determine that this actually happened in the spring of 1739.

However, little George did not have a little hatchet—he cut down the tree with a piece of breaded pork from a dining hall meal, thus the origin of the name "pork chop."

In the nineteenth century Sir Morrison accounts an incident of extreme historical significance. It involves General George Custer and the Battle of the Little Big Horn.

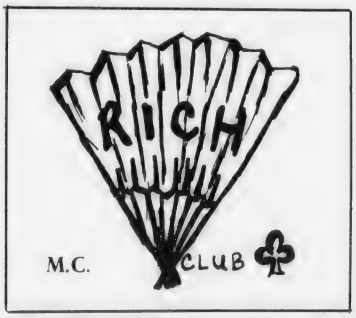
Contrary to the popularly held notion that Custer died in this infamous clash with the Indians, he was actually captured alive and held captive for some time. He was tied to the ground and fed dining hall meals until he succumbed to diarrhea.

"Therefore," notes Sir Morrison, "it is inaccurate to refer to the Battle of the Little Big Horn as 'Custer's Last Stand.' "

Then, in the twentieth century, there is always the Supreme Court case of Brown vs. Kolira (Michigan) Board of Education of 1912, in which the Supreme Court ruled that the school board could indeed serve dining hall meals to its students, and that "such action did not reflect cruel and unusual punishment."

It is this decision that affects all of us today.

Letters to the Editor



We have just returned from 2½ hours of listening to a discussion of the proposed curriculum and calendar changes. We are thoroughly disgusted for many reasons. First, it was stated that these changes have been considered for the past 3-4 years. Being Freshmen, this means we have had no say in the matter and are expected to accept the views of students who are no longer here or will not be affected by the changes. Second, many of this year's Freshmen came to this school because of the trimester system. The recruiting tactics emphasized the uniqueness of Maryville as a result of being able to concentrate intensely on three classes. No mention was made of the possibility of a deviation from the system under which this college currently operates. Third, the comments of Dean Perkins upset us. We realize that being a member of the Task Force, it is necessary for him to speak in favor of the proposed changes, but it is upsetting that he could not find one single good thing to say about the present system. Our grievances are many but when everything is set before us we realize that our condemnation is because we don't want the change. It is NOT fear, as Dean Perkins believes, but just the simple fact that we came to this school mainly for its "uniqueness." We hope the school takes into consideration the opinions of the students before any permanent decisions are made since the students will be affected more than anyone else.

Two Concerned Students,
Evelyn Sowell & Glennis Riedl

Dear Editor,

In studying the fifteen proposals as developed by the Task Force on Curriculum Review, I have noted the intention of said proposals to raise Math 99 to a 100 level credit course. The practice of placement into the course will, however, remain as it now stands, I believe. This practice closes the option of an easily achieved credit course to those students placing above the 99 level. I do not want an easy class if I place above that class, but I do want the credit, for if Math 99 becomes a credit course, and I place above it, that theoretically means I could pass it! I do not believe Math 99 should be a credit course designed for students unable to make the present academic standards of this school! I invite rebuff from the administration.

Will curriculum change course of the future?

by Mark Beyer

This is the second article of two dealing with the fifteen proposals developed by the Task Force on Curriculum Review. The first article dealt with the proposed calendar and class schedule changes; this article will deal with the actual curriculum changes.

The Task Force recommends the following changes should take place. Fine Arts 201 retained but modified by adding a fourth section in drama to the existing architecture, visual arts, and music sections and requiring students to take three of the four sections. Art and music majors would be permitted to petition for a waiver in fields where they have achieved adequate knowledge through prior experiences.

A sequence in Humanities is recommended to replace Eng./His. 121-122 and the required 200 level religion course. This sequence would consist of eight courses from which the student would choose five. Also recommended is that the present non-Western studies 301 course continue to be required in addition, a second required course would follow the 301 that would add depth to a student's world-culture educational background.

The science curriculum would be changed in that Science Fundamentals and Science Thought be dropped and replaced by two new courses, one dealing with quantitative and deductive skills, the other being a more specialized extension of the first. As mentioned earlier, Religion would be included in the humanities sequence but a 200 level comparative religion course would be required.

The Task Force further recommends a course designed to enhance a student's understanding of the structure and functioning of U.S. institutions. The proposal on Understanding Human Health and Development recommends that Health 101 be expanded to include the psychological aspects of development There is a proposal for two courses at two levels, on ethical decision making that would be taken between a student's sophomore and senior years.

The proposal on quantitative skills recommends a knowledge and use of calculators, elementary statistics, and use of computers; further recommended is that Math 99 be raised to a 100 level course, given credit, and still open to only those students who place poorly in the mathematics placement test.

Lastly, the proposals on foreign language and Inquiry. The foreign language recommendation states that students should have a primary language other than English in both oral and aural capability. The Inquiry proposal recommends the courses include familiarization with types of jobs, college scholastic skills (i.e. studying, taking notes, etc.) and development of good research habits.

Chemistry and Business: the future of Grads

by Jana Dalton

Is there life after MC?

Many people would question this unthinkable notion. Who could imagine pursuing a lifestyle without cafeteria food, late night hours, and term papers? Well, believe it or not, several MC graduates with Business Administration and Chemistry majors have experienced life after Maryville College.

A Business Administration Major is provided with supervisory and economic foundations. These foundations lead the graduate into various careers, such as: insurance, marketing, accounting, and business management.

For example, Jim Holland (Class of 1980) and Ron Lawson (Class of 1979) entered positions in marketing and public relations as Regional Corrdinators with the Boy Scouts of America. They have recently progressed to Executive Directors of different southern regions.

Beverly Woeber and Kevin Reilly (1980's grads) found employment in the insurance business which has supplied opportunites for advancement and travel.

Alvin Nance (Class of 1979) and Paul Bailey (Class of 1977) are using their major through bank jobs. And still yet - Carl Reardon (Class of 1977) combined his education with a hobby and began his own business in Gatlinburg. This is living proof of success!!! (So if this is your major, hang in there because you are limited only by your lack of imagination.)

MC Chemistry graduates have been equally successful. The basis for their careers was the faculty emphasis on the "nature of theories" and the ability to communicate these theories to others. Charles Brooks (Class of 1980) is concentrating on medical school and Mike Cherskov (1980) is pursuing graduate studies in science communications. Other MC alumni include Gordon Miller (1979) who is an industrial chemist; Chris Rigell (1979) who is an geological chemist; and Kurt Markgraf (1978) who is an analytical chemist for U.S.S. Agrichemicals, Inc. All of these ex-MC students have developed personal skills under the same major to enter multiple carrers.

From these brave leaders we remaining Scots can be encouraged to strive onward with hope. But seriously . . . if you have questions or doubts about your chosen major, or if you are still undecided visit the Career Planning and Placement Center. It provided the information for this article and can give you the possible carrers in your future.

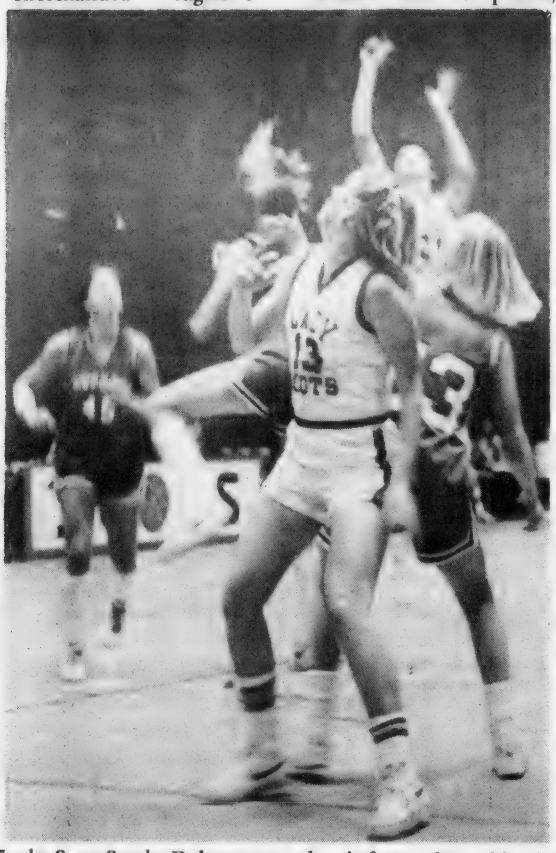
LATE BREAKING NEWS

Patrick Ballard, former assistant football coach at Davidson College, has been named receiver coach and recruiting coordinator at Maryville College, MC Athletic Director and Head Football Coach Art Ogden announced Wednesday, Feb. 25.

Ballard's appointment is effective immediately.

"We are very pleased to have a coach of Pat's caliber join our staff," Ogden said in making the announcement. "He brings a great deal of enthusiasm, organization and experience to the job. It is rare that we can get a man with these qualities, and we are pleased that he has chosen to come with us."



Ballard, 27, is a graduate of Knoxville Central High where he played football all four years. He holds the B.A. degree in physical education from the University of Kentucky (1976) and the M.Ed., also in physical education, from Middle Tennessee State University (1977). Currently he is working on the Ed.S. in curriculum and instruction at the University of Tennessee-Knoxville.

Scots close with winning season

by Rodney Nelson

The Maryville College Scots opened the last week of their season at Roanoke College with revenge as the primary motivation. Earlier in the season, Roanoke scored a 75-55 triumph over the road-weary Scots at Maryville. However, the shorthanded cagers—3 players suspended—were intent on upsetting the nationally ranked Roanoke Maroons (no. 2).

Maryville with a gutsy effort from the remaining six players almost pulled off the upset with a savage last-minute rush, before the Maroons subdued them 71-65. Jackie Carlton paced the MC attack with 19 points, while Dale Watson popped in 15 and grabbed 7 rebounds. Jeff Riley came off the bench to contribute 9 points and grab a career-high 10 rebounds, but these efforts fell short. Overall, poor shooting from the field was the key to the Scots' loss, while Roanoke shot a blistering 59% from the field. The superlative effort of the Scots was not wasted but helped prepare them for the next-to-last home game against Washington and Lee.

Lady Scot Sandy Rabun scans the air for a rebound in the ladies' contest with Covenant.

Back on the home floor, with an enthusiastic crowd rooting them on, the Scots responded by thoroughly beating the W&L Generals, 78 to 67. It was a night of intense emotion and a highlight for one Scot cager-Richard Suttle. Big Rich, with an early first-half basket passed the 1,000 point mark in his career which is a milestone for any ball-player. With the emotional lift provided by Suttle's achievement, Maryville proceeded to tromp the Generals. Jackie Carlton fired in 19 points and played an excellent floor game to lead Maryville. Bobby Rimmer with 17 points and Rich Suttle with 16, gave the W&L team little time to rest. However, the game was officially crowned a victory when Dale Watson slam-dunked a shot that sent the crowd into a frenzy. Watson further inspired by the crowd, ripped down 3 consecutive All-World rebounds before fouling out with 12 points and 9 rebounds. It was a game of near perfection for the Scots and a fitting triumph over a fine basketball team.

On Saturday night, Maryville ended the regular season with a hard fought victory over Bridgewater, 79-75. Four seniors—Richard Suttle, Dale Watson, Doug Tutin, Jeff Cheek—were honored with a standing ovation from a near capacity crowd. Also honored during half-time was Mr. D.W. Proffitt, a long time athletic booster of the college and community.

These honors were the most exciting moments for the MC fans, until the last 7 minutes of the contest. Up till then the Scots, showing signs of an emotional letdown, performed sluggishly while Bridgewater—with 61% shooting from the field—built an 11-point lead. However, with around 7 minutes to go, Maryville put on a furious rally that melted the Bridgewater lead and finally saw the Scots prevail by 4. Richard Suttle led all scores with 20 points. Bobby Rimmer scored 16 points from downtown and Andrew Baker ripped down 9 rebounds in the contest. Also contributing with a season-high assist performance (10 assists) was Jackie Carlton, who also fired in 12 points. Overall, Maryville played emotionally flat but when extra effort was needed, the players answered the call.

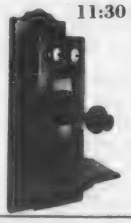
Closing with a 15-10 overall mark and an 8-6 mark in the ODAC, the Scots journey to Roanoke, Virginia Thursday, Feb. 26, for the first game of the ODAC Tournament. If Maryville were to win the tournament, the team would receive a bid to the NCAA Division III playoffs. Good luck Scots, let's bring home some hardware.

SCOTS MARYVILLE COLLEGE

Ladies finish week

by Mellissa Sullivan

The Lady Scots scored two very impressive wins this past week over Covenant College and Transylvania, while losing to Lee College in a close contest.



Avenging an earlier season loss to Covenant, the Lady Scots were victorious 71-64. A balanced scoring attack and a consistent defense provided the win. Brenda Babb led the way scoring 20 points, followed by Candy Nutter with 18. Kim Allen and Sandy Rabun both contributed 12 points.

Despite good effort, the Lady Scots were not as fortunate against Lee College, losing 71-66. Coach Brown said after the game, "We should have won. This is the fifth game out of our 8 defeats that we lost by 5 points or less." Kim Allen had 20 points while Sandy Rabun and Candy Nutter had 17 points apiece.

Brenda Babb's 23 points and Candy Nutter's 19-point performance led the way as Maryville put the bite on Transylvania, 71-66. A good defensive effort was the difference in the game as Transylvania's leading scorers were held below their average.

The Lady Scots close out their regular season this week as they play Montreat-Anderson Tuesday at 7:00 and Warren-Wilson Saturday at 2:00.

Meetings arouse proper "Passions"

by Janet Helwig

February has come and gone, and with it, the 1981 series of February Meetings have also drawn to a close. This year, as in years gone by, February Meetings were designed to be a special time set aside in which the entire college community concentrates on current religious questions.

The theme for the 1981 February Meetings was "A Passion for Living," with the definition of passion implying an emotional drive, or something that commands one's love or devotion. In light of the speakers and the message involved with the series of meetings this year, this "passion" could be interpreted for many as an obligation to lead a more compassionate, simplified, and appropriate lifestyle.

The question of what we can do to lead a more appropriate and simplified lifestyle was addressed by several of the speakers in a combination of worship services, seminars, small group meetings, and a panel discussion.

Ray Nott, the featured speaker of February Meetings, brought forth several general topics which relate directly to this theme concerning life's passions. His urge to "control the world rather than let the world control you" seems quite timely when our present world situation is considered. Rev. Nott also advocated the "No Deposit – No Return" theory which implies that we will receive from life's experiences precisely what we have given to them. We would also do well to remember that, according to Rev. Nott, both the giving involved with the deposit and the receiving involved with the return require a great deal of mobility and flexibility.

Rev. George Worth of Americus, Georgia, addressed the Food and Hunger Issue. In doing so, he challenged his listeners to meet the needs of God's poor and to encourage others to do the same by way of a planned and evolving effort to reduce our level of consumption.

Rev. Bill Murrah of Knoxville addressed the problem of social change and how to bring it about. His message was to become active in your area of concern by asserting yourself, becoming organized with others, and then developing a planned action program.

Dr. David Young addressed the question of why our technology is leading towards death rather than life. According to Dr. Young, one of the most dangerous and harmful issues in current technology is the apparent belief and drive that technology will solve all of our problems. Dr. Young feels that it is precisely this view of technology that excludes the feelings and importance of the individual human. In a very thought-provoking seminar, Dr. Young encouraged those present to find a risk you believe in – and take it. In other words, be a pioneer, but do what you choose to do with a sense of purpose and quality.

Father Jack Hickey of Nashville spoke about his work as a campus minister and a staffer at Dismas House -- a place where exoffenders and students live together in an atmosphere of sharing and learning. According to Father Hickey, Dismas House is a place which provides food, recreation, housing and most importantly, emotional support.

Genie Varker, an MC grad and former "Volunteer in Mission" in Arizona, encouraged and urged the belief that anyone can be a missionary -- anytime and anyplace.

In retrospect, the series of February Meetings proved to be days in which emotions were touched, questions raised, and awarenesses reawakened. The speakers were invaluable, in that each of their lives seemed to be their own personal example of how to live and experience a more simplified and compassionate lifestyle. Perhaps now, a pertinent question would involve examining our own lifestyles for signs of compassion and simplicity. In other words, what will be our message of life's passion to MC students in five, ten or twenty years? Or, more importantly, will we have a message?

The Academic Life Council still desires student reaction and discussion on the curriculum/calendar proposals. A meeting has been scheduled for tonight, 6:00 pm in Fayerweather 201. For more on the proposals, see Page 3.

Reagan cuts to hurt students?

(CPS)– Fully half the nation's college students might have to change their plans for next year if Congress passes President Ronald Reagan's plan to cut federal financial aid by 20 percent, financial aid administrators warn.

The cuts recommended by the Office of Management and Budget have private colleges in particular scurrying to devise methods to compensate for the loss in grants and loans. But all college administrators contacted by College Press Service feared the proposed cuts would destroy their enrollments.

Don Mullen, head of financial aid at the University of Montana and the president of the Rocky Mountain Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators, predicts that if the cuts are approved, "Aid to part-time students will be the first eliminated. Then we'd probably have to make aid dependent on grades."

Even then, Mullen estimates that Montana still would have "about 500 hurt students," which would "unquestionably

An interesting notice greeted the MC campus via its post office boxes last Friday. The notice, "In Accordance with the War Powers Act of 1973" exhorted "All men age twenty (20) to twenty-five (25)" and "All women age twenty (20) to twenty-two (22)" to register with the Selective Service Administration by 6 pm, Friday, Feb. 27, at the MC Post Office.

Needless to say, this notice caused quite a stir with some—and as we all know now, was not for real but an independent project of a group of Humanities 301 students.

I first thought the box stuffers to be a practical (or perhaps impractical) joke, but I now realize the motives of those involved in their conception and circulation.

I agree with their motives. At times, perhaps too often, we at Maryville College can lapse into a "chrysalis syndrome" in which we become isolated from the events of the "outside" world.

Of course, as college students who are here to participate primarily in study, it is difficult to be on top of everything on the national and international scene. However, this does not mean we should not be aware or have some concern about salient issues—such concern and awareness is a vital part of the educating process.

The "Gang of Five" did indeed have a very important point here. I only wish they had chosen a better means to get it across. It seems to me, from my observations, that more people were upset about being unwitting "guinea pigs" in an experiment, than they were made aware of anything. In all honesty, I was a bit ticked at being used like that....

But is there something that we can all learn from this?

Perhaps bulk stuffing of the campus boxes will be regulated (and perhaps you'll never get an Echo again!), even though I believe censorship is a step too far. Perhaps some form of campus policy will be mapped out regarding "experimentation" with human subjects. Who knows....

Perhaps we will look at this incident as I believe it was meant to be looked at; to raise our level of awareness of the world around us.

I do not believe it's necessary or appropriate for us to go out and join every "awareness" type group from the Animal Salvation League to the Junior Republican Club. It is not possible for each and every one of us to carry the weight of the world on our shoulders. But we can care, can't we? We can be aware....

I realize that there are many issues today that need to be answered, but it is not possible for an individual to go after them all. But we can all read, we can all watch television, we can all think (I hope), so let's all try to be more aware. We're gonna have to be sooner or later....

Dear Editor:

Our deepest appreciation is expressed to members of the faculty, administration, and staff for their cooperation in the planning and implementation of February Meetings. The final weeks of Winter Term may not be the ideal time to schedule this annual series of religious meetings, but many of you went beyond the call of duty, performing works of supererogation, as it were.

Without the hard work of numeous students, the good publicity provided by The Echo and The Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times, and the encouragement of religious life coordinator Margaret Stevenson, these meetings would not have been as successful as they were. Students are grateful for the willingness of the faculty to reschedule classes and defer major tests and research papers until after Tuesday. All are grateful for cooperation manifested in the dozens of "little" chores assigned.

Thank you very much.

February Meetings Committee

To the Maryville College Community,

Last week's mock Draft registration was a "guerilla theatre" tactic employed by several members of the Humanities 301 class to raise the consciousness on the Maryville College campus. This main emphasis of our project was to be the way in which people deal with conflict. However, we decided to also take the opportunity to try to "get at" the apathy which runs rampant on our campus. The mock draft situation was proposed precisely because it is serious, and would be taken seriously by concerned people.

In our view, conflict was generated by people being forced to face up to a situation which not only directly involved them, but one which they considered themselves virtually immune to on college campus. We feel that this conflict was positive because it forced people to become aware of their position in the country, or even in the world, and not just on this campus.

Our actions were neither a joke nor an experiment but an independently conceived project (our professors were unaware of our actions), designed to "wake up" our sleeping community. Things happen to us every day that we not only have the right but the responsibility to question.

The choice is ours. One voice can make a difference. Can we afford to continue living in silence? Thank you.

Perkins studies courses

"Nothing is being crammed down anybody's throat," says Academic Dean, Dr. Alfred Perkins refering to the ALC's proposed calendar and curriculum changes.

Dr. Perkins is concerned that students be familiar with the proposals. He also stresses that the ALC only recommends and proposes.

"These proposals are reviewed by the faculty and the ACC-they can be rejected, approved, tabled, or sent back to the ALC."

According to the dean, the Task Force and the ALC examined both the present trimester calendar system and the semester type system for "plusses and minuses."

"It was the judgement of the ALC that the semester system had more plusses."

Dr. Perkins lists these seven factors as plusses for the semester system:

1. Certain disciplines will find the longer 15 week term helpful.

2. The shorter 10 week term of the trimester system creates pressure on some students. The 15 week term of the semester system would help to relieve some of this pressure.

3. The trimester system lends itself to schedule conflicts. With more class periods and two terms instead of three, such scheduling conflicts (such as problems scheduling a Science Thought course or Fine Arts) would be relieved.

4. The present trimester calendar is so different from the calendars of other schools, that any kind of exchange (faculty or student) is extremely difficult. With a semester system or a calendar more similar to those of other schools, such exchanges would be facilitated.

5. Though not a major factor, energy conservation cannot be overlooked. As the college pays $28,000/week at present for heating oil during the winter, it would be economically sound to close down the school for a week during the winter, as the semester system provides.

6. Students would receive an extra week off for Christmas and would get out a week earlier in the summer. This should prove to be an advantage for students who work over Christmas break and during the summer.

7. Outside colleges and agencies (such as the Veterans' Administration) have trouble understanding the present trimester calendar and course credit system. A switch to the semester calendar/credit hour system would be helpful to those dealing with such agencies or transferring to or from MC.

Dr. Perkins states that "not a single student at MC. . .will have to take an additional course because of the [proposed] calendar change."

He also adds that fears that the school will be "making money" from the [proposed] change are unfounded.

"There will be a different way of computing cost for the credit hour system. . . . .I don't think it will cost any student more. . . ."

have a significant impact on enrollment."

Of major consequence to Mullen and other financial aid administrators are the recommendations made concerning Pell Grants, National Direct Student Loans, and Guaranteed Student Loans.

Specifically, Office of Management and Budget (OMB) Director David Stockman wants to cut 286,000 students from the Pell (formerly BEOG) program by restricting the grants to students from families making less than $25,000 a year.

Mullen frets such a move would "cut off a couple hundred students" at Montana alone, while Donald Chenelle of Case-Western in Ohio asserts "it would be an incredible hardship" for those families with more than one child in college.

"If you've got two or three kids in graduate and undergraduate school, even if you earn a higher-than-average -income, you're going to have trouble putting those kids through school unless you can pay in installments over a long period of time. Pell Grants gave people that opportunity," Chenelle says.

Stockman also wants to eliminate the National Direct Student Loan program over the next four years. The loss would pose additional problems for students hoping to "make up for the loss of a grant with a loan," says Paul Chrisman of Wichita State.

The Guaranteed Student Loan plan, however is the largest federal aid program, and administrators predict that Stockman's recommended changes in the program could cause the worst problems and most drastically affect enrollment.

Stockman proposes the elimination of the "in-school interest subsidy" program of Guaranteed Student Loans. Under the current system, students repay bank loans for tuition at nine percent interest rates, while the government pays the difference between nine percent and the regular interest rate. Under the new plan, students will have to pay the regular market rate, which now hovers between 17 and 20 percent.

Benjamin Culley of Occidental College mourns that the loss of any part of the GSL program "would be a very heavy blow" to schools.

Over 600 students get $1.25 million in GSLs every year at Occidental, and Culley warns that many of those people would have to transfer to a public school if that money dried up.

"We simply don't have the resources to make up for that money," Culley says. "One-third of our students would be affected by such a thing, and they'd have to get the money somewhere else in order to stay at Occidental."

Case-Western's Chenelle says that med students in particular would be hit because their costs are usually the highest. Between tuition, living, and supply expenses, Chenelle estimates that an average med student at Case must come up with $12,500 each year.

"Only about a quarter of our students can come up with that kind of money without the GSL," Chenelle observes.

Tom Little of Emory Law School, for one, says that a GSL made it possible for him to attend Emory, where tuition is currently about $4600, instead of a state law school, which costs "somewhere in the neighborhood of $1000."

But now his financial aid officer has advised him that the $5000 he is currently entitled to under the GSL program might disappear, and Little is getting somewhat frantic.

"Losing the GSLs would definately make ma have to change all my plans, and the same with everybody else I know in law school," he grieves.

"I don't know what my friends will do," Little adds, "But I might have to transfer to a state school. If I was starting law school over, I probably would have to make a financial decision not to enroll in the first place if there was no such thing as GSL."

Chenelle says it is impossible to know how many people are in comparable situations, but he would rather he never had to know.

"I don't think Stockman is the source or the final word in what the cuts are going to be. You've got (representatives William) Ford and (Carl) Perkins in the Congress, and a lot of people who are going to have their say," he warns.

"We're going to have some alternative plans," Mullen says. "I suspect we'll start with publicity so parents and students will know just how the government is affecting their college careers, then we'll give the government our own proposals for budgeting."

Scots come out swinging

by Bill Dent

The 1981 edition of the Maryville College Fighting Scots Baseball Team gets into high gear this week when they open up the season with a double-header against Roane State this afternoon at 1 pm on the MC diamond.

Under the leadership of first year head coach Buddy Gilbert, this year's squad promises to be one of the most exciting teams Maryville College has ever fielded.

This year's Scots have the unique blend of seasoned veterans and a talented crop of young freshmen—a combination needed for the winning edge. Also a plus for the squad is the quality of depth on the bench.

Coach Gilbert, who took over the coaching spot for the resigned Billy Henry last fall, promises that this year's squad will improve last season's 8-9 mark.

"We will bunt, steal bases, field, and hit—we will do anything it takes to win games," says Gilbert.

Providing leadership for the Scots this year will be returning starters Jim Reese, senior from Millville, NJ; Larry Sheeley, senior from Chattanooga, TN; and Ronnie Wyche, junior from Melbourne FL.

This year's baseball schedule includes some exciting teams such as Slippery Rock College of Pennsylvania, UT-Chattanooga, East Tennessee State, as well as a full schedule of ODAC conference games.

Basketball action

by Mike Weiss and Melissa Sullivan

The MC basketball Scots came away empty-handed from their first ODAC Tournament last Thursday, as they were eliminated by Lynchburg, 61-55. It was a disappointing end to a reasonably successful season for Maryville, which had hopes of faring well enough to receive a post season tournament bid.

The Scots started well, leading by as much as 7 points early in the first half. However, as coach Randy Lambert said, MC "just didn't have the killer instinct," and allowed the Virginia school to pull ahead by as much as 12 points in the second half. Senior forward Doug Tutin led a furious Scots rally late in the contest, pulling MC to within 2 points at 53-51. Yet clutch freethrow shooting by Lynchburg's Pete Fitzpatrick and Jeff Huffman held the Scots at bay until game's end.

Big Dale Watson had a fine game to conclude his college career for the Scots, tossing in 20 points and pulling down 11 rebounds. Tutin bowed out with 12, a total equalled by guard Jackie Carlton. Senior Rich Suttle was held to 6 points. Fitzpatrick led the winners with 15.

The Scots equalled last year's mark, finishing the season with a 15-11 slate.

Finishing with a "best ever" 15-8 record, the Lady Scots closed out their regular season by defeating Montreat-Anderson Tuesday night, 74-49.

This game also marked the final home game for senior Sandy Rabun, the first Lady Scot ever to score over 1,000 points.

Sandy's 14 points against Montreat-Anderson were second in scoring behind Candy Nutter who fired in 20 points and pulled down 17 rebounds.

Other Lady Scots shooting double figures were Brenda Babb with 11 and Kim Allen who contributed 10.

After a Warren-Wilson forfeit, the Lady Scots are preparing for the State Tournament to be held at Milligan College March 5, 6, and 7.

MC Soccer Scots

by Mike Weiss

The MC Soccer Team travelled to Dayton, TN last weekend for an off-season winter tournament, the Bryan College Six-Man Classic.

This unique all-day affair involved schools from Tennessee and Georgia in matches between teams of six players on a reduced-size field. Each match was 12 minutes long in round-robin tournament competition. The Scots sent two teams, MC Red and MC White.

The White team did not fare too well, losing three matches to Tennessee Wesleyan (3-0), Bryan (2-0), and UT-Chattanooga (3-0).

The Red team, however, had a fine day, finishing in a first place tie in their division. In the first match, the Scots held off Bryan to win 1-0. Match two saw the MC squad dominate play throughout, only to surrender a couple of careless goals to UT-Knoxville and lose 2-0. The last match featured end to end action as the Scots defeated UT-Chattanooga, 3-2, with Ken Davidson scoring the winning tally with less than 10 seconds on the clock.

Mike Sabatelle got two goals and defender Andy Steinbeck picked up two assists on the day.

MC had to go to an N.A.S.L. shootout to decide advancement into the championship round, but failed to qualify.

NOTICE

Applications are now being accepted for the editorship of the Highland Echo for the '81-'82 academic year. See Dr. Carolyn Blair (2nd floor Anderson Hall), Dr. Elizabeth Fowler (3rd floor Anderson Hall), or Tom Hudson (2nd floor Fayerweather Hall), for applications. If you feel a need to satiate your journalistic impulses, consider the Echo editorship. Flip through this paper -- all of this can be yours! Deadline for applications is Friday, April 3, 1981, Box 2820. But hurry -- you may never have this opportunity again!

The editor, management, staff, and everyone else connected with The Flying Flecho wish y'all a very enjoyable, fun, relaxing, and safe Spring Break. We will see everyone again as we return to press next term, asking the journalistic question: "Huh?"

Japan study offered

by Ed Brewer

Beginning in the fall of 1982, Maryville College will allow its students to study for one academic year (or one semester) at the Kansai University of Foreign Studies, Osaka, Japan, and these students will be allowed to transfer the course credits to Maryville.

The Japan Study Program will be offered through cooperative arrangements with the Kansai University of Foreign Studies (generally referred to as Kansai Gaidai).

Kansai Gaidai, located in Osaka, Japan, is fully accredited by the Ministry of Education and started its Asian Studies for foreign students in 1972. Today it serves around 7000 students including those from some 50 American colleges and universities.

Students enrolled in the Japan Study Program will be considered regular students at Maryville College.

All credits earned at Kansai Gaidai will be directly transferred to Maryville College.

Students enrolled in the Japan Study Program will pay Maryville College tuition plus an additional fee to cover homestay in Japan, air fare, and administrative fees necessary to program operation.

A campus coordinator will be responsible for screening the applicants and maintaining liaison with Kansai Gaidai.

Participation would be open only to students who have completed at least 10 courses at Maryville College, with a G.P.A. of at least 2.5, and received approval from the head of the student's major department and the campus coordinator.

Participation in the program will satisfy the core requirement in non-Western studies. Study of the Japanese language might be used to satisfy all or part of the core requirement in language, and other individual courses might be used to satisfy certain major requirements (if approved by the department head and the coordinator).

All instruction at Kansai Gaidai is in English and thus no language preparation is required for application. Students enrolled at Kansai Gaidai are, however, required to take a Japanese language course each term.

In each of the Fall and Spring Terms students normally take Japanese language and 3 elective courses. During the Winter Term (6-week period) students take Japanese language and one elective.

On-campus dormitory accomodations are available to students. However, they are encouraged to take advantage of the opportunity to participate in the homestay experience arranged by Kansai Gaidai.

Since participants in the Japan Study Program are considered regular Maryville College students, they should be eligible for financial aid. It also should be noted that the opportunities of earning money by teaching English on a pri-

LETTERS LETTERS LETTERS LETTERS LETTERS

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to the March 5 article "Perkins Studies Courses." This article raised several questions about the proposed changes.

I am presently a freshman. Last year when an MC representative came to my school one of the advantages of attending Maryville College that was pointed out was the trimester system, and that was one of the main reasons I came here.

These calendar changes were under study last year. So then why was I told of the benefits of the trimester system if the change-over to semesters was already being planned?

Dean Perkins in one of his points says "the shorter 10 week term of the trimester creates pressure on some students. The 15 week term of the semester system would relieve some of this pressure." I disagree with that statement. Although the term would be longer, the additional number of classes would offset the advantages of a longer term.

In my own opinion, the semester system would increase pressure on students because they would have more courses to "juggle." Presently I have to keep track of work and time spent on only three courses. The semester system would cause me to keep tabs on five courses. Although the total amount of work would remain the same, the amount of "juggling" involved with homework would definitely increase.

I see the advantages of credit hours, but wouldn't it be possible to remain on the trimester system and also have credit hours?

Joel Chesser

Dear Editor,

I write out of concern, frustration, anger, and fear for the future of Maryville College. Not to sound melodramatic, but it seems to me that there have been several occurrences lately that may very seriously affect the quality of MC life (of course it all depends on who you talk to as to whether the quality is going up or down. . .if you ask me it's going down). I would like to bring up several points.

Firstly, and perhaps most obviously, there is the movement to change to a semester system in the Fall of 1982. Arguments have run amuck for quite awhile now, and it occurs to me time and time again that the students are getting nowhere. Why not? Are we not intelligent enough to weigh the pros and cons? Are we incapable of knowing our preferences? Is there no possibility that perhaps we are not acting out of totally selfish motives, but rather that we have a genuine concern for the benefit of our school -- this place where we live? It seems not.

Secondly, something that many people noticed but shoved in the drawer, is that the cost of coming back to good 'ole MC is going up again. Granted, costs rise, but did anyone notice that our food bill will be $1,010? Now maybe it's just me, but there is no way that I eat $1,010 worth of salad and cereal in eight months. . . What I could save in food might pay part of the NDSL . . and maybe I'd be here no longer.

And what of our deteriorating buildings. . .particularly Carnegie and Willard? And why do we lower the academic standard for incoming freshmen? And why, when we are told that we have a shortage of dorm space, do seniors and juniors have so much trouble getting off campus? Where are the priorities of a human institution that is slowly becoming inhumane? Yes. We need money. We all need money. But Maryville College is forgetting that money comes from many places. . .students included. . and even the poorest of us agree that money isn't everything.

Dear Editor,

This letter is in protest to the acts of vandalism that have recently occurred on our campus. It seems that certain persons are determined to "settle" their private arguments and air their personal prejudices by smearing black paint on our school buildings and grounds. We are not only offended by the vulgarities these people have written, but also by the nerve and disrespect they are showing their fellow students, the college faculty and staff, and this communtiy.

Because sandblasting is extremely expensive and time-consuming, tuition increases every time someone scribbles a few words on the sidewalk. Perhaps if the culprits were forced to remove their handiwork with soap, water, and a sponge, then future incidents might be deterred. In addition, the threat of severe punishment for anyone proven guilty of willful or malicious destruction or defacement of school property might serve to restrain promiscuous paint brushes. Maybe the administration should start focusing on the responsible behavior of their students rather than on the students' wallets and purses.

We are blessed with a beautiful setting in which to receive our education, and we resent acts by anyone that mar the MC Campus. It grieves and embitters us to see profanity and racial slurs so blatantly scrawled on the columns of Thaw, the steps of Anderson, or the walls of Fayerweather.

Pranks and practical jokes are one thing, but slanderous and hostile accusation are intolerable. We should be incensed that a few students are being allowed to violate our rights and abuse the property that is just as much ours as it is theirs. We are not advocating a "narc" system by any means, but we should defintiely protect what belongs to us. We are only urging that students become actively concerned about this crucial matter.

We do not know who is responsible for the vandalism, but we wouldn't miss them if they left. People who feel such a need to blemish and destroy ther own school are merly showing their own immaturity, lack of sensitivity, and ultimate inferiority.

Sincerely enraged,
Douglas Berry

Shortly after 12 midnight CST Monday, two great jolts of electrical current brought an end to the life of 24-year-old Steven Judy.

He went "willingly" to his death in the Indiana state electric chair for the murder of a young mother and her three small children almost two years ago.

"This is my doing," said Judy in his last moments, refering to his desire to be put to death.

It enrages me, it sickens me to think that a human being could possibly commit as heinous and horrendous a crime as that perpetrated by Steven Judy—abducting a young woman and her children, raping and murdering her as her children watch, dumping her body in a river, and hurling the children in after, alive, to die by being sucked down by the cold, muddy water.

But what makes me just as enraged is to think that a society such as ours, a society which supposedly holds sacred the value of human life, would yet end another life that "justice may prevail," by pumping thousands of volts of electricity through human flesh.

Sitting here writing this, thinking about this whole unfortunate yet seemingly unavoidable mess, I hear them say on the tube that Judy was the 72nd man to be executed in the state of Indiana since 1900. How distressing—if we've had to kill 72 men in the past 81 years in the state of Indiana alone, then it certainly seems that capital punishment has not been a very viable deterrent.

The other day I was wearing a button which read: "Why do we kill people who kill people to show that killing people is wrong?" And I've wondered about this. I thought about it when Gilmore was executed in Utah, when Spenkelenk was executed in Florida, and I think about it now.

It seems so "double-standardish"—we can lord over someone's life (and death) because we harbor this sense of superiority in justice. It seems as if we've come to rationalize the doings of our societal institutions, to rationalize our social attitudes with an "eye for an eye" concept. (The husband and father of Judy's victims quoted Exodus 21:24 on the news the other night.)

Have those of us who adhere to Christianity forgotten the idea of "turning the other cheek" that we find in Matthew 5:38-39? (Of course, one could spend all day arguing either point using scripture verses taken out of context.)

Unfortunately our society, our culture, our world, no longer ascribes value to human life, but only ascribes value to a nebulous concept of "quality" of a life. Because of what he had done, Steven Judy's life was considered about as "worthless" as the dust his body will become.

In several discussions of the execution I've heard people say: "But Judy wanted to die." This is true—he went to the chair willingly, which for me, makes the entire incident even more difficult to stomach as a member of the human community.

In a perverse way, we, as a "civilized" people have collaborated with a very troubled young man with a sincere desire to die. We have helped to pave the road to his desired self-destruction. We have carried out his suicide for him.

Many proponents of capital punishment have argued the fact that it is economically more sound to boost the electric bill for a few moments of high voltage than to feed and house an inmate for 99 years to life. This is true—it does make more sense from an economic standpoint. But what are the other prices we may have to pay? Are we ready to shed our credibility as upholders of the value of human life? Are we ready to take on the responsibility of assessing the value and worth of an individual life? Perhaps we are too ready....

Could not our societal approach to this entire issue, this sense of "double-standardism," this obscuration of values, this "killing of killers to show that killing is wrong," be a breeding ground for people such as Steven Judy, rather than acting as a deterrent as it was meant to be?

I don't know. But it seems to me that attempting to deal with the problem of murder through execution, through legalized murder, through societal abortion, is not just ineffective as a deterrent, but is post facto. The taking of another life cannot assuage the pain of the loss of the first; the taking of another life cannot fill the void left by the absence of the first. Two wrongs do not make a right.

vate basis are immense in Japan today.

Maryville College now facilitates the study of the Japanese language by means of membership in the National Association of Self-Instructional Language Program. Successful completion of Japanese language study at a level commensurate with the core language requirements will be accepted as meeting that requirement in whole or in part.

The Japanese language is offered through a self-instructional tape language program. Students involved in the Japanese language course will learn the language through the use of a master tape provided for the course.

Maryville College is required to have at least one Japanese native to conduct drill sessions. This is easily facilitated, since a good number of Japanese students are at Maryville. These students can be used on a student work-assignment basis. The present tutor is Masako Yoneda.

Maryville College is required to use a consultant who teaches Japanese at an accredited institution. The function of this consultant is to visit Maryville College once at the end of each term to test the students. There is a Japanese language instructor (Professor Eric Gangloff) at the University of Tennessee who is willing to serve in such capacity should this service be needed. ($150 service charge per term.)

Dr. Kim is presently the coordinator of this program.

Kent State: more questions

CPS – Sticklers for accuracy should have a field day dissecting the docudrama "Kent State," which NBC aired February 8. Although Inter-Planetary Productions, which produced the show, went to the trouble of annotating the script – apparently in anticipation of heavy criticism - some of the citations didn't check out.

A thorough reading of the script uncovered some 38 factual errors, though 14 were eventually edited out of the version televised in the United States. A four-hour version, which was also screened for American TV critics in Los Angeles, will be shown in foreign countries, presumably with all the errors included.

Most of the errors in recounting the events before and on May 4, 1970, when Ohio National Guardsmen killed four people and wounded nine others gathered at Kent State University to protest the American invasion of Cambodia, were fairly minor.

They range from the concoction of pre-massacre Sadie Hawkins Day in which a romance between two of the subsequent victims – Jeff Miller and Sandy Scheuer – is implied to the impossibly quiet interlude of an on-duty Guardsman playing a guitar.

The needs of dramatic license provided the most entertaining fictions in the presentation. The four-hour version, for example, showed a dorm counselor's wife at the height of the demonstration asking her husband, "Can't you forget the revolution for an hour? Come home for lunch. I'll serve my Ho Chi Minh Tuna Surprise."

More serious were the surviving fictions that could fundamentally alter the public's perception of what took place that weekend in Kent.

The script, for instance, shows six "radicals" setting fire to the campus ROTC building, thus providing Ohio officials with a

Effective July 1, 1981, English and Speech/Theatre will be joined to Foreign Languages to form the Department of Languages and Literature. The MC Scots Baseball Team will have some catching up to do as they face two double-headers this week. The Scots season record presently stands at 0-3.

Baseball Scots drop three

by Bill Dent

The Maryville College Scots Baseball Team started the 1981 season on the wrong foot, losing a double-header to UT-Chattanooga on Saturday, and dropping a nine inning contest to Roane State on Monday. The losses leave the Scots still winless at 0-3 heading into Thursday's double-header with Slippery Rock.

Physical errors plagued the Scots in the opening games and proved to be their downfall. However, Coach Buddy Gilbert remains optimistic about the overall outlook of the 1981 season.

"At Chattanooga Saturday we looked very impressive at times. But other times we looked and played terrible," commented Gilbert.

On Saturday the Scots lost a double-header to the Mocassins of UTC, 10-2, 8-2, at Chattanooga's Engle Stadium. In the first game, Tim Fitzgerald started as pitcher and played impressively for the first four innings. He tired however, and was replaced by Mike Wortman who finished out the game.

The Scots jumped out to an early 1-0 lead on Jim Reese's RBI single, but fell behind in the middle innings and never could catch up. Most of UTC's runs were unearned due to costly errors, as the Scots committed seven of them during the course of the game.

In the second game, freshman Mark Woodhull turned in an impressive five-hitter against the Mocs. UTC tallied eight runs and the five hits against Woodhull were due to five more costly Scots errors.

On Monday, the Scots dropped a 15-4 decision to Roane State, on the MC field. The visitors jumped out to an early 4-0 lead and the Scots were never able to regroup after that. A six run seventh inning by Roane State finished off the Scots effectively.

Mike Wortman started the game for the Scots on the mound and was replaced by Duran Williams after the sixth inning. Outstanding fielding plays were turned in by Jim Reese and Jay Kohlbush, but were matched by shabby fielding in the later innings.

The Scots will try to get on the winning track this week as they play a double-header against Slippery Rock this afternoon on the MC diamond, and another double-header with Tennessee Tech on Saturday, also at home. Both match-ups will start at 1 pm.

Ladies go to regionals

by Melissa Sullivan

Despite a good performance and tremendous effort, the second seeded Lady Scots were defeated by Fisk University 60-52 in State Tournament play at Milligan College.

"It was a close defensive game that was well played," said Coach Sharon Brown. Overall, Coach Brown is pleased with the ladies' season and team effort.

Lady Scot senior Sandy Rabun said after the game: "This is the best team I've ever played on and I'm proud to say I did."

Offensive standout Candy Nutter led the scoring by dropping in 17 points, followed by Rabun with a 15 point performance.

Nutter was named to the All-State team, along with junior sensation Brenda Babb.

The Lady Scots now advance to regional play at Virginia Beach. First round action pits Maryville College against North Carolina Wesleyan 3:30 this afternoon.

Ledford named coach

by Spencer Mullins

The Maryville College football coaching staff has announced the addition of Mike Ledford as offensive coordinator.

Ledford, a native of Knoxville, is currently head football coach at Groves High School in Garden City, Ga. He will join the MC staff on July 1.

Ledford graduated from Catholic University in 1971. He earned B.S. and M.A. degrees in health and physical education from Tennessee Tech. in 1975. and 1980 respectively.

Ledford is a versatile athlete, having earned four varsity letters in football, two in basketball, and two in baseball during high school. He also lettered four years in football at Tech where he was twic voted Ohio Valley Conference Player of the Week.

"With the addition of Mike to our staff, I feel we strengthen our total program. He has significant experience at the college level and his great rapport with players will enable us to do a great deal on offense. I'm excited that he has accepted the position," Ogden said, upon announcing the appointment.

motive for using force against the demonstrating students.

In fact, no one has ever been able to establish who set the fire. The campus "radicals" themselves contend they have no idea who the arsonists were, and others have suggested the fire was deliberately set by people anxious to provide a pretext for using force against the protestors.

The script also showed Guardsmen huddling before they fired into the crowd of demonstrators on May 4. The writers consequently imply some 28 men were involved in plotting the shooting, something even the most avid conspiracy theorists wouldn't allege.

The dramatic conveniences of having the victims meet the Guardsmen who later would kill them, and of suggesting that the Guardsmen staring down their sights at the protesters were actually angry also distort the nature of the tragedy.

The movie also showed a crowd that was considerably less provocative than the real one had been. According to the show, the demonstrators didn't throw many rocks at the Guardsmen. In reality, there were a lot of rocks pitched at them.

Yet it was not the producers' fault that the scenery didn't always look convincing. Kent State President Brage Golding refused to let the crew film on his campus.

Even if he had, things might have looked different. Kent State has since built a new gymnasium on the site of the killings.

Pressing problems at VSU

Virginia State University's student newspaper, The Virginia Statesman, has had its funds frozen by university officials over the publication of two controversial articles.

Campus editors and journalism organizations across Virginia have rallied to support the publication, and according to Steve Stone, president of the Virginia Intercollegiate Communications Association, "the administration is not going to stop their newspaper."

The publication suspension stemmed from a dispute between VSU officials and student editors over the publication of "two sensitive articles about venereal disease among VSU students and health problems in the college's cafeteria."

Sigma Delta Chi, the Society of Professional Journalists, has stated that the administrative action may have "constituted an abridgement of the [Statesman's] First Amendment Rights."

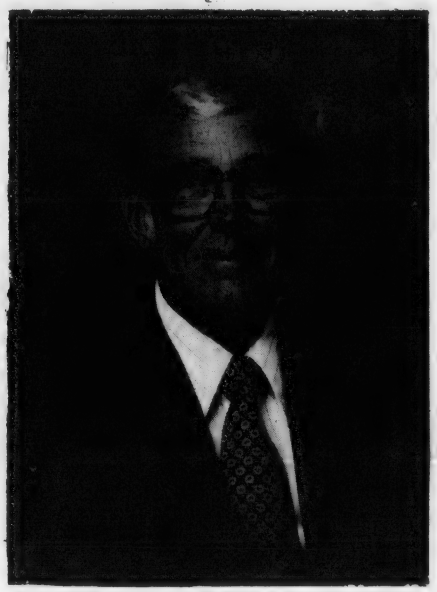
College friend will be missed...

Brick Brahams' death leaves void at MC

by Tom Hudson



Raymond I. "Brick" Brahams, Jr., Vice President for Administration and treasurer of MC, died Monday night, March 16, at Blount Memorial Hospital after suffering a heart attack.

A 1949 graduate of MC, Brick joined the College staff in 1958 as director of development. He held this position until 1966 when he left to become vice president for development at Williamette University in Salem, Oregon.

Brick came back to MC in 1969 as Assistant to the President. For the past 12 years he also coordinated MC's deferred giving program.

In the memorial service held in the Chapel last Friday, Dr. Wayne Anderson stated that "Brick exemplified the spirit of Maryville College."

Brick Brahams was a very honest, a very dedicated, a very hard working person who loved MC more than any of us might possibly fathom. He made the College community a better place because of his tireless efforts as an administrator and just because he was a part of MC. I wish I had known him more....

Raymond I. 'Brick' Brahams, Jr.

Brick was always interested in what was going on with the College. His interest in sports, his concern with other activities and organizations on campus was always evident. He'd always be stopping to ask someone "How's the baseball team doing?" or "How's the paper coming along, Tom?"

From his attitude, one never would have known that he had so much against him health-wise. I didn't know of his medical problems—and in a way I guess that's the way Brick wanted it.

But from the two-and-a-half years I was able to be in contact with Brick Brahams, I found him to be a man of great humor. I remember popping into the last February Meetings Committee meeting in Fayerweather 201 several times, trying to run down housing for the speakers, and each time I stuck my head in, Brick would chuckle at my harried, hurried appearence.

And I'll always remember seeing him get out of his red Volkswagen and each time wondering to myself. "How does he fit in that thing?"

Brick, we will miss you. The College will miss you. We're sorry you left when you did—that you had to leave at all. But we're thankful for your life among us, for your humor, and for your dedication to Maryville College.

President Reagan shot

President Ronald Reagan and three other persons were shot by a 25-year-old Colorado man who opened fire on them as they emerged from the Washington (D.C.) Hilton Hotel Monday afternoon.

The accused gunman, John W. Hinckley, Jr., of Evergreen, Colorado, fired six shots at close range from a .22-calibre pistol, striking Reagan once in the left side of his chest. The President was shoved into his limousine by Secret Service agents and removed to a Washington hospital, where he underwent surgery to remove the bullet from his left lung.

Reagan was reported to be doing "extremely well" and was discharging the duties of office from his hospital bed Tuesday.

White House press secretary James Brady was reported as "much improved" after five hours of surgery to remove a bullet that passed through the left side of his head. However, doctors also reported fairly extensive damage to the right side of his brain.

The two others injured, Secret Service agent Timothy McCarthy and Metropolitan Police Officer Thomas Delahanty are both reported to be in serious but stable condition.

Hinckley, a former neo-Nazi described by his parents as "wandering, aimless, and irresponsible" and was picked up on gun carrying charges in Nashville on Oct. 9 while President Carter visited there, is presently being held without bond.

A Special Edition Dedicated to the Life of Raymond "Brick" Brahams

I have met many people in the Maryville campus community who have had an effect on me both as a person and as a teacher. No one person, however, has had a greater impact on me than Brick Brahams. It is for this reason that I find it very difficult to write this letter to the editor mourning his passing, but at the same time I cannot remain silent.

It is hard to imagine a person more devoted to the ideals and goals of Maryville College and to a Christian, liberal arts education than Brick. He believed in the faculty, staff, and students, and this belief permeated his work at the College. I will miss him as a colleague on many committees, as a friend to whom one could take the little nagging problems that seem to have no answer, and certainly as a friend who taught me more on our trips to Chilhowee Lake about trout fishing and living a giving life than one could learn in three lifetimes.

The campus not only lost a person who could fill the many roles assigned to him, but it also lost a lasting and devoted servant whom I will long remember. I can think of no lasting tribute more suited to Brick Brahams than the fact that his devotion was so great he chose to be buried in the campus cemetary where he will remain near to the people and the place he loved so well.

Terry Bunde

My first reaction to the request that I write a tribute to Brick Brahams was, "I just can't do it." That's been my reaction to many things during the last two weeks, that I just can't go on with my work without him. And it seems to be the reaction of a good many others, several of whom have even asked me, "Can Maryville College go on without him?"

Brick hired me to work for the College in 1959, and has been one of my closest friends in all the years since as we have worked together. He has always been ready to listen, to talk with me, to give advice, to help – not only with problems related to my work, but also with personal problems. He helped me select my first car!

During the drive to the cemetary I commented that most of the good things that have happened to me during the last 22 years have come as a result of my knowing Brick Brahams. His brother remarked that this was quite a tribute to Brick. So perhaps I should end my thought at this point.

But there's something else that needs to be said.

Brick does not want me, nor anyone else in the Maryville family, to harbor the idea that our work cannot go on without him. He and I share a common love for and loyalty to Maryville College, and a common commitment to the life and work that goes on here. We are proud of the history of the College and believe strongly in its future under the leadership of Wayne Anderson. Brick wants my tribute to him to be a living one that takes the form of my renewed commitment to Dr. Anderson to be part of his team, to do my part to get the job done, to build on the work that Brick has left, and to see this college remains the strong, positive force it has been in our lives and continues to be in the lives of so many people today. I make that commitment and hope that the rest of the campus family will feel they can do the same.

Libby Rankin
Manager, Office of Development

Brick was a student in the first class I taught at Maryville College. I remember him as an attractive, popular young man, a basketball hero, and filled with enthusiasms. He loved history and liked to converse out of class on historical topics, especially the building of the railroads. With his return to the College as an administrator, I remember him for our continual humourous exchanges and jesting at each other's expense. I shall miss this lightheartedness. I shall also miss his seriousness. We served on the committee to chose a President for the College. I remember the deep concern and agonizing conversations we had about the future needs of the College. I recall my shock only three years ago when I heard that all his life he had wrestled with a major physical disability. After his kidney transplant, with elation he told me that for the first time he could remember he felt really good. Acquaintances had had no inkling of this handicap, for he was always optimistic and cheerful. He never indulged in self-pity or pessimism even when it was fashionable to do so. Most of all I shall miss the calm, quiet example he has been for me in very recent years -- a man of hope, sound judgment, concern for other people, and devotion to the College.

Arda Walker

During all my 20 years at MC I have felt a sense of partnership with Brick Brahams. From the beginning we shared a deep concern for the welfare and future of Maryville College, and our association developed into a firm friendship. Especially in recent years, as we consulted closely on many areas of responsibility, I valued more and more his forthrightness and clear-headed counsel. He has a remarkable grasp for decisions that had to be made, whether in money management, summer operations, food service, physical plant maintenance, purchasing, or energy conservation. We communicated honestly and openly on both long-range and daily matters. Losing him is like losing a strong right arm to guide and promote the operation of the college.

Aside from my college association, I feel a deep personal loss of a stalwart friend. Though I was not a fellow fisherman, we shared a love of the out-of-doors. On one memorable occasion, our families met by pre-arrangement at Yellowstone, and shared a brief camping experience, including a dinner of Brick's freshly caught trout. We had hoped there would be other such occasions in the future.

Yet we are grateful for the 54 years that shaped Brick's principles for the advancement of the college. He once wrote, in commendation of Dr. Anderson's inaugural address: "Applying the lessons of the past to the future he encourages all of us to think big, cling tenaciously to our commitment to high quality liberal education, avoid insularity, work together, and remain true to our Christian heritage."

Hugh Crawford

As Brick Brahams and I were leaving a particularly unproductive meeting one day, I asked him, almost accusingly, "Why didn't you say anything?" His reply was a characteristically terse "Because I didn't have anything to say." He believed with Pope that "Words are like leaves; and where they most abound, / Much fruit of sense beneath is rarely found."

In our work together as admistrators, he often led me from the lunatic fringe with just the right word. He made me, by his example, want to be better than I was -- to rise above the petty and the personal, to make decisions based on logic and principle. He himself could make those kinds of decisions because his values were clear, centered as they were on his belief in Christianity and in the mission of Maryville College as a church-related institution.

It is human to ask why we had to lose Brick Brahams at the peak of his productivity, at a time when colleges like Maryville are threatened with annihilation. Although it is presumptuous for the finite mind to draw conclusions regarding infinite wisdom, I believe that Brick's death will serve an important purpose if, in this commemoration and celebration of his life, we sense the urgency to preserve the integrity of an institution that helped to mold such a man.

Carolyn Blair

As I went about writing this paragraph in memoriam to Brick, on every start the following intruded. Brick and I were watching an MC ball-game. One of us mentioned that some of the team had quit because they were not getting the playing time that they desired. "Whatever happened to the idea that just being part of the team was joy and reward enough?," commented Brick. It was a natural sentiment, coming from him. Brick was a rare one. He believed that we do our work because the work should be done, that there is joy and meaning in the small, private, and unnoticed things of the world, and that humans do the moral thing because it is the thing to do. Brick was a Mensch. For those of you who do not know any Yiddish, that means that Brick was a human being with all the accompanying lovely, courageous, and unforgettable qualities that make humans the marvels they can be.

What a political past promises

by Jana Dalton

Have you ever probed the deep dark corners of your mind and asked yourself, "What is in store for history and political science majors?" Probably not. Oh well, maybe you would like to know just for the heck of it. If so, read on.

A person studying history at MC delves into the ideas of man. Certainly man's environment, climate, and resources are important elements in history, but the essential factor of history is what provokes man to think and react the way he does. Field careers dealing with this concept include: politics, law, journalism, ministry, archeology and others.

Some graduates of MC have utilized their major as a background for further legal employment or as a foundation for other types of careers such as: writing, appraiser, historian and geneologist. History majors continuing in the legal aspect are Laird Weaver and Tom Garner (1979) who are enrolled in graduate Law School and Diane Burger (1978) is a judicial assistant in Georgia. On the other hand, Pam McCroskey works at the Bank of Maryville in the Marketing and Public Relations Department informing the public of financial services offered by the bank.

The political science major also has the option of pursuing law studies like William Brewer, Bruce Hill, Joe Whitehead (all 1978 Grads) and Tony Fox (1980) chose to do, or they can branch off into various positions with private industries. For instance, Derrick Smith (1980) is employed by the Federated Insurance Company.

The political science major is qualified to enter jobs with the federal government or as ambassadors, opinion pollers, journalists, foreign service men, etc. Their education at MC enables them to pick the career of their choice.

Now aren't you glad you decided to read on!! And don't forget to check with the Career Planning and Placement Office if you ever decide to discover the dark corners of your mind, again!

Semesters too choppy

(Editor's note – The following article appeared in the February 12 edition of the Bethel College Beacon. It seems intersting that this article should pop up at a time when MC is considering a calendar change.)

Since the second World War, the quarter system has been in effect to accommodate college students with a flexible year-round schedule. Lately there has been talk of changing our quarter system to a longer, choppier system – the Semester System – a sixteen (or more) week period of classes, term papers, exams and the usual assortment of college refuse.

A quarter system provides the student with a more flexible schedule. The student is able to take classes all year long. The summer session in a quarter system becomes a regular term, lasting three months (just like every other quarter) so one is able to catch up in the summer on classes missed or not offered during the other terms. With a semester system, the summer session would be rushed in order to cover material in the allotted amount of time.

With a quarter, the terms are shorter and students are not "burned out" on classes as readily. Material is easily recalled by the student taking the final after ten weeks than the student taking the final exam after sixteen (or more) weeks. The same amount of material is covered in a shorter amount of time, thus challenging the responsibility of the student.

With a quarter system, students go back to school in the fall later than those on the semester and are dismissed at a comparable time with those on semester. There is also more vacation time during the year with a quarter system and breaks are placed at reasonable times in the year. With a semester, breaks split the term, thus necessitating review of material covered before the "interruption" occurred.

The quarter system, to me, seems to be the most logical system to use because it follows the seasons and seasonal holidays. Quarters can be adjusted to satisfy energy demands. This would be difficult for those on semesters. The term would be split even more and become choppier than it should be.

ANNOUNCEMENT
'81-'82 EDITORSHIPS

In accordance with the decisions of the Publications Committee, the official deadline for applications for the editorships of the Chilhowean and Impressions for the '81-'82 academic year, is Wednesday, April 15.

Due to the fact that those applying for the editorship of The Highland Echo must each produce a trial edition, an unofficial application deadline has been set at Friday, April 3, though this date is somewhat flexible.

To be eligible for the editorship of any of these three publications, one must be a full-time Maryville College student with a GPA of 2.0 or better, and must have had some experience with a publication or its production. Maturity and responsibility is important.

All candidates will have to appear for an interview with the Publications Committee at a time agreed upon by the Committee and the candidate.

For an application, see Janet Helwig, Publications Committee chairperson, Sidney Bright, David Widner, or Tom Hudson.

During this coming week, the senior class will be raffling chances for a wide variety of prizes. Chances will be only $1.00 apiece. One of these chances may entitle the lucky holder to anything from 10 banana splits to a pair of headphones. Tickets can be bought at meals from lunch, Tuesday, March 31st through lunch, Thursday, April 9th. The drawing of prizewinners will be held during dinner, Thursday, April 9th. There is no limit on the number of chnaces one may buy, so be sure to get in on this opportunity for these great prizes. The prizes and sponsors include: Harmonica – Tommy Covington's Music Country, Midland; Framed ladybug picture – Robertson's, Midland; 10 banana splits – Baskin-Robbins; 1 large super-special pizza – Geno's; two meals – Hanna's Restaurant, Midland; 1 dozen donuts – Van's Bakery, Midland; $8 certificate – Byrne Drugs, Nowtown; $10 certificate – City Drugs, Doctor's Bldg; $10 certificate – Medical Arts Pharmacy; two meals – NowTowner Restaurant, Nowtown; KC-180 headphones – Harvey's Warehouse; $10 toward a savings account – Blount National Bank.

Lady Scots finish at regionals

by Melissa Sullivan

The Lady Scots finished their best season ever with a fourth place finish at the Regional Tournament in Virginia Beach over Spring Break.

First round action saw Maryville soundly defeat North Carolina Wesleyan 63-51. The Lady Scots were in control throughout the game with a sound defense and consistent offense. Candy Nutter turned in a fine performance, scoring 19 points and grabbing 11 rebounds. Brenda Babb followed with 18 and Kim Allen contributed 12.

Semi-final action had MC pitted against Columbia College with the game ending tied at 56 all at the end of regulation play. However, injuries and foul trouble led to defeat and as Maryville lost 66-59. Brenda Babb led the scoring parade with 22 points, followed by Candy Nutter's 16 points and 13 rebounds. Lady Scot Kim Allen scored 12 points along with fine defensive play throughout the game.

The consolation game was a tough loss for Maryville as they lost to Roanoke College 84-66. Brenda Babb and Rachel Reese were the only Lady Scots in double figures scoring 21 and 10 points respectively.

Brenda was named to the All Regional team and Coach Sharon Brown was pleased with the team's overall season performance.

Senior Sandy Rabun closed out an outstanding career by being the only Lady Scot scoring over 1000 points. Sandy finished with a total of 1219.

Scots pick up 2 wins

The Maryville College Fighting Scots Baseball Team ran into some hard times on their spring break road trip to Virginia as they limped back to Maryville with a 1-5 worksheet for the road trip.

The Scots traveled into Ashland, Virginia for a Friday twinbill with the Randolph-Macon Yellow Jackets. The Scots came out on the short end, losing both games by scores of 2-8 and 4-7. Mike Wortman and Mark Woodhull took the losses for the Scots. Both pitched well enough to win but a lack of hitting and some costly errors hurt the Scots.

Saturday afternoon, the Scots traveled to Hampden-Sydney for a doubleheader with the Tigers at Hampden-Sydney and again dropped both games by scores of 1-14 and 8-13. Chris Miller and Duran Williams took the losses for the Scots. The Scots were within one run of the Tigers in the second game in the fifth inning but questionable calls by the umpire blew the game open in the sixth inning.

The Scots finally broke into the win column at Eastern Mennonite with Mark Woodhull tossing a 2-hit shutout to win 7-0. Dave Wortman drove in 3 runs to provide support for Mark Woodhull. The second game, however, was won by Eastern Mennonite by a score of 4-9. Duran Williams took the loss for the Scots, as the team finished a 1-5 road trip.

Injuries plagued the Scots all week. Key pitcher Mike Wortman is out indefinitely due to strained ligaments in the shoulder. Kenny Martin is out with a pulled hamstring and a sore shoulder injured while sliding into third base. Mark Woodhull had a sore arm but still pitched effectively.

Back in Maryville, the Scots put all the problems behind them as they split a double-header with ODAC rival Washington and Lee. The first game saw a lackluster hitting performance by the Scots as the Generals prevailed 0-9. Mark Woodhull took the loss, but still pitched rather effectively in some spots in the game. The second game saw the Scots hold off a late Washington & Lee rally to win 6-5. Jeff Pierce drove in 4 runs with a 3 run double and a RBI single. Curtis Shaw got the win with Tim Fitzgerald gaining a save.

The Scots now stand with an overall record of 2-13. Their ODAC record is presently 2-6 with 6 more conference games left on the schedule. The Scots play on Tuesday in Nashville, TN against Fisk University and they travel to Bridgewater, VA Saturday afternoon for a doubleheader with Bridgewater Eagles.

ACC stands for "Anyone Can Come!"

by Ed Brewer

Maryville College CIV programs are notorious for being only sparsely attended, but the April 1st program had especially poor attendance. In fact, it was determined that only 5 of the present 18 members (less than 28%) were at the CIV, and several candidates were not able to be there to give their speeches because they were not notified in time.

Obviously, the different programs on Community Issues and Values will not always be of interest to everyone, but the April 1st program should have been different. The ACC candidates gave their speeches. This should have been of special interest to everyone in the College community because it concerns everyone in Maryville College functions – staff, faculty, and students.

The ACC was officially established as the governing body of Maryville College on January 22, 1969. So for twelve years the ACC has been functioning on the MC campus, but do the members of the college community know what the role of the ACC is, or the membership, or even know what "ACC" stands for? It surely did not appear so at the CIV. After the speeches, a question and answer session yielded many questions about the ACC, some even coming from the present members of the ACC. One candidate stated that he thought the Echo should do a better job of publicizing meetings and proposals. This is hard for the paper to do when no information is given to it by the ACC on these items.

If the members of the ACC themselves do not even know what they are to do or who is to do it, how is the Committee supposed to function properly? And how can the rest of the campus possibly become involved in something no one is sure of? They cannot. The ACC must be understood and believed in by all if it is to be the All-College Council and if it is to work well. This should be the job of the ACC itself -- to make known its purpose and operating proceedures to all.

According to the Maryville College Manual of Governance, the following are given major attention by the ACC: The need for a balance between the continuing element and the transient element with the community; A respect for the distinct functions of the constituent groups and at the same time a concern for creating a sense of unity; A recognition of the varying levels of experience and responsibility so as to insure both a flow of fresh ideas and a mature weighing of those ideas; The desirability of providing in the legislative process for the committees to be concerned primarily with study, research, and the initiation of new measures; and the All-College Council to be free to hear debate, to deliberate, to make impartial decisions, and to devote time to the long-range plan for the College.

The composition of the ACC is as follows. The All-College Council shall be composed of 6 elected students: 2 seniors, 2 juniors, 1 sophomore, 1 freshman; 6 faculty: 2 from those who have been on the faculty over 15 years, 2 from the 6-15 year group; and 1 from the 1-5 year group; 6 administrative officers and staff: the President, the Dean, 3 others from the administration, and 1 from the staff.

The Manual also states that the All-College Council meets every two weeks during the academic year, and called meetings may be held at the discretion of the Council or the officers. Ordinarily the meetings of the Council are open to any and all members of the campus community. However, if the Council chooses, it may have an executive session. A quorum is one more than half of the total Council membership.

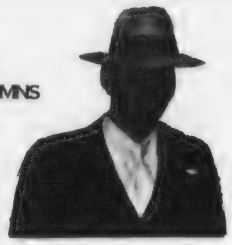
The attendance at the CIV is just another example of campus apathy here at MC. What is needed is a change of spirit in the College community; Everyone must want to be involved because involvement is the key. A sincere concern for each other, the community, and the college would create an atmosphere under which the ACC could and would operate.

AMERICAN FOLKLORE: RONALD REAGAN THROWS 222 BILLION DOLLARS ACROSS THE POTOMAC.

Reagan freezes aid

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS) – In an attempt to make families contribute more to their offsprings' college education, the Reagan administration has imposed an unprecedented temporary freeze on processing federal financial aid applications.

Last week Secretary of Education, Terrel Bell, announced that the government wanted to change certain eligibility requirements for Pell Grants (formerly Basic Educational Opportunity Grants), and would not process any more applications for the grants until Congress voted on the change in requirements.



Congress has until April 28 to react to the proposed rules changes, though Rep. Peter Peyser (D-NY) of the House Postsecondary Education Subcommittee hopes to debate the proposals sooner than that to minimize the freeze's impact.

If the requirements are changed as Bell requested, "maybe 100,000 students" would be knocked out of the Pell Grant program, estimates Skee Smith of the U.S. Department of Education's Student Special Services office.

In the meantime, the freeze effectively stops the awarding of all federal financial aid for the moment because Pell Grants are used to determine students' eligibility for

The recent assassination attempt against President Ronald Reagan has once again brought up the time-worn issue of handgun control It's been in the papers, it's been examined by the TV media ("60 Minutes" the other night was devoted entirely to the controversy), and one can't help but wonder what the President thinks about the issue now. . .

Oh sure, we hear news reports that he still opposes gun control and for all we know Nancy still has that "itty-bitty" gun stashed in the top drawer of the presidential nightstand. (Maybe Hinckley's pistol had "pretty" engraving on the barrel too. . . . . .)

As the networks were beating the tragedy into the ground last Monday afternoon and evening, one of the network co-anchormen turned to his partner and said something to the effect that "it is interesting to observe that all presidential assassinations were done with handguns," with the exception of Kennedy, who was killed by a rifle(s).

This struck me as being enormously trite -- what were the killers going to use -- bow and arrow? The point I believe this person was trying to make was to emphasize the availability of handguns.

I, however, do not believe that handgun control is the answer. The problem, as I see it, lies with something even more readily available than the handgun -- ammunition. I say: "Ban the Bullet."

This may seem even more trite than the newscaster's comment, but I believe the rationale behind the anti-ammunition concept is one of high calibre, and should not be written off as just a shot in the dark.

Anyone can readily obtain ammunition -- just walk into Sky City, K-Mart and buy it over the counter. No license, no nothing. By controlling ammunition, this easy access and availability would be prevented.

"Aha," you say, "What about the black market?" Good point. Unfortunately, I can see no way in which this can be avoided, with either handgun control or ammunition control. The very people we wish to keep these weapons from will find ways to obtain them.

One advantage to ammunition regualtion would be that private individuals who collect guns would be able to do so -- The "right to bear arms" would remain unmolested.

The NRA has been a staunch upholder of this right since the Chinese invented gunpowder. Of course, the NRA doesn't want to believe that the "right to bear arms" was originally intended for the purpose of militia and not to pack a pistol to go to the grocery store.

The regulation of ammunition would allow people to "bear arms"; however, loaded arms would be out of the question. (I can get into semantics, too.....)

Of course, the regulation of ammunition, "Ban the Bullet" idea may have a few holes in it. But I feel it's a far-sight better than handgun control. . . . . .

Dear Mr. Editor:

Let it be publicly taken note that WRJZ could not have been decisively drilled on last Wednesday by the People's Temple's Hoopers if it had not been for the fine efforts of Jody Grantham. The Hoopers and the Student Activities Committee thank you, Jody.

Dear Editor,

The students of Maryville College are very diverse in their opinions; therefore, it is difficult for one student to represent the feelings of many of the students. I am currently the only student representative in a group that is reviewing the M.C. Statement of Purpose to determine if it is being fulfilled. I really would appreciate it if students and others would share their thoughts about the matter with me.

The Statement of Purpose is printed in the M.C. catalogue supplement, or you may get a copy from me or the Student Affairs office. Our next meeting is April 14. Please, let me know your opinion.

Thank you,
Carol Coffey

Dear Editor,

I am writing to say a few good words that I need to say about "Brick" Brahams, whose loss will be widely felt around this campus and the community that surrounds us. Few people worked as hard and with such enthusiasm as Mr. Brahams did during his lifework here at Maryville College. We are so fortunate that Mr. Brahams' tireless effort was directed solely toward the betterment of Maryville College and nowhere else. This is the reason why we will find nobody to take Brick Brahams' place, we will merely find someone to fill the position of Administrative Vice President.

From my dealings with Mr. Brahams, he was one of the most frank, honest, and understanding people I have ever met. Mr. Brahams was one of the easiest people to talk to, I should know, we had several good conversations about the baseball team.

Mr. Brahams was also a most well-rounded individual, one who should be running Maryville College, because he was an example of the purpose of the college, an example of which to live one's life while here on earth. His devotion to family, friends, and God was so great that Mr. Brahams is one of the greatest people I have ever met.

CPP On HPER at MC

by Jana Dalton

This week's major spot light is on the body. Sound good? It should because students with Health/Physical Education and Recreation majors are concerned with your busy bodies. Both of these major fields offer careers with handicapped people, as therapists, in the sporting goods retail, as gymnastic instuctors, and on and on . . . . But the main idea is the understanding and appreciation of physical health and leisure.

Let's start with the Health/P.E. majors. They can study programs designed for teacher certifications (P.E. teachers, athletic coaches, etc.) or they can specialize in exercise therapy, rehabilitation and the like. Over twenty-two open to recreation majors courses are available at MC regarding health and P.E. not including instruction in individual sports.

Now take a look at Tony Ierulli (1980). He is in graduate studies in Physical Education under a coaching "assistantship." Sharon Youngs (1979) is an administrative assistant for a convention center and resort area. Steve Harrison (1979) works with a handicapped people's home. The emphasis of these careers is on the diversity of jobs as based on one general major.

Moving on to the recreation major, we find students who wish to concentrate on church and individual recreation, daycare work, and other related leisure employment. The options are surprising. For example, Jack Turregano (1980) serves as an admissions counselor, Janet Weston (1980) works as a recreational activities director for handicapped children, and Denise Hinds, who combined her major with religious interests, is employed as a recreation supervisor and counselor for disadvantaged youth.

As you can tell by now, the Health/P.E. and Recreation majors have interesting jobs, but they also have serious responsibilities. It's not all fun and games. If you are intrigued with this idea for the future, take a peek at the vast information in the Career Planning and Placement Office.

In accordance with the decisions of the Publications Committee, the official deadline for applications for the editorships of the Chilhowean and Impressions for the '81-'82 academic year, is Wednesday, April 15.

Due to the fact that those applying for the editorship of The Highland Echo must each produce a trial edition, an unofficial application deadline has been set at Friday, April 3, though this date is somewhat flexible.

To be eligible for the editorship of any of these three publications, one must be a full-time Maryville College student with a GPA of 2.0 or better, and must have had some experience with a publication or its production. Maturity and responsibility is important.

All candidates will have to appear for an interview with the Publications Committee at a time agreed upon by the Committee and the candidate.

For an application, see Janet Helwig, Publications Committee chairperson, Sidney Bright, David Widner, or Tom Hudson.

Who can you rely on?

LOS ANGELES, CA (CPS)– Samples of Rely Tampons, implicated in the communication of toxic shock syndrome, were inadvertently and belatedly distributed to "about two dozen" University of Southern California students through a promotional "Good Stuff" collection of samples assembled by the 13-30 Corporation of Knoxville, TN.

Robert Hanggi, director of 13-30's Sampling Program, says the "Good Stuff" kits were assembled for distribution to "over 400 campuses" early in the summer, and that the Rely brand tampons were included in the packages long before the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta suggested a relationship between them and toxic shock syndrome.

When the relationship was discovered "the majority of all of the kits had been distributed," Hanggi says. But "as per instruction from Procter and Gamble," makers of Rely, 13-30 contacted "every university that we deal with" and offered to take the kits back "freight collect."

Some of the kits apparently remained on campuses, and David Lee, USC's director of housing, says "about two dozen" of the kits were distributed to "new residents at the beginning of the spring semester" at USC in early February.

All the women who got the kits, Lee says, "have been notified in writing about the dangers of Rely tampons."

The distribution happened, Lee explains, "because the 13-30 Corporation shipped all their product very late to us. We did not get it (the kit) out until late fall," apparently without notice from the Knoxville company.

Lee says "we have cancelled our association with 13-30 for "Good Stuff."

Hanggi maintains 13-30 did contact all the universities involved, and that he thought the problem of distributing Rely tampons had been solved if only because "this is a fall program that goes from about August 15 through the end of September."

When he heard of the February USC incident, "I was at home on a Friday night, and as you can imagine, it clearly freaked me out."

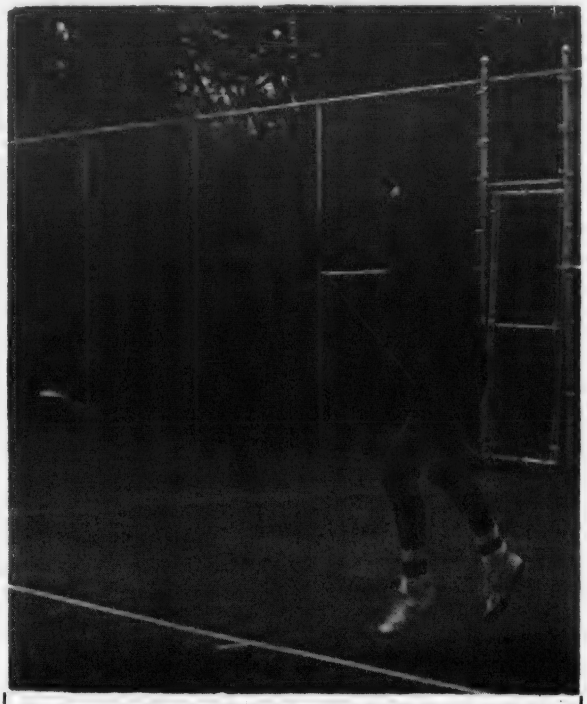
The recall, he remembers, was "thorough" and "exhaustive," though not soon enough to prevent protest during the fall distribution period.

Scots finish week: 1-2-1

by Bill Dent

The Maryville College Fighting Scot Baseball team had one of its better weeks of the 1981 season, finishing the week with a 1-2-1 worksheet with a near 2 victories at Fisk University in Nashville and a doubleheader loss to the Bridgewater Eagles in Bridgewater, Virginia.

In Nashville, the Scots jumped out to an early 6-0 lead in the third inning on the strength of a three run double by Jay Kohlbusch. The Scots saw their lead dwindle, however, and had to hang on for a 9-8 victory. Curtis Shaw picked up the victory, leaving him with a 2-0 worksheet. The Scots were led at the plate by Jay Kohlbusch, 3 for 3, 3 RBI's; Bill Dent, 2 hits, 1 RBI; and Jimmy Reese and Dave Wortman, 1 RBI a piece.



In the second game, darkness won the game as the score was tied 3-3 at the end of the seventh inning. Fisk jumped out to an early 2-0 lead in the early innings only to see the Scots jump ahead 3-2 on a 2-run double by Ric Brand. The score remained 3-2 until the bottom of the seventh inning when Fisk scored one run with two out on an RBI single. Darkness then halted the game. Chris Miller pitched the entire game and pitched rather effectively.

In Bridgewater on Saturday afternoon, the Scots dropped a doubleheader to the Eagles by scores of 5-8 and 1-11.

The first game was an exciting match as the lead seesawed back and forth between the Eagles and the Scots. However, in the fifth inning a questionable call by the umpire took the Scots out of the game. One run was nullified by the call and the Scots could never really regroup after that. The Eagles then scored 3 runs in the bottom of the fifth making the score 8-3 and out of reach for the Scots. The Scots scored 2 runs in the seventh, but to no avail as the Eagles won 8-5. Mark Woodhull pitched rather well again, but once again took the loss for the Scots.

In the second game, the Scots never were in the game as they were blown out by the Eagles 11-1 in only five innings. Duran Williams took the loss for the Scots. The judgement calls in the first game seemed to take the steam out of the Scots, as they were drubbed by the Eagles in the second game.

The 1-2-1 week leaves the Scots with a 3-15-1 record for the 1981 season. The Scots have a doubleheader Wednesday in Emory, Va. with Emory and Henry, and Saturday the Scots will travel to Johnson City for a twi-night doubleheader with nationally ranked East Tennessee State. The Scots next home game is Saturday, April 18, with ODAC power Lynchburg College.

Steve Arnold shows that tennis really is his racket with this smashing form. However, the Scots were not on the ball Saturday as they dropped their match against E&H.

Tennis—net results

by Steve Arnold

April 3 was another big victory for the Scots as Tenn. Tech came to town. Well, not exactly. Tenn. Tech did not show up and Scots' only victory came at a Div. I school by forfeit 9-0. Things were not this easy on Saturday when also tough Emory & Henry came to town and left that night with an 8-1 victory. The Scots only victory came at the hands of David Link as he defeated Wallace 6-2, 6-3: other matches were Lobello (EH) d. Shackleford (MC) 6-1, 6-2; Link (MC) d. Wallace (EH) 6-2, 6-3; Cross (EH) d. Durand (MC) 6-2, 6-4; Vaughn (EH) d. Arnold (MC) 6-7, 6-3, 6-1; Carver (EH) d. Massey (MC) 6-0, 6-4; and Richardson (EH) d. Raulerson (MC) 7-5, 6-3. In doubles, Labello/Wallace (EH) d. Shackleford/Link (MC) 6-2, 6-2; Carver/Cross (EH) d. Arnold/Massey (MC) 6-4, 6-4 and Richardson/Vaughan (EH) d. Durand/Raulerson (MC) 7-5, 6-3. The Scots as of April 6 stood at 4 wins and 2 losses. The Scots play host to Calhoun College and of course TN Wesleyan. This triangular match begins at 8:30 AM.

other forms of financial aid, says Dallas Martin of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators.

Martin calls the freeze a "travesty. They're going through a process both questionable and illegal."

The freeze is "a new procedure," concedes a House education committee staffer. "Normally when final regulations are printed (as Pell Grant regulations were printed in January), they are not withdrawn for reconsideration."

"I am sure (the freeze) will be an inconvenience for many financial aid officers," Smith understates.

The House of Representatives is expected to conduct hearings into the legality of the administration's maneuver.

The administration's aim is to change the way families figure their eligibility for Pell Grants, and to make families contribute more toward their kids' education.

A December 1977 study by the College Entrance Examination Board found that the wealthier the family, the less willing it is to pay more than is needed for its offspring to qualify for student aid.

"We don't think we ought to subsidizing the very wealthy in this country," Bell explained on the "Good Morning, America" television show.

At present, a family's eligibility for aid is calculated by subtracting certain living expenses from total family income. Regulations say families can increase their living expenses estimates by 12½ percent to cover inflation.

The administration, however, wants to scrap the 12½ percent increase, thus saving $183 million in the next fiscal year.

By figuring eligibility the administration's way, more families would show higher net incomes, and thus become ineligible for Pell Grants.

Secretary Bell also wants to set upper limits on how much a student can deduct from his or her income estimate. New regulations would set maximum amounts on how much a student could spend -- at least for purposes of determining eligibility for Pell Grants – for housing, books and related school expenses.

Black Culture Week wakes up MC campus

by David Mitchell

Maryville College's annual Black Culture Week, sponsored by the Black Student Association (BSA), begins Sunday April 12, and ends Saturday, April 18.

The words "Black Culture Week" are misleading to some. While it is true that most events throughout the week-long celebration will have black emphasis, the programs are open to everyone.

Black Culture Week is presented in the view of "brotherhood through understanding," which developed through the understanding of different cultures and customs.

People have remarked that they do not understand why there is a Black Culture program. After all, there are no "white culture" programs offered. If you have ever thought about this, consider every day is filled with expressions of white culture.

Events like square-dancing, arts-crafts fairs, and some movies express distinct cultures and backgrounds; nine times out of ten these are white. People do not often have the opportunity to learn about another's history and culture.

Black Culture Week presents such an opportunity by exposing myths permeating our society about black and white people in general.

In the past, Black Culture Week at Maryville College has always been a success, and this year is no exception. Black Culture Week begins with a gospel show by the UTK Choir on Sunday the 12th. Monday night is devoted to MC students expressing their individual talents. Tuesday's CIV speaker is Evangeline Redding, author. On Wednesday, a native of Alcoa, Ms. Linda Goss the travelling story teller, performs twice in the cafeteria.

Dr. DeBorah Hines, Assistant Professor of Anatomical Sciences of Meharry Medical College speaks Thursday in the FAC. On Friday, Mr. Bernard Miller, broadcaster and communicator, speaks at 8:15 p.m. in the theater.

Like past Black Culture Weeks, this one culminates with not one but two campus-wide parties. The first is on Friday in front of the post office from 9:30 p.m. until 1:00 a.m. The other is in Pearsons Saturday night from 10:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m. The DJ will be Ocie "the Cisco Kid" Wallace.

Earlier on Saturday, a fashion show will be given by a style modeling agency at 8:00 p.m. in the Chapel. Also, on Saturday, a picnic in the mountains has been planned. All those interested in going should meet in front of the Gym no later than 10:00 a.m. Remember these events are free and open to everyone.

Reagan shooting: students' view

"A bullet to cancel out the ballot" is a sufficient motive for the attempted assassination of President Reagan, according to Dominic Manno. Manno, student columnist at University of Pennsylvania, was expressing what he calls his "frustration with the political system."

The column, besides provoking the protest of hundreds of angry readers, caught the attention of the Secret Service. Despite the publicity, the university plans no disciplinary action.

Manno is not the only student expressing glee due to the shooting. Some University of California students clapped and cheered when news of the attempted assassination was announced in class.

Students crowded in a basement to drop and add classes reacted to the news "unsympathetically," according to a campus newspaper. One woman commented, "The shock hadn't sunk in. . . . .I'm too busy just hoping that he dies."

A Denver student attributed the lack of sympathy to anger over Reagan's proposed cutbacks in student aid. Reagan, with his proposals concerning college students, has insured his unpopularity among them.

DRUGS

CPS - In compiling results for the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research, the three authors—Drs. Lloyd Johnston, Jerald Bachman, and Patrick O'Malley—found that seniors aren't using any one fad drug. Barbiturates, tranquilizers, PCP, and cigarettes all continued their long decline.

Yet Johnston notes that the percentage of seniors who have ever used an illicit drug other than marijuana has risen steadily in the last four years, from 35 to 39 percent. He attributes this to the "rapidly increasing popularity" of cocaine, especially from 1976 to 1979. He also notes that more seniors use amphetimines "to get themselves through the day" or to "curb their appetite."

In spite of such increases, Johnston says "of perhaps greater importance" is the decline in marijuana smoking.

CIV is a privilege of the students and administration of Maryville College, not a forced issue. Or, at least it has not been in the past.

To the displeasure of several MC students, the executive council has ordered the closing of various offices in Anderson, the student center, and, most important, our library. The purpose is to boost CIV attendance and give administration members a chance to profit from this privilege.

CIV is a great program, and it benefits administration as well as students and community. But the students are suffering because of this executive council order.

The library is hardly open enough hours for our students to utilize it. Should we close it down, midday, for a program lasting not much more than an hour? Just the process of closing and reopening disrupts much more than the time needed for CIV.

Besides, a just reason for missing the program is academic responsibilities. Yet we are unable to use the academic facilities, the library, for studies more important than CIV.

If this is to provoke and improve attendance at CIV, I do not think it will work. The students, rather than gathering in the FAC, will be gathering atop the library steps—waiting impatiently for it to reopen!

      1.) sidewalks?
      2.) streets?
      3.) parking lots?
   B. made use of them in your room, causing our food costs to soar?
   C. left them outside to collect mud and leaves?
5. Stepped in paint to make footprints all over campus?
6. Spraypainted "MM" on walls, sidewalks, etc. (Could this possibly stand for Mental Midgets?)
7. Tipped over garbage cans? (My dog does that every now and again.)
8. Played the "Break in Game" in:
   A. Carnegie?
   B. Willard?
   C. Old Infirmary?
   D. Lloyd Hall - to move furniture out onto the patio or tie doors shut from the outside (really stupid -- what if there was a fire?) We won't mention people setting off fire extinguishers or alarms.
9. Tried the new sport of tree ripping?
10. Torn up the phone in your dorm?
11. Ripped apart the bathroom stalls?
12. Ripped doors off hinges?
13. Spit into the salt shakers? (Hi, Mickey)
14. Broken the porch posts or the ancient Boxwood (those are shrubs, dummy) at Willard House?
15. Or are you strong enough, dumb enough or destructive enough to put metal benches in trees and bushes and tear them (yes, metal) apart?
16. (Here's a good one) Smashed the windshield on Tom Hudson's car? Maturity Level dropping!
17. Or have you taken part in the mysterious disappearance of calculators, books, and umbrellas from the lobby of the cafeteria?
18. Taken the furniture from your dorm's common area?
19. Or that old stand-by: leaving your trays on the table in the cafeteria?
20. Or been a dip (you are what you eat), and spit your dip on the steps of Pearsons'? Whatever happened to the good ole spittoon?

For those of you with weak stomachs:

21. Ready? Have you ever
    A. defecated in the hall and played soccer with it?
    B. vomitted in front of someone's door and then (get this) urinated on it? This Really Happened!!

Have I missed anything? Pretty creative vandalism, wouldn't you say? Well, if you can answer yes to any of the above, you are on the 10 most unwanted list. Just because Daddy is paying for your school or you've never had to work in your life does not mean that you are privileged. You are missing some very important basics -- (Oh, you are base all right) the 3 r's—which prevent your application from being reviewed.

You have no Respect, Responsibilty or Reason; therefore, we deny your entrance to the human race.

MMPP

Dear Consulting Editor,

We would like to begin this letter by saying that we believe that your coverage of the new administration budget cuts is very one-sided. Every time we pick up the Echo we see an article about financial aid budget cuts accompanied by a cartoon and other innate verbosity (similar to Mad magazine), a[illegible] these cuts with the rising [illegible]et.

We refer you to th[illegible] Issue. The front page contains a 1/8 page cartoon of Reagan giving the Pentagon 222 billion dollars. The article is acceptable and accurate except for the tacky header of the article's continuation on page 4 stating "Freeze, Sucker." We think this is quite unprofessional.

On the subject of the defense budget, nowhere is it mentioned that since before 1961 the Russians have shown they are unworthy of our trust time and time again. In 1961 it was the Cuban missle crisis, in 1968 it was Vietnam, in 1979 it was Afghanistan, and lately there are the Russian armed forces around Poland and closer to home the Communist activity in Afghanistan. The Russians have demonstrated that the only time they can be trusted is when, if they do not cross the U.S., our interests will not be damaged.

Also not mentioned in any of your articles is the liberal spending policies of the last 25 years of a democratically controlled government. These spending policies are what have gotten this country into the economic mess we are now in. President Reagan, through his budget cuts, is trying to reverse the inflationary spiral.

We are against budget cuts on financial aid for purely selfish reasons. However, we realize that reducing government cannot be in the interest of all the individual lobbies. We must learn to have a government that has a spending policy that is based on "What can we afford?" the way it is becoming, rather than the policy of years past being "What do we need?" We believe that the majority of the American public is in favor of the first policy since they elected President Reagan.

We would like to close saying that we hope that in the future you will present the news in a more unbiased manner.

CPP: Mind over Matter

by Jana Dalton

If you'll recall last week, CPP discussed the matters of the body. This week's issue concentrates on matters of the mind—psychology, religion, and sociology/anthropology.

Beginning with sociology/anthropology majors, we find that these people observe the social and cultural pressures of society. They in turn try to collect data which will be beneficial in solving or coping with these problems.

Although there is not a full degree program at MC, excellent courses are offered to combine with other studies to form an Individualized Major.

Graduates who have pursued this type of major include Karen Karner (1978), Carol Friend (1978), and Mary Johnson. Karen combined sociology/anthropology with an interpreting major and is presently the coordinator of Interpreting Services for U.T.K. Carol is using her training in her position as Program Director for a Methodist Church. Gary Johnson now works as a detective.

With the religion major, we discover a tradition with its foundation in the roots of MC's founding in 1819. It was originally founded as a seminary to meet the needs of the population of the west Appalachians. Therefore, religion majors have a long, fertile list of ancestors and courses available.

Barbara Lundell (1978) and Richard McGuire are pursuing graduate studies in religion. However, recent graduates have gone on to careers of the clergy, lawyers, hospital chaplains, public accountant, restauranteur, and clinical psychologist.

Thus we arrive at our final focused major, psychology. Nancy Winslow (1980) majored in psychology and obtained a position as resident counselor. Lynn Rogers (1979) works as a casualty analyst for an insurance company. Joan Wiseman (1978) and Norma Edmondson (1977) used their studies as preparation for admissions counselors and are employed by good ole MC.

The field of psychology is one of rapid growth. Anyone from advertising agencies to government agencies employ psychology majors to assist in public relations, career adjustments, and helping minorities.

MC has multiple offerings in psychology. One need only decide what part of society he/she wishes to assist.

Stay tuned for CPP spotlights yet to come.

B-ball Scots swing a 1-3

by Bill Dent

The Maryville College Fighting Scots Baseball Team had a 1-3 week with a split against Emory & Henry and a double-header loss to the powerfull Buccaneers of East Tennesseee State University.

The week leaves the Scots with a compiled season record of 4 wins, 13 losses, and one tie.

On Wednesday, the Scots traveled to Emory & Henry for a double header with the Wasps. In the first game, the Scots jumped out to a commanding 5-0 lead in the third inning on the strength of RBI hits by Tim Fitzgerald, Jim Reese, and Curtis Shaw.

Tim Fitzgerald pitched a fine seven innings of baseball as the Scots hung on to win 5-3. The game was the first win of the season for Fitzgerald as his record now stands at 1 win and 2 losses.

The second game saw the Scots' bats become silent as Emory & Henry won easily 9-2. The Scots did not score until the fifth inning when Bill Dent and Jeff Pierce hit consecutive RBI doubles. Chris Miller took the loss for the Scots with relief help from Curtis Shaw and Larry Sheeley.

On Saturday Nigh the Scots traveled Johnson City for a stand off with the 15th ranke Bucs of East Tennesse State. East Tennesse State found the Scot rather tough as the Bu struggled to a 4-0 first game victory.

Mark Woodhull, in h best game ever at MC limited the ETSU lineu to 2 runs on 2 hi through 5 innings. Mik Wortman finished th game for Woodhull, whe his shoulder suddenly be came stiff. Lack of offen sive output again was th Scots nemesis as they ha a no-hitter tossed against them.

The second game saw ETSU on route to a 12-1 victory over the Scots. Mike Wortman, Chris Miller, Larry Sheeley, and Bill Muller all tried unsuccessfully to calm the Buc's hitting to no avail. The Bucs hit 3 towering home runs during the course of the game. Jimmy Reese led the Scots at the plate with 2 doubles and 1 RBI.

The Scots will play their final home game of the season Saturday against Fisk University, a doubleheader which gets underway at 1 p.m.

Ladies' tennis backhanded

by Janet Helwig

Mary Kay Seith shows her smashing form in tennis.

Last week the Maryville College Women's tennis team was kept busy, as it played four matches within a span of six days. The team lost to a tough Carson-Newman squad on Monday, April 6, and then dropped a close match to Lincoln Memorial University the following day. The only winner for the Scots was Mary Kay Seith, who won the no. 3 singles position against both Carson-Newman and Lincoln Memorial.

Friday, April 9, the team traveled to Bryan College and won a long, well-fought match by a score of 5-4. Singles winners were Mary Kay Seith, Sue Spence, and Cindy Cunningham, while winners in doubles were the teams of Mary Kay Seith-Sue Spence, and Cindy Cunningham-Lynda MacCall.

Saturday the varsity women's tennis team from the University of the South came to Maryville and defeated the Lady Scots 9-0 in another well-fought match during the heat of the day.

The women's tennis team is playing a full schedule again this year, in preparation for the Division III State Tennis tournament which will be held the weekend of April 25th at the University of Tennessee at Martin. In addition to the Maryville team, other top contenders in the tournament will be Sewanee, and Southwestern, the defending state champion.

Men's tennis wrap-up

by Steve Arnold

It took 10 hours of tennis Friday for the Scots Mens Tennis Team to split two matches, losing the first match to Calhoun College of Alabama 7-2 and winning the second match over rival Tn. Wesleyan 8-1.

Starting at 9:00 Friday morning Calhoun College had finished off the Scots in singles alone by taking all but the no. 1 spot as MC's Randy Shackelford vs Link (MC) 6-4, 3-6, 6-3; Slupe (CC) vs Durand (MC) 3-6, 7-6, 6-1: Wells (CC) vs Arnold (MC) 6-4, 6-4; Karabasz (CC) vs Massey (MC) 6-4, 6-4; and Horan (CC) vs Raulerson (MC) 6-2, 6-3.

In doubles Crone/Slupe (CC) vs Shackelford/Link (MC) 6-4, 7-6; Wells/Greywick (CC) vs Arnold/Massey (MC) 6-2, 6-4; and the Scots only other victory came when Durand/Raulerson (MC) vs Horan/Stuart (CC) 6-0, 7-6.

By the time 6:00 rolled around MC had defeated Tn. Wesleyan for the second straight time by a score of 8-1. Wesleyan's only win came in a 3 set match at no. 1 doubles as Millsaps/Poe (TW) vs Arnold/Massey (MC) 3-6, 7-6, 6-3.

Sweeping the singles saw Shackelford (MC) vs Millsaps (TW) 6-3, 6-1; Durand (MC) vs Smith (TW) 6-2, 6-0; Link (MC) vs Poe (TW) 6-1, 6-1; Arnold (MC) vs Bledsof (TW) 6-1, 6-1; Massey (MC) vs Brumit (TW) 6-2, 6-2; and Raulerson (MC) vs Waters (TW) 6-2, 6-2.

In doubles Raulerson/Durand (MC) vs Smith/Waters 6-3, 6-1; and Shackelford/Kidder (MC) vs Bledsof/Brumit (TW) 6-3, 3-6, 6-3. The Scots 5-4 will host Milligan, King and Knox College on Friday starting at 9:00 and Centre College on Saturday at home at 1:30.

ACC changes MC curriculum, not calendar

by Jeana Webb

The All College Council held its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday April 15 at 2:30 p.m. Business attended to at the meeting included debate and formal voting on the Core Curriculum proposals as well as the Credit Hour System proposal. The possibility of meeting at a more opportune time was also discussed.

The Core Curriculum proposals were covered under New Business and systematically debated over and voted on. Among those proposals covered, all of which passed, were 1) that Fine Arts 201 be modified to offer students 4 modules, 3 of which would be taken in the course with the addition of a theatre module added to the list of options, 2) an expansion of the Non-Western Studies requirement, 3) that Eng./His. 121-122 sequence be replaced by a five part humanities sequence which would also replace one of the present 200 level Religion requirements, 4) that Science Fundamentals and Science Thought be replaced by two new courses, 5) that all students take a 200 level course in comparative religion, 6) a course be introduced to help students understand structure and function of U.S. Institutions, 7) a new 100 level math course in qualitative skills be introduced.

Dr. Perkins stresses a point.

All of the above proposals were passed as presented to the ACC. One proposal, that a course be introduced to help students in ethical decision making, was modified to be open to juniors and seniors and then passed.

After discussing miscellaneous business, the meeting was adjourned. Present at the meeting were Dr. Anderson, D. Ierulli, Dr. Parker, Dr. Dent, Dr. Blair, M. Davis, P. Harris, Dr. Bolden, S. Lindsey, Dr. Perkins, Dr. Nichols, M. Hester, J. Wiseman, L. Boney, S.M. Atchley, Dr. Beck, L. Stevens, and Dean Richardson. Minutes were read by Secretary, Dr. Russell Parker.

★★★★★★★★★ Murder trial planned at MC ★★★★★★★★★

by Allison Perry

At the time of the suicide of Ivar Kreuger, Swedish match king and financial juggler, it was rumored that he had only faked his death, and really departed to South America, to live incognito and in luxury on a fortune that he had established there. This story is the basis of the play selected for presentation by the MC Playhouse featuring the MC Playmakers on Friday and Saturday, April 24th and 25th. A matinee will be presented on Wednesday the 29th and the last showings will be on Thursday and Friday the following week.

With announcement of the players, construction of the set and rehearsals in process, the production of Night of January 16th, scheduled for Friday the 24th, is well underway, according to Sharon Crane who is directing the play. Night of January 16th is the last play of the MC Playhouse's spring season and the last year of participation from actors and actresses: Lois Boney, Allen Evitts, Bill Thomas, and Linda Wiley.

Strickly speaking, this is a play without a heroine, but Lois Boney has been chosen for the leading female role, that of Karen Andre, defendant in the murder trial. Nor has it a hero, the principal male roles being those of the prosecuting attorney, which will be taken by Tim Fitzgerald, and the defending attorney, played by Bill Thomas.

Twelve important members of the cast remain to be chosen, but they, fortunately, need no rehearsing, and will not be selected until the night of the performance. They are the jury, who being selected from the audience will listen to the evidence and render the verdict on which Americans have fallen into a rut wherein they choose their leaders on the basis of personality, rather than ability. The 1980 election is a prime example of this foolish conversion of our Presidential Election into a popularity contest. Candidates ignore the real issues by diverting our attention to the failings of his opponent.

Case in point. Mr. Reagan continuously promised lower taxes, a budget cut, and the restoration of America's prestige abroad. He claimed that Mr. Carter was failing to do any of these things, and that these issues were in truth what concerned Americans most. Now to be realistic. The United States is a business run through a program of deficit spending (we spend more money than we have); therefore, a budget cut does not necessarily foreshadow a tax cut.

Another point is the diversion tactic used by many past candidates, and by Mr. Reagan in this election. In this instance candidates divert public opinion away from more intense domestic issues and toward foreign policy (Iran was used by Carter, U.S. prestige by Reagan.)

After successfully avoiding the real issues, candidates can then point out an opponent's failings in minor areas and avoid facing real issues, thus preventing possible embarrassment when they have no comprehensive solution to the nation's real problems. Obviously, if I do not believe that high taxes, budget cuts and national prestige are the important issues, I must have a list of my own "real" issues. One is how to reverse the rise in the violent crime rate; I'm tired of living in fear. Two, a related issue, is gun control. This issue was played down by Reagan and nearly ignored by Carter. Third is the development of alternate sources of energy, which incidentally would allow us to control our own foreign affairs and allow us to increase our prestige. These issues can be dealt with realistically.

Americans need to keep sight of the real issues throughout a campaign. Diversionary tactics and personalities need to be ignored.

TERS LETTERS LETTERS LETTERS LET

Dear Editor,

Our President [was] wounded, felled by a bullet fired from a "Saturday Night Special." This favorite weapon of the assassin was easily obtained at a Dallas pawnshop.

In all but one of the eleven assassinations and attempted assassinations of Presidents or Presidential candidates, the assassin used a handgun. Presidents Lincoln, Garfield, and McKinley were slain. Candidate Robert Kennedy was killed. Governor George Wallace is crippled. In September 1975 alone, President Ford's life was threatened twice by assassins wielding handguns. Now President Reagan has been shot.

Must we bury another President before the Congress acts to pass an effective national handgun control law? Together we can make the Congress act now to control handguns. Join with us today.

Sincerely,
N.T. "Pete" Shields

Dear Editor,

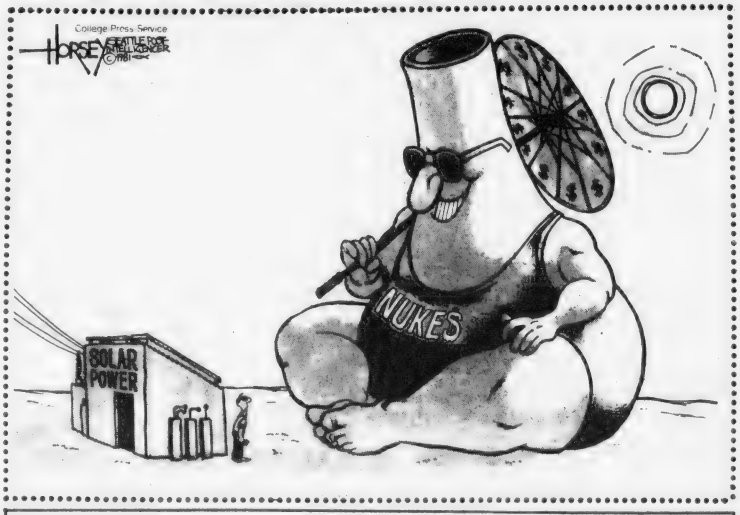
This is in regard to the letter of twenty-one acts of creative vandalism published in the last issue of the Echo. I agree: Many of the 21 mentioned acts are immature, stupid, inconsiderate, etc. (I'm sure I could find 21 words to describe them.) But, the writer went too far. Placing a student on a 10 most unwanted list (and the writer's list at that) is unjustified. The writer should have remained with the idea of vandalism as a problem and not attempted to categorize the guilty. The statement that only students whose "daddy's are paying for their education," and those who haven't ever had a job are the only ones who commit acts of vandalism on our campus is absurd. You don't have to be rich and spoiled to revert to childhood and commit an act of destruction. To judge students who have committed acts of vandalism based solely on that act can be percieved as being pitifully immature itself.

So MMPP, by not following the 3R's yourself - Respect - judging individuals as a whole, not based on a brief moment of immaturity. Responsibility - for putting your brain in motion before your pen, and Reason - are you really so much brighter and more mature than the rest of us here at M.C. that you afford to question our maturity and refer to us as dummies? You yourself may, in your own words, be denied entrance into the human race.

Dan Zerick

P.S. - I spit on the steps of Pearsons a few times. I apologize repeatedly.

Dear Editor,



I am sincerely concerned with an opinion expressed in the April 16 edition of the Echo by Joe Longo, Robin Snipes, Ken Davidson, Lynda Robin Albertson, and Bob Clowers.

"We are against budget cuts on financial aid for purely selfish reasons." I would like to protest against such a comment, and state the point of view of a person who is not "against budget cuts on financial aid for purely selfish reasons."

I don't consider the education of a nation's youth selfish. We are so worried about the Russians that we're forgetting ourselves. Our intent is turning to strengthening our fists instead of our minds. I've been reading into Marxism and Leninism and have found something that is not unusual, but is not common everyday knowledge. When Lenin formed his government he was forced to use the elite and not the workers (proletariat) because the proletariat was not educated. This meant that the majority of the people had to be governed by the richer elite because the proletariat (masses) could not run a government with their lack of education. Can we put an entire nation in the hands of men with feeble high school and elementary educations? Is this a democracy that will succeed? No, for Russia is not a democracy, but what would America be if it stepped into the same position? What will happen when the majority of the people because of rising costs cannot educate their children? Education will be left open for the elite only.

If anyone believes that the above is selfish, then let him believe it.

Sincerely,
Nancy Rojas

Linda Goss tells the story.

culture week reviewed

by Ricky Tucker

Black Culture Week has come and gone for another year on the MC Campus. The week's activities ranged from gospel singing to story telling. Performers included the UT Love United Choir, story teller Linda Goss of Alcoa, and Ocie "Cisco Kid" Wallace as well as many students who performed Monday in the MC light presentation.

Of particular interest were the speakers who told of new fields opening up to blacks and their role in today's society which included the following: Evangeline Redding, author; Dr. Deborah Hines, Asst. Professor of Anatomical Sciences of Meharry College; Mr. Bernard Miller, disc jockey.

Attendance was varied at each event, but overall the week can be called a success. It is hoped that next year's Black Culture Week will be even better.

Bio-majors win award

MC Biology majors Bryan Seegle and Clarence Maslowski were winners of the second and third place awards, respectively, of the Frank G. Brooks competition. The award is given to students presenting papers at the annual meeting of the Southeastern Region of the Tri-Beta National Honor Biological Society held April 8-11 at UT Knoxville.

According to Dr. Sumner of the MC Biology department, the winning of the award is an "accomplishment" and quite noteworthy. Dr. Sumner further says that competition for the award included a wide field and she is quite proud of the two students.

Papers winning the award sometimes are eligible for monetary grants of $75.00 to help defray the cost of publication. No grant was made in either case in this instance.

Spring raffle winners

The Spring Raffle sponsored by the senior class netted almost $65.00. The drawing, held during dinner Thursday, April 9th turned up the following winners: Lesa Andrews—headphones; Rodney Nelson—harmonica; Joel Chesser—Geno's pizza; Lars Schuller—one dozen donuts, Dan's Bakery; Larry Durland—$10 gift certificate, Medical Arts Pharmacy; Jim Markle—$8 certificate, Byrne Drugs; Caroline Reed—$10 certificate, City Drugs; Jon Watson—2 free dinners, Hannah's Cafeteria; Pat Burke—$10 savings account, Blount National Bank; Randy Massey—2 free lunches, Nowtowner Restaurant; Paul Heinze, Judy Creer, and Sheila White each won 2 banana splits from Baskin-Robbins.

Other winners include Pete Davis, Jeff Skipper, and Ruth Cartlidge. The senior class thanks everyone who supported this raffle.

Aid for poor upperclassmen?

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS)- Almost six out of every ten high school seniors who expect to go to college next fall say they want some sort of federal financial aid to help them enroll, according to a survey done by the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES).

The results of the survey were announced as Congress was debating President Ronald Reagan's proposals to cut some $9.2 billion from federal financial aid programs, including student Social Security, work-study, Guaranteed Student Loans, National Direct Student Loans, and Pell Grants.

More than a third of the seniors who plan to register for college in fall said they would depend on a Pell Grant. Under the Reagan plan, most students would have to pay $750 toward their education in order to qualify for a Pell Grant. The maximum grant would be lowered to $1200 from $1750.

Thirty percent of the seniors wanted to sign onto the College Work-Study Program, while 11 percent planned to apply for an NDSL.

In all, 58 percent of the seniors who graduate this year and plan to go on to college want some form of federal financial aid. Seventy-six percent expected aid from federal, state or other programs.

Next fall's freshmen, however, are the least likely to get aid. Awards are being delayed by U.S. Department of Education Secretary Terrel Bell's March decision to hold financial aid applications until Congress decides whether or not to implement the Reagan financial aid changes.

In an informal survey by College Press Service, many financial aid officers expected schools will be forced to make temporary loans to students in the fall. In the loan process, "already-enrolled" students will be favored, predicted Joanne Eberle of Lehigh University.

The NCES findings were gleaned from a survey of 28,000 seniors at more than 1000 high schools.

will depend which of the two ending written for the play will be used. As they get their seats, patrons may leave their names as candidates for jury duty. On the evening of the performance these names are given to the Clerk of Court, who places them in a drum, and the twelve that are drawn by lot are selected to serve. In payment for jury duty, the cost of tickets is reimbursed. Participation from administration and students is anticipated.

Did Karen Andre commit a murder, or not? is the question that must be answered by the jury tomorrow night. The curtain rises at 8:15 sharp; the question will be answered at about 10:30 the same evening. No one knows the answer yet.

Due to reported recent theft of students' blank checks it is necessary for us to require I.D. cards for cashing any checks in the Bookstore.

Enforcement of this rule (page 19 of your student handbook for 1980-81), is for the protection of students and the Bookstore.

Tennis--net results

by Steve Arnold
and Janet Helwig

The Scots Men's Tennis team lost its fourth match in five outings Tuesday against Emory and Henry 6-3, but bounced back Saturday by defeating Centre by the same score.

In the match against EH, Randy Shackleford turned in an excellent performance winning 7-5, 0-6, 6-3. Also winning was Dave Raulerson 6-1, 6-1. Defeated by EH players were: Linle (6-2,6-2), Durand (6-4, 6-1), Arnold (6-3,6-0), and Massey (6-4,6-1). In doubles the only win came from Durand/Raulerson (6-4,1-6,6-0).

The Scots broke back into the win column Saturday by taking the victory in four singles and two doubles and sending Centre home, defeated 6-4. Victorious in Saturday's win were: Shackleford (6-3, 4-6, 6-3), Linle (3-6, 6-1, 6-3), Durand (6-0, 6-3), and Arnold (7-5, 6-1). Winning doubles in that match were: Shackleford/Linle (6-2, 7-5) and Durand/Raulerson (6-1, 7-6).

The Scots enter the ODAC tournament Saturday, April 25, with a 6-5 record.

—— Ladies ——

The Lady Scots tennis team defeated both Tusculum College and Milligan College last week to improve their overall season record to 4 wins and 5 losses.

Tuesday, April 14, the Lady Scots won five singles matches against Tusculum before being halted by rain. The 5 singles wins, however, were enough to secure an overall match victory for Maryville. Individual singles winners were Sharon Wood (6-4, 6-4), Shelley Kingsbury (6-2, 6-4), Mary Kay Seith (6-2, 6-3), Kay Julian (6-4, 6-1), and Cindy Cunningham (6-3, 6-0).

Thursday, April 16, Maryville traveled to Milligan College and won a close match by a score of 5-4. Sharon Wood lost a tough three-set match by a score of (3-6, 7-6, 6-7) while Shelley Kingsbury won (6-4, 6-2) and Kay Julian defeated her opponent by a score of (6-4, 6-1). Cindy Cunningham lost (6-2, 6-2) and Connie Wheeler was defeated (6-0, 6-3). Maryville won all three doubles positions, however, with wins coming from the teams of Wood/Kingsbury (8-5), Julian/Seith (8-5) and Cunningham/Mary MacPhee (8-1).

The Lady Scots will leave Thursday for UT Martin where they will contend with Sewanee and Southwestern for the State Division III Tennis Championship.

Scots dampened by rain

by Bill Dent.

The Maryville College Fighting Scots Baseball Team lost, tied and had a double-header rained out last week as their 1981 season nears an end. The 0-1-1 week leaves the Scots with a 4-19-2 worksheet heading into a scheduled double-header in Cookville, TN with the Tennessee Tech Golden Eagles on April 25. The date with the Eagles will be the last games of the season for the Scots, who have had their troubles along the way.

On Tuesday, however, the Scots put these troubles behind them as they battled highly regarded Lynchburg College on the Scots diamond. The Hornets, defending ODAC champions, are a nationally known Division III power with the ODAC's leading hitter, third baseman Jimmy Stinnett, who is hitting well over .400.

The first game saw Tim Fitzgerald turn in a rather outstanding performance on the mound only to lose a 4-0 contest. Jimmy Stinnett doubled in two runs for the only runs needed by Lynchburg. The Hornets added single runs in the fifth and seventh innings to complete the scoring. The Scots had only one hit, a third inning single with two out by catcher Dave Wortman. The Scots had only 3 runners on base, two of which were picked off by the Lynchburg pitcher. Fitzgerald went the distance for the Scots and his record now stands at 1-3.

In the second game, the Scots and Hornets were deadlocked at 2-2 in the bottom of the fifth inning when the rains came and halted the game. The game will go down in the record books as a tie. The Scots bats were a little more active in the first game as they collected 4 hits. Bill Dent and Mike Wortman had RBI's for the Scots. Three Scots pitchers combined to shut down Jimmy Stinnett and the Hornets offense, as the Hornets only managed 3 hits in 5 innings. Chris Miller, Duran Williams, and Mike Wortman all threw for the Scots with no pitcher gaining a decision.

MC Board meeting: weekend recap

by Ed Brewer

The Maryville College Board of Directors met last weekend for its semi-annual meeting. Decisions were made in three areas—curriculum, faculty, and budget.

Newly approved freshman courses will go into effect for students entering in September 1982 with others to be phased in over a three-year period.

Additions to the core curriculum will include junior and senior level values courses to enable ethical decision making, a mathematics course on quantitive skills and a comparative religion course.

The purpose of the values course is to deepen the student's awareness of the ethical dimensions of all human existence, to help him or her examine and develop personal values and to encourage growth toward social responsibility.

In addition to reviewing basic arithmetic skills, the mathematics course will contain instruction in knowledge and use of calculators, elementary skills in statistics, knowledge and use of computers and mathematical (or symbolic) logic.

The courses in comparative religion to be developed will supplement courses already required in East Asian or African studies. They will be designed to broaden familiarity with the belief systems and cultural patterns of peoples outside the western world.

Another change which emphasizes the international aspects of the curriculum is in foreign language courses. The stress will be on the demonstration of competence in the basics of a spoken language with opportunities for additional study in written communication for those who wish it.

There will also be a new course offered that will seek to deepen understanding of the functioning of principal institutions in United States' society with special attention to government and business.

In another area, present courses in history, literature and religion will be replaced by a five-course sequence in humanities taught from a cross-disciplinary perspective.

The freshman Inquiry courses will be modified to reinforce communications, information-gathering and reasoning skills under the revised curriculum.

The curriculum proposals were developed by the College's Task Force on Curriculum Review and Design and approved earlier by the All-College Council before being submitted for final approval by the MC directors.

The MC board of directors promoted two faculty members and granted tenure to five others at their meeting last Friday and Saturday.

Promoted to the rank of associate professor of chemistry was Dr. Terry Bunde. Carroll Barger was promoted to assistant professor of art.

Receiving tenured status at the College were Drs. Dean Boldon, Harry Howard, Young-Bae Kim and Robert Naylor and Irma (Mrs. Dewey) Young.

The MC directors also approved a $5,052,000 budget for 1981-82 and heard reports that the College's Toward Century III campaign has now reached the $4.2 million mark.

The newly approved budget, a 16.6 percent increase over last year's budget, includes an increase of 10 percent in available funds for faculty and staff salaries.

These funds will be supplemented with those made available earlier by a gift from the ALCOA Foundation for merit awards to faculty, MC President Wayne Anderson explained.

Dr. Anderson further noted that next year's budget also contains a significant increase in institutional funds for student financial aid to offset anticipated cuts in federal support for higher education.

These anticipated cuts in federal assistance were cited by Dr. Anderson as further need for raising funds in the Toward Century III campaign.

He reported to board members that the $4.2 million raised to date includes $242,460 in gifts received in this year's recently completed MC community campaign.

This is a 10 percent increase over the amount

Parents' weekend was quite a success this past weekend. Here, the MC Concert Choir entertains a Saturday lunchtime crowd in front of Pearsons.

Hey, no more cold showers!

Well, water you know—MC is planning to provide the residents of Davis, Dorm I, Lloyd, and Copeland with hot water 24 hours a day.

According to Mr. Hugh Crawford, MC business manager, the new system to provide this unprecedented luxury will be in operation "within 30 days." The cost: $36,000.

The College has had plans in the works since 1975 to offer 24-hour hot water to students, but a TVA-sponsored energy management survey conducted last year prompted MC to act by reinforcing the College's plans and documenting a payback.

The hot water will be provided by miniature gas-fired boilers to be installed in the basement of each dorm. The boilers will be connected to the existing water tanks and converters, and will provide "supplimental steam when needed," according to Mr. Crawford.

Several reasons were cited for the selection of this particular system—the cost of electricity made individual electric water heaters economically unrealistic, and large gas heaters would cost about $8,500 more than the system chosen.

As for cost effectiveness, Mr. Crawford stated that the new system would prove to be "very cost effective" and should have a total payback period of three years.

Also of importance is the amount of wear that will be reduced on the College's main boiler and damage to the steam lines will be averted by limiting the number of times the main system will be turned on and shut off.

So, for those of you who get steamed when there's no hot water to shower with, look toward the bright side—those days will soon go down the drain.

Tom - Column

Recently, MC students received a little note from the Office of Student Affairs regarding summer storage regulations. An item of particular interest on this list was no. 4: "All boxes in which items are stored must be purchased from the bookstore. The 'at cost' price is $1.50 each...."

Now, having just listened around and talked with a few people, I've found that there are quite a few students who aren't all that crazy about the idea of having to pay another $1.50 to ole MC.

The other day I stopped in to see Jane Richardson and find out how many of these students had come in to talk to her about the mandate.

"Two," was the response. Hmmmmmm. She referred me to Dean Strickland who informed me that no one had come to see him about the matter. Double hmmmmmm.

This is not another gnashing of teeth regarding student apathy. Maybe it's a statement that perhaps we believe everything the Administration does for us in our best interest.

Sure, the issue of packing boxes may seem to be trite, yet it remains an issue. As an issue, several points should be cleared up.

The $1.50 price is an "at cost" price as the stone tablet from the mountain of Student Affairs has stated. Nobody's ripping anybody off (except for perhaps the box company).

The boxes are 24 by 30 by 28, which though not enormous, is not all that small either.

The reason box regulation has been instituted is due to the horrid conditions of the storage rooms by those individuals who try to cram all their earthly belongings into a box made to handle about 20 pounds.

This is a serious problem. But I believe that making everyone purchase a packing box for $1.50 may be a bit much. Perhaps some form of box standardization can be instituted, guided by the residence hall staffs, that a student may go out and dig up a box, providing it meets specifications similar to those of the boxes in the bookstore (size and strength, in particular).

If these Division III "Boxing Regulations", as we might call them, were put into practice, I believe that students would try to conform to them. However, I also believe that demanding that everyone pay $1.50 per box is a bit unreasonable, even if the boxes can be used again.

Letter to the Editor:
Subject: Proposed Calendar Change
From: George Ralston

I have studied this idea of changing from terms to semesters for a great deal of time. I have talked with the administration, staff, faculty, and student body to find out all of the facts that I possibly could before coming to a decision on this issue. And now I am ready to state my opinion. I feel that the proposed term-to-semester change is "THE BIGGEST PIECE OF TRASH THAT I HAVE SEEN COME DOWN THE ROAD IN ONE HELL OF A LONG TIME."

The reasons are many for the way that I feel about this issue. I feel that the administration does not know, and furthermore does not care about the impact of the 'possible' change. (I say 'possible' change, however, you know that this change will be ramrodded down our throats.) I further believe that the administration is just bound and determined to see this change come about regardless of what the students say.

The reason that I feel that I can state the above is due to the fact that a majority of the student body is against the change and yet the administration is still pushing for this change to come about. You know, here we are, students at a private school, paying almost five thousand dollars a year, and we, the consumers of the college's service are being told that our opinion doesn't matter worth a damn. Now I ask you, is that fair? NO...

If I, as a consumer, walked into a department store and was planning on spending five thousand dollars that business establishment would listen to my desires and opinions and try to service me the best way that they possibly could. I am saying that the same theory holds true in this case.

Signed,
Very Concerned Consumer
George Ralston

Dear Prez, send $$$

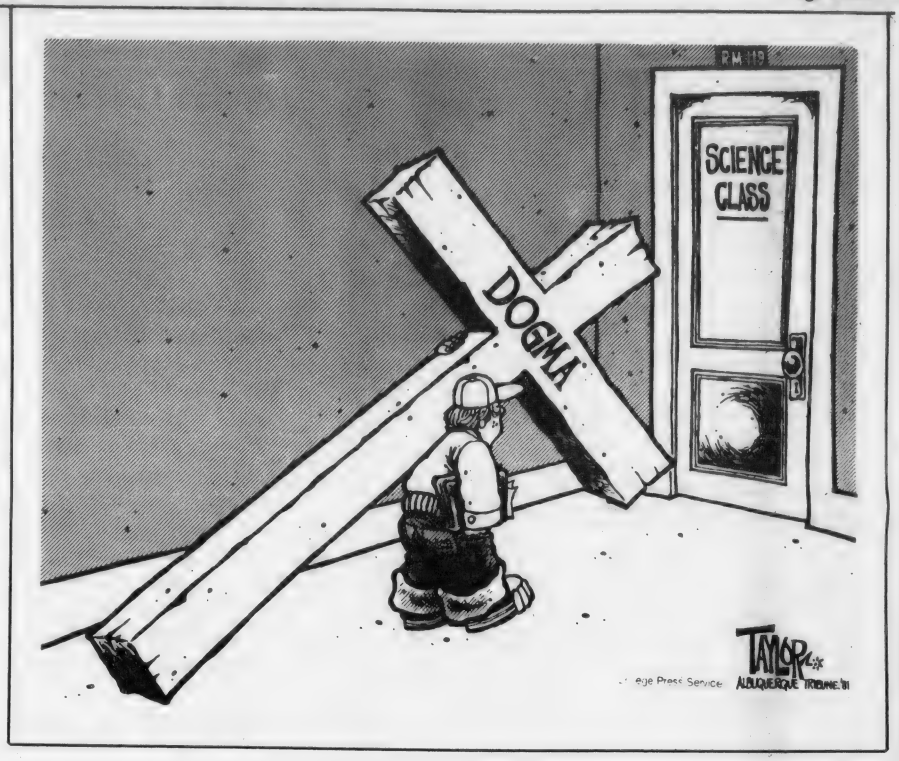
(CPS)—Congressman Peter Peyser (D-NY) is doing his best to take command of the congressional fight against President Ronald Reagan's proposed cuts in student aid, but he's getting the feeling there's no one in the stands to cheer him on.

"The big problem we have right now is that we are not getting a response from students," Peyser exclaimed last week in his Capitol Hill office.

Peyser says that since February, when he started an ambitious radio, newspaper and phone campaign to stir up student furor over the administration's efforts to eliminate or reduce National Direct Student Loans, Guaranteed Student Loans, and Pell Grants, he has received a paltry 75 letters from students.

"If students are not willing to respond, their lack of response will be used against them," Peyser said. "People are going to say, 'What are you so excited at, congressman? You've got a couple hundred letters from students out of 13 million students. What's the big deal?' "

College presidents and administrators are making a bigger deal of it than students. Besides contributing volumes of testimony before a house subcommittee considering the cutbacks, college chiefs have given Peyser over 400 letters outlining what will happen to their campuses if the proposals are approved.



As many as 750,000 students may be forced to drop out of college next year if the cutbacks are imposed, according to testimony before the subcommittee.

Peyser dreams of walking "into committee with 10,000 letters from students—not petitions—but letters saying this is what will happen if these programs are cut."

He thinks "the problem is that students as yet don't realize the impact. But they're going to wake up in May of this year and find out they may not be going to school at all. They're going to be hurt."

To get the word out, Peyser has sent out 90-second tapes to campus radio stations while his aides, along with the U.S. Student Association and the Coalition of Private College & University Students, are alerting student newspapers by phone.

They hope to draw 300 student leaders to an April 13 "Student Lobbying Day" in Washington, D.C.

The right language for the job

by Jana Dalton

Here we are again. It's time for another CPP spotlight. Today we pay tribute to word-users. That pretty well covers everyone—but there are a few who specialize in words, their meanings, use and creative effects. These are Engligh and foreign language majors.

Foreign language majors are finding an increasingly open field of careers. Scientific translators, international economists, social workers, and travel agents are among the available positions for those who wish to speak other than in English.

French, Greek and Spanish are the most commonly offered languages at MC. Plus, there are interesting programs which provide studies in the related country the junior year. The foreign language majors use the abroad experience to better aquaint themselves with the culture of that language.

Now the English major has been stereotyped for years as a teacher only. Fortunately, the world is changing. Sarah Edris (1980) is a P.R. person at the Bank of Maryville. Tim Rahn (1979) is a technical writer for an industrial company. Bonnie Holsinger is a proofreader, typesetter, and researcher assistant for the familiar 13-30 Publishing company in Knoxville. But we also need English teachers, and our 1980 graduate list of teachers-to-be include: Sandra Son, Jenny Andrews, Donna Hurst, and John Bobo.

The English major courses enable an individual to develop skills in writing, publishing, editing, and the problems of business paper work. Once this student tames the tangle of word usage and allows his mind to be freed from Harbrace rules, he can be placed into a variety of careers.

For further information, check into the book Aside From Teaching English, What in the World Can I Do?

So the light dims on another CPP spotlight, but the next time you use a word, be a little more appreciative.

Trial--You'll Like It!

by Allison Perry

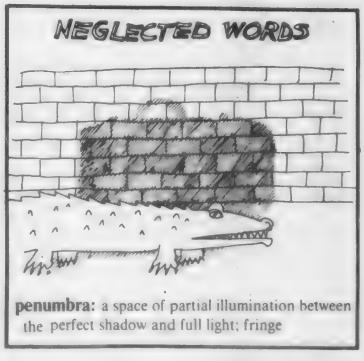
Did Karen Andre commit a murder or not? This is a difficult question to answer.

District Attorney Flint says yes. Tim Fitzgerald plays this role as the old, ruthless antagonist.

On the other hand, mild-mannered Defense Attorney Stevens appeals to the sentiments of the jury, hoping they will look beyond the hard cold facts. Bill Thomas acts in this part.

Karen herself is played by Lois Boney. A woman of self-assuarnce and steel characterizes Ms. Andre. Did she truly love her employer or was it his money that bound her to his name?

The witnesses fill the courtroom with an array of personalities. From the prude housemaid to dance hall queen Roberta Van Renselaer, the opinions vary as much as the lifestyles.



You can be the judge in the next showing of Night of January 16th. The jury is chosen from the audience, and the chances of being one of them is great.

Did Karen Andre commit the murder or was it someone else? Find out for yourself—that is if the Clerk of Court does not expire before the next rise of the curtains.

WHAT'S GOING ON?

Thursday, April 30, 2 pm, Women's Tennis vs. Sewanee, home; 8:15 pm, "January 16th", in the theatre. Friday, May 1, 8:15 pm, "January 16th," in the theatre. (May 1 is also the last day you can purchase tickets for the formal). Saturday, May 2, Spring Formal at the Green Meadow Country Club.

Also, the Echo extends its congratulations to Sheri Trotter, senior recreation major, who was recently crowned "Miss Deaf Knoxville." Maryville College is proud of you, Sheri!

The Scots played no baseball game in time for photo coverage, but if they had, you might have seen Jimmy Reese cross the plate as in this photo.

Baseball wrap-up

by Bill Dent

The Maryville College Fighting Scots Baseball team wound up their season Wednesday with a double-header with Tennessee Tech in Cookeville.

Their season record prior to Wednesday's double-header was a dismal 4 wins, 19 losses, and 2 ties. Injuries and loss of key players during the course of the season hurt the Scots' chances of improving last year's record of 8-10.

However the outlook for next year's team is encouraging. The Scots will lose only one player from this year's squad, senior short stop Jimmy Reese. This year's team was composed mainly of freshmen and sophomores who gained invaluable playing time and experience. In addition, next year's Scots will have only two seniors on the roster, so the future of MC baseball looks very bright.

Looking back on the 1981 season, the Scots again were led by senior Jimmy Reese. Reese led the team in batting and fielding and provided good leadership for a young squad. He was voted captain of this year's squad in addition to being voted the team's most valuable player. The team will certainly have trouble filling his shoes next year.

All other starters will be returning next year. Pitchers Mike Wortman, Mark Woodhull, and Tim Fitzgerald will definitely improve on this year's marks next season. Infielders Jay Kohlbush and Bill Dent will be returning next year. Jay's steady fielding and good bat will prove to be an asset to next year's team.

Outfielders Rick Brand, Kenny Martin, and Duran Williams will all return next year and will be counted on to improve on this year's marks.

The Scots had several highspots during the 1981 season. Memorable moments included a 6-5 win over Washington & Lee, a 2-2 tie to defending ODAC champion and Division III power Lynchburg College, and a hard fought 4-0 loss to 15th ranked ETSU in Johnson City. The Scots definitely improved as the season wore on and will be counted on to continue this improved style of play into next year.

Tennis: Wins and Losses

by Steve Arnold and Janet Helwig

It took 561 games of tennis in 2 days for the Scots to finish sixth in their second ODAC tournament at Washington & Lee last weekend.

Playing in weather of 45 degrees and 30-40 mph winds, the Scots finished ahead of Bridgewater, Roanoke, and Eastern Mennonite.

The bright spot for the Scots was David Link, who finished fourth at number 2 singles, winning one match and losing two (winning 27 games, losing 34).

Other results were: Randy Shackleford, sixth place, winning one match and losing two (winning 24 games, losing 30); Larry Durand, sixth place, winning one match and losing two (winning 22 games, losing 37); Steve Arnold, sixth place, winning one match and losing two (winning 34 games, losing 27); Jim Kidder, ninth place, losing his only match 6-2, 4-5, 6-3; and Dave Raulerson, seventh place, winning one match and losing two (winning 19 games, losing 33).

In doubles competition, Shackleford/Link placed sixth, winning two matches and losing two (winning 41 games and losing 38); Arnold/Kidder placed eighth, winning one match and losing two (winning 31 games and losing 50); and Durand/Raulerson placed sixth, winning one match and losing two (winning 27 games, losing

Ladies

The Lady Scots tennis team traveled to the University of Tennessee at Martin last weekend for the annual Division III State Women's Tennis tournament. Other contenders were Sewanee and Southwestern.

Only four of the Lady Scots competed, with Sharon Wood losing (6-1, 6-0) and Mary Kay Seith losing a close three-set match by a score of (4-6, 6-3, 6-0). Sue Spence was defeated (6-2, 6-0) and Cindy Cunningham lost (6-1, 6-1). The doubles teams of Sharon Wood/Mary Kay Seith and Sue Spence/Cindy Cunningham each lost tough matches to The University of the South.

The Lady Scots overall season record is now 4 wins and 6 losses. They will conclude their season with a home match against Bryan College this week and an away match with Tusculum on May 5.

The earliest building of Maryville College was "Mr. Anderson's log college, "built in 1802.

raised in the 1979-80 local campaign and is $2,460 over the announced goal. Dr. Henry A. Callaway Jr. served as general chairman of this year's effort.

Also included in the TCIII total is over $29,000 raised in this year's Phonathon, a recent telephone solicitation in which 5,000 alumni nationwide were contacted by students, faculty and other alumni over a two-week period.

The MC directors also heard a report from Admissions Director Larry West that this year deposits from prospective students are already 22.6 percent ahead of those for a comparable period last year. These are students who have been admitted and who have indicated their intention of enrolling by paying a deposit fee, West explained.

Reappointed to one-year terms on the board were the Rev. John T. Mathison and Judson Murphy of Maryville and George D. Webster of Washington, D.C.

Also during the two-day meeting, board members participated in a special seminar which raised fundamental questions on the purpose and mission of the institution. Purpose of the seminar was to begin an evaluation process for the board which will be tied in with the College's overall accreditation and self-study scheduled for next year.

In all, 26 members attended the semi-annual meeting which ended on Saturday.

May Madness!!

by Tommy Brown

As you probably know, this weekend is May Madness weekend. What you may not know is why the college has May Madness weekend or what exactly is going on May Madness weekend. Well, this story is going to tell you what you need to know....

Once upon a time, in a small liberal arts college nestled in the foothills of the Great Smoky Mountains, there was a senior by the name of Zeek. Zeek was in distress because the Administrators of the college made all seniors take a terrible, wicked exam called "comps" before they could graduate.

Well, Zeek did not fancy the idea of taking this "comps" thing because, well, as he put it, "There is no way I can relearn four years worth of work in a week of studying." However, Zeek faced up to his foe and conquered the terrible, wicked "comps."

After conquering his foe, Zeek said to himself, "It's time to relax, but it's not just 'Miller Time.' The weather's great, 'comps' have been defeated, and I'm almost out of here. I believe this calls for some hell-raising, and some awe inspiring celebratin'."

So Zeek went outside into the sunshine and discovered that the rest of the seniors were feeling the same way he was. There were frisbees flyin', radios blastin', beer sippin', and hell-raisin' going on. Zeek looked over the scene and said to himself, "This looks like a pagan festival to me. In fact this is outright May Madness."

So, that's how May Madness came about. Well, sort of how it came about. Well...it could have come about that way. Any way, it is our duty to carry on the tradition and we are planning to do it up in a way to make Zeek proud.

The Highland Echo wishes to extend hearty congratulations and salutations to His Majesty, President Wayne Anderson, on the fourth anniversary of his reign at Maryville College. Even though it is time for King Wayne to graduate, his departure has been unavoidably detained by his neglecting to dig into the royal coffer to cough up his $30.00 graduation fee. Sorry, Your Majesty, someone has rained on your reign....

New advisor announced

by Tom Hudson

Early this week, it was officially announced that The Highland Echo will be adding another advisor to its staff for the '81-'82 academic year.

The newspaper's present advisors, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler and Dr. Carolyn Blair, will retain their positions despite their pleadings to the Publications Committee.

The move for a third advisor was prompted by the Publications Committee, upon receipt of complaints that the weekly's editorial positions are "biased" and "narrow-minded."

"These complaints have some merit to them," stated committee chairperson Janet Helwig.

She quoted one letter sent to the committee: "Even though the federal financial aid freeze is a salient issue, and even though our President is pumping mega-bucks into our Nation's defense program, one shouldn't make fun of a President for his concern for the common man."

"We asked the Echo to print a few pro-Reagan cartoons to balance things out, but none could be found," said Ms. Helwig. "Instead we opted for the paper to run several anti-Carter cartoons. We realize that Carter is no longer in office, but it seemed to be the only fair thing to do."

Echo editor Tom F. Hudson was not available for comment.

The role of the new advisor will be to "balance the news and provide an unslanted, sound, and factual portrayal of the news," according to committee member Judy Mizell, who asked not to be identified.

According to Ms. Mizell, someone has already been spotted for the position. Although she would give no details, Mizell stated that the new advisor "is an award-winning female journalist, who up until recently, worked for the Washington Post."

Fred Hope Race slated

The Fred Hope Memorial Fund Run will take place on the Maryville College campus Saturday, May 9, at 9 a.m. with the proceeds to benefit the Presbyterian Medical Center in Jeonju, South Korea.

The road race, sponsored by the College's World Concerns Committee, will feature both one-mile and 3.1-mile events for men and women. Trophies will be awarded to the male and female winners in each race and ribbons will be given to the first three finishers in each of the age categories—14 and under, 15-19, 20-29, 30-39, 40-49, and 50 and over.

Advance registration forms are available at the MC student affairs office in Anderson Hall and at various locations in Blount County. Advance entry will cost $4 while the fee for filing registration forms from 8-8:45 a.m. the day of the race will be $5.

Last year, the fund raising proceeds went for relief work in Haiti. As is the case this year, in many instances the missionaries involved in the selected projects have been MC graduates.

Patience of a saint --

20 years of security

by Ruth Reese

Twenty years worth of changes have taken place at MC since security guard, Eldria Hurst, went on duty in 1962.

The dorms back then, he says, were staffed by strict housemothers of the grandmotherly type. It was their duty to enforce curfew hours and chaperone early evening visiting hours. All couples had to be in full view of the housemother, who kept a bell or a squeeze horn to sound if the young people got too close.

Mr. Hurst recalls a time when the dean encountered a couple holding hands. "And what are you saving for marriage," asked the dean. "Well-ll, I guess, we'll use the other hand," came the reply.

Males, who had no curfew, had it considerably easier than females, who had to be in at 10:30. One night a week was town week, and the girls could stay out til 11:00. There were no late keys, and the dorms were equipped with alarm systems. The minute these went off, the housemother was out in the lobby. She would find out who set it off if she had to go through every room in the dorm first.

In order to date a boy with a car, the girl had to have written permission from the dean. On return to the dorm, she had to present a pink slip with her name, the name of her date, and the time she was to be back.

One night when Mr. Hurst was on duty at Pearsons, a girl drove up with her date. Upon questioning her, he discovered she had no pink slip. "Yes, I do," she said, lifting her skirt a fraction of an inch. She was wearing one! She was allowed to return to her room with no further trouble.

The Security Department had the responsibility to "beat the bushes" for couples who considered it a challenge to break the rules. One such couple was lying in the grass one day when a security guard, with his head in the clouds, came by and tripped over the couple before seeing them.

When asked what single event brought about the most change on campus, Mr. Hurst replied, "The automobile." 20 years ago, a student received nine demerits if he/she was caught with a car on campus. Ten demerits were enough to be dismissed from school.

"Some kids stayed here four years and never got to see the mountains," he said. The bus from Maryville to Knoxville was the only form of transportation for most students.

It was not all bad, however. The campus was closer then. Mr. Hurst says he knew 85% of the students then, compared to about 10% today. There were more activities on campus, the dorms were noisier, more harmless pranks were played, and the student center was full.

Another duty Mr. Hurst had was to go around to each dorm and listen to whatever stories the housemother had to tell. One night a housemother called him and said that there was a girl being attacked down at the swamp. She said that she could hear the girl screaming. Mr. Hurst went down to check it out, and instead of a girl, found a cow stuck down there. The screams turned out to be a girl having a nightmare on the third floor of Lloyd.

Mr. Hurst remembers holding jam sessions with male students in the evenings, Sunday afternoons when all you could was sit on benches or stare at the sky, closely chaperoned parties and dances, required chapel services, and a time when there was no alcohol or drug problem.

"I really enjoy the job," he says. "It gets in your blood after a while. You get attached to the kids."

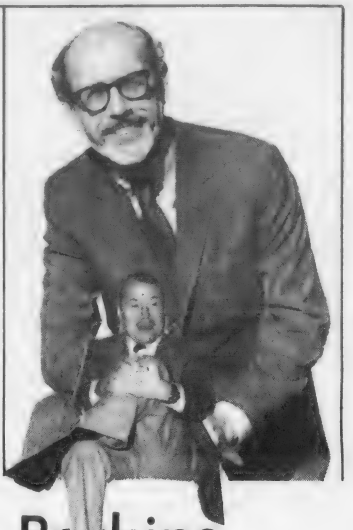
In the year of 1965, David Briggs and his wife moved into a house neighboring MC. After clearing the overgrown property between him and the college, an interest in beautifying our campus was sparked.



As a student worker many years ago, David Briggs worked on the grounds of Maryville College. He is still working to beautify the campus.

With the help of friends he cleared honeysuckle vines that were choking young trees in the college woods. Organizing flower beds and donating and planting dogwoods in various spots of the main campus are also contributions of Dr. Briggs.

When asked to compare MC's past to its present, Dr. Briggs expresses a feeling that today's freedoms make life a little more difficult. Students today have personal responsibilities. To uphold these responsibilities we must strive to know ourselves, and introspection is often more easily clouded in the quent pace of the present.

Perkins Performs

Dr. Alfred Perkins, MC Academic Dean, will perform a ventriloquist act in tonight's Fred Hope Benefit Coffeehouse in the dining hall.

When asked about his hidden talent, Dean Perkins stated, "I've many of these 'hidden talents,' as you call them. At the formal last Saturday, for example, many students were surprised that I knew how to dance, let alone that I still could."

The majority of Dr. Perkins' act will be comprised of musical selections such as "I Left My Heart In San Francisco," as well as numbers from the musical "Ain't Misbehavin,' " and the movie "Fame," including the hit song from that movie, "Out Here On My Own."

Admission to the Coffeehouse is half a semester (one quarter).

sioned by the Tennessee Arts Commission to compose a work for the Bicentennial. Fantasia on Shape Note Tunes was performed on May 9, 1976. In 1976 he was also guest conductor of a mass chorus program in Roanoke, Virginia, at the Civic Auditorium on July 4, 1976.

In addition to everything else, Dr. Harter is a member of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia and Pi Kappa Lambda, both honorary music national fraternities.

Florence E. Harter, Dr. Harter's wife, came to MC in 1949 as a part-time instructor in Home Economics. She became Dining Room Hostess in 1965 and has since left MC.

Although retiring, Dr. Harter will continue to teach voice part-time at MC.

Maryville College is losing four very good people to well-deserved retirement. They have all given of themselves to MC and will all be missed.

President Reagan recently reconsidered his position on federal funding for education. Early last week, 1 billion dollars was rerouted from the defense department to small, liberal colleges across the country.

Due to a mixup in form processing, Maryville College received two army surplus tanks, worth $700,000 each, instead of financial assistance.

"We're not worried about the mix-up," says MC Business Manager Hugh Crawford. "These vehicles display great versatility. We've already allocated one to the security department. The other can be used in a variety of ways, from maintenance to the homecoming parade."

Briggs digs campus

by Allison Perry

In 1915, when David Briggs attended MC, students were completely controlled. No dating was allowed except on Saturday afternoons, and students were separated in the Chapel and entering the dining hall.

Later, in his teaching career, much more freedom was permitted; but no car riding or holding hands was allowed.

Today, Dr. Briggs feels that students are much more questioning. Scholars of the past were much more willing to accept the opinions of professors.

His students have not forgotten him. A David Briggs Scholarship was established at MC by a former pupil, and he was placed on the Maryville College Wall of Fame.

Dr. Briggs, an active member in the New Providence Presbyterian Church, was sent last year to the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church. Besides such appearances, locally he has presented lectures on the power of suggestion.

He coined the term "over conservation" in reference to our intellectual power. Many utilize only about 10% of this power. With hypnosis and other devices, he demonstrates the brain's strength and encourages people to use their brain to the fullest.

This mental concentration utilized in classwork can cut study time to a third. He has developed this principle in helping people to quit smoking and overeating.

At age 82, this landscaper/lecturer might appear to be a vibrant contribution to this campus. Without a doubt, David Briggs is.

Walking through Maryville College's campus, one may happen upon an elderly man sifting in the gardens or admiring the greenery. If you have ever wondered who he is, his name is David Briggs.

Dr. Briggs happens to be a fascinating keystone of Maryville College. Before graduating from MC in 1919, he earned four letters in football. Dr. Brigg's name was added to the All-East Tennessee Squad. He participated in the only team at MC to play a season without being scored upon.

Returning to teach psychology at Maryville College in 1936, he served as Chairman of the Department until his 1965 retirement at the age of 71.

Besides MC, Dr. Briggs has taught in twelve consecutive summer schools at Furman University and headed the psychology department at Lander College for three years. At Piedmont Technical College he supervised a program developing the educational skills of underpriviliged people.

College loses faculties

by Ed Brewer

Four members of the MC community are retiring this year. They include Mr. and Mrs. Crawford, Herma Cate and Dr. Harry H. Harter.

Hugh R. Crawford Jr. is director of plant maintenance and operations and business manager at MC. Crawford, a native of Maryville and a 1935 graduate, joined the staff at Maryville in September 1961 as assistant business manager and purchasing agent. He was named business manager in 1974.

Mr. Crawford was named recipient of the college's second Outstanding Administrator award at MC's 161st Commencement exercises. The award, which is similar to the college's Outstanding Teacher award, was for Crawford's performance as an administrator during the 1979-80 academic year.

Dr. Anderson, in announcing the award, described Mr. Crawford as "one of the most dedicated, well-organized, knowledgeable members of the College's administrative staff."

"On call 24-hours-a-day, he manages a hectic operation with many demands and thankless tasks," Dr. Anderson said of Crawford. "He does this beautifully on a limited budget despite escalating inflation, and still commands the respect of the people who work for-and with-him. He is a man of absolute integrity."

In his position, he is responsible for the maintenance and operation of the College's grounds and buildings, upkeep of the physical plant, operation of the steam plant, and supervision of the security and maintenance and housekeeping staffs. He also handles the campus motor pool, insurance program and Section 504 (compliance with nondiscrimination toward the handicapped).

Prior to joining the MC staff, Crawford was owner-manager of Crawford-Caldwell Hardware in Maryville for 26 years.

Dorothy Crawford, also a 1935 graduate, is acquisitions librarian for the college. Mrs. Crawford majored in English and did honors work under Dr. Edwin Hunter, and she is a member of Alpha Gamma Sigma. She and Mr. Crawford were classmates and were married in 1937.

Mrs. Crawford started work at MC in 1961. She has served under three different librarians: Miss Virginia Turrentine, Miss Jane Savage, and present librarian Mrs. Exir Brennan.

Mr. and Mrs. Crawford's three grown children and their spouses are all MC graduates as well. Thomas '63 is married to the former Patricia Anderson '64; Louise '66 to David Berry '67; and David '69 to Eileen Suxo '72.

The Crawfords are members of New Providence Presbyterian Church where Mr. Crawford serves as deacon and elder and Mrs. Crawford was librarian until last January.

Herma Ramsey Cate was born in Sneedville, Tennessee. She received her B.A. from Berea College, Kentucky, in 1932, and she received her M.A. from the University of Tennessee in 1968.

Mrs. Cate taught English at Hancock Co. schools, Tenn. in 1931-32. She was teacher and then principal for grades 3-5, 6-8 at Blount Co. schools during 1932-41, and again taught English there from 1959 through 1965. Mrs. Cate was also instructor of English at the University of Tennessee during the summers of 1964 and 1965.

Mrs. Cate came to Maryville College as instructor in English on September 1, 1965. She became assistant professor of English exactly three years later.

In the summer of 1974, Mrs. Cate did research at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., on "Shakers in American Fiction" to be published in Tenn. Philological Bulletin of 1974. She also co-authored "The Southern Appalachian Heritage," and she had a weekly column in the Maryville-Alcoa Dialy Times—"Smokey Lore, Legends" in 1974.

Mrs. Cate is a member of ETEA, TEA, National Council of Teachers of English, and is a charter member of Mu chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma (no longer active). In 1965 she received a certificate of recognition for outstanding teaching from the International Kiwanis club.

Mrs. Cate is a member of Broadway Methodist Church in Maryville.

Harry H. Harter was born in Alameda, California. He received his A.B. from San Jose State College, Cal. in 1942, and received his M. Mus. from the University of Nebraska in 1947. On May 25, 1961, he was awarded his D.S.M. from Union Theological Seminary, N.Y.

Dr. Harter was part-time instructor of voice at Midland College, Neb., in 1946-47. He also served in the U.S. army.

Dr. Harter came to MC as assistant professor of music in 1947. He was made associate professor in 1958, and made professor in 1961. In 1964 he became chairman of the Department of Fine Arts and remained in that position through the 1979-80 academic year.

In December 1950 his article "The Message of the Christmas Bells" (Christmas music with Graded Choir System) appeared in the Church Musician.

In the summer of 1954 he composed Requiem for Fallen Nineveh chorus, and accomp.; Two Wings—spiritual arrangement; and Home Town for orchestra. And in 1964 he wrote three choral works for publication—Blessed Be the Lord (choir and brass accomp.), Shalom Chaverim (choir), Shepherds from the Field (choirs)—and an orchestral scoring of Ballet music performed by the Knoxville symphony.

Dr. Harter has written numerous other compositions also. He has served as choir director at First Baptist church and New Providence Presbyterian church, and interim choirmaster at St. Andrew's Episcopal church. He is a member of the St. Andrew's Episcopal church.

In 1974, Dr. Harter was commis-

The "Study A Broad" Program—an equal opportunity educator.

ONLY THE ARMY GIVES YOU TWO WAYS TO LOWER THE COST OF EDUCATION IN JUST TWO YEARS.

LOAN FORGIVENESS

If you have a Guaranteed Student Loan or a National Direct Student Loan (made after October 1, 1975) hanging over your head, consider spending a couple of years in the Army.

If you train for certain specialties, the government will release you from 1/3 of your indebtedness (or $1,500, whichever is greater) for each year of active duty.

Obviously, a three-year enlistment would eliminate 100% of your indebtedness. But you may prefer to take a shorter route and sign up under the Army's two-year enlistment option (and put 2/3 of your debt behind you).

Or you might want to join the Army Reserve. If you qualify, as a Reservist you can stay home, get paid for your active duty, and receive 15% loan forgiveness (or $500, whichever is greater) for each year you serve.

But we're not just offering you loan forgiveness. With your education, you can probably qualify for a higher rank and pay grade. You'll have your choice of many sophisticated Army skills.

And you may be eligible for generous monetary educational incentives.

TWO-FOR-ONE SAVINGS PLAN

If your dream is to continue your education some day, joining the Veterans' Educational Assistance Program can bring that day closer.

In fact, in just two years you can accumulate up to $9,200 for grad school. (Only the Army can offer you a two-year enlistment.)

It's not a loan, so you'll never have to worry about making payments. It's simply a savings program between you and the government.

THE ARMY'S COLLEGE BENEFITS

	Per Mo.	2 Yrs.
You Save:	$100	$2,400*
Gov't Adds 2-for-1:	$200	$4,800
Total:	$300	$7,200
Army Adds:		$2,000
Total Benefits:		$9,200

*Maximum individual contribution during a 2-year enlistment.

Certain 4-year enlistments can get you as much as $14,100 for college, plus a $5,000 cash enlistment bonus for a total of $19,100.

If you save between $25 and $100 of your monthly Army pay, the government will match that amount two-for-one. On top of that, you might qualify for an exclusive Army educational incentive of $2,000. (Longer enlistments can result in higher incentives.)

And you can participate in VEAP at the same time you're receiving loan forgiveness.

So, in just two years, you can go back to school with 2/3 of your debt behind you and up to $9,200 for your education ahead of you. (Of course, a longer enlistment could result in more educational benefits and 100% loan forgiveness.)

To find out more about both ways to serve your country as you serve yourself, call 800-421-4422. In California, 800-252-0011. Alaska and Hawaii, 800-423-2244. Ask for the name of the Army's college representative nearest you.

Feb. Meetings speaker chosen

In an unprecedented, unusually rapid decision, the Maryville College Worship Committee has accepted an offer from Secretary of State Alexander Haig to be the keynote speaker for the 1982 February Meetings.

Haig, one of the last devout Shakers in the United States, suggested two possible themes for the '82 Meetings; "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and "Pieces On Earth, Good Will To Men."

"Needless to say, we were a bit surprised by Mr. Haig's offer," stated MC Religious Coordinator Margaret Stevenson. "He's coming for free–of course we took it. Why look a gift horse in the mouth?"

Secretary Haig, who last month told a group of atheists in Bethesda, MD, "If God is dead, then I'm in charge here," learned of Maryville College's February Meetings program through his personal physician, an MC alumna residing in Fairfax, VA.

In a letter to Worship Committee chairperson Carol Coffey, Haig stated, "...with Maryville College's rich and meeningful [sic] past, I would be honered [sic]...to be in charge of you're [sic] meetings."

"When I got his letter, I just couldn't believe it," Carol said. "It was on the cutest 'Ziggy' stationery I've ever seen."

SNEA program planned

by Janet Helwig

For those of you who are interested in the education profession, make plans now to attend the annual Professional Day program sponsored by the M.C. Chapter of the Student National Education Association (SNEA).

The program this year will be held the afternoon of Tuesday, May 12, in Proffitt Dining Room and the central theme to be addressed will be student teaching.

The underlying intent of Professional Day is to allow students to go beyond the regular experiences gained in standard education courses. Reflecting this purpose, this year's program has been designed to promote greater interaction between students of education and professionals in the teaching field.

Guest speakers from Sam Houston Elementary School include librarian Glenda Childress, and Gaye Carole Martin, a 4th grade teacher who is also supervisor of the "School on Wheels". Other speakers are Charla Jean Lambdin, English teacher at William Blount High School, and Malinda Murchie, chief negotiator for the Blount County Teacher's Association Negotiating team.

The program is sure to be exciting, as each of the guest speakers will present various "often encountered teaching situations" in which college students will be asked to form options for action.

The program will start at 3:30 p.m. and will be followed by dinner and conversation at 5:30.

Cartlidge accepts new position

Dr. David Cartlidge, associate professor and chairman of the Religion Department, has accepted the position of Professor of Pagan Studies at Bob Jones University in Greenville, SC.

"This new position will provide me with a new vantage point, a different perspective, from which to analyze and study obscure theologies and out-dated worldviews," stated Cartlidge enthusiastically.

"Also, the university has excellent tennis facilities and a PTL pro shop," he added.

According to Dr. Cartlidge, who has been on the MC faculty since 1966, he came across the job opening at Bob Jones quite by accident.

"I was in the student center reading the "New Yorker" and, by golly, there it was–the ad–right next to a quarter-page spiel for a food processor.

"It looked interesting, so I bought one for Florie. Seriously though, the position intrigued me–its possibilities for further scholarship, its teaching responsibilities, its money. I would have been a fool not to grab it.

"Besides, the admissions office at the university assured me that I would not be portrayed by its prospectus as a bumbling idiot with an oral fixation who smokes his pipe while riding his bike, playing tennis, or playing his flute."

WRITE YOUR OWN Tom's Column

The Student Activities Committee and Maryville College would like to thank the following area businesses for gifts to promote this year's May Madness: Burger King, Alcoa; Cheese Shoppe Deli, Alcoa; Electric Circus Family Recreation Center, Maryville; Geno's Pizza, Maryville; Palace Theatre, Maryville; Royalty House Restaurant, Maryville; Sonic Drive In, Maryville; Spinning Wheels Skating Rink, Maryville; The Taco Maker, Maryville.

Thanks again!

To Matt Jones and Glen Katz,

Your qualifications for the Ten Most Boring List are totally irrelevant. We, the undersigned, can answer "yes" to at least 15 of your questions, but we feel we lead active social lives and definitely are not bored! Just because we flush toilets, turn in library books, are courteous at the salad bar, park between the lines, are quiet when we're supposed to be, etc...is because we act civilized—not bored. We feel we get a lot out of our classes, after all that is why we came to college—to learn, not play football or party all day and night. The way one chooses to lead his or her life depends on the interests of the individual, so if you want to be discourteous and egotistical about it, that's your decision.

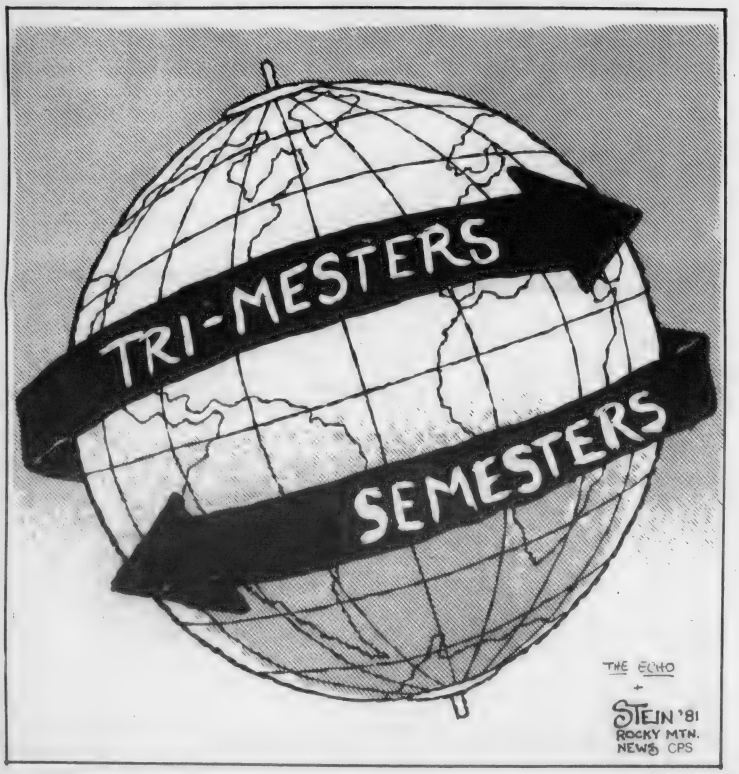
Signed the "boring" Chem Heads, Audrey Weisgerber, Peter Davis, Charles Alongi, Todd Dickson, David Lee, Stanley Howard, Bill Dent, Russ Gibson

P.S. How can you compare an MC football game to the Superbowl?
P.S.S. Your article was boring!

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to the "original" letter that appeared in the Echo on April 30. I have a question for the "exciting" boys who wrote the letter.

My question is, what is the correlation between destruction of property (the text of the first letter in this on-going series), not drinking beer the night before a test, not flushing the toilet, and being what is termed "exciting"? Somehow I have my doubts that by not flushing the toilet, my social life will reach untold heights.



I am led to believe that if I drink beer seven days a week, leave my tray on the table at dinner, graciously punch someone out for possession of the salad tongs, raise hell at 3 a.m., take "remedial Breathing" and "Advanced Paper Folding" for classes, and refuse to attend any CIV program, I will lead a most exciting and productive life. If that's what it takes to reach the status of being "exciting" then I shall, with your permission of course, choose to remain on the Boring List and graduate instead.

By the way, does your letter represent an admission of guilt? Think about it.

Sincerely,
Ben Stabley

I would like to write this letter of appreciation to the administration, board members and all others concerned for the installation of the new hot water system for next year. It will be a great convenience to have 24 hour hot water year round. I would like to again express my appreciation.

M.C. Scots MEN'S TENNIS (editor's sketch)

Baseball wrap-up

by Bill Dent

The Maryville College Fighting Scots Baseball Team concluded their 1981 season last Thursday with a doubleheader loss to the Golden Eagles of Tennessee Tech in Cookeville, Tn.

The first game saw what has been happening to Mark Woodhull all season long; fine pitching and no hitting resulting in a loss. The Scots fought hard to a 2-1 defeat. Woodhull went the distance and took the loss. His record for the season is 1-7 with an ERA of just over 2.00 per nine innings which shows just how good a pitcher Mark is.

The second game saw the Eagles trounce the Scots in five innings 10-0. The outmanned Scots never were in the ballgame as starting pitcher Duran Williams was injured in the course of the game. Williams nevertheless took the loss.

These two season ending losses leave the Scots with a compiled record of 4-12-2. The four Scots wins were against Eastern Mennonite, Washington and Lee, Emory and Henry, and Fisk University. The Scots finished in next to last place ahead of Eastern Mennonite in the final season ODAC standings with a 3-10-1 worksheet.

The hope, however, is for next year's Scots as they will lose only senior Jimmy Reese to graduation. Granted, this is a very big loss that will be tough to fill, but every player will be counted on to improve on this year's marks.

Ten S N E One?

by Steve Arnold

The Men's tennis team had a deuce week by losing to Sewanee 9-0 but bouncing back easily in their last season match to romp over Milligan 7-2. Against Sewanee the Scots came close in only 2 matches as Dave Link and Steve Arnold went 3 sets before losing 6-3, 2-6, 6-3 and 3-6, 6-4, 6-5 respectively. Other scores were Roger (S) d. Shackleford (MC) 6-0, 6-3; Brooks (S) d. Durand (MC) 6-3, 6-3; Rogers (S) d. Kidder 6-0, 6-4; and Brutkiewez (S) d. Raulerson (MC) 6-0, 6-0. In doubles Johnson/Brooks (S) d. Shackleford/Link (MC) 6-2, 6-2; Rogers/Rogers (S) d. Arnold/Kidder (MC) 6-1, 6-0; and Clark/Campbell (S) d. Durand/Raulerson (MC) 6-2, 6-1. The Scots finished their season with a 7-2 win over Milligan with 3 seniors going out victorious for MC. Ending their four years with a victory were Steve Arnold (MC) d. Tuttle (M) 6-2, 6-2; Randy Massey (MC) d. DeLong (M) 6-0, 6-3 and Larry Durand (MC) d. Gibbs (M) 7-5, 7-5. Other victories were Shackleford (MC) d. Moore (M) 6-0, 7-6; and Raulerson (MC) d. Ingram (M) 6-0, 6-1. In doubles Arnold/Massey (MC) d. Gibbs/Tuttle (M) 6-3, 7-6; and Durand/Raulerson (MC) d. DeLong/Ingram (M) 6-1, 6-1. Milligan received their two victories by forfeit and MC's Link failed to make the trip for no. 2 singles and no. 1 doubles. The Scots finished their 1981 season with a record of 7-5.

by Janet Helwig

The Lady Scots tennis team wrapped up their season Tuesday with a match played at Tusculum College in Greeneville, Tennessee. Prior to the match with Tusculum, the team hosted Bryan College on April 28 and dropped the match by a score of 5-4. Cindy Cunningham was the lone singles winner for the Scots as she defeated her opponent (6-2, 6-4) at the no. 5 singles position. However, Bryan College forfeited all three doubles positions, giving M.C. three additional wins.

The overall season record for the Lady Scots was 5 wins and 7 losses, having defeated Milligan College, Tusculum College, and Bryan College. On an individual level, Mary Kay Seith led the team with a singles record of 5 wins and 4 losses.

Confessions of Soap Star Doug Shehan

By Jana Dalton

Try to picture the setting...a beautiful sunny day, the fully bloomed dogwoods and tulips swaying in a fresh Spring breeze; the grass, having shed its winter coat, glistening green, and myself in a long, flowing white dress. Sound like a scene from Romeo and Juliet? Not quite, but close. Actually it was the opening of the Dogwood Arts Festival at the Governor John Sevier Home.

To follow tradition, the women of the Governor John Sevier Memorial Association wear long gowns for such occasions and give detailed tours of the homestead. Except today there was to be a festival with several celebrities, so I donned my long dress and went to play reporter.

Now, I've never been one to goggle over movie stars or dignitaries as if they walked on clouds; in fact, I refuse to collect autographs—BUT I couldn't resist the opportunity of rubbing elbows with a few renowned people.

My main intention was to meet Governor Alexander but unfortunately he could not attend. However, when I noticed a small group of persons drawing a crowd I knew a story was in the air....

After watching a grown woman fall all over herself for an autograph, I realized these individuals were soap opera stars from Ryan's Hope, All My Children, and General Hospital. (Honestly, I did not recognize them having quit that habit, years ago.) Anyway, while trying to figure out a couth way of beginning conversation, the lunch line began forming. Much to my advantage an attractive man took his place behind me. He had a keen sense of humor and a confident, easy-going manner with people. Another stars-in-her-eyes lady informed me that he was Doug Sheehan, alias Joe Kelly from General Hospital.

One thing led to another and Doug and I ended up eating lunch together. He certainly wasn't the governor but who's complaining? I found him to be a very gentle, down-to-earth person. He is a native Californian and was awe-struck at Tennessee's rolling hills and friendly people. He remarked that Tennessee's slow pace was a refreshing change.

We discussed his career at great lengths, and I found that he had completed a drama degree and was crazy about Shakespeare. Doug declared that Shakespeare had taught him everything he knows. (What better teacher?) He also told me he enjoyed his work. When I asked him how he coped with the pressures of Hollywood, he simply replied that you have to keep in contact with the people. Doug said it was a two-way street from audience to actors and both had to be attentive to the other. A pretty impressive statement. I couldn't help mentioning how egotistical people of stardom are and he agreed. I pointed out that the remark included him, and he replied, "Of course".

The most enjoyable part of our conversation concerned his questionable future. Doug said that he was saving his money so that he could open a celebrity rest home/hotel someday. It would serve as a place where "past-their-prime stars could enjoy life in a secluded area or the current heart-throbs could escape from the glitter. Needless to say, I was astonished that someone as new and on-the-rise as Doug Sheehan could capture such a realistic problem of tomorrow.

One last question for Doug regarded his love life. He said he was not involved. When I asked why, he said he was a very responsible person and he shied away

Coffeehouse perks up MC

By Donald Xiques

The May Madness coffeehouse definitely got the crazy weekend off to a great start. It offered something for just about everyone -- everything from the carnal pleasure offered of "Dance-10, Looks-3" to the lofty intellectual humor presented by Tim Fitzgerald. There was a gay time to be had by all (remember Tommy Brown and Tom Hudson?). This was not an event without chance for education however, as Shari Trotter showed us that crime doesn't pay, no matter how old you are.

Jean Plant and Kathy Culpepper were the hosts for the evenings events. Unfortunately, Cully, along with a few other seniors, had been involved in a serious accident - "Comps." This unfortunate event had temporarily distorted the part of her brain that helped her relate to reality. But by the end of the show she showed promising signs of recovery.

There were eighteen acts in all, and none were a disappointment. The thirteenth act was a great "surprize all the way from Georgia" Mr. Bryan McFarland. Bryan sang a couple of his own songs and also did a very moving rendition of Mike Weiss' song "Deep Water" a song about the plight of the Cherokee Indian burial grounds at Tellico.

The proceeds for the evening went to the Fred Hope Memorial Fund. The Fred Hope Fund was originally set up to help sponsor Mr. Hope, an alumnus, who was an overseas missionary. Fred Hope graduated in 1906 and worked in Africa. After his death, it was decided to continue the fund to special projects. This year the funds are going to a medical center in Chonja, Korea to help combat the problem of disease in the community.

Camaraderie. The Encyclopedia of Dictionaries defines camaraderie simply as "good fellowship." While walking around on campus this past weekend I tried to think of one word that would describe the May Madness Scene. Camaraderie was the word that came to mind. Good fellowship.

All over campus this past weekend there was a feeling of togetherness. Backstage at the coffeehouse there were no feelings of competitiveness. None who got up on that stage were better than the others. They were all equal; they were doing the same thing.

On Saturday students from all over campus gathered together outside of Pearsons to participate in the games or just sit, talk, and soak up some sun. Everyone was participating in the feeling, even the faculty were a part of the spirit. Normally quiet people and shy ones were joining in the games and activities with the gaiety of little children.

Students gathered around on the grass to eat, drink and be merry at the "oink and ale" party on Saturday night. There was plenty of good music and lots of frisbee games going on. This feeling of good fellowship lasted all weekend. Not only were the students and faculty involved, but also the administration played a part in the good times. After all who allowed the "ale" at the party?

Now May Madness is over. The seniors have had the dreaded comps. Everything is beginning to settle back to normal. But why can't the feeling of comaraderie last? Would it be too hard for students to continue to be pleasant to all the other members of this campus and try to help each other? Think how easy it was this past weekend. No one died of over exertion by trying to have a good time. It happened naturally. Why don't we try to keep it up? If we work at it, it will be a natural thing here at MC for all time. We could always remember how good it felt to be working together. There would probably be less vandalism on campus if every one of us work to help prevent it. Life on campus would be better all around. Let's try it. I think we'll like it. Then there could be MC Madness all year round.

This is in remembrance of two members of our faculty who will not be returning to Maryville next year. Both have had a positive influence on my life and have helped me to understand the meaning of the phrase "giving yourself to others." I am speaking of Dr. Richard Parke and Miss Shada Overton.

Shada, when you first meet her, gives the impression that she is a tough person, yet it doesn't take long before you realize she is tough because it is her job to make sure that rules are not broken. In reality it is easy to see that Shada's heart is overflowing with love and concern for "my girls." She was my special friend and confidante, someone to turn to in time of need. I, along with countless others, will treasure the time spent with our mom after the echo of her laughter is silent.

Dr. Richard Parke, in the one year he has been here, has helped the students he has come in contact with to improve not only their musicianship, but has taught them (if I may speak from my own experience) some valuable lessons concerning how to relate to people. Dr. Parke is not only a gifted performer but an excellent teacher as well. Not only did he share with his students his musical knowledge, but he gave of himself which is a far more valuable gift.

There is no way to express the love and gratitude your friends at Maryville feel toward you, except to say thank-you for giving to us parts of yourselves that will remain with us for the rest of our lives.

Wendy Wolfner

Dear Editor,

Once again, I would like to address the seemingly age-old issue of the calendar (trimester to semester) change proposal which is still of impending importance this spring term. For those who are unaware of the present situation, the proposal was recently voted on by the faculty on April 24th -- the result of which was an 18-18 split. A second vote will occur on the 20th of May, and it is to this vote that I direct my concern.

Dearest faculty . . (do I sound tearful?) may I take a few moments of your time to make one last plea;

Being that I am but one student among many who are against the proposed calendar change, I make no promise that I can adequately list for you all the reasons that we claim for taking our stand, but, the following is a brief attempt at conglomerating my own and other's opinions into a somewhat comprehensible form . . . .

Technically speaking, arguments against the semester time schedule include the opinion that what is gained by five weeks is lost by the addition of courses, the class time of 55 minutes is less effective then that of 70, and that vacation breaks are more psychologically relaxing at the end of a term rather than in the middle. The main argument, however, seems to revolve around a question of the character, uniqueness, and attractiveness of Maryville College as an academic institution to those who live, work, and learn here. Many seem to feel that as a small, liberal arts college MC would be denying itself of its most marketable features by discontinuing the trimester system, and several (myself included) who are familiar with the semester system much prefer the trimester.

So, I would like to urge students concerned to talk to the faculty before the vote on May 20th, and I would also ask faculty to consider again the many concerned voices before casting a second ballot on a highly controversial issue.

Dear boring Chem heads,

I am glad we wrote last week's editorial comment as a joke and to try to give a few people a chuckle. If we had written this in all seriousness, we might have started another Civil War. We really feel sorry for you, since you seemed to have taken this letter to heart. You must really be boring. Sorry you have nothing better to do.

What is really scary is that you may not be the only people who took our letter to heart -- half the campus might have taken it seriously. We guess that Maryville lacks a sense of humor. We are greatly saddened at this loss.

As to your direct slap in the face to the thousands of college students who play football -- some of us have the privilege to be able to participate in inter-collegiate football, as well as other sports, and gain a good, solid education at the same time. We are proud of it!

It may also interest you to know that Maryville College does not hand out grades to football players -- we earn them just like everybody else. We are students before we are football players.

P.S. Mr. Stabley -- We did not know the Maryville College Curriculum included "Advanced Paper Folding and Remedial Breathing." Since we did not know about it you must have experienced the courses. The only thing we are guilty of is a sense of humor. See you at graduation.

Co-ed Pearsons????

I represent a committee of seven students who would like you to know that a proposal has been made to keep Pearsons Hall co-educational for the academic year of 1981-82. Under this proposal, Pearsons would consist of a group of diversified residents working together to create dorm unity, support intellectual and social activities, and become an active, model community which would benefit both residents and the rest of campus.

The foundation for the community comes from a dorm constitution, the hall council, and a dorm judicial board. In order to live in the dorm students must apply no later than 12:00 NOON on MAY 18th (applications are available in the Office of Student Affairs).

We feel that Pearsons has the potential of being a place which can offer any resident an excellent year of positive living and would like to invite everyone to accept our challenge to becme part of what promises to be a rather envigorating experience!
(P.S. Please feel free to direct any and all questions to any of the following: Kim Mitchell, Brad Goar, George Cassutto, Barbara Morrow, Lee Lord, Mark Beyer, or myself).

Weekend causes Madness

By Tommy Brown

Reporter's Note: Last week I wrote a little story for the Echo describing how May Madness received its name, and telling why we have it. Well, this week it is my privilege to relate the activities that took place during the aforementioned weekend.

I am sure that events took place that are not known of, or that can not be put into print. However, I will relate the basic events that took place.

"I feel that May Madness was a smashing success," stated a member of the student activities committee. This view was common to most of the persons who were involved in May Madness (nearly the entire student body). From the beginning "yell" over the bull horn until the final "thank-you for coming out" the activities kept rolling along.

Friday afternoon at 4:30 p.m., while some seniors were still working on their comps, the activities began. The first games were an under the chin orange pass, a water balloon throwing contest, an egg throwing contest, and a bubble gum blowing contest. Approximately 30 to 40 students showed up for these games. Coming away with prizes were Randy Shackleford, Dave Kibben, and Audrey Weisgerber. Audrey "blew" away all the competition in the bubble blowing contest.

Following the games a guitar duo played during a hamburger and hot dog picnic. People hung around listening to records over the sound system and throwing frisbees, kicking soccer balls, and enjoying the out of doors until around 8:00 p.m.

Next on the schedule was the Fred Hope Benefit Coffeehouse. Twenty acts or so performed for a responsive audience. The acts included music and comedy routines. The highlight of the evening was the performance of Bryan McFarland, who played two songs and then came back to finish off the night with another.

For those who were not worn out by midnight, a Jerry Lewis film was shown. It was the one where he came to earth from another planet. (If you are a Jerry Lewis fan you should know the movie from that description).

Saturday May Madness activities began bright and early on a beautiful day at 8:30 a.m. This was the time when the Fred Hope Run began. This run is an annual event sponsored by the World Concerns Committee.

At 2:00 p.m. the stereo was set up outside, a few rounds of bingo were played, as well as Phi Mu Alpha, Chi Beta and the junior class setting up booths. Cotton candy was sold, and new games were played. About 100 people came out at least for a little while to either participate or watch the goings on. Those who did join in enjoyed the afternoon of craziness. By 3:30 everyone was in the mood for a nap so things began to close down.

At 4:30 p.m. 100 lucky people won May Madness T-shirts. After the T-shirt raffle it was time for the Oink and Ale. Bar-B-Qued Pig and 5 kegs of beer were the main attraction at this very successful event. Music was played and the `oink and ale were served until all was gone. From 5:00 p.m. until 8:00 p.m. the idea of May Madness was in progress behind the gym.

After moving the sound system from behind the gym into Pearsons Dining Hall the Jungle Dance began. This dance was a success since people were fairly primed from the Oink and Ale. By 1:00 a.m. people were ready for a good nights sleep.

Sunday afternoon was started off with a Whopper eating contest at 2:30 p.m. This competition was won by Bob "Mad Jack" McQuade who ate 4 Whoppers in 2 minutes and 30 seconds. Cotton candy and ice cream sundaes were sold for a little while after the contest.

Next it was time for the Superstar Couple Competition, organized by Kim Allen. About 20 couples participated in the events which included horseshoe throwing, egg tossing, wheelbarrow racing and other events.

Next came the tug of war, greased pole, bat race, and water balloon throwing. The tug of war included several match ups between different teams. The greased pole was impossible for one person to climb so teams of 4 raced against the clock to reach the top.

Storage regulations re-vamped

By Tom Hudson

Recently, there has been some confusion concerning the storage and box regulations set up by the Office of Student Affairs.

It was originally stated that all boxes in which things were to be stored for the summer had to be purchased from the bookstore at $1.50 each. This ruling is out. Repeat—this edict has been revoked.

The new story is this—all boxes in which things are to be stored on campus for the summer must meet certain specifications. You can go out and locate your own boxes if they are no larger than 23x23x20, are sturdy (double cardboard construction), and are well-sealed with packing tape. All boxes will be inspected by the staff of each residence hall.

If you cannot locate such a box, or would rather not go pawing through the dumpsters behind Big K or the Giant Food Mart, you can buy your boxes from the bookstore for $1.50 each, plus tax. These boxes measure 23x23x20 and will hold 6.1 cubic feet of your favorite junk. These boxes can be folded up and used again for years of storage pleasure.

The boxes you dig up yourself can only be used once—come September you'll have to chuck them. Keeping them around is a fire hazard....

Another tid-bit—if you'll be moving from the dorm you're presently in to another one, either store your stuff in the new dorm for the summer, or move it as soon as you return in the fall. If your possessions are left in the storage rooms, Maintenance will confiscate them and keep them in Bartlett Hall, where you'll be charged additional storage fees. If your things are not claimed, they will be given to the Tyrolian Elf Relief Fund.

Of course, bikes, televisions, stereos, etc., will be permitted in storage for a $3.00 fee. If you have the box that the product originally came in, use it to store the item in. These are the only personal boxes that will be allowed to be reused.

If you have any questions, talk to Dean Richardson or Dean Strickland in the Office of Student Affairs.

ACC meeting recap

By Jeana Webb

On May 6, 1981, another meeting of the All-College Council was held. This meeting was held at 2:30 p.m. in Anderson Hall, room 304.

This meeting was opened in the usual manner with a short prayer being offered. After the prayer the new members of the ACC were welcomed and introduced. The new members did not take part in this meeting. Their turns come next year.

Next all the pertinent "old business" was discussed. The old business for this meeting consisted of a reconsideration of the Maryville College Playhouse Association. The articles of the new constitution of the Association concerned the name of the association (to be left as is); the objectives of the group; the rules of membership; organizational meetings (held regularly); and the election of officers and their duties. Other articles concerned the voting privileges, finances, and rules for making amendments to the constitution.

The ACC carefully considered the constitution, then passed it. Then came the time for "new business." There was no pertinent new business or "other business" introduced at this meeting, so they adjourned the meeting.

Men's tennis ends season

The men's tennis team handed head coach Randy Lambert a winning season by finishing with a record of 7-6. It was a bad start back on March 12 as the Scots dropped their opening match 8-1 with Randy Shackleford being the only victor for MC.

The Scots bounced back strong, winning four straight, and gave up only one match in that period while defeating their opponents 9-0, 8-1, 9-0, 9-0.

From this point the Scots had a few struggles before finishing on a 2 winning note by defeating Milligan 7-2. A highlight of this season was MC 9, Tennessee Wesleyan 0. This was the first victory ever for MC over Wesleyan in tennis.

Randy Shackleford turned in excellent performances all year, one of them at E & H as he defeated Labello 7-5, 0-6, 6-3. Scots finished 6th in ODAC. Randy Shackleford finished the year no. 1 with his 10-3 record. Randy had an excellent season. His 2 year total in singles was 23-12.

David Link, no. 2, finished at 7-5. Link transferred from Furmman University where he played at the no. 5 spot.

Larry Durand, graduating senior posted a 7-6 record at no. 3 singles.

Steve Arnold, ending his last year, posted his worst record ever, finishing at 7-6. His previous records were 6-3, 10-2, 17-5. Last year he set 3 MC records. His 17-5 singles record was a record for most wins in a singles competition. In combined 2nd doubles his total wins were 29. He set the MC record for the most wins in doubles and singles by 1 player in a single season.

His total wins up until last year were 45, which were the most important wins ever in tennis at MC. Added to this year's total wins he finished 4 years with 58 wins, and 31 losses. His 4 years singles record was 40-16.

Randy Massey was the only southpaw on the team. He finishes his 4 years with over 35 wins. His senior year record was 6 wins and 5 losses.

from short term relationships for fear of undue heartaches. He told me that the women he has encountered are usually in love with Joe from General Hospital, and they do not take the time to know Doug or give him the chance to truly know them. So girls, take your time.

Apart from the spicy green eyes and the warm pouty smile, I discovered Doug Sheehan to be an unusual member of the star-studded society. I wish him the best of luck with his future plans and thank him for a most enjoyable lunch.

Bucking the buck---

The Financial Aid scene

by Tom Hudson

"In spite of the budget cut proposals in Washington and the uncertainty of both Federal and State funding, Maryville College remains committed to assisting students in meeting educational expenses."

This statement was included in a note to students from MC Financial Aid Director Dan Perkins, regarding the financial aid situation in light of the budget cut proposals from the Reagan Administration.

Since May 6, when the note was distributed on campus, these budget cut proposals have been accepted by Congress. However, the future of financial aid is still rather up in the air.

As it stands now, the situation shows little change from its condition during the early part of May.

In regard to the Pell Grant (BEOG), the budget cuts include:

(1) A maximum grant of $1,750 for 1981-82. This represents no increase from the 1980-81 maximum, and a significant reduction from the $1,900 maximum proposed in the Educational Amendments of 1980 under the Carter Administration;

(2) Family contributions are being calculated using regulations set down by the Reagan Administration that freeze "family-size offsets" at their 1980-81 level -- with no adjustment for inflation;

(3) A maximun grant of $1,800 for 1982-83; this was also the highest award in 1979-80;

(4) A substantial revision in the needs analysis formula for 1982-83.

Concerning Guaranteed Students Loans, the budget cuts create the following changes:

(1) The elmination of the in-school interest subsidy. Lenders would have the option of billing the borrower for the interest (9% for new borrowers, 7% for former borrowers) during the enrollment period or accruing and deferring the interest charges until the borrower leaves school;

(2) The limitation of any GSL to a student's remaining financial need, or educational costs less all other aid and expected family contribution. All applicants would be required to undergo a needs analysis test (Financial Aid Form) and those demonstrating no financial need would be ineligible to receive a GSL;

(3) The Senate Budget Committee is operating on the basis of the Reagan proposals, except that it assumes an October 1 implementation date, rather than the July 1 date proposed. Another group of senators wants to maintain the in-school interest subsidy and limit eligibility for maximun loans to students from families earning less than $25,000. Loans for borrowers above this income cap would be restricted by need;

(4) The House Budget Committee has tentatively assumed an income cap of $35,000 for student borrowers, an increase in the parent loan interest rate from 9 to 12 percent, counting VA and Social Security student benefits as student resources in calculating need, providing incentives for early repayment, and eliminating the higher loan limits for independent students.

The award criteria for the Tennessee Student Assistance Award has also been readjusted to meet the financial aid crunch:

(1) The most needy students will be assisted on the bais of the Pell Grant need analysis formula, depending on available funds;

(2) No priority will be given to upperclassmen who have received the award previously.

Many changes are on the horizon for the area of financial aid -- not just at MC, but on the state and national levels. MC has promised to "remain committed" to students who need financial assistance. If you have any questions concerning your aid needs, or if you're just wondering whether you'll get the bucks you got last year, contact the Financial Aid Office in Anderson Hall.

Wayne named by Guv

by Ruth Reese

Governor Lamar Alexander has appointed MC President Wayne Anderson to the Southern Regional Education Board as the representative for Tennessee private colleges.

Dr. Anderson, who succeeds UT President Dr. Ed Boling, will start his four year term on July 1.

The SREB, created in 1948, is the nation's oldest interstate organization for higher education. It is supported by federal and private grants appropriations from the fourteen member states.

The SREB's primary purpose is to gain support for higher education. It does research, compararive studies, and reports on needs and developments in higher education.

The SREB is governed by a board which includes the governors from each state and four other governor-appointed individuals. At least one must be a

Why hast thou forsaken us?

An essential person at Maryville College has been missing for two years. That person is a permanent chaplain, or did you know that Maryville, a Church-related college, is supposed to have one?

Fortunately, last year from interim through spring term, we had an interim chaplain, but this year we have struggled along without one and many at MC have been severely deprived because of the absence of the person fulfilling this position.

The duties of a chaplain are many. He/she would be a member of the Student Affairs, and would be responsible for coordinating campus religious activities, personal counseling for faculty, students and staff, teaching part-time, and participating in general campus policy determination. The chaplain would help maintain relationships between the College and local congregations and relationships with judicatories of the United Presbyterian Church.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

On February 27, 1981, the student body, males and females alike, were summoned to register for the draft. After it was discovered that the federal government had not come in the dead of night to hang posters on walls, dorms, and trees, we were told, by a small group of students, that we were apathetic and oblivious to the world around us. This was true.

What makes this an important issue is that, besides government regulations, policies of Maryville College, the place where each of us live and work everyday, were being ignored as well. Slowly however this attitude seems to be changing. There appears to be a growing awareness on the part of the students as to what is going on and how it will affect them.

Evidence of this can be found in various changes, both overt and subtle. Students have spoken in crowded meetings and through circulated petitions. Even the Highland Echo has reflected this new direction through the increasing number of letters to the editor debating the controversial issues.

All of these efforts have not gone unnoticed or without result. The revised calendar proposal is being looked at carefully by the faculty and others, the library will not be closed during CIV's, and Pearsons will remain a co-ed dorm. Along with renewed interest in the campus has come an attention to the outside world; letters were written to President Reagan pro testing his tax cuts.

The voicing of opinions and protesting are not actions which can be taken lightly, however; it takes responsibility and the courage of a person to stand up for his own convictions. In order for any opinion to carry weight it must come from a well informed, serious source. This takes time and thought and is no easy obligation, but one to which every student should address himself.

LETTERS

Dear Editor,

Having just finished reading the latest in a series of "attack a group on campus" letters, I decided that the whole thing is absolutely pointless. First one group slaps another in the face by bringing out all their faults. Then that group retaliates by "jokingly" calling the first group boring. Then another group gets offended by being called boring. And finally the second group says we have all lost our sense of humor.

Well, I still have my sense of humor. What I have lost is my patience with all these people. Look, it makes no sense to criticize your fellow students for what they are or what they do. None of you are God's gift to the world. You all have faults, it's true, but we need our athletes as well as our "chem heads" and boring students. We all play a part in keeping this campus diversified. If we were all the same, what would we have to talk about at meals?

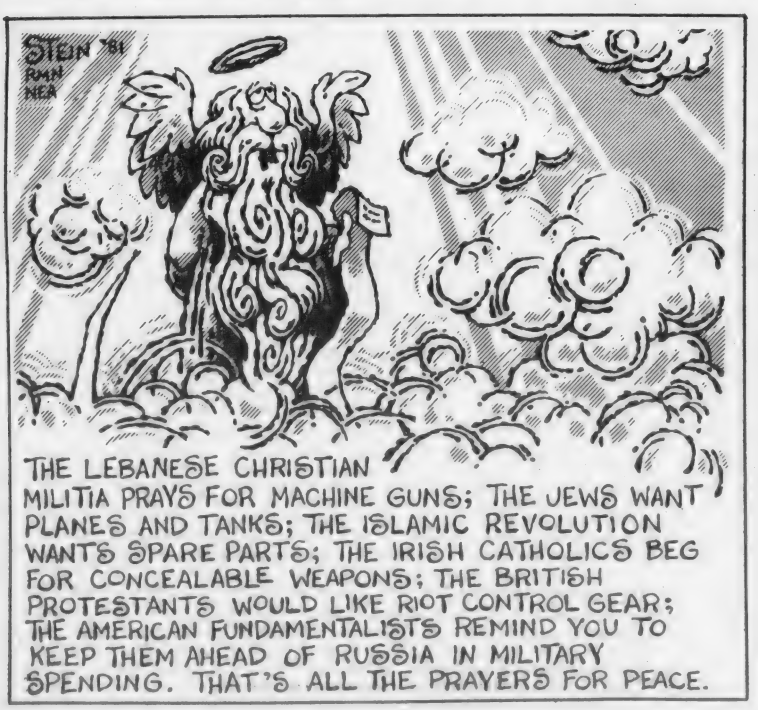
If you nasty editorial writers spent as much energy trying to improve campus life as you did knocking each other, we might have been able to be a powerful force against the calendar change. One group of disgruntled students put their energy to use by creating the Pearson's Project. Because of them, upperclass men won't have to live in Lloyd, and Pearsons will remain co-ed. I think they should be praised for their hard work and perseverance in getting this plan through.

So if you think there is something wrong with Maryville College, do something about it. Don't just sit there and immaturely throw stones at each other. You get a lot more accomplished when you work as a team.

Joann Ricci

To My Friends of MC:

Maryville College is accurately accused of being the countries greatest Rumor Mill, complete with "if it's said more than once it must be true" syndrome. The absurdity of this monster is that I believe some of this school's hierarchy can now be included in falling into it's lengthy group.



I guess I find some bizarre humor in all this because it is my general principle to guide others to seek the truth before passing judgement and now I have fallen victim to this monster's ugly jaws. As of mid-April I was informed that because of some "signals" as well as alleged happenings concerning myself I am released of my responsibilities for the upcoming school year.

It is the belief of the Deans of this school that I have not exerted myself professionally and it is for the betterment of the student body of Maryville College, as well as myself that I do not return next year. Oddly enough I find myself with conflicting feelings since I believe I can recall participating with students in a variety of positive discussions and instigating other activities under the obviously false assumptions of smoothing some rough spots at Maryville College.

To my friends, I thank you for your open expressions of condolences to one of the most recent judgements passed down by a sector of the MC administration and pray that you all know this was not my decision.

I most sincerely wish my friends well next year and always.

Colored Girls at MC

FOR COLORED GIRLS WHO HAVE CONSIDERED SUICIDE WHEN THE END OF THE RAINBOW IS ENUF, a modern theatre ensemble work prepared by the Paul Robeson Repertory Company is to be presented for one performance only at the Maryville College Theatre on Wednesday, May 27, at 8:15 p.m. The production is sponsored by the Maryville College Playhouse Association and ticket prices are $2 each. MC students may attend for $1. Tickets will be on sale at the door.

COLORED GIRLS consists of a series of stories – some told through music and song -- told by the seven women of the ensemble. Using vivid narrative pieces, some in prose and some in free verse, the play is almost exculsively concerned with the cavalier and sometimes downright brutal treatment accorded Black women by their men. The language is strong and many of the stories, bitter; but the play captures the inner feelings of today's Black woman and goes beyond that to achieve its own kind of universality: the cast is united in sorrow, spirit, pride, and soul.

New York Daily News termed the Broadway production "a triumphant event . . filled with humor . . joyous and alive, affirmative in the face of despair!" Time magazine stated ". . . a poignant, gripping, angry, and beautiful theatre work." Newsweek said ". . . bitingly alive . . . overwhelming in its emotional impact. . . . . tragic, funny, proud, and compassionate."

The Paul Robeson Company which works through the Beck Cultural Center in Knoxville is the producer of this version of COLORED GIRLS which was originally staged in conjunction with The University of Tennessee Department of Speech and Theatre. The show ran for four performances at UT and each performance turned away over three hundred persons.

Because of the excitement of the Robeson Company production and because of the popularity of the show, Donald Thomas, Director of Theatre here at the College, immediately secured a contract for the play to be mounted for one production at Maryville College.

"The citizens of Blount County have a unique opportunity to see some of the finest Black theatre around today, " states Thomas. "COLORED GIRLS is a production we could not possiblely hope to produce through our regular season, so it is especially appropriate that we can present a guest cast of this caliber as a special Playhouse production."

The cast for COLORED GIRLS includes Maxine Thompson, a native Knoxvillian and a graduate student in Education; Tamara Weaver, a native Memphian and a MFA candidate at UT; Linda Parris-Bailey, a cum laude graduate in theatre from Howard University and the artistic director for the Carpetbag Theatre in Knoxville; Linda Upton, a Carpetbag member and a student at UT; JoVon Ricks, a native Memphian and general manager of the Robeson Company; Donna Hardy, a reading instructor at Bearden Middle School and a modern dance instructor; and Jacqueline Lavon Carroll, Robeson Company member and a sophomore at UT. Director of the production is Thomas Cooke, UT Theatres professor and a graduate of Yale and Florida State.

Carol Neal, art student at Maryville College, is holding her Senior Art Show from May 18th to 31st in the Fine Arts Gallery. Although Carol's strongest interest lie in oils and photography, the exhibit remains unconcentrated in any particular of artistic creation.

Included in her showing are; mobiles of batik and felt, pottery and weaving, and etchings. Drawings and paintings are done with pencil, crayon, stencil and tempra, linoleum and ink and, of course, oils.

Carol also uses her creative imagination in clay dolls and bookends, a variety of jewelry, and photography of subjects ranging from million dollar ducks to her very own darlin'.

Music "pops" up

by Allison Perry

The Maryville–Alcoa College-Community Orchestra, conducted by David Irwin, and featuring vocal soloists will present a POPS Concert of Broadway Hits on Sunday afternoon, May 24th, at 3:00 in the Wilson Chapel on the campus of Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee.

Favorite Broadway shows such as The Sound of Music, South Pacific, The King and I, and Carousel by Rodgers and Hammerstein will be represented, as well as Show Boat by Jerome Kern, No Strings by Rodgers, Spring Is Here by Rodgers and Hart, and Chorus Line by Hamlisch and Kleban.

The ever-popular "Make Believe" from Show Boat will be sung by Mary Janeway, soprano and Richard Parke, tenor. Dr. Parke will also sing "The Sweetest Sounds" from No Strings.

Peggy Herbert, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in "My Favorite Things" from The Sound of Music and "Bill" from Show Boat. Allen Evitts, baritone, will be soloist in "Some Enchanted Evening" from South Pacific and "Soliloquy" from Carousel.

Diane Bonyadi, soprano, and Bob Robinson, baritone, will sing "With a Song in My Heart" from Spring Is Here by Rodgers and Hart.

This is the final concert in the MACCO subscription series for 1980-81. Tickets will be available at the door and by calling the Maryville College Fine Arts Center at 982-6412, ext. 301. Admission is $3.00.

Coaching Before Marriage

(Editor's Note: This article -- by Deborah Beadle Bartell, wife of Galena (IL) High School Basketball Coach Gary Bartell – offers a tribute (of sorts) to the coaching profession. The article was originally published by the Freeport (IL) Journal -- Standard.)

GALENA – First, never marry a coach.

If this advice comes too late, there are two alternatives: supreme self-sacrifice or divorce.

A coach is not a real person, and, therefore, cannot be dealt with as such. If you choose the route of the martyr, then the rest of this article is for you.

Put away all those fancy cook books you received as wedding gifts, along with the woks and chafing dishes and those beautiful serving trays. There are only two things you will need – a slow cooker and a freezer. They go with the only two meals you'll have to serve -- late and impromptu.

If you try to plan a meal that has to be eaten within a reasonable time span, you will only be disappointed. Something "more important" will surely come up to detain him, from a sweat socks salesman to a kid who needs a hangnail amputated

Forget the romantic candlelight. He can't see the sports page or draw plays in his mashed potatoes in the dark.

His clothing needs are quite simple. He needs only three outfits: one for winning, one for losing and one for practicing. Just pray that his school colors aren't pomegranate and puce.

Your own clothing, too, will be easy to select. You will need something casual and comfortable for climbing and sitting on bleachers during his ball games, and something sexy for an occasional evening out when he takes you to someone else's game.

If you somehow manage to divert his attention long enough to have a family, never be so short-sighted or inconsiderate as to have your delivery date come immediately before, during or immediately after his season. The last woman to do something so foolish had to pick up her husband at the gym on her way to the hospital. Her baby's birth announcement was found on the sports page as an "interesting sidelight of the holiday tournament."

Plan to be the sole disciplinarian. Just because the coach can hold 20 teenage boys at bays and make them jump when he barks a command, don't expect him to handle a child, especially his own. When the 2-year-old disobeys and he tells her to "drop and give him 10," you know you're in trouble.

But if you keep your sanity, and still manage a smile, the rewards outweigh the problems 100 times over!

All-Sports Seance Held

by Steve Arnold

What could have been a perfect night for an athlet's only seance was really set aside to honor athletes as the Annual All-Sports banquet was held last Thursday.

Due to a power knocked out storm, the program's emcee Bob Kesling, WBIR-TV 10 sportscaster, carried on the program in total darkness by lining up people for food and then introducing the guest speaker, sports psychologist, Jack Llewellyn. Dr. Llewellyn kept everyone's attention while giving an excellent talk on positive mental attitude and the spirit of competition in young kids.

The Wall of Fame inductees followed with Steve Boretsky (1934); Ted Wilson (1957); Frank Cross (1942); D.W. Proffitt (1916), and Madison Byar (1934) graduates of MC and graduating with athletic honors.

Next presented were the Athletic Awards. Jenny Ann Carey awarded Kim DeMatt (football) and Ginger Harris (basketball) outstanding cheerleading awards for their fine performances, dedication, and overall spirit. Coach Brown presented senior Carol Neal the MVP Award in volleyball and Bonnie Dobson with the Most Improved Player award. Coach Brown then turned to basketball to present the MVP award to Candy Nutter, the first female athlete at MC to be selected All American. Melissa Sullivan accepted the Most Improved Player Award along with the Coaches' Award going to Kim Allen.

Sharon Wood was voted MVP in women's tennis, while Randy Shackelford received MVP in men's tennis. Randy Lambert presented the MVP award in basketball to Rich Suttle, while the Coaches' Award went to Jackie Carlton. Rich also won the J.D. Davis Outstanding Athlete of the year award.

Mike Sabatelle presented the MVP of soccer to Tim Fitzgerald while Pat Ballard presented the softball club MVP award to Vadonna Moffett. Coach Gilbert presented to senior Jim Reese the MVP award and also the Ken Stinnett Award. Track MVP award presented by Coach Davis went to Bill Goetsch while the MVP award in football went to Wayne Thompson.

state legislator and one an educator. The three members from Tennessee are state Senator Leonard Dunavant, Dr. Wayne Brown of the Tennessee Higher Education Commission, and Dr. Ray Nicks of Nashville.

Dr. Anderson is the Vice-chairman of the Tennessee Independent College Fund and of the Tennessee Council of Private Colleges. He is also president of the Mid-Appalachia Colleges Council, Inc.

A committee has been in the process of selecting a chaplain since last fall. The candidate should hold a graduate degree in an academic discipline beyond the Master of Divinity and be an ordained minister. Successful experience in campus ministry and/or pastoral ministry would be desirable. The committee is looking for someone who also shows evidence of counseling skills and who is able to work with a broad spectrum of religious convictions and interest.

The deadline for the submission of applications was January 31, 1981. About seventy applications were submitted. Since then the selection committee has met and finally narrowed down the prospectives to five. Upon inquiry it was discovered that two of the applicants have been accepted for other positions. A phone interview is being planned for a woman living in Wisconsin. The decisions about the other two candidates is unclear. The committee has said it hopes to have all the candidates, except those interviewed by phone, on the campus for interviews before the end of the spring term.

The committee has not found any of the candidates to be very impressive so they may review the applicants and not place as much emphasis on the teaching criteria since he or she will only be teaching part-time.

The committee had set the starting date for the chaplain to be spring of this year but that date has been changed to fall of next year.

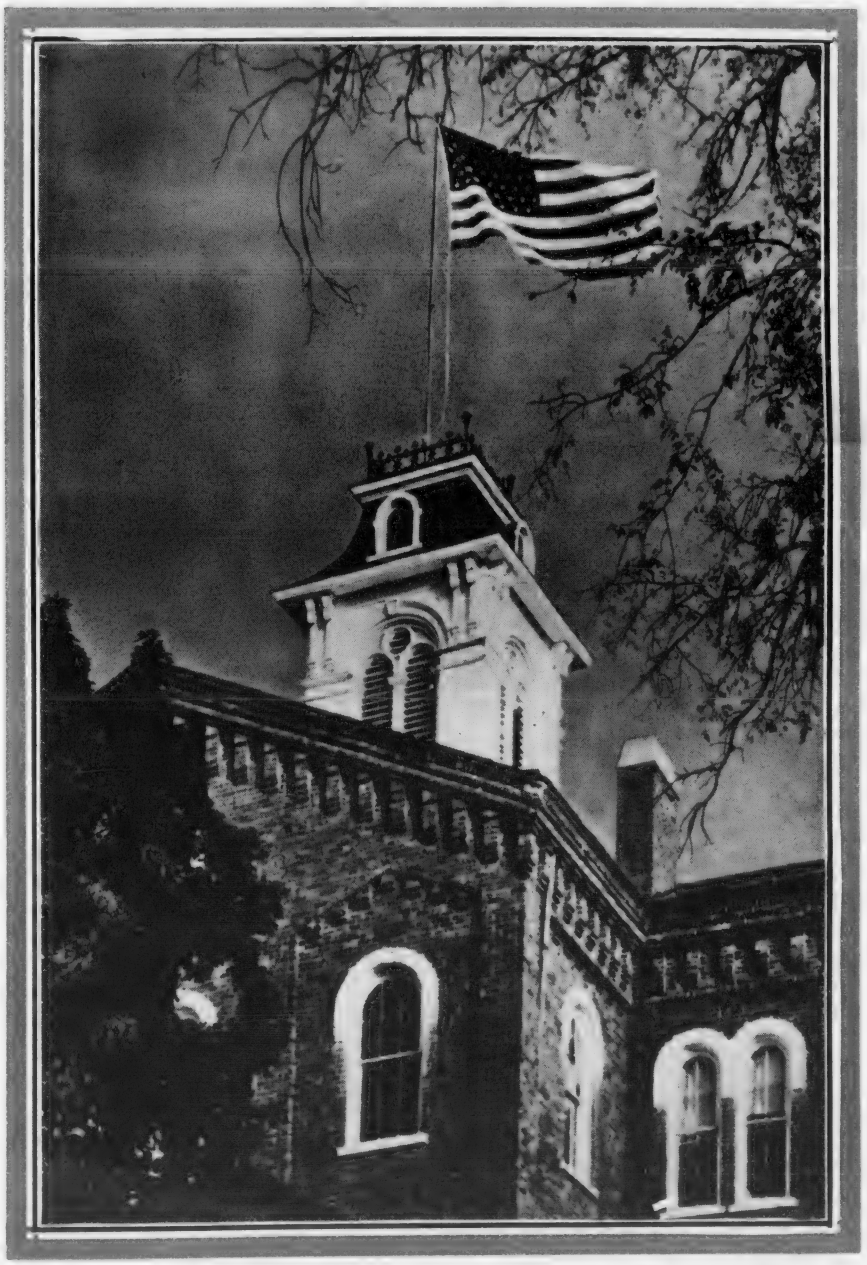
162nd MC graduation to commence

by Ed Brewer



The 162nd Commencement ceremonies at Maryville College will begin this Monday, June 1, at 10:30 a.m. The 1981 Commencement will be distinguished in the fact that it will be the first time the ceremonies have been held outside.

Approximately 85 students will walk through the graduation line Monday morning.

The graduates will assemble at Thaw Hall and process with the choir to Pearsons Hall. Bagpiper Don Gilmore will lead the graduates, faculty, and platform committee to the stage which will be situated between Pearsons and Anderson Hall.

Larry Durand, senior class president, will give the welcoming speech. Rev. Frank Heinze will read the scripture followed by Rev. Ray Robinson's prayer for the graduates. James P. Grant, executive director of the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) will deliver the commencement address.

Following the address, Grant and Foster G. McGaw will be awarded honorary Doctor of Law degrees. Dr. Anderson will then deliver a challenge to the graduating class. Then the big moment—the graduates will receive their degrees. After the ceremonies everyone will recess to the music of the Brass Choir.

Mr. Grant assumed his current position as executive director of UNICEF in 1980 following a long and distinguished career in development. He was president and chief executive officer of the Overseas Development Council from its establishment in early 1969.

Prior to joining the Council, Grant was an assistant administrator of the Agency for International Development (AID). From 1964-67 he was director of the AID program in Turkey. And from 1962-64 he was the U.S. deputy assistant secretary of state for the Near East and South Asian Affairs. During the three previous years, he was a deputy to the director of AID's predecessor, the International Co-operation Administration, and in charge of its world-wide programming and planning.

Grant has served as a director of a number of organizations involved with development issues, including New Directions, the Commission of Participation in Development of the World Council of Churches, the International Voluntary Services, the Pan American Development Foundation, the Institute of Current World Affairs and the Foreign Policy Association. He is also the president of the Society for International Development and a trustee of the Rockefeller Foundation and Johns Hopkins University.

The author of numerous publications about development matters, Grant received his bachelor's degree from the University of California-Berkeley and a law degree from Harvard University. Grant was born in China, and he and his wife have three children.

Foster G. McGaw founded American Hospital Supply in 1922 and, today, the corporation operates in 32 countries and has net sales of more than $2 billion. He graduated from Keokuk (Iowa) High School and took extension courses from the Northwestern University School of Commerce.

A life member of The Art Institute of Chicago, McGaw is also an honorary life member of the American-Scottish Foundation of the Izaak Walton League and of the Northwestern University Alumni Association. In 1979, he and Mrs. McGaw were presented the Outstanding Philanthropists Award from the Chicago chapter of the National Society of Fund Raising Executives.

He has received the Honorary Fellowship of the American College of Hospital Administrators, Founders Day Award from Loyola University of Chicago, Greater Chicago Churchman Award from the Church Federation of Greater Chicago, distinguished citizen awards from the Protestant

It's interesting to paw through the back issues of the Echo that are on file here in the office, just to read the final editorials written by my predecessors in their last issues.

Well, the time has come for me to take my place in the filing cabinet. I suppose I'll have to wear my good drawers for such an auspicious occasion. . . .

In a way it seems almost inconceivable that the year has come and gone so rapidly -- it's as if only yesterday I stood in this office and wondered aloud "How in the @$*% am I going to do this?"

Come to think of it, it was only yesterday. But that wasn't the first time. The first time was in September. However, looking back, I guess the S.S. Echo weathered storms even when its captain wasn't sure what the hull he was doing. But this is all "aft"er the fact. . . .

Shelley Ballenger, in her "farewell address," (Vol. 65 No. 27), stated that I had "a good head on [my] shoulders," and I thank her for her confidence and support.

With Echo Vol. 66 completed, I hope I've lived up to that statement, even though at times I realize people were convinced my head was up my, well, shall I simply say, somewhere else.

In issue No. 1, I promised that this year's Echo would be "a different type of college newspaper . . . more light-hearted than in the past." It is my belief that this was acheived -- a level of humor was put forth in this year's Echo that cannot (and will not) be claimed by many other campus papers . . . .

I tried to have fun with the news and it is my hope that it came across in such a way. The purpose of a college newspaper is to present salient campus issues in a fresh, interesting fashion.

Deepest apologies are extended if at time issues were no more important than "Maintenance to Cut Lawn This Week," or "New Book Drop Slated for Library." It just happens that way some weeks. . . But we don't make the news, we just report it.

And there have been times when something hasn't been reported, due to an editorial decision or just plain oversight. For that I am sorry . . . .

But in connection with the whole year, the word "sorry" really only comes into play in this respect --I'm sorry the year is over. Well, kind of sorry.

I'll miss encountering the blazing issues of storage regulations and Zaneski (remember him) resigning, of calendar changes and what's going to happen to Carnegie and those adorable white footprints all over campus. (Perhaps someone was doing a bit of sole-searching . . . .)

I'll miss writing Tom Columns, perhaps almost as little as you'll miss reading it, and I'll miss seeing my friends down at the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

However, I won't miss running around on Mondays to find all those articles not handed in on Sunday night or (sorry, Cheryl) the sound of young, but heavy footsteps from the dance studio over the office.

But most of all, what I will miss most is dealing with the people I've become associated with this past year. It is this group that provided the real backbone and support for the Echo -- it is because of them, and at times in spite of me, that the paper graced your mailboxes on Thursday mornings.

There are many people to be thanked for their contributions to the Echo this past year -- many people who do work essential to production, yet they don't get much recognition:

Linda Wiley -- who read copy every Sunday night (almost) and who helped to make up headlines that were more interesting than "Men's Tennis Results" or "MACCO Plays Tonight".

Barb Booker -- who was savior-figure during Tuesday night layout sessions, when nine times out of ten the only "dummy" she had to work with was me.

Shelley Kingsbury -- who was our sole photographer Fall and Winter terms and who never had a "negative" attitude about it (At least that I noticed.) Thanks for your patience.

Carol Cooper -- who was able to type with more fingers than my "three fingered method."

Drs. Fowler and Blair -- who advised me in quite a few decisions -- some big, some not so big. Together, their help and presence was more of a comfort than they'll ever know. Also thanks to Dr. Fowler for reading

To Whom This May Concern:

Being students here at good 'ole MC for nearly two years (after some read this, it may end our college careers), we have found some very startling information. We would now like to pass it on to you.

In reading the Statement of Purpose of Maryville College, we have gotten the general idea that this college does not discriminate and is not prejudiced. WRONG!!!!! If you are not very active in extra-curricular activities at this college, you will not get anywhere because you are not an "outstanding" student.

Of course, there are exceptions to every rule, in this case, two exceptions: (a) if you are very rich, or (b) if you have possible "strings" to pull. If neither applies, then there is always the possibility of your becoming a "brown-noser."

If any of the above apply to you, then you have got it made. If not, your stay here at MC may be a hard one. And in Anderson Hall they wonder why they cannot get students to return once again each term. . . . .

Caroline Reed
Sarah DeLoach

P.S. It's not what you can do, or what you know, but indeed WHO you know.

"And so it shall come to pass . ."

Almost 10 months ago I was shaking in my boots at accepting the dubious honor of heading the "project" called Student Activities at MC. And now as May 29 comes, I have survived Homecoming, trying to think of dance themes and can strike to fond memories a Formal and MC's first Oink 'n Ale --

As some know, I was presented with roses at the Formal for my efforts. But my efforts could have only become realities with my Committee constantly behind or next to me. With Vanessa Logan chairing the Committee through Homecoming and Dave Kibben getting us through Winter and Spring, the unsung workers behind the Committee: Tommy Brown, Bett Schuster, Tammy Lytle, Cath Angell, Greg Tabeek, Bar Stansbury, Betsy Pankey, Nadir Robinson, and Glen Stout ove came many obstacles in a attempt to present the studen with a year of creativity an enjoyment.

The Committee's auxilaries o organization participation, ind vidual expertise, and faculty staff support are acknowledge and greatly thanked for the assistance.

I most sincerely thank m committee and hope the student of MC have enjoyed participatin this year and will continue t next year --

ANTI–CARTER POLITICAL CARTOON

Here, for the first time in the history of Echo Vol. 66, is an anti-Carter political cartoon.

This cartoon is published in this issue to dispell rumors that the Echo is editorially biased against President Reagan and his Administration. (That the man has a few drawers missing from his Cabinet is another matter. . . . . .)

Savor this sketched satire friends -- it's liable to be the last anti-Jimmy propaganda you'll see. . . .

27 incoming freshmen have been selected as Presidential Scholars beginning in the fall of the '81-'82 academic year.

The awards range from honorary to full tuition scholarships based solely on academic performance. In order for the scholarship to be renewed, Presidential Scholars must maintain at least a 3.0 grade point average during their college careers.

All of the 27 had GPAs of at least 3.74 in high school and were in the top six percent of their graduating classes. Four valedictorians are included in the group.

The median scores on the SAT were 546 verbal and 551 math. The median composite score on the ACT was 25.

Ten of the 27 new Presidential Scholars are from Tennessee, six from Florida, and the remaining 11 from New Jersey, Georgia, Ohio, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Texas, and Virginia.

all the galley proofs (when we got them to her) each week.

There are also people not on the staff who proved to be absolutely vital, and positively a pleasure to be associated with:

Maggie Knight -- who typeset the paper since Christmas. Her help is greatly appreciated (even though there were times she wanted to "focus" her wrath on me, for good reason.) Also, thanks to Marsha Griffis for her help in this area.

The folks "down at the Times" -- specifically Glen "watch that last step" Orr, Fred Tipton, and Paul Bales, who were not only eager to help in production, but also provided friendly advice. To the rest of the gang -- thank you for being one of the nicest bunch of folks I've come across anywhere.

Of course, there's one more person to mention, my successor, Kathy Fitzell. Kathy really helped in layout this past year. She writes well, she's bright and she's got plenty of good ideas for next year's Echo -- and my support.

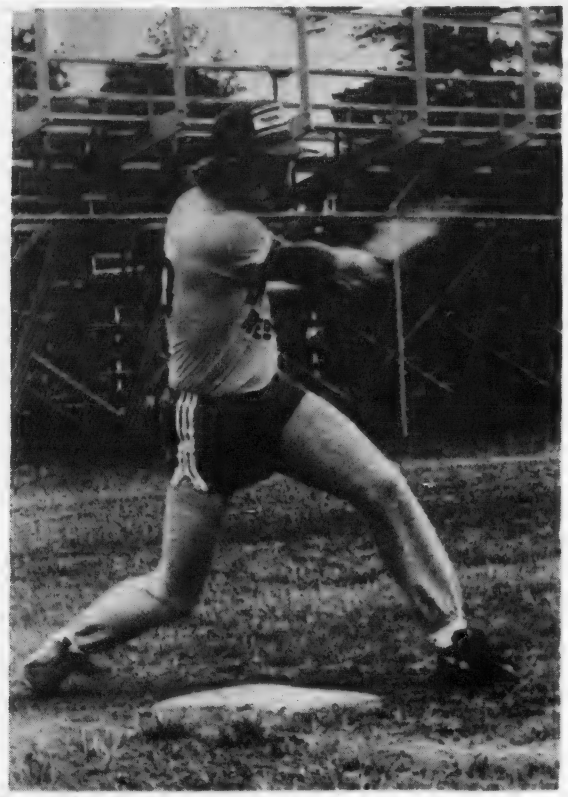
As I conclude this final epistle to the Maryvillites, I wish to thank you for your support, your criticism, your comments. They helped. It is my hope that I helped too. Ciao, friends. . . .

Editors named

by Janet Helwig

Congratulations to Kathy Fitzell, Bill Warren, and Sidney Bright, who were recently elected by the Publications Committee to serve as editors of the various Maryville College publications for the 1981-82 academic year.

Kathy Fitzell, a rising junior, will be editor of The Highland Echo next year. Kathy is an elementary education major from Hollywood, Florida.



Bill Warren, also a rising junior, will serve as editor of Impressions, the MC literary magazine. Bill is from Columbus, Ohio, and is an English major with strong interest in creative writing.

Elected to be the 1981-82 Chilhowean editor is Sidney Bright, who will be a senior next fall. Sidney, who is from Churchill, Tennessee, is pursuing a double major in math and business. Elected to serve as assistant editor of the Chilhowean is Jane Lindsay, who will then assume the editorship for the academic year 1982-83. Sarah Jane, who is a rising sophomore from Chattanooga, Tennessee, is a political science major.

Ben Stabley takes a hard cut for Emotional Rescue in their game against the Trojans last Friday. The Emotionals lost the hard fought battle 24-5.

Intramural finals exciting

It took 2 days, 3 games, and then extra innings before the Excitable Boys declared themselves number 1 in softball for 1981. They defeated the strong finishing Herpes by the score of 8-6 in 8 innings.

The Herpes started out the play-offs on the right foot as they defeated Panda Thigh by a score of 12-5. Panda Thigh took a quick 5-0 lead but could not manage to cross the plate again the entire game.

What was thought to be a closer game was not to be as another quarter-final game saw the Sultans advancing to the semi-finals by defeating the Burners, 14-9. Other quarter-final action saw the Excitable Boys destroy the Mean Machine, 18-1, and the biggest upset of the tournament saw the Trojans defeat the number 1 team in the league, the Basketball Team, by the score of 7-3.

In the semi-finals, the Herpes had no trouble advancing as they defeated the Trojans 14-3; the other semi-final game saw the Excitable Boys defeat the Sultans by the score of 19-11.

This brought the finals down to the Herpes and the Excitable Boys. The regular season scores between these two teams may have made the finals look hopeless – the Excitables defeated the Herpes 21-0 and 24-1. But this was not the case as the Herpes took the first game of the best of 3 series by the score of 9-7.

Needing only 1 game to wrap it up, the Herpes led in the second game 8-3 until the Excitable Boys erupted for 5 runs in the fifth inning and 3 runs in the seventh, while holding the Herpes scoreless to tie the series up 1-1 with a final score of 12-8.

The championship game had the Excitables jumping out to a quick 5-0 lead but the Herpes kept chopping away, and by the top of the fifth inning, had taken a 6-5 lead.

Up stepped Excitables' Steve Arnold, who led off the inning with a triple and was later knocked in by Keith Martin, to tie the score at 6-6.

That was all they could get and now again the Herpes had their chance, needing only 1 run to win. This was not to be as the Excitable defense held and sent the game into extra innings.

Randy Shackleford led off with a single for the Excitable Boys, and then later scored on a line drive double by Dave Kibben. Jim Engel then scored Kibben on a drive to right field and the Excitables led 8-6. This was all they could score, but all that they'd need as they held the Herpes scoreless with two men on base and took the victory, 8-6.

Winning pitcher Steve Arnold finished the season at 16-3, including 6 shoutouts and a one-hitter. He credits this to the defense of his "behind the back boys."

Congratulations go to all the Excitable Boys: John Morton, John McPhearson, Keith Martin, Greg Tabeek, Allen Evitts, Randy Shackleford, Dave Kibben, Jim Engel, Jim Pearce, Walt Montgomery, Frank Fiore, Andy Limone, and Bill Goetsch.

Also, congratulations are to be extended to Rich Suttle, Jill Flickenger, and Sandy Rabun for their fine job working with the intramural program this spring.

Maryville welcomes new faces

Mr. Kent Skinner

Trevor, Emily and Pam Nelson with Andy and Claire Roberts

Mr. Ernest Goss

Staff

By Ed Brewer

Along with the new students, some new staff members also moved into the freshmen dorms. Trevor and Pam Nelson are the new resident directors in Copeland Hall, and Claire and Andy Roberts will be holding down the fort at Davis Hall.

Trevor was born in Preston Lancashier England. He graduated from Lancashier University with a bachelor of education in geography and secondary education. He recieved his Mat. at Saginah Valley State College in Michigan. Trevor has done some teaching in England and in Michigan.

Pam graduated from Delta College with an associate degree and then transferred to Michigan State to major in clothing transferring to U.T. to finish her degree.

In addition to being dorm parents, Pam and Trevor have the responsibility of being parents to their little girl, Emily, who is four years old.

Claire is a graduate of U.T. She majored in religious studies and minored in French. Andy came to Maryville College as a freshman in 1978. After studying at U.T. for about a year-and-a-half, he has come back to Maryville as a junior majoring in psychology. Claire and Andy are both from Knoxville.

In addition to being new staff members, Claire and Andy are newlyweds, having only been married for about a month.

Pam and Trevor are enjoying thier new job. They like the feeling of intimacy of the small campus – everyone knows each other. It is exciting to them.

Claire loves the job. She likes being able to spend so much time with the students, and she wants to get to know them all.

They all feel that one of their biggest responsibilities is to try to build a sense of unity with the freshman class through their jobs as resident directors.

Faculty

By Mark Beyer

The 1981-82 edition of the MC faculty includes three new chapters. The three newest additions to the MC faculty are Kent Skinner in Fine Arts, Dr. Pollard in English, and Ernie Goss in Business/Economics.

Kent Skinner comes to Maryville from Garden City, Kansas where he was Conductor of the Concert Choir and Opera at Garden City Community College. His credentials include a Bachelors degree from the University of Northern Colorado as well as a Masters in Music-Conducting. He holds a second Masters in Music-Voice from the University of Texas, Austin. He has performed professionally as the lead in the musical comedy "Candide" and performed the part of Henrik in the musical comedy "A Little Night Music".

Mr. Skinner intends to continue touring with the MC Concert Choir, which he is now directing, and hopes to have an Opera Workshop. His duties include conducting the choir, teaching voice and the Spring Opera. He served a one-year graduate assistantship at the University of Colorado prior to his position at Garden City.

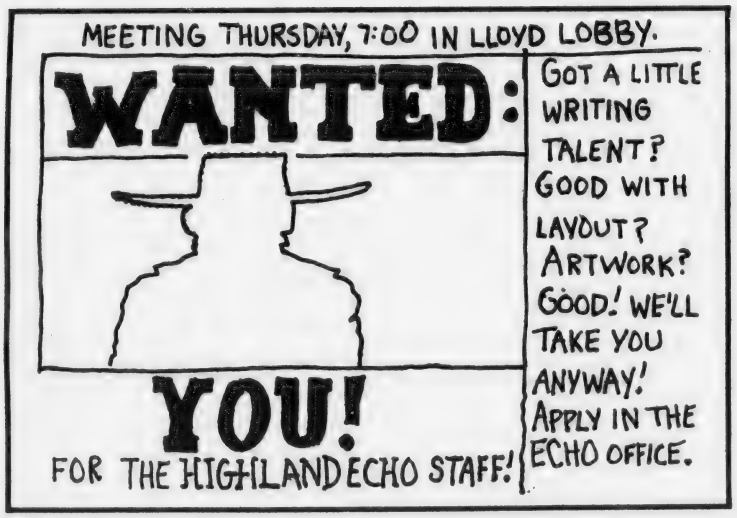
Dr. Pollard is the addition to the MC English department. He holds a Bachelors from Centre College in English. His graduate degrees include two Masters from Duke, one in Medieval Church History and Theology, the other in English. Dr. Pollard received his Doctorate from Duke University in Middle English. He comes to us from Belmont College, Nashville where he taught courses in Chaucer, Religion and Literature of the Middle Ages and Shakespeare among others in British Literature.

Dr. Pollard came to MC because he likes the similarity to his alma mater, Centre College, both schools having a strict liberal arts program. He was also attracted by MC's reputation in graduate school circles. His hopes for Maryville are two-fold; first, he would like to see the foreign language major return to its former prominence and second, he expresses the hope that Maryville's programs do not become over-specialized.

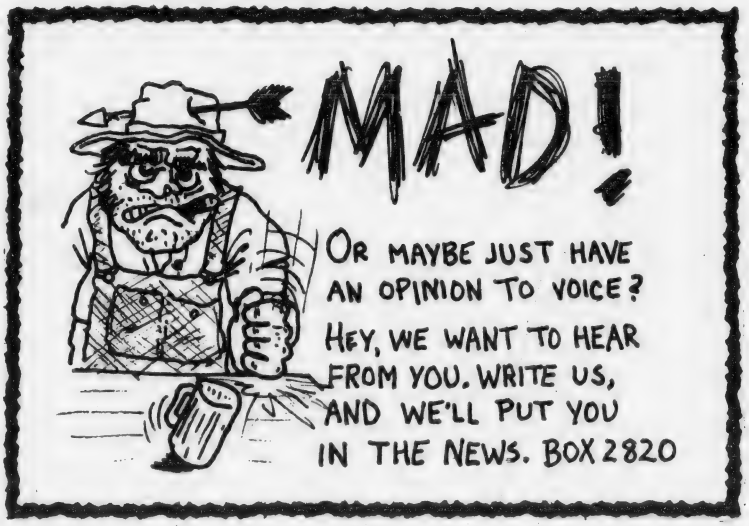
was unavailable for photographing.

The third addition to the MC faculty for 1981-82 is Mr. Ernie Goss. Mr. Goss holds two degrees, a Bachelors from the University of Florida and a Masters from Georgia State, Atlanta. He did additional graduate study at the University of Minnesota and is presently working on a Doctorate at UT.

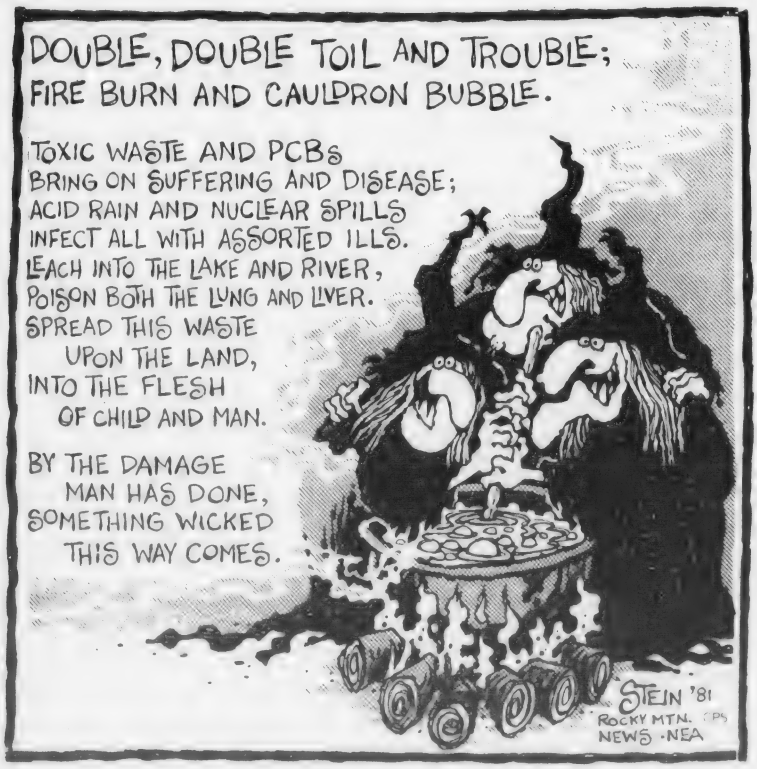
Mr. Goss came to Maryville because he was attracted to the small liberal arts college atmosphere present here. He believes there is a concerted effort on the part of the faculty and the administration to offer a quality education. He stated that he would like to offer a seminar in labor economics theory and that he would like to see direct student research in labor economics.



Maryville College is Maryville College. That may seem to be a rather obvious and trite statement, and it is until it is given some meaning. Likewise, the buildings and acreage that make up the college have little significance when they stand alone. The life of this institution comes solely from the people who inhabit it, and there are as many concepts of Maryville College as there are students, faculty, and staff. These varied ideas also mesh to form one impression held by onlookers from the "outside world".



The year is just beginning and as with every new year the image of Maryville College will be altered either slightly or dramatically as the year progresses. This too will stem solely from the people at MC.



For the freshmen who have been oriented, who have resigned themselves to the fact that the sidewalks never lead where they want to go, and who have memorized and destroyed their secret number from the bank, the time has come for them to begin developing what will be their mark on our world. Although the ranks of the upperclass have dwindled a bit, most of us have returned to continue what we left behind last year and also to the new experiences we have come to expect from life at Maryville College.

Since the people are Maryville College, it is crucial for all of us to be concerned and get involved—not only in the serious issues which arise but also in the social events which take place. If the dance held last Saturday night was any indication, I would say we are off to a good start.

The importance of our forming an idea of who we are during our years at MC will become extremely evident when we finally take our place in the "real world". I am sure that the seniors who have graduated are finding this to be true. This process does not always depend on deep concentration into the "meaning of life", instead it is a subtle growth that increases with each class, each game, and each trip to the mountains or Knoxville. This is why it is so vital to make each year the best that it can be. So, everyone, take everything Maryville has to offer and have a great year!

Freshmen gather at Walden Creek for relaxation at the end of orientation week.

Frosh Week - full & fun

By Stacy Medlin

Orientation was a week of construction for the beginning of a new year. Preparing for classes consisted of tests and writings that many were amazed at, considering studying at college was one of the fewest things on their minds. As for the deciding upon friends, this was a big test and still, even though many of us are already coupled together or off with our "flow", throughout the year a learning process will take place. Not only will we learn about the ones we now consider our future "friends", but also about ourselves. We will explore new areas of our lives and there will be times of confusion, depression, but best of all, we will receive times of satisfaction. We will be faced with things beyond our understanding, but all this is part of the beginning.

Exploring the new atmosphere and adjusting to the surrondings is probably the most difficult task. Many of us are miles away from home and have entered into an environment that is completely alienated to us. We will have to adjust and readjust to the new area of life.

All of these things are just a small summary of what college is and this is why the participation and organization of a week of orientation is valuable. Although we find little if any significance in orientation it holds a meaningful value toward the beginning, the end, and during the first year of college. Orientation allows us to think, exam, and actually lay out our future as students a Maryville College.

Students program new year

By Allison Perry

Adios to Student Activities and get ready for The Student Programming Committee with its plans for a great year of activities. Leading the entourage is Advisor Sharon Crane, resident dorm mother of Lloyd Hall. Sharon has a great deal of experience in Maryville College's activities and plans a dynamic season of events.

Aiding her in the Student Programming Committee is Betty Schuster, Chairman; Tommy Brown holds the title of Chairman in Training.

The Committee anticipates a year filled with cooperation and sponsorship from our various MC organizations. A group of these organizations' presidents will meet regularly with The Student Programming Committee in order to share ideas and choose activities. Representatives from each dorm are to be chosen, and any student interested in participating in The Student Programming Committee should contact one of the three executive members listed above.

Fresh new ideas and suggestions are anticipated and appreciated from individuals throughout campus. It is going to be a great year so get up, get involved and have a little fun with MC's Student Programming Committee.

The Fighting Scots begin in style

By Steve Arnold

It didn't take long for the '81 Scots to give first year head coach Art Ogden his first victory as they rolled over Baptist University 54-6. Don't feel sorry for Baptist. It could have been worse seeing how the score was 54-0 in only the third quarter. And all that yardage the Scots gained could have put them halfway to Knoxville. MC rushed for 15 first downs and passed for seven more racking up 456 total yards. Sophomore backup running back, Glen Katz, led the attack with 83 yards on 12 carries and picked up 24 more on pass receptions. Freshman quarterback Pat O'Brien hit 11 of 16 passes for 147 yards and 2 touchdowns and also rushed for 35 yards. Mike Evangelisti rushed for 73 yards on 11 carries before being injured. Before leaving for Hampden-Sydney The Echo interviewed Coach Ogden about the '81 season.

In asking Coach what he foresaw for the season, part of his reply was "a tough schedule with a very young team loaded with talent. . . . and with so many 'if's' we plan to take each game by itself. One of the most positive things about this team is their attitude and along with their character and their scholar status the college community I predict can and will be proud of them." Asked how an easy victory like Baptist helps or hurts in preparing for the next opponent he replied: "it helps in giving our younger players confidence and hurts due to the fact that we are not able to leave our front line people in for a long period. Also, it is difficult to assess that kind of victory."

How pleased was Coach with the pre-season camp? "Very pleased for three reasons: the upperclassmen emerged as solid leaders, we (the coaches) had an opportunity to introduce our systems of offense and defense, and the true team concept emerged in pre-season camp." Was Coach pleased with the recruiting program? "Yes, we were very pleased uh, yes, very, very pleased. We brought in 62 freshmen and transfers and they all came with high academic aspirations and solid credentials." Coach praised the administration, faculty, and townspeople for their concern in the recruitement program. As for the outcome for the Scots in the ODAC Coach replied that "right now it's up in the air. With such a young but talented team you can just never tell. We could surprise everyone with anything. Of course winning the ODAC is one of our goals but at the same time we will try to lay a solid foundation and see what the future brings."

Well so far the future looks pretty bright. The Scots remain undefeated after defeating Hampden-Sydney last Saturday, 35-21. Freshman quarterback Pat Moyer threw 4 touchdowns as the Scots had to come from behind twice to take the victory. The Scots again used up four football fields as they gained a total of 427 yards, 324 of which were through the air. Scoring for the Scots was Mike Scotti on a 55 yard play, Gene Wheatley on a 65 yard play, Don Sawyer on a 7 yard pass play, and Mike Evangelisti on a 24 yard pass play all coming from Moyer. O'Brien hit Mark Araujo on a 46 yard strike for the Scots first score. Roaming the field on defense for the Scots was Ed Belfi as he had 14 unassisted tackles and one interception. Back the Scots Saturday as they play here at home against Bridgewater.

Soccer kicks off

By Mike Weiss

Soccer season opened last Saturday, as the Generals of Washington and Lee University came to Maryville and handed the Scots a 4-0 loss in their first match of Old Dominion Athletic Conference competition.

Play was hard-fought and physical throughout, but the more experienced and freely substituting Washington and Lee side kept continuous pressure on MC goalkeeper Eric Deziel, striking for two scores in the first half. The Scots missed chances to even the match as General netminder Kirk Mancer thwarted shots by striker Ken Davidson and midfielder Fernando Delfino.

MC did not attack effectively in the second half, but Washington and Lee found the net twice more, ending the day's scoring. The most consistent performer for the Scots was freshman sweeper-back John Beaupre, who went the full 90 minutes for Maryville. Delfino and his brother Eddie made several dazzling plays in the midfield.

Despite the opening loss to last year's ODAC runner's up, this promises to be an exciting soccer Autumn in Maryville. New coach Michael Sabatelle has brought in several new faces (including some from far-away places) to bolster the Scots' lineup. Four freshman and two transfers have joined returning outstanding performers; Davidson, defender Glen Stout, and midfielder Greg Hosler in the MC starting eleven. Freshman keeper Deziel hails from Montreal, Canada. His backup on Saturday, Carlos Avogaro also a freshman, is a native of Venezuela. The talented Delfino brothers come to MC from Knoxville, but their father starred in the soccer leagues of that same South American country. Fernando was a key performer for the U.T. soccer club last year, while Eddie kicked footballs for Carson-Newman. Three other freshman who started Saturday are Beaupre, of Naples, Florida, wingers Jeff Denson of Cumberland, Maine, and Chris Laisy from Shaker Heights, Ohio.

This is without a doubt the most talented team ever fielded at MC, but the Scots face a very tough schedule that lists four more matches in the ODAC, a top-notch soccer conference, including last year's champion and national powerhouse Lynchburg College.

V-ballers net win

Senior Sandy Rabun serves up the first win of the season.

By Robin Rimmer

The Lady Scots' volleyball team opened their 1981 season this past weekend. The Lady Scots defeated Middle Tennessee State University, a division I school, by scores of 17-15, 15-7, and 18-16 in their first match of the season.

The 1981 season promises to be an exciting one for this year's squad. The squad consists of six returning players, two freshmen, and a transfer student. Senior, Donna Owens was elected Captain by her teammates for the 1981 season.

The Lady Scots will be participating in several invitational tournaments during the season, as well as hosting the Maryville Invitational Tournament held here at MC, Sept. 25-26. The Lady Scots have won state and regional titles and participated in the National Volleyball Tournament for the past two years. This year the Lady Scots will host the NCAA Division III National Tournament.

Coach Sharon Brown and the Lady Scots are very enthusiastic and excited about their season.

MC Undergoes Self Study Program

By Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Maryville College launched its once-every-ten-years Self-Study on September 1. This intensive eighteen-month examination of every aspect of the College will precede a visit early in 1983 by a committee of the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges. On the basis of the validity of the Self-Study report and the findings of the visiting committee, accreditation may be renewed, denied, or temporarily withheld.

Heading the MC efforts are Dr. Elizabeth T. Fowler, Director/Editor, and Dr. Jerry Waters, Chairman of the Steering Committee. Every member of the faculty (except those new this year) and many of the administration and staff are involved on committees organized according to standards set up by SACS.

This Self-Study is being undertaken not only to prepare for the SACS accreditation review but also for the purpose of integrating the many isolated decisions on policy, program, and personnel into a long-range plan "toward Century III." Significant changes have taken place during the last decade, and such a study will give faculty and staff and students an opportunity to evaluate what is being done and how well the stated purpose of MC is being fulfilled.

Interviews, documents, records, questionnaires, and letters will all be used to gather data for the report. Students, alumni, and directors will provide ideas, opinions, and recommendations at various stages of the Self-Study process.

A full description of the goals and procedures of the Self-Study will be made on Wednesday, October7, at the B-hour in FAC Lounge. Any students desiring to serve on one of the committees will be able at that time to indicate their preference and contact the chairperson of the selected committee: Purpose, Dr. Fowler; Organization and Administration, Mrs. Exie Brennan; Educational Program, Dr. Harry Howard; Financial Resources, Dr. Sid Downey; Faculty and Research, Mrs. Edith Largen; Library, Arthur S. Bushing; Student Development Services, Dr. Robert Ramger; Physical Resources, Victor Schoen; and Special Activities, Dr. Carolyn Blair.

Other committee members include Keith Bruckner, David Cooper, Mrs. Vera Gilmore, Art Ogden, Mrs. Sallie Schoen, and Mrs. Irma Young, Purpose; Dr. Dean Boldon, Archie Ellis, David Irwin, Dr. Arda Walker, Organization and Administration; Dr. Charlotte Beck, Dr. Dr. Jim Bloy, Dr. Robert Naylor, Dr. John Nichols, Larry West, and Dr. Al Perkins, Educational Program; Dr. Bill Dent, Dr. Russell Parker, and Mrs. Linda Stephens, Financial Resources; Dr. Robert Bonham, Dr. David Cartlidge, Dr. Jim Johnston, Dr. Al Perkins, and Dr. Marilyn Pollio, Faculty and Research; Mrs. Thelma Bianco, Dr. Young-Bae Kim, Dr. Marjorie Kratz, Dr. Judith Sumner, Mrs. Choi Park, Library; Ms. Sharon Brown, Dr. John Hardwig, Dr. Wallace Lewis, Gary Mowl, Bill Strickland, Student Development Services; Carol Roberts, Margaret Sherer, Bill Strickland, Don Thomas, Dr. Bob Yager, and Bill Slater, Physical Resources; S.M. Some Must Say Cheese - Again

By Sydney Bright

YOUR ATTENTION PLEASE!! Due to a camera malfunction, most underclassmen will have to have their pictures retaken, Graham's Studio notified the Yearbook Staff late last week of the camera problem. They were very sorry that they had to inform the Yearbook Staff of the problem - but everyone can make a mistake.

So, the Yearbook Staff is asking for the cooperation of all underclassmen. If your picture has to be retaken, you will receive a notice in your post office box. So please take a few minutes from your busy day to help get the problem solved.

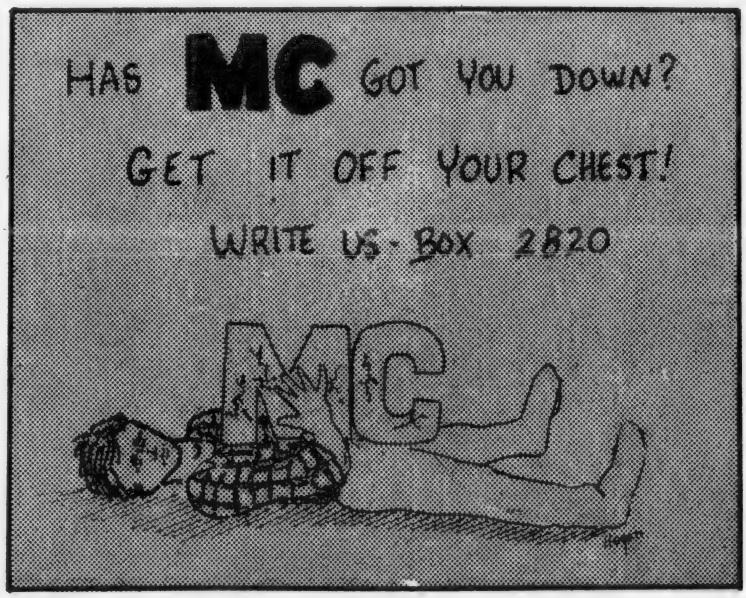
In short, the Yearbook Staff is asking that all underclassmen who previousely had their picture taken to cooperate and have it retaken at the time and place listed below. Also, any other underclassman who did not have their picture taken, but would like to do so, may also have their picture taken at this time. It is the goal of the Yearbook Staff to have everyone pictured in this year's Yearbook. It doesn't cost you anything to have you picture made, so why don't you help the Yearbook Staff reach their goal. Remember, It's free!

All pictures will be taken in Pearson's Lobby on Monday and Tuesday (October 4 and 5). Monday, pictures will be taken from 3:00 to 9:00 p.m. It is only underclassmen who have to be retaken. There wasn't any problems with the Senior pictures.

The Yearbook Staff is hoping for you cooperation. So, UNDERCLASSMEN, show everyone that you are understanding and go have your picture retaken.

Editorials

There is an enemy among us. Its modus operendi is familiar to all. It attacks at regular intervals and affects the nervous system of every person who encounters it. It is a relentless aggressor possessing many members which have invaded every building of this campus. And yet no attempt has been made to stop it or to even reduce its effects. All we have heard are the words, it's no worse than last year. Somehow this defense does not cheer the sufferers.



As a result, matters have been taken into the hands of usually mild-mannered persons driven to drastic action. The beast has been rendered incapable of harm in Sutton, and in Thaw Hall a search party has been given the instructions to seek out the menace and report its whereabouts at once. Anderson Hall, likewise is forming a team to further rid the college of this pollution.

And what is this enemy which seems to threaten our very sanity? It is not a new strain of germ, nor is it a chemical developed for combat. In fact, if employed properly, it can be a very useful commodity. The name which man has bestowed upon this creature is "bell".

In most school settings, the bell is a device for calling students to class and interrupting a professor in mid-lecture to release students from their desks. At Maryville this year, however, the bell serves only to annoy. This is especially true for those C-hours which begin at 11:00. The class is listening intently to every word the instructor is saying, when he is rudely interrupted by the droning which seems to continue endlessly. This break in concentration is not fair to the students or the professors, not to mention all of our ears.

If there were some vital necessity for the bell to be as loud and as long as it is, there would be more understanding, but I can truthfully find no such necessity. I am sure that most of the students and faculty sincerely wish that the keeper of the bells would shorten the duration and lower the volume. This does not seem to be much to ask. After all, the bell would still be able to perform the task for which it was designed. If something is not done, I'm afraid the only sounds we will be hearing are the sounds of silence.

Tis the season for CIV

By Allison Perry

Beginning the upcoming season of CIV's is John Kolisch, Mentalist and Hypnotist, on Wednesday, September 30th at 9:20 AM in the Music Hall.

Recently featured on the CBS television special "Body Human," Kolisch has mesmerized audiences with his unique demonstration of ESP and his powers of hypnotism. Blending wit and sophisticated humor, he involves his viewers on a journey through psychic phenomena.

At Maryville, Kolisch utilizes at least 20 volunteers from the audience to join him on stage and be hypnotized. He places the volunteers under his spell in less than 10 seconds and has them reveal interesting information about themselves, while at all times Kolisch respects their privacy and dignity

Kolisch became interested in the psycho-phenomena of hypnosis and ESP while a student of psychology the University of Vienna. For more than 25 years he has been a lecturer, entertainer, consultant and hypnosis instructor at colleges, conventions, night clubs and on television.

What can college students do to help people in the Appalachian area? Michael Clark from a private organization called Highlander Center will be in the Music Hall on Wednesday, October 14th at 9:20 AM to answer this question and discuss the social and economic developement of this communtiy.

CIV presents Van Metre School of Dance on the following Wednesday at 9:20 AM in MC's Wilson Chapel. Besides a presentation of the art of dance, Van Metre's will familiarize students with the opportunities available to them through the dance program at MC.

Charles "Chili" Dean, newly appointed Chairman of the Board of Directors of our Tennessee Valley Authority, will address students and the community on the issue of energy. This CIV presentation is on Wednesday, October 28th at 9:20 AM in the Music Hall.

The combined efforts of MC's CIV and The Chilhowee Club bring Mary Elizabeth Quinn to the Music Hall on November 3rd at 9:20 AM. Ms. Quinn is Director of Women's Affairs for President Reagan and a one time resident of Concord, Tennessee.

On November 10th, Peter Rejte, cellist and James Benn, pianist will perform in the Music Hall at 8:15 PM. Peter Rejte is artist-in-resident at the University of California-Northridge and has made numerous appearances with orchestras and symphonies around the world.

"Energy Research and National Goals" is the topic of Jeff Christian from Oak Ridge National Laboratories on November 18th. This CIV presentation will be on a Wednesday at 9:20 AM in the Music Hall.

The public is invited to attend CIV programs at the College with no admission charged.

There will be a presentation to students explaining Maryville College's self-study on October 7th at 9:20 AM in the Fine Arts Center lounge. There is no CIV credit for this program, but interested students are encouraged to attend.

Fayerweather Friend

By Traci Fraser

Have you been called by the deans, but found that their office in Anderson Hall is vacant? Was your first trip to the Post Office like a treasure hunt? If so, then you are familiar with some of the changes on campus that were made this summer.

In an effort to consolidate student needs, the Post Office and Student Affairs Office were moved to Fayerweather Hall. Student Affairs is now located in the old Career Planning and Placement office. CPP has moved upstairs to the second floor and occupies the old art studios, which were moved to the Fine Arts Center. The Post Office has moved in between the Student Center and Student Affairs Office.

Director of Student Programming Sharon Crane cited the need to centralize offices dealing with student problems as the purpose behind the moves. "We wanted to create an area of traffic, making Fayerweather the hub of activity." she explained. "We want to make the whole building a student place." She also commented that she and Deans Richardson and Strickland were very pleased with all the moves. Future changes for Fayerweather include making offices for the Student Coordinator and Student Programming Director, renovations to the Echo and Chilhowean offices, and a game room.

The Old Post office will eventually become the center for Campus Ministry. It will be a small chapel for vespers and quiet meditation. It will also house the Chaplain's office, making the Chaplain more accessible to students.

No major renovations are expected this term, but will probably be left until next summer.

Striding For Positive Living

By Mary Hughes

The Foothill Striders, an outgrowth of the Institute for Positive Living, has fifteen members of all ages who are ready to walk and run their way to good health. Leslie Nier and Bruce Guillaume lead the new orgainzation. Once a month the group assembles to run and walk a trail; they have conquered the Cades Cove loop, and plan to enter local races beginning this fall.

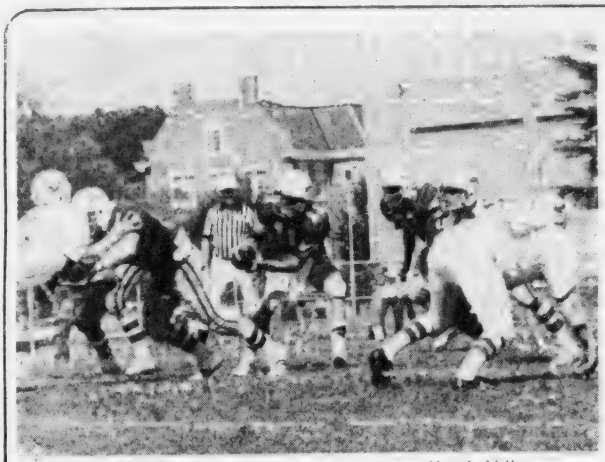
Part of the educational health plan includes guest speakers who will talk about women in running and coping with stress. Picnics and t-shirts are also part of the agenda. On Halloween the Foothill Striders will manage the Pumpkin Pageant Road Race in Springbrook. They hope to sponsor another race next spring.

The new organization welcomes college students; for further information contact Leslie Nier or Bruce Guillaume.

The Fighting Scots win one-sider

by Steve Arnold

There may be a new course offered Winter Term taught by the Scots defense entitled, "How to Build A Human Brick Wall 101." An excellent Scots defensive performance did not allow Bridgewater to cross the 50 yd. line until the 3rd period, and even that was aided by a penalty. Up until that point the closest BW got to the endzone was during pre-game warm-ups. BW, unable to go over, around or through the Scots defense had poor field position the whole game, which made it about as possible to score as it is to go to Maryville College paying only $3.99 for tuition.



On the other hand MC's offense had another par performance also. The stat keepers have already used up one notebook recording all the yardage and this game was no exception as an offensive explosion resulted in 621 total yds. and a 40-2 Scot victory.

MC's scoring didn't take long to get started as Mike Surrency returned a punt 74 yds. early in the first period for a TD; the point after failed and the Scots led 6-0. It wasn't until the 2nd period that the fuse was really lit as the Scots exploded for 3 TDs. Glen Katz on a 1 yd. run, O'Brien to Wheatley for 46 yds. and O'Brien to Scorn for 14 yds. All point afters failed and the Scots led 24-0 and took that lead into the locker room at halftime.

The 3rd period saw Jeff Carbonneal intercept his 3rd pass in three games that gave the Scots the ball on the 50 yd. line. The Scots then had to settle for an O'Donnell 25 yd. field goal for a 27-0 lead. Later in the 3rd period McQuade intercepted a pass for MC and the Scots again marched down the field for another scoring opportunity set up by a pass to Arzuji on the 1 yd. line. Evangelisti then bulled over from 1 yd. out, the point after was good and the Scots led 34-0.

In the 4th period BW managed to get to the 30 yd. line but Ainsworth stopped that drive with another MC interception. BW did manage to get on the board with a safety as they blocked an MC punt out of the endzone giving them 2 points. MC finished off their scoring on a 78 yd. TD pass play from Moyer to Scotti; the point after failed and the Scots took the victory 40-2.

Asking Coach Ogden about the individual performances he replied " . . . . very hard to point out singles. They all played excellent and we are very proud of them." Coach did mention Donnie Sawyer having his best performance this year before being injured, Gene Wheatley receiving 4 passes for 118 yds. and 1 TD, Scorn receiving 5 passes for 142 yds. and 2 TDs, and the defensive secondary for their finest performance all year. On defense, roaming the field for the Scots was Ed Belfi and Alex Albert having 15 and 14 tackles respectively. The Scots travel to Virginia Saturday to face the wasps of Emory and Henry in quest for their 4th straight victory.

Maryville QB springs into action in another offensive blitz.

Soccer Shows Potential

The Lady Scots' Soccer Club opened their home season last Sunday with a 5-0 loss to Vanderbilt University. The final score, however, is not a true indication of how the Lady Scots played. They hustled and gave 100%, but just couldn't generate a successful offensive attack against the more experienced Vandy team. The MC offense managed five shots on goal, two of them from a very spirited play by Mary Hughes. Aggressive as these shots were, the seasoned Vanderbilt defense thwarted every attempt.

A bright spot for MC was the goalkeeping of Laura Hart. She fought off ten Vandy shots in the first half and matched that amount in the second half. She displayed considerable natural ability, and is well on her way to becoming an excellent goalkeeper.

The Lady Scots will be back in action next Sunday as they travel to Atlanta to take on Georgia Tech.

Ladies do it again

By Robin Rimmer

In an exciting two day tournament, the Lady Scots volleyball team once again upheld their winning tradition. For the third straight year, the Lady Scots displayed their teamwork and skilled ability to add yet another possession to their trophy case by winning the Maryville College Invitational Tournament.

Out of five matches, the Lady Scots only gave up two games. through their impressive performances, MC defeated Emory and Henry, Bryan, Milligan, Carson-Newman, and North Georgia. On Saturday afternoon, the Lady Scots met Bryan College in the championship match. MC was the victor with scores of 15-10 and 15-11. Captain Donna Owens accepted the first place trophy with great excitement and pride.

Earlier in the week, the Lady Scots defeated the Lady Crusaders of Tennessee Temple by scores of 15-5, 15-12, and 15-10.

This weekend the Lady Scots will be traveling to Memphis to participate in the University of Tennessee Martin Invitational Tournament. Once again, the Lady Scots will face tough competition, but we're sure they will only improve their 8-0 record. Good luck Lady Scots!

Maryville To Change

By Allison Perry

Whining, wheezing coughing, and grinding – this will be heard constantly from the trucks shifting gears by our FAC if the proposed State highway, the infamous no. 73 Intracity Connector is accepted. Many of us have heard announcements and various discussion concerning the new highway proposal. Here are the facts of the matter.

The proposal is highly objectional to citizens of Maryville and members of Maryville College. Why?

To begin with, many funds for critcally needed services are being cut in order to enable the State and City to afford this project. Maryville is a town crowded with roads. This project will bring new alignments and intersections directly through town, besides the necessity of at least three new traffic signals.

North/south flow of traffic will be interrupted. This proposed highway will close many streets that connect public buildings. One of which being College St., a road designated for travel between downtown Maryville and Maryville College. Other closings include: McGhee, Lamar, Crawford, Kennedy, Circle Drive, Highland, Tedford, Gamble, and Cates.

Several prominent sites of Maryville will lose their easy accessibility. Included in these areas are: Fort Craig School, Heritage High School, Highland Presbyterian Church, First Christian Church, First Baptist Church, Downtown, Midland Center, Library, Court House, and Greenbelt City Park. Many people will be affected by this cut off to downtown banks, businesses, and churches. A pleasurable walk through Greenbelt Park will be highly unlikely with it sitting on a five-lane highway. Traffic jams will be continuous along the courthouse.

Children are often seen walking home from Fort-Craig School. Due to traffic congestion, walking home will become too dangerous in the direction of the College. The same problem of congestion will affect access to the hospital and Heritage High School at Jones and Washington.

Being an old historic town, Maryville will lose a great deal of the old part of town by being cut in half. Traffic, trucks, smog noise, pollution, and local congestion could make living in this area so undesirable that the restoration of old residential areas will probably cease, Maryville will become a maze of subdivisions and roads.

No plan has been developed by the State for handling traffic, nor have they done feasibility and environmental reports.

This proposal will put a stop to our ability to stroll downtown for shopping and banking. We will no longer see children playing or hear the birds and squirrels along the highway. These pleasures will be cancelled by dangerous road conditions, exhaust fumes, and noise. Noise pollution will have a different affect on the practice rooms in our Fine Arts Building.

This measure has been proposed as temporary; another by-pass will be built in a few years. The exsisting route being used is Church and Harper Streets with connectors to Morganton and Washington. Improvement of this exsisting route is considered to be a good feasible idea. Besides saving the state at least two million dollars, this route will suit the needs of tourists without splitting the town and interfering with traffic. Not closing and and relocating streets and allowing Church, Harper and Washington to become State maintenance would save the city expenses.

Public input and comments are critical in blocking this disruptive five-lane highway. On October 8, 1981, at 7:00 pm, there will be a Public Hearing where concerned students and citizens may voice their opinions. The hearing will be held at the Municipal Building on Broadway.

Solow solos as affiliate artist

By Jeff Hayes

The name is Solow, not Solo, though he does perform solo on the cello. And the show is not a performance, but an "informance." The man is Jeffrey Solow, the Maryville College Affiliate Artist for 1981-82. The informance is extraordinary.

"Affiliate Artists" is a non-profit organization founded in 1966 and based in New York City. The organization takes artists who rank in the top 5% of their performing fields and places them in residencies in 46 states, Canada, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia, enlisting corporations to sponsor the artist; the Alcoa Foundation is the local sponsor for the program.

Mr. Solow is an artist of the highest esteem, renowned in the United States as well as in Europe, Latin America, and China. He graduated Phi Beta Kappa from UCLA with a major in philosophy. He has performed as principle cellist for the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra and has per-

Help put halt to Maryville's five-lane menace

Is Maryville, both the College and the city destined to become a victim of five lanes of asphalt bulldozing their way through MC property, 22 homes, and 19 businesses? Is the body of the city of Maryville fated to be severed in half leaving the east section to deteriorate, while the west becomes virtually an extension of Alcoa? It is unless we do something about it now, Today.

Consider Maryville College with a five-lane highway running past its back door:

Practice rooms in the FAC will, instead of being filled with the harmonic sounds of a piano or a flute, be saturated with the noise of speeding cars and 18-wheelers shifting gears, because the highway will come within 167 feet of the back of the Fine Arts Center.

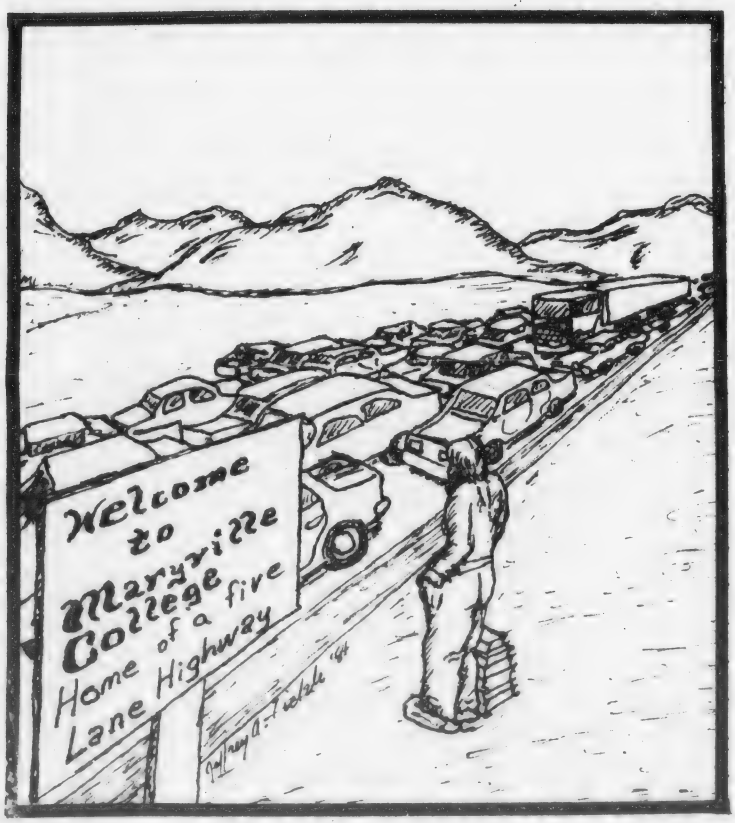
The air, which now carries the chirpings of birds and is fragrent with the aroma of many trees and plants, will be choked with exhaust fumes and car horns.

City-side dorm rooms will no longer be the quiet places of refuge that we study and sleep in.

And can you imagine walking back from A&P with two bags of groceries and trying to cross five-lanes of traffic? For all intense purposes there will be no more walking into town – especially those late-nite runs to Jolly Giant or to get a Pepperoni pizza.

Every aspect of the proposed highway is detrimental to Maryville, and the most ridiculous aspect of the whole situation is that the State admits that this is only a temporary measure until a "true" by-pass is constructed in a few years. Why, I must ask, should Maryville be subjected to such upheavel – parts of which it may never recover from - when this is a temporary course of action?

There is another alternative route which, besides meeting the exsisting need, would not interfere with city traffic or the character of downtown Maryville, and would save the State two million dollars. Even the Sate has admitted that this would be a good plan.



This affront to our home must be stopped! We need you to accomplish it. There are two things which you can do immediately.

The first is to attend the Public Hearing tonight in the Municipal Building at 7:00. Only a large turnout will impress upon the State the fact that we do not approve of their plan and do not want the highway affecting our campus and town the way that it will. A group of concerned students will be meeting in front of Pearsons tonight at 6:30 p.m. From there they will walk to the Municipal Building. If you disapprove, join their ranks.

The second thing that you can do is to write Governor Lamar Alexander, Governor's Office State Capital, Nashville, Tenn. 37219.

Remember, this will effect you!

Kolisch mesmerizes MC

By Nancy Rojas

I was there and I witnessed everything that went on, but the more I think about it I wonder if it really happened. On Wednesday, September 30, I attended a CIV presented by hynotyst John Kolish. For those who attended the memory will live a long time, but for those who didn't, I'd like to let you in on some of the laughs and details.

Mr. Kolish began the show by asking everyone to lean back and relax. He then gave a few simple suggestions and asked the audience to follow them. When this portion of the show was finished, he requested the fourteen or fifteen people who had genuinally experienced one of his suggestions to come up on the stage. The following hour/hour and a half was probably something most would have never invisioned happening on the Maryville campus.

I sat in my seat and watched as Donald Xiques entered a deep sleep on the stage. I learned that Keith Amos has a secret passion for tutti fruitty ice cream. The people under hypnosis did everything from screaming at the top of their lungs "Go fly a kite" to walking like a forty year old cowboy who rarely got off his horse. Not only was there entertainment provided, the show was also educational. The audience, with the help of interpreter Donald Xiques, learned what life on Venus was really like. Venution Larry Winter explained that Venution women have four breasts, that Venutions eat Uranus, and he even demonstrated the Venution mating call, which sounded something like a chicken having difficulty laying an egg .... "mmmmrraaaaak, mmmmrrrraaaaakkkk!

The people on stage also participated in an ice cream cone eating race for a grand prize of $1000. Rebecca Cole, (alias Barbara Streisand), lapped her way to become the victor. No one lost though, each person was awarded a hundred dollar bill and asked to place it anywhere they felt it would be safe from thieves. Keith Amos had to be the most unique. He ate his.

When the show ended with Larry's final words of "sock it to me, mama," just about everyone left laughing. Even in the best of shows, however, there is someone who finds disatisfaction and wishes to express his opinion. After most of the audience had cleared the room, one fellow did exactly this. John, (he asked us to call him by his first name), asked him to leave.

He later explained to a handful of interested listeners who remained after the show that he simply wanted the respect due to any speaker or guest appearing on a stage. He explained that his main purpose was not to philosophize or preach, but to entertain and help people. He tries to help people reach into the regions of the mind that are not easily accessed, (based on Freud's id, ego and super ego). He went on to say that hypnosis is not a method used to trick people into doing things that they would ordinarilly never do. According to him, people cannot be asked to do something that they are not capable of. For example, a person's I.Q. cannot be changed. He told us that he can never really predict what an individual will do on the stage while under hypnosis because of the unpredictanility of the person's nature. Some people contain inhibitions and characteristics different from the norm that are released during hynosis. Listening to the man talk after the show and watching him work on stage gave me and many others an experience that many of us would have never had.

Scots swat Wasps in stinger

By Steve Arnold

Maryville and E & H put together a mini-theatrical performance Sat. with E & H presenting Act I and the Scots coming back to present the encore and stealing the show 14-10. The crowd settled in as the Wasps started the show by scoring on their second possession with a 25 yd. field goal for a 3-0 lead. Shortly thereafter, E & H scored again on a 69 yd. pass play. With the added point after led the Scots 10-0. Even though this was still the first period this is about where intermission started. This may have been the first performance where the intermission was longer than the show. There was very little action that led to scoring as both offenses struggled and both defenses stood strong. The Scots defense twice held E & H at the 23 yd line and at the 6 and vice-versa as E&H held the Scots twice inside the 10 yd. line. On one of those drives, right before intermission, the Scots had a pass knocked down at the end-zone and went to the locker room down 10 pts. During this scoring dry spell may have been a good time to stick in the cartoons. Not the action you would expect from the nations leading Div. III passing team. But as the saying goes, the opera ain't over 'till the fat lady sings. With less than 10 minutes left the encore started, O'Brien led the Scots on a 75 yd. march and in the process hit Wheatley on the Wasps 38, then to Katz on the Wasps 15 then O'Brien himself took it to the 10 yd. line. Breaking the ice for the Scots was Angelus who then carried the ball three straight taking the last one 2 yds. for a Scot TD. O'Donnell added the pt. after and the Scots trailed 10-7. The defense then, as it has all year, built their wall again and not allowing the Wasps a first down, recieved the punt to start their final drive from their 43. Changing the program the Scots put the ball on the ground while passing only once, a 17 yd. pass to Fletcher, while moving the ball down to the 1 yd. line. From there Evangelisti performed his up and over dive (degree of difficulty 7.2) to put the Scots in front and with the pt. after the Scots led 14-10 with 1:38 left. Again the defense held aided by a McQuade interception to put the game on ice and the show ended with the Scots still to be beaten. Coach Ogden praised the team for their poise and the belief that they have in themselves. Ogden also praised the offensive line for playing the way the coaches have always thought they could play. As they opened up several holes in the final minutes to open up the running game. Heading that running game was Glen Katz with 102 yds. on 16 carries and leading the receiving part was Fletcher with 4 catches for 41 yds. and Wheatley 3 catches for 46 yds.

Soccer Club sets goals

By Jana Dalton

Someone who deserves a nice round of applause is the Lady Scots' Soccer Club. They have formed the first women's soccer team in the history of Maryville College athletics. This presents a point for women's progress. However, what is important is that sixteen determined ladies, with the primary leadership of Beth Neil, have organized and maintained an independent soccer club.

This means they are a separate segment from the school and thus not financially supported. If you have observed or even helped with the can collections, it serves as one of many fundraisers. The money goes for various expenses but mainly for the gas it takes for several cars to drive to the games.

Cathy Angell (who supplied the information for this article) was encouraged by the student cooperation with the cans and also the overall enthusiasm at practices and games.

As far as victories, the Lady Scots have not been too successful. The last Saturday in September involved rotating games in North Carolina in which they lost 7-0 to Warren-Wilson and 5-0 to Spartanburg. The following Sunday resulted in a loss to Vanderbilt 5-0. But fear not, the team is not even considering giving up. Cathy Angell is extremely optimistic. She stated the team realizes its inexperience and is working hard with mandatory daily practices, scrimages, and assistance from the men's soccer players.

This past Sunday they were beaten 5-0 by Georgia Tech, but only one point was scored in the last half.

Beth Neil is responsible for the team schedules and practices. She is the one who has pushed and tried and started the club rolling.

The club has three games this weekend at Knoxville. It is what they call "Round Robin" or rotating teams. Friday at 5:00 they play Warren-Wilson. Saturday at 9:00 they challenge Knoxville Women's Soccer League and Saturday at 5:00 they play U.T.

Soccer kicks on Milligan's Grass

By Mike Weiss

It took the Scots longer than the regular ninety minutes of a soccer match to come away with their first win of the season last week -- a 3-2 decision over Milligan College in Johnson City, Tenn.

Afterward, Coach Michael Sabatelle commented, "I was happy to get our first victory, but I was not satisfied with the way we played." Indeed, although the Scots dominated from the opening kickoff, they performed well below their potential. Maryville failed in several early scoring attempts, and allowed their hosts to take a 1-0 lead when an indirect penalty kick glanced off the Scots' defensive wall and past goalkeeper Eric Deziel. Moments later, Fernando Delfino brought Maryville even, beating the Milligan goalkeeper from twenty-five yards. Near the end of the half, Fernando went down with a knee injury that leaves him questionable for the season's remainder.

In the second half, Eddie Delfino took a pass from David Luzadder, beat the entire Milligan defense, and nudged the ball into the net to make it 2-1. The Scots could not add insurance goals however, with the Milligan goalie making several fine saves. One of the Buffalos' strikers slipped through the Scots' back line and beat Deziel to end regulation time in a 2-2 stalemate.

In overtime, Maryville sent a barrage of shots at the Milligan goal, and finally Eddie Delfino found the strings in the second extra ten-minute period.

The Scots, 1-4, face Tennessee Wesleyan at Maryville on Saturday, October 10.

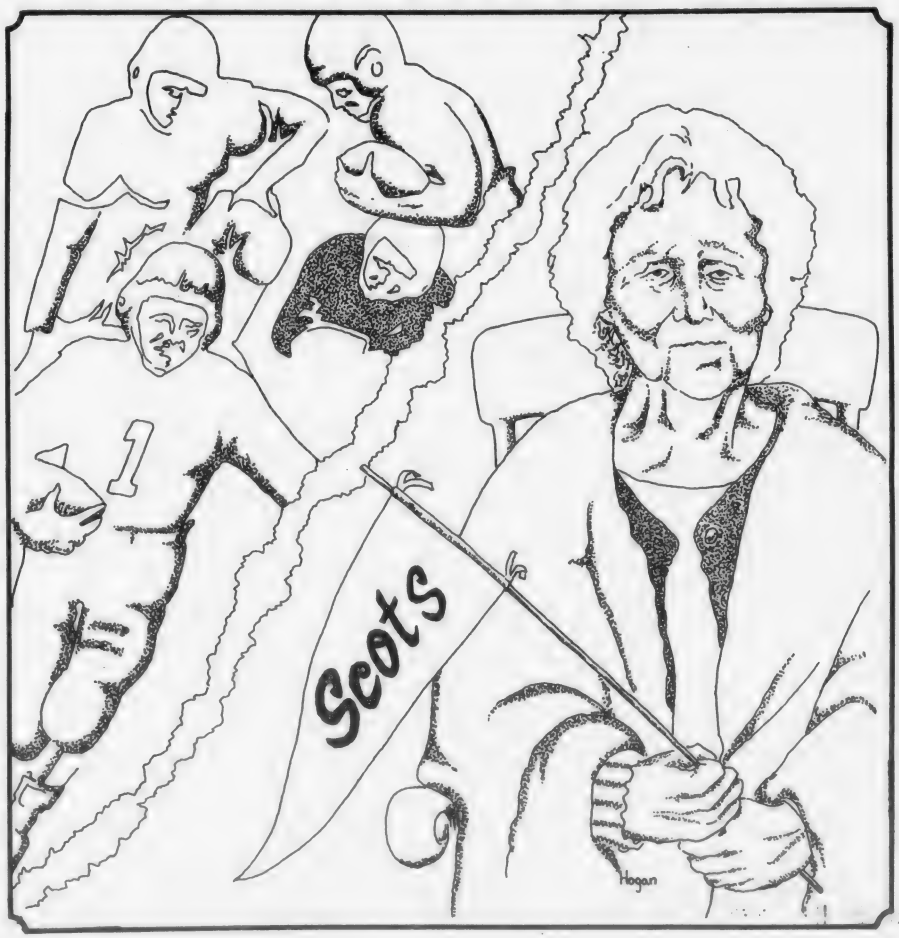
At MC we have

The Best Of Times



By Nancy Rojas

Suppose it's no longer 1981, but 2030. Many years have passed since leaving Maryville College. As we approach our 70th birthday, knowing that we may not see too many more, we look back on the life that we've lived. We thumb through old photographs and we find a picture taken during the 1981 homecoming. Oh, to be able to be that young again and to do all of the things we did. We look back on everything that happened and we wish that we had experienced more . . . . . .

What exactly will we remember about Homecoming 1981? Those of us who are ardent Styx fans may recall that the theme was "These are the best of times, MC." What will everyone else remember? Perhaps we'll remember a song that we heard at the Con Hunley Concert; the crazy clothes that everyone put on when they tried to find something orange and garnet to wear; the floats, the clowns, and the homecoming court in the parade; the blaze of the bonfire; the football game; the echo of the voices as everyone sang Maryville's alma mater; the big man on campus whose success in scrounging up the most pennies won him a noble title; listening to the music of the Lonesome Coyotes as everyone munched on BBQ; and the giggles of amazment heard when the girls found out at the formal dance that the guys actually owned at least one tie.

The memories all seem so real. It's hard to beieve that it all happened so long ago. It seems almost as real as the little doll purchased at the crafts fair. Even though we still have pictures and dolls, nothing can bring it all back to life except our memories and nothing can make memories except experience.

"Our memories of yesterday will last a lifetime. We'll take the best forget the rest, and someday we'll find . . .these are THE BEST OF TIMES."

Public Hearing Reflects Maryville's Views

As I sat in the isle of the crowded Municipal Building sandwiched between fellow students, citizens of Maryville and the Station 26 tripod and camera outfit, I listened to a stream of Maryvillians speak their views on the proposed highway, "It is not suitable. It is not desirable. It is not necessary." These were the words that echoed through-out the Hearing and were cheered and applauded with an almost collective voice.

In the midst of this overwhelming condemnation of the "slab of concrete" sat a stoic, seemingly bored State panel. Even as their plan was made to look more and more foolish with each peal of laughter following statement officially recorded in the Department of Transportation report, they sat unmoved. What were some of these statements?

"There will be a savings of three tenths of a mile or 39.5 seconds at 30 mph over the exsisting route.

There are no historical or cultural landmarks on the route.

The Greenbelt is mainly a day park made up mostly of children's playground equipment.

For the people of Maryville, the highway which threatens the town as we know it, this is a serious concern. I only wish the DOT report reflected the same sentiments on the part of the State. For as Dr. Cartlidge truthfully pointed out, the State, the people in whom we put our trust, has not done its homework, and East Tennesseans don't long tolerate those who don't do their homework. Did the State really believe that the people of Maryville would not see through the "smoke screen of irrelevent studies" the council has presented as an official report?

As each speaker took his or her turn at the microphone, new issues and question were raised. Perhaps the most pertinent were those asking who benefits from this proposal and who objects. Who benefits? According to one it is the people who build and pave roads, the department of transportation, those who want to drum up more business for the hospital, and maybe a few republicans. Who objects? Those persons who don't depend on the government for their living.

More importantly for us here at MC than these questions, however, were those with implications for and insinuations toward the administration of the college. As one alumnus implied, Governor Lamar Alexander is on the board of Maryville's Toward Century Three financial campaign. Maybe that is why there is a lack of comment on the part of Maryville College. Another stated that we have to think of MC if it won't officially think of itself.

Many of the students who were gathered at the feet of the spokesmen no doubt felt that they and the stand they were taking were being overlooked. These statements, however, were alluding to the fact that the MC Board of Directors has not yet made an official statement. This may be an understandable quiet but the College was not viewed favorably by some at the Hearing, and I think it left quite a few of the student there wondering just how much influence politics will yield.

Those who stepped to the front to address their friends and the members of the Committee are not people opposed to progress or with a vendetta against the government. They are intelligent, concerned citizens who want to preserve the city they live in and love.

We as students also want to preserve the city and the college as it is. We cannot, now that the Public Hearing is over, forget about it and think that the situation will take care of itself. Please write to Governor Lamar Alexander and also make yourself aware of what is happening in this issue.

Road Meets Protest

By Allison Perry

Progress - We cannot prevent it? Over 200 people at the Public Hearing concerning the proposed 5-lane highway last Thursday believe otherwise.

Various members of Tennessee's Department of Transportation and Relocation presided at this meeting. Besides government employees there were lifetime residents of Maryville, housewives, elderly persons, young couples, students, professors, businessmen, parents, professionals and the clergy – almost every facet of Maryville's existence had a spokeperson relate its views on proposed State Highway 73.

With our campus and community came a flow of questions awaiting answers. Many of which the state had no answer for.

Can Maryville's historic sites endure such a highway? Where are the environmental studies? Why would tourists use this highway? Why was the Chamber of Commerce membership never polled, or the Maryville Planning Commission? Where are the needs for this connector? Who will benefit?

What will the impact on Maryville College be? What about Fort Craig, how are children going to walk to school? What is the affect on air quality, or cultural, economic and social effects? What about pedestrian traffic? Where are the better alternatives?

These and many other questions were deemed unanswerable at this time by the State.

Mrs. Martha Black, a Maryville resident, sought this information independently. She found a ten page document containing out-dated, unprevalent data. This ten page report amounted to all of the State's documented information concerning the Maryville area and this highway sight.

Jack Humprey, an independent Traffic Engineer, was asked to study the proposed plan.' In it he found numerous flaws. Foreseen in the Broadway and Morganton intersection are safety and capacity problems. Similar problems occur on Montvale with the proposed connector.

Many of the traffic lanes are especially narrow (8 ft.). To widen them, acquisition of more property is necessary. Mr. Humprey's professional opinion lead us to a conclusion that Maryville's traffic can maintain until a by-pass is complete.

Jack Humprey was followed by a vast array of concerned residents. Many were concered about the Greenbelt and the harmonious life in town. Others spoke about the added expense at the loss of needed government programs and the paving of 6 to 7 acres of cultural Maryville.

Several were concerned about Maryville College and the pedestrian traffic springing forth from all the schools in the area. Even some of those citizens who will profit from the highway are strongly opposed. One of the strongest points raised by the citizens and students of Maryville was that no one is directly opposed to progress. Flexibility is the key. If there are so many flaws in this project, why are there no strong alternatives?

When acceptable alternatives surface Maryville will be prepared to dive into a clear stream of progress.

Coffeehouse Perks Up Saturday Night

By Traci Fraser

A change came over Lloyd lobby Saturday as Maryville talent got together for the fall Coffeehouse. A full house enjoyed hot pretzels and drinks in the warm atmosphere as they watched the music and comedy that was presented.

Emcee for the coffeehouse was George Cassutto. With his usual aplomb he introduced the performers and entertained between acts. During one break, George called for a male freshman volunteer. Answering the call, Cory Alden was used as "The Man from Dude" (Dating Under Deceptive Experience). George also treated the audience to some of his faculty impressions.

Donna Czegledi, Jean Plant, Barbara Stansbury, and Lea Adcock started off the show trying to entice Brad Gore, signing "The Tide is High". Also signing later in the Coffeehouse were Jean Plant and Linda Hasty, who gave a hot rendition of Donna Summer's "Bad Girls".

Musical talent began with Lisa VanDivort, Laurie Nelson, and Carol Cooper harmonizing on two Second Chapter of Acts songs. Bryan McFarland sang an original composition, and then teamed with Tim Fitzgerald and Bill Bender for a song by Dan Fogelberg. For another Fogelberg number, they were joined by Ruth Wilgus and Mike Weiss on harmonica. Tim Fitzgerald sang a song of "social Comment", accompanied by Mike Weiss. Also singing for Coffeehouse were Tracy DePue and Debbie Hall. Catherine Carter played the guitar along with her brother, and also sang a song.

In a class by themselves were Tyrone, Tyrone, and Walter, who rocked the audience as they rapped along with the Sugar Hill Gang. Tom Hudson and Jean Plant kept the audience tongue-tied as they related the Clapper Caper. Becky Haynes interviewed Tommy Brown about the danger of cropdusting, and

Con Hunley

Murville goes country

By Kevin Crothers

Knoxville native Con Hunley has established a devoted following' and gained critical acclaim with a series of hit country singles, including his latest, "I Don't Want to Lose You." Hunley, nominated as the Academy of Country Music's "Best New Male Vocalist," has played concerts with, among others, the Oak Ridge Boys and Jerry Lee Lewis, and has appeared on several television shows.

Hunley played guitar as a child, but soon switched to piano. After serving in the Air Force and playing in bars, Con became the first artist signed to Prairee Dust Records, on which he released his first single, "Cry, Cry Darling." He was soon signed by Warner Brothers, and his first album, "Con Hunley", contained four hit singles. Since that time, Hunley's rise has been swift. Some of the highlights of his career included playing with the Knoxivlle Pops, giving a concert at the Bijou Theater, and performing on the Grand Ole Opry.

This year he will be appearing with the Maryville-Alcoa College Community Orchestra October 15th in Wilson Chapel. The show begins at 8:15 pm, with general admission tickets costing $7.00. Tickets can be obtained at the Bank of Maryville, the Citizen's Bank in Fairpark and from the Fine Arts Department.

Also on sale at the MC Fine Arts Department are season tickets for MACCO's 1981-82 series of five concerts, including Christmas and concerto concerts with the McLain Family Band and Chris Rex, cellist with the Atlanta Symphony.

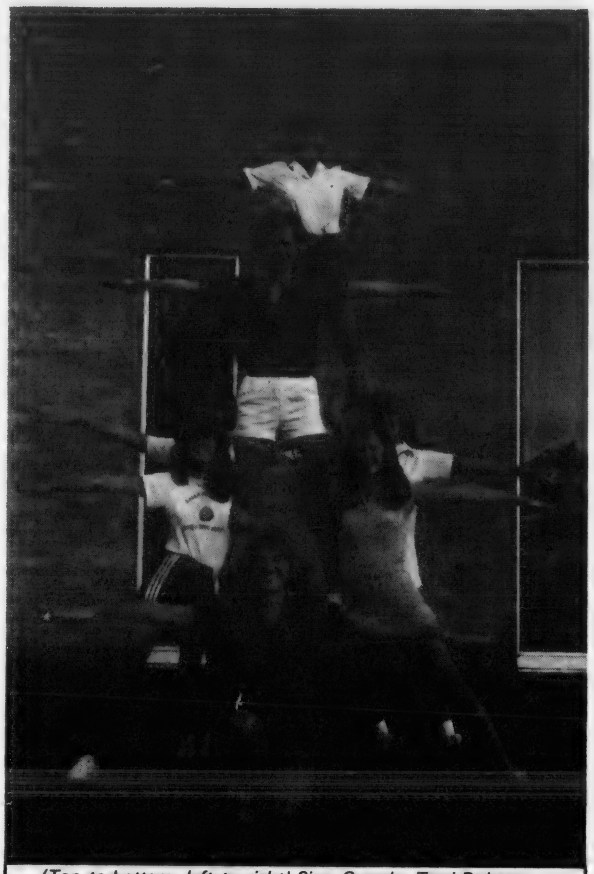
Rah-Rahs Raise Scot Spirit

By Sissy Gravely

Heard any strange sounds coming from the P.E. building lately? Seen any girls running around in summer clothes in 50 degree weather? If so, it's probably been the 1981 MC football cheerleaders.



This year the MC cheerleaders consist of seven women: captain Sissy Gravely, a senior political science major from Harrodsburg, KY; co-captain Ginger Harris, a junior business major from Chamblee GA; Carol Carter, a senior interpreting major from Burlington, NJ; Mary Jane Babich, a senior education major from Valrico, FL; Kim Hatfield, a sophomore math major from Knoxville, TN; Susan Williams, sophomore from Memphis, TN; and Terri Roberts, a sophomore business major from Bremen, GA.

These seven women have added a lot to the MC Athletic Department. They practice for over an hour daily, plus perform extra activities such as sign painting, pep rallies, putting candy in the players post office boxes, and decorating the locker rooms.

The girls returned to MC one week early in September to prepare for the first football game. During this time, they held a mock cheerleading camp in which they learned new routines, cheers and ideas from individual cheerleaders on the squad.

This year's enthusiastic rah-rah sponsor is Mrs. Exir Brennan. She has greatly helped the girls with traveling preparations and promoting various cheerleading skits and ideas. The squad deeply appreciates all the hard work and concern Mrs. Brennan has gone to for MC.

The cheerleaders feel they lead the crowd in supporting the players on tto victory. They feel they have been more successful this year in gaining such crowd support than in previous football seasons. This coming week these seven women expect to spend two to three hours per day preparing for the homecoming weekend of 1981. The rah-rahs hope the crowd will follow them in this upcoming Friday night pep rally/bonfire and Saturday afternoon game for the Maryville College Fighting Scots. GO SCOTS, BEAT SOUTHWESTERN!!!!

Ladies Soccer Nets Goals

The Women's Soccer Club scored its first goals of the season in last weekend's Round Robin Tournament in Knoxville. Although the Ladies were not successful in defeating their opponents, losing to Warren-Wilson 4-1, Knoxville's Soccer League 7-1, and UT 7-2, the team really started working as a unit. They were most proud of the game against Warren-Wilson since they beat the Ladies 7-0 three weeks ago.

Lori Winiarski scored the first goal of the season in the Warren Wilson game. She also scored the goal in the KWSL match.

Mary Hughes and Collette Kehoe each kicked one in during the UT game. Goalie Laura Hart played superbly, making 30 saves in the KWSL game.

The Women's Soccer Club meets Georgia Tech here next Sunday at 2:00. Let's give them our support!!

New Musicians Noted

By Bill Warren Jr.

The Maryville College Highlander Marching Band has begun their year with new officers, increased membership and several new plans for Fall Term 1981.

New officers were elected Monday, October 5, 1981. The results include President Ed Brewer, Vice President Don Rufus, Secretary/Treasurer Lisa Yacks and Student Director David Edington.

This year MC has twenty-eight bandsmen under the direction of Mr. David Irwin. These spirited musicians include ten freshmen, fifteen upperclassmen, one college-related Maryville High School student (John Dent), one MC faculty member (Dr. David Cartlidge) and one alumni bagpiper (Mr. Don Gilmore).

In presenting new plans for this year's activities, the most noteable is the election of a Student Director. Selected for this position was David Edington. He will direct the band during halftime at the Homecoming football game. Also, the band had a cookout on Friday, October 2, in which they grilled hamburgers and enjoyed slides of past football seasons.

The MC band welcomes new members throughout the year. Marching Band rehersals are held Monday and Friday afternoons 4:00-5:30. During Wednesday afternoon, a Jazz Ensemble meets between 2:30-4:00.

Generals Upset The Fighting Scots

When the clock struck none the Generals had won and all was lost for the Scots

Sure, all good things must come to an end but the Scots didn't leave without putting up a struggle. In beating the Scots 14-12 it was the first victory for W&L in five outings with the Scots and a sweet homecoming victory also. W&L struck first in the first period on a 1 yd run by Caveline and with the point after the Generals led 7-0. Later in the same period the Generals scored on a 12 yd. run by their quarterback and with the point after led 14-0, which was the lead they took to the dressing room at the half, In the third period the Scots started their second comeback in as many weeks in search for a score. Being a mile from the end zone the Scots didn't need a map to find it as O'Brien marched the Scots 95 yds. in 9 plays with the last play good for a screen pass to Wheatley that covered 43 yds. for the first Scot TD, but the pt. after failed and the Scots trailed 6-14. The Scots second score came in the 4th period and again with their backs against the wall they marched 85 yds. in 11 plays. With 5:38 left to go Evangelisti ran in from 1 yd. out to pull the Scots within 2 pts. at 14-12. The Scots decision to go for 2 pts. to tie the game failed as O'Brien's pass to Scotti in the end zone was knocked down by a General defender and in the end W&L ran out the clock for the victory.

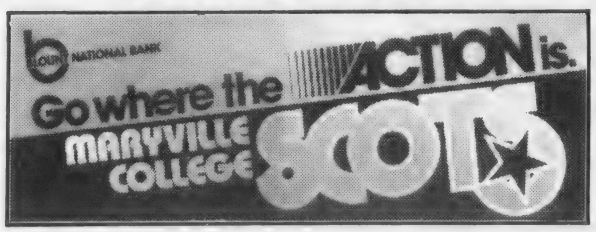
Coach Ogden still complimented his young team for not giving up and not throwing in the towel. "They continued to pound away to get a successful drive going. We just ran out of time." Coach also pointed out that a vital difference in the game that played a big part was their experience against the youth of the Scots. On defense again for the Scots was Ed Belfi with 14 Tackles.

For this season if each of Belvi's tackles equaled one mile the distance may be somewhere around Timbuk-tu. Also for the Scots was Alex Albert also with 14 tackles and Cockfield with 12. The Scots will host S'Western at Memphis this Sat. in the 1981 homecoming contest. Maryville stands at 4-1 overall and 3-1 in the ODAC.

TWC Humbles Scots

By Mike Weiss

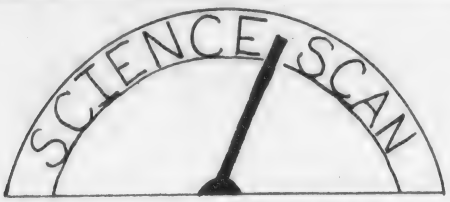
Tennessee Weslyan defeated the Scots 3-0 in soccer action at MC last Saturday.



The visitors dominated the first minutes of play, with the Scots playing a tenative defensive game. Weslyan, traditionally a strong side, got their first score on what many judged to be an offsides pass-yet no whistle came. Maryville's Ken Davidson came close to getting the equalizer when he beat the defense and fired a shot that deflected off the opposing goalkeeper, but sent his own rebound high over the crossbar, leaving the score 1-0 at halftime.

In the second half MC pressed toward Weslyan's goal, unfortunately failing to find the net. Eddie Defino took the ball from midfield, deftly eluded several defenders, and launched an attempt from 18 yards that just whistled by the left goalpost. Mack Parshcall took a pass on the right wing and unleased another hard shot that was tipped wide by Weslyan's big netminder.

MC goalkeeper Eric Deziel made several fine saves, and got good defensive help from backs John Beaupre, Andy Steinbeck, John Lacava, and Mark Burnett. However, when the Scots' offense failed to capitalize on their scoring opportunities, Weslyan took the advantage to break open the game with two goals in the last 15 minutes of play.



Note: The Scots' Scheduled homecoming match-up with Fisk University has been canceled due to the absense of a soccer team at the aforementioned institution.

Many people believe that Science is boring. They picture mumbling men in white coats watching things (with names that cannot be pronounced with the human mouth) wriggling under a microscope. Actually, much of what goes on in science is just this side of bizarre. This column reviews such research as well as what is or will be important to you, the student who lives from one weekend to the next.

On a whim, Dr. John Marr of the New York Department of Health included a catagory for humans on the city's 1977 animal-bite report. In that year 892 people had bitten and drawn blood from others. Surprisingly, human bites were seen to be a serious problem, especially since there is a great chance of infection.

By 1980 the number had reached 1,207 – three bites per day – and half of the bites were estimated to be unreported. Included in this number is one-fifth of all child abuse cases.

These epidemic proportions have sparked studies that have tried to find out Who? When? Where? and Why? Males are more likely to be bitten and most people during aggressive activities like fighting. For example, a mob of forty people attacked and bit a couple of emergency-service technicians in May, because it took them so long to arrive at the Detroit traffic accident. Spring and Summer or the most likely months to be bitten, and the hands, arms, and shoulders are the most likely spots. Many health officials see such an epidemic as an indication of rising violence in American society.

Tommy came back later selling lessons in "glassblowing".

Adding class to Coffeehouse was Maryville's affiliate artist, cellist Jeffrey Solow. He appeared three times, once in a duet with David Irwin on clarinet. Dr. Robert Bonham accompanied him. Solow developed a rapport with the crowd with his joking and easy manner. He ended Coffeehouse, leaving the audience breathless with his performance.

S.A.T. Scores Stabilize

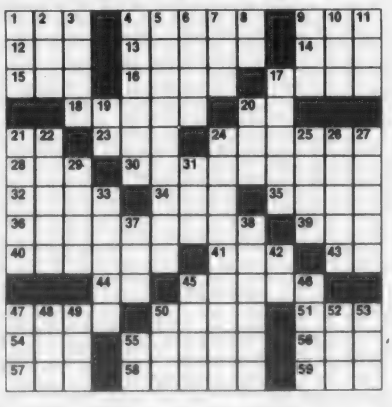
NEW YORK, NY (CPS) – Scholastic Aptitude Test scores, on the downswing for nearly two decades, just may be heading for an upturn.

Results released by the College Entrance Examination Board reveal that for the first time since 1968 SAT scores failed to decline. 1980-81 high school seniors taking the test - which scores on a scale of 200-800 points - averaged 466 in mathematics and 424 in verbal skills, the same total as last year. With the exception of 1968, when results also remined the same, SAT scores had been slipping steadily since 1963.

"It's a little early to say whether this indicates a general upward trend (in student skills)," cautions Sheryl Belli, the Board's associate director for public affairs. "But we're optimistic because we've seen a lot of other score gains in state and local testing."

Belli attributes the improvement in part to concentrated efforts among secondary schools to improve their educational programs. "We hear all the time about efforts around the country to improve school standards, about establishing basic competency levels."

The prolonged slide in SAT scores has long mystified education experts. In 1975, a national advisory panel speculated the decline was triggered by the increasing number of colleg applicants from deprived economic backgrounds, plus a general slippage in high school academic standards. Yet a much sharper drop in SAT scores from 1975-80, despite an increasingly improving secondary cirriculum, left experts at a loss for explanation.



"We really don't understand it," admits Belli. "We're just thankful if the worst is really over."

Prayer Is Answered

By Mary Hughes

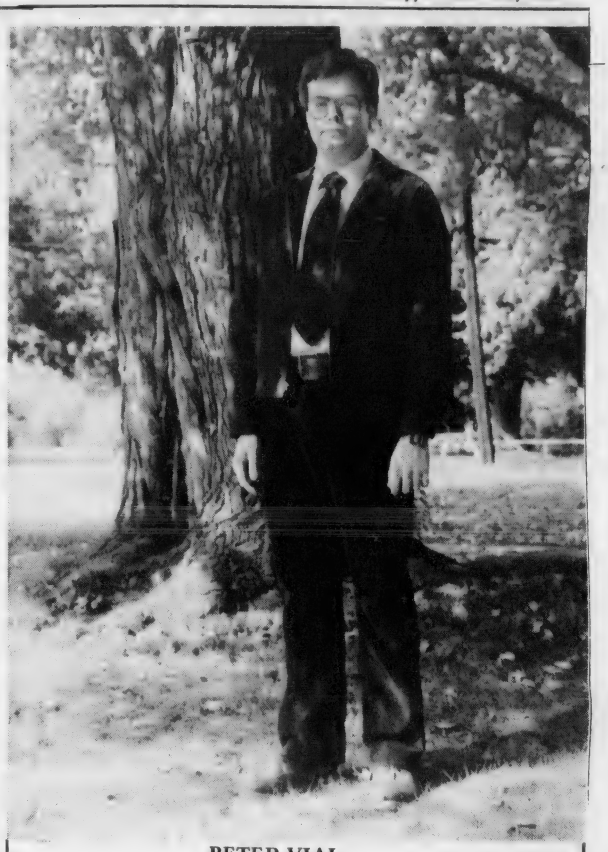
Peter Vial is Maryville College's new campus minister. He has an extra-special interest in Maryville College, his alma mater, and plans to strengthen the opportunity for spiritual life on campus. Vial launchs his new mission Oct. 26.

Vial returns to MC at an opportune time to take a fresh look at campus religion – an aspect of the college that has been at a low ebb since the 1960's. He wants to uphold present functions while creating a fellowship of new ideas, involvement, and awareness. Vial intends to present extracurricular activities for both students and faculty through retreats; appealing, meaningful worship; and group activities. He claims that a primary effort will involve students with planning activities, so they don't have to "sit and wait" for action.

The Center for Campus Ministry, located in the middle of campus, conveys an inviting, open attitude; students may go in to chat, ask questions, seek counseling or helpful advice anytime. At this "home base" will be committee work space, Vial's office, and weekly meeting headquarters.

Maryville College is Peter Vial's community - his challenge. Campus ministry ranked as a long term goal for him; he did not realize the opportunity would occur so soon. "I am especially excited to have my first try at my alma mater," he said last Thursday. The past two years Vial has been involved with February Meetings, The Worship Committee, and other aspects of campus life, this 1975 psychology major understands Maryville College vitality.

Vial has ministered as a youth counselor and student chaplain for two summers at YMCA of the Rockies in Colorado, studied at Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, and experienced two years as associate pastor at New Providence Presbyterian Church in Maryville. He will resign from New Providence to establish MC campus ministry as a full-time dedication.



Peter, his wife Debby, and their seventeen-month-old daughter Jenny will remain at their home at 103 Indiana Avenue instead of moving to the House in the Woods. Peter and Debby met at Maryville College during a Presbyterian summer program. She graduated from UT and secured her Master's Degree in Child and Family Planning.

Originally from Huntsville, Alabama, Peter's family traveled to MC each summer to attend the Synod of the South Conference. Peter's older brother graduated from MC in 1971. While Peter was an MC student, he worked with Sharon Crane, a fellow student, in plays and other theatre productions. He belongs to the Theatrical Honor Society and has a minor in theatre.

Vial is on the Maryville College Alumni Executive Board; he is also co-chairman of Blount County Hunger Task Force, and Officer of Bread for the World. On Campus he will work closely with Student Affairs and participate with World Concerns, Community Outreach, and The Worship Committee.

Peter Vial, Maryville College's old friend, travels around campus often. Talk to him; laugh with him; plan with him; let him see the courage MC has to offer.

After meeting with Peter Vial, the student chairperson of the Worship Committee said, "We are excited about having a new chaplain and are looking forward to working with him on his enthusiastic plans which will involve the whole campus."

Toward Century III - Part II

Maryville College today announced plans for a gifts campaign with a goal of $11.5 million, the largest single fun-raising effort in the College's history.

MC President Wayne Anderson, in announcing the second phase of the MC Toward Century III campaign this morning, reported the College has already received $6,024,000 in gifts and pledges toward the overall goal in this five-year program. Over $5 million was raised in the two-year phase I of the TCIII campaign.

Speaking on the 162nd anniversary of the College's founding, Dr. Anderson listed five vital purposes requiring additional financial support. The MC president cited increased support for faculty/staff salaries as the number one priority, followed closely by student aid.

Additional student aid funds are especially necessary because of the 62 percent cut in federal aid and a 55 percent cut in state aid for the current year, he explained

Dr. Anderson added that funds from the campaign will also be used for academic programs, building renovation and energy conservation and innovative program development.

He noted a central feature of the campaign overall is to secure endowment funds to ensure the long-term stability and growth of the Presbyterian related liberal arts institution.

Carl Davis, chairman of the MC board of directors, reported the board's enthusiastic endorsement for the $11.5 million campaign.

"We of the board are convinced that the current President Anderson, in the same tradition of Maryville's founder and first President Anderson, will provide the necessary leadership the College must have to face and overcome the challenges that lie ahead.

The task is awesome and Dr. Wayne Anderson will need assistance. For that reason we are extremely fortunate to have the same leadership for the campaign which was so successful in the previous TCIII effort.

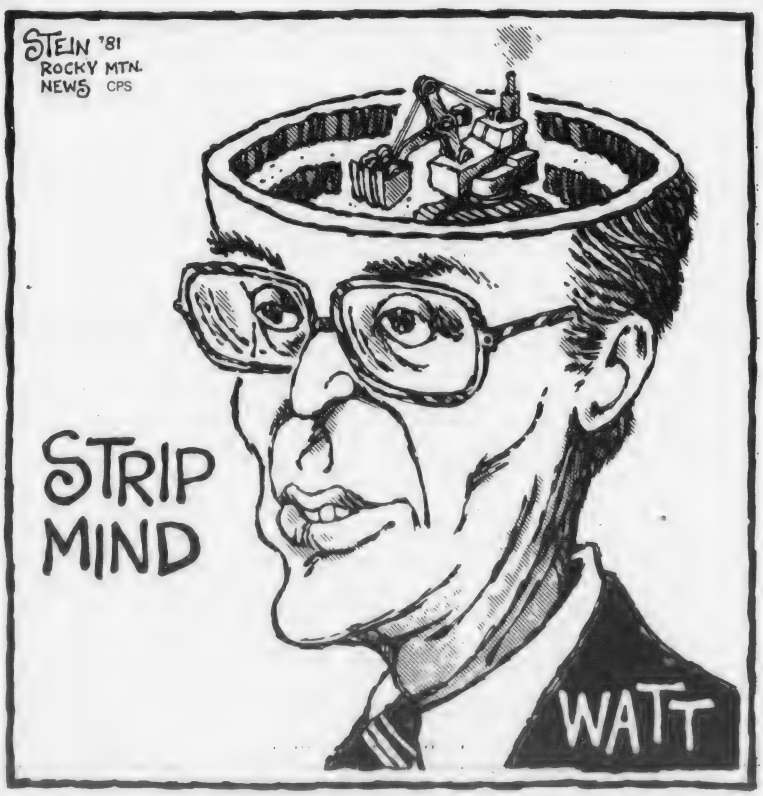
Worship Committee Deserves Thanks



Two years ago the body of Maryville College suffered an amputation. As with most severences of this kind, a vital appendage was gone from the system that supported it, leaving a vacancy which is nearly impossible to compensate for. The loss was devastating for some; others were not as affected; and two classes of students, as a person who has always had some handicap and, therefore, knows nothing else, are barely aware that anything is missing.

What was wounded in this case: one of Maryville's founding principles, the religious life; the missing piece: the chaplain.

Of course treatment was administered to try to reconstruct a normal exsistance. A temporary replacement was installed while the "doctors" worked to find a permanent solution. This they assured us, we would have by the end of the year. As often happens in preceedings, there were delays in providing the needed remedy. The "doctors" were not the only ones involved, however. A body cannot merely lie dormant until the prescription if filled; most have a driving force which pushes it onward regardless of the obstacles it faces. For this body it was the Worship Committee who kept it alive and providing service for Maryville College through an entire year of hopes and broken promises.

This year there has been a breakthrough. The body will be restored to health; the wound is to be healed.

Maryville owes much to the people on the Worship Committee. Maintaining the religious life on campus is a difficult task. Twice as difficult when there is no Chaplain with whom to work. They deserve more than the thanks which I can print here. I wish them a productive, prosperous year and hope that the students will take advantage of what is offered, because even if a body is healthy, if it is neglected, it will wither and die.

Letters

Dear Editor,

We are concerned over the proliferation of appearances of Ed Brewer's name on various notices and posters on the MC campus. This is a practice that has continued for over a year. Let us examine just who this famous or infamous Ed Brewer really is.

He is a happy, healthy, bearlike creature who has graced this college for three years. More than one person has been bowled over by his charm, grace, and poise. Participants in intramural sports have marvelled at his athletic skill. Professors are astounded by his intellectual capacity. Women have been heard commenting on his virility and sex appeal.

The persecutors of this innocent individual have on their consciences the crime of harassing one of this institution's finest all-around citizens. Good-natured bears are an endangered species. Help protect the last one in these parts.

Sincerely,

Committee to Understand Beleaguered Bears (C.U.B.B.)

Dear Maryville College Students,

Impressions is the MC literary magazine which publishes selected poetry, prose, drama, artwork and photography submitted by MC students As this year's editor, I would like briefly to discuss the magazine and introduce it to anyone who may be interested.

During the fall term written submissions, either typed or handwritten, are collected from students interested in publication- this year's deadline is January 11, 1982. Student's writing may also be turned in anonymously. During the winter term, all works received are numbered (to separate them from their authors) and placed in a booklet. Selection Editors read each creative effort and give it an individual rating. Eventually, an average rating is determined for each effort, and those with high rating are accepted for publication. Also during the winter term, the Impressions staff designs a layout for the magazine. Finally, the magazine is sent to the printers, and, once the printed edition returns, the magazine is sold to students, faculty, staff, alumni and others interested.

Faculty advisor for Impressions is Dr. Charlotte Beck, and the magazine currently has twenty-one MC students as staff members. The 1981 edition was released this past spring and can still be purchased for $1.00. If you are interested in buying last year's magazine, watch for information announcing a sale to be held soon.

I would like to invite all the MC students to submit their creative writing and artwork by January 11, 1982. Manuscripts may be given to me, Bill Warren, Jr., box 2775/Pearsons 213. Writing may also be give to Dr. Beck or the staff members of the magazine. I would appreciate students to note the traditional standards of form and taste that our literary magazine has kept over the past years. Thank you very much.

Sincerely,

Bill Warren, Jr.
Editor of Impressions

STEA stands for skilled teachers

By Bill Warren Jr.

One of the many organizations on campus is the MC chapter of the Student Tennessee Education Association (STEA). STEA is a pre-professional organization designed to give students studying education an insight to the educator's career.

The 1981-82 STEA club will be lead by President Janet Helwig, Vice President Mary Jane Babich, Treasurer Bill Warren, Jr. and Historian Lynda MacCall. STEA's members include those students majoring in Elementary Education or working to achieve secondary certification along with their major. The MC chapter is one of 33 Tennessee chapters.

President Janet Helwig explains, "MC chapter strives to present programs benefical to students preparing to go into all areas of teaching including elementary, secondary, music, art and P.E."

STEA meetings are held Tuesday nights during the second and fourth weeks of every month. Meeting times and places will be posted on signs. The first meeting was held October 3, 1981 and focused on the "September Experience."

Future plans include Professional Day which is an all day event held in April or May for those majoring in education.

Wanted: Maryville Michaelangelo

By Traci Fraser

Have an artistic urge, but don't know what to do with it? Then you will soon be given a chance to vent that urge and show your talent.

Since the stained glass window in the old Post Office will be gone eight to ten weeks for repairs, Student Affairs is looking for ideas for a mural to be painted on the plywood taking the window's place. When the window returns, the mural won't go to waste - it will be placed prominently in the Alumni Gym.

Anyone is invited to submit an idea for the mural. Just muake a sketch of your design and explain its meaning, then turn it in to Student Affairs in Fayerweather Hall. A committee will choose the idea to be used. So, if you'd like to become the "Maryville Michaelangelo", start working on your designs and get them in.

Weekend A Success

By Traci Fraser

The Office of Student Affairs and the Student Programming Committee would like to express their gratitude to all who made Homecoming such a success. Sharon Crane, Student Programming Director, said she was thrilled with the response to all the activities, and the amount of spirit and participation that was shown.

Student Affairs would also like to take note of the lack of post-party litter on campus this weekend. Dean Richardson commented that the grounds were the cleanest that she had ever seen after a big weekend like Homecoming.

So from Student Affairs and Student Programming to all those who made it happen - Thanks, MC, and keep it up!

Self Study Update

The institutional Self-Study initiated by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools is gaining momentum as various groups are targeted for questionnaires. First are the graduates, then the present students and faculty, and finally smaller groups such as department heads, continuing education students, and international sutdents, according to Dr. Jerry Waters, chairman of the Steering Committee.

During Homecoming weekend the Alumni Board became the pilot group to answer the first questionnaire. A random smapling of graduates across the country will counterbalance those who participated this weekend.

All questionnaires are disigned to answer the basic question, How well are we doing what we say we are doing? What we say we intend to do is found in the College's Statement of Purpose which the Board of Directors approved in April 1980.

"In order to make meaningful comments and answer the qustionnaries adequately, students, faculty, and graduates need to be familiar with the revised Statement of Purpose," commented Dr. Elizabeth Fowler, Director/Editor.

Early in November the questionnaires for students and faculty will be available, To facilitate the answering of the questionnaires, the Highland Echo and Focus will repring the Statement of Purpose.

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

Maryville College is a liberal arts, church-related college. It strives to be an instrument of liberation and growth for adults of all ages. Through its curriculum the College affirms the continuing value of a broad range of study in the humanities, the sciences, and the arts. Avoiding narrow specialization, the College aims to enhance career opportunities and develop a true sense of vocation. To prepare students for a world of uncertainty and accelerating change, the College seeks to stimulate purposeful inquiry, to encourage analytical thinking and effective expression, to foster discriminating aesthetic taste and sound judgment, to provide opportunity for developing personal values, and to nurture the deep concern for persons that leads to constructive action.

Founded by leaders of the Presbyterian/Reformed tradition, Maryville College is related to the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America in a voluntary covenant. In an atmosphere of freedom and sensititivy, Maryville College bears witness to God's revelation in Jesus Christ who challenges all human beings to search for truth, to work for justice, and to become loving persons. Continuing in this vital faith, the College believes that it must listen attentively and humbly to all human voices so that it may hear the call of God no matter how God may speak.

Maryville College is, in essence, a community for learning. This community includes persons with a variety of interests, backgrounds, beliefs, and nationalities. The faculty, as a group of scholars committed to the preservation and advancement of knowledge, emphasizes effective teaching and encourages supportive relationships with students. The students are challenged to grow in academic competence, personal and social maturity, and spiritual discernment and commitment. In such an atmosphere of openness and caring, lasting friendships are formed. Through caring for others on campus, sharing genuine concern for the world, and working to fulfill the College's purpose, directors, administration, staff, faculty and students strive to build and stengthen the human community.

Scots Tie One Up

By Steve Arnold

Ever since the W&L contest, as I enter my dorm room there has hung a sign on the door of Mark Barron (yes 2 r's and o-n) and Jeff Skipper that seems fitting to the young Scots especially after making their third comeback in as many weeks. The sign read...the need to press on, unafraid despite discouragements and difficulties...one equal temper of heroic hearts made weak by time and fate, but strong in will to strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield. Be bold or fold. Bold; yes. Fold; no. Not the Scots. Working against the clock the Scots struck with only :23 seconds lieft Saturday to salvage a 24-24 homecoming contest tie with S'Western. I'm sure you've always heard that a tie is like kissing your sister, but it seems better than kissing your enemy in defeat unless of course it's a co-ed contest but that's beside the point

Before a capacity homecoming crowd SAM struck first with only six minutes gone in the first period as Peters threw to Presley in the end zone for a 19 yard pass and a SAM 7-0 lead. After the extra point split the up-rights. The Scots didn't score in the first period but opened up the second with an O'Donnell FG of 30 yards and the Scots trailed 7-3. SAM then took the kickoff and marched to MC 35 yard line. Then on 3rd down the Scots Adair broke up a SAM pass, forced them to punt and MC took over deep on their own 4 yard line. Two plays later SAM picked off the first of four interceptions and returned it to the Scot 25 yard line. SAM unable to complete three catchable passes tried a 42 yard FG that failed and the Scots still only trailed by 4. With 5:25 left before half, Scotti fumbled the ball for the Scots on a reverse that resulted in a SAM recovery at the MC 40 yard line. Two minutes later SAM struck again on a 15 yard pass play for the TD and after the point attempt the Scots trailed 14-3. The Scots last drive before the half was stopped as O'Brien threw a second interception, but SAM was unable to convert it into a score and took a halftime lead of 14-3.

SAM didn't take long to get the second half started as they scored on 56 yard punt return with only 2 minutes gone and after the PT after led the Scots by the score of 21-3. After an exchange of punts MC marched down to the SAM 1 yard line by way of a 24 yard pass from Moyer to Araujo; a 50 yard pass to Wheatley and Moyer again to Araujo that put the Scots on the goal line.

Two plays later Evangelisti fumbled the ball at the 1 yard line and SAM took over after the recovery. Did the Scots fold? No. The defense again held SAM and the Scots took the punt on the SAM 45. MC again on a scoring drive had a Moyer pass intercepted by SAM on their own 14 yeard line. Again the defense held but made a crucial mistake of roughing the kicker and SAM again got the football. But not for long. The very next play Anagnostis picked off a SAM pass and the Scots took over at SAM 23 yard line. A defensive pass interference call gave MC the ball on the SAM 2 yard line where O'Brien took it over, the PT after was good and the Scots trailed 21-10.

Then with 7:13 left to play the Scots struck again as O'Brien hit Araujo on a 22 yard to pass play but the 2 pt. conversion failed and the Scots trailed 21-16. SAM then took the kickoff, used three long pass plays and with the aid of a roughing the passer penalty SAM found themselves on the MC 25 yard line. MC was also charged with unsportsmanlike conduct which put SAM on the MC 5 yard line. The defense stood strong again giving SAM only 3 PTS on a 10 yard FG and a 24-16 SAM lead.

Now came the heart stopper. MC's final drive may not have been healthy for pregnant mothers, or people with bad heart conditions, but I didn't see anyone leaving except maybe to go to the bathroom.

MC started on their own 21 yard line with 2:12 left in the game. Three plays later it was 1st and 10 MC after a 12 yard pass to Araujo from O'Brien. O'Brien on 4th down ran for a crucial 5 yards and a MC 1st down to keep the drive going. Then two quick sideline passes stopped the clock at :23 seconds left in the game. O'Brien, then struggling to find a receiver threw up a throw and pray pass into the end zone where Gene Wheatley took it down behing the defender for a MC TD and the start of pandamonium. That catch should officially eliminate the Gene "Almost" Wheatley nickname to Gene "Usually Does" Wheatley. But the Scots were still 2 PTS behind. Going for 2 PTS the Scots pass in the end zone failed but wait; the little yellow flag flying through the air represented pass interference by SAM and gave the Scots a second chance. So the fans that had stood up to leave sat back down and watched O'Brien hit Angelus for the 2 PT conversion and the Scots had fought back to tie it at 24-24. MC then tried an on side kick that left SAM on the MC 48 with still time to go for the winning FG. The Scots stopped that with an interception that ended the game tied Scots 24, SAM 24.

In remarks after the game Coach Ogden stated that again he was very pleased that when down, his youngsters came roaring back. "Maybe we should start the game down 14-0." Individual performances for the Scots was; guess who? Yes. Ed Belfi again roaming the field with 17 tackles followed by Cockfield with 17 tackles also. The Scots journey to Miss.Saturday to tangle with always tough Millsaps.

Scots ready for another offensive play in the homecoming game against Southwestern at Memphis Saturday.

Ladies Victorious

By Robin Rimmer

Last week was a busy but victorious week for the Lady Scots' Volleyball team. The Lady Scots won three out of four matches. The team's only loss was to Tennessee Tech on Tuesday. On Thursday, the Lady Scots travelled to Chatanooga where they defeated UTC, a Division I school, and Austin Peay, a Division II school. Kay Julian was outstanding server, scoring 16 points during the two matches.

On Homecoming Day, the Lady Scots defeated Carson-Newman by scores of 15-4, 15-9, and 15-11. The whole team hustled well during the match. Their excitement was increased by the large number of fans attending the match on Homecoming Day.

This past week the Lady Scots were ranked fourth in the nation among Division III N.C.A.A. schools. Miss Brown and the team were bery honored by this ranking. The Lady Scots' record is now 18-7.

The Lady Scots will play King College at home Wednesday. On Thursday, they will travel to Dayton, Tennessee to challenge Bryan College and Covenant College.

The Lady Scots would like to extend a special thanks to manager Brian Rigell for his time and thoughtfulness. THANKS BRIAN!!

MC Students vs NYC Marathon

By Steve Arnold

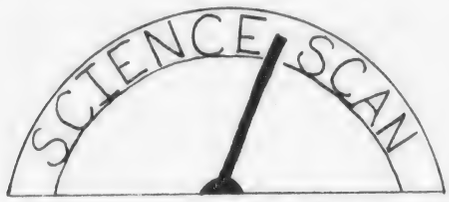
The gun fires and all that stands between you and the finish line is 26.2 miles. That is what two MC students will face Sunday as they compete in the 1981 New York Marathon. John Sanders and Charles Melton leave Friday at 4:00 for their journey to N.Y. representing the Mystery Track Club of North Carolina, Tenn., and Ohio. These two MC students have both trained for about 3 months in preparation for the race. John has trained with about 350 miles of running and Charles totaled around 310. I asked both about why they dicided to run the NY marathon. John replied: "One reason is that the marathon is the biggest in the world. It seems to have a lot of glamor it looks better, and I've always wanted to do it. It will also be a personal goal that if I can train for this I feel like that I can make myself train for anything." Charles replied: "Well, if I wanted to run a marathon this one would be a good one to start with. The crowd will be a good boost to me. It is a big challenge and after it's over I can say I've run in the NY marathon." Well, after Sunday they can look back at it as a big accomplishment along with the other 16,000 entries. So, John and Charles, good luck and since the race will be televised give us a wave.

Soccer

By Mike Weiss

MC suffered a 6-0 soccer setback at the University of the South in Sewanee last Friday.

The hosts scored their first goal on a penalty shot in the first half. Later, the Scots lost four players for the match due to injury, and the roof caved in with a barrage of Sewanee goals.



In an exhibition game on Homecoming Weekend, a team of Scots' seniors and alumni defeated the rest of the squad, 4-3.

MC faces Eastern Mennonite in an ODAC match on Saturday at Maryville. Game time is 11 am.

Many people believe that Science is boring. They picture mumbling men in white coats watching things (with names that cannot be pronounced with the human mouth) wriggling under a microscope. Actually, much of what goes on in science is just this side of bizarre. This column reviews such research as well as what is or will be important to you, the student who lives from one weekend to the next.

Jack Borden, a T.V. journalist in Boston, was stunned after he asked twenty residents of his city what the sky looked like and none of them knew. So he formed an organization called For Spacious Skys that has launched a sky-awarness campaign that made the news late last summer at a conference called Skywatch at the Grand Canyon.

The group has been very active. It has sponsored studies showing that not looking at the sky may be hazardous to our mental health (spending 95% of our time indors may cause insomnia and other problems), as well as indicating that those living in Washington DC had the least concern over the sky of any large American city. Less than half of those who responded to a nation-wide interview had any idea of what the sky looks like.

In the future, For Spacious Skys has planned a T.V. documentary, a traveling museum exhibit, and special sky studies for children. For those interested, the full moon is on the thirteenth, new moon on the twenty-seventh – both Tuesdays.

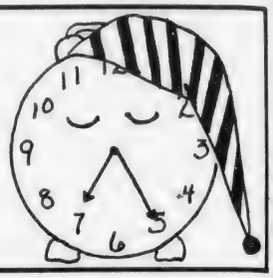
announce the leadership for the fund-raising effort.

Tennessee Governor Lamar Alexander, a member of the MC board of directors, is serving as honorary chairman; and Washington, D.C. attorney and 1941 MC alumnus George Webster, also a board member, is chairing the fund drive.

Davis reported that members of the national stering committee during the initial phase of the TCIII effort will continue their leadership roles in the current program.

Davis this morning also read a statement from Webster in which the campaign chairman expressed his excitement that gifts and pledges are already past the half way mark.



"I know of no better investment than in the high quality education this institution has offered since 1819," Webster remarked and appealed to all interested friends of Maryville College "to help continue the dramatic progress of the College as it moves toward its third century of service to the state, region, nation and world."

The TCIII campaign's phase I was launched May 20, 1979 in Nashville and the successful conclusion announced this past May 29 at the College.

MC is related to the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

Approval for the South ern and Western Theological Seminar, later renamed Maryville College, was given by the Synod of Tennessee on Oct. 19, 1819 at New Providence Presbyterian Church at Maryville. The College's founder, the Rev. Isaac Anderson, served as first president and chairman of the directors until 1857.

Old Post Office or Chapel

What Do We Call It Now?

Old Post Office receives a face lift in its change to the Center For Campus Ministry. Plywood was installed to relieve the pain of the opperation.

By Traci Fraser

In the center of campus is a small, unobtrusive building. It has been through changes in its almost 100 year history, and it is in the process of making yet another transition—from Post Office to Center for Campus Ministry.

The building was originally constructed in 1888 as a library in memory of Professor Thomas Jefferson Lamar, and was named the Lamar Memorial Library. When the library was moved to Thaw Hall, the building became the campus bookstore, and after that the Post Office and Print Shop.

The focal point of the building is a beautiful stained-glass window. It was bought in 1888 to be placed in the library for $500. Now, 93 years later, it is being restored at a cost of around $14,500 by Rohl-f Studios in Mount Vernon, New York. They are re-leading the window and placing a protective thermal pane on the outside. It should be completed and re-installed by early December. The Class of 1931, along with the College, will try to raise the funds for the restorations, alerting alumni and others for whom the window and the building have meaning.

The building itself will be restored to as near its original form as possible. The first step is an office for the campus chaplain. An entrance to his office separate from the front door will be created so visitors to his office will not disturb those in the main part of the building.

Work space for the committees that make up the Religious Life Council will be provided. This way they will be near the Chaplain, and can work closely with him. Furnishings for the Center will be informal, with flexible seating so the arrangement can be changed to suit the need.

"It has the potential to be the center of campus" Dean Strickland commented. He also pointed out that by creating the Center they are by no menas abandoning the other facilities, but rather they are trying to bring the Chaplain closer to the students, making him more accessible.

MC Toasts New Cafeteria Manager

By Mary Hughes

Have a question about the food at MC? Thomas Duckett, new food service manager for the college, will answer. He will replace Joe Powell at the end of October.

Morrisons promoted Powell to head the food program at Bradley County Memorial Hospital in Cleveland, Tn. Powell, from South Carolina, has worked with food services ing Maryville College regards, "This staff is simply excellent and by far the best people I've ever worked with."

Duckett, a native Floridian, enjoys the college atmosphere. As manager of dining, he will take over food ordering; menu planning; employee supervision; and ensuring that meals are balanced, attractive, and in accordance with student preferences. Duckett worked with Morrisons food service in 1973, then transferred to Sunshine Food Service in Mobile, Ala. When asked how Morrisons rated on his list, he said, "Morrisons is hard to beat, the best company you can get."

Duckett was in the Marines from 1953 to 1973. He went to work with Morrison's in 1973. Duckett and his wife like Maryville and Maryville College and plan a long stay here.

HAPPY HALLOWEEN

Mid-term Syndrome Seasonal Malady

Once again it is time for the season to change according to nature's plan. The many manifestations of this phenomenon are visible everywhere you look, but nowhere are they so graphically depicted as in the library. A quick glance under any table, especially those which are buckling under the weight of every type of reference material imaginable, affords undeniable proof. There on the carpet, just as yellow leaves on the sidewalk, lies the hair pulled from the heads on many an exasperated student who, having consulted every periodical and journal guide available and having ten possible sources, can unearth only one magazine from the entire list. If you are brave enough to investigate further, you may encounter such a student cowering behind the mound of research material and mumbling something which sounds like, "this library must have only two books and three magazines that weren't written in the 1800's." And, just as birds fly South for the winter, the migration to UT library begins.

The more subtle signs are apparent also. The puzzled faces of disgruntled paper-writers who are attempting to somehow connect two seemingly diametrically opposite subjects into some cohesive form. The furrowed brow and eyes darting from book to notebook, followed by the blank stare into space, followed once again by the furrowed brow and darting eyes just has to bring Shakespeare and flowers together in some way.

All of this mental anxiety results from one of this season's most popular activities—the assignment of a barrage of tests and research papers by professors of a single mind who all have a fetish for the same Wednesday as a favorite due date.

Frequented haunts of people during this season range from the dark recesses of Lloyd's basement and the symmetrical study cells in Dorm I, Davis, and Copeland to crowded tables in the library to Pearsons for a solitary breakfast session.

Of course those select seniors taking Comps cannot be forgotten. This time of year also brings those cumulative exams which can strike fear into the heart of even the most scholarly. For those of you who come in contact with such a senior, do not be alarmed by their harried appearance. It will all be over in two days, and most should return to their regular selves after a weekend spent in whatever way they choose to celebrate the end of Comps.

So if you feel that you are drowning in a sea of lined paper and an ocean of ink, rest assured that there are several hundred kindred souls who are also laboring their way through this season known as Mid-term at Maryville.

Faculty Findings

By Mr. Keith Bruckner

Knowledgeable sources indicate that Congress has recently been overrun by one of the heaviest lobbying efforts in years. AWACS? No, it's AT&T. America's largest corporation (twice the assets of Exxon) is being restructured by Congress to bring the competitive mix into conformity with technological dictates. With a significant impact on the mushrooming high-technology information industry (revenues estimated at $200 billion last year, four times the Gross Domestic Product of Norway) there is room for dispute on what this reorganization should look like.

After a five year effort, and by an overwhelming 90-4 vote, the U.S. Senate on October 7 endorsed Sen. Packwood's landmark bill requiring a new, separate subsidiary of American Telephone and Telegraph to serve the market for telephones and other communications equipment and certain long-distance service. The new unregulated subsidiary, dubbed "Baby Bell," would compete against such equipment makers as Northern Telecom and long distance companies such as MCI Communications Corp. It could be expected that Baby Bell would also enter unregulated, computer-based information fields such as data processing and computer manufacturing face to face with IBM. To date, AT&T has been prevented from doing that by a 1956 consent decree, a formal legal agreement between AT&T and the Department of Justice which terminated a previous anti-trust action.

Competitive makers of telephone devices and information processing and transmission equipment have been slicing away at the AT&T monopoly for slightly over a decade. (Consider our own campus telephone system). The Bell system, including its 23 telephone operating companies, has been reluctant to accede to this erosion. While competitors have forced the Bell System to respond with more up-to-date equipment and customer services, they have also been confronted with the effects of monopoly power in Bell's pricing of equipment without regard to cost and of difficulty, or high cost in interconnecting equipment to local Bell lines. The day when only telephones interconnected to telephone lines is now history. The boundaries between the regulated industry and the unregulated industry are blurred. It only seems fair that the portions of AT&T which can be broken off from the necessary monopoly of local service should be free to compete.

The Senate vote of 90-4 on the Packwood bill reflects AT&T support. There are problems however, with the concept of a wholly owned unregulated subsidiary. One critic cites a study by respected Arthur D. Little Inc. finding "such a mechanism wouldn't protect competitors and that AT&T's incentives and opportunities to behave anti-competitively would be substantially undiminished." (Wall Street Journal, 28 Jan. 81, p.4). Others argue that nothing short of divestiture (full separation of ownership) would eliminate the evils of cross-subsidization (subsidizing products in the competitive

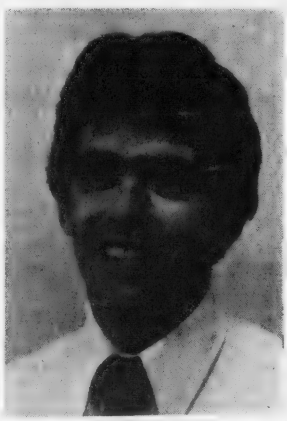
Admission Counselor Ron Jeske Dies

By Jeff Hayes

We live in a world endued with malicious Chance. Never is this Chance more apparent than when a young, successful person dies. One such person, admissions counselor Ron Jeske, died on October 23 from an apparent brain hemmorhage.



Ron was recruiting for the College in Trenton, New Jersey, when on October 16 he became ill and slipped into a coma.

On Tuesday the doctors performed surgery to remove a blood clot from his brain. Ron never regained consciousness and died on Friday, October 23. He was 30 years old.

Ron attended Reinhardt College for two years until he transferred to MC, where he graduated in 1974. At MC, he majored in English and trained in wrestling and track.

After graduating, Ron bought and operated the Down Yonder in Maryville. He also worked as a booking agent responsible for finding entertainment for a restaurant chain.

In August, 1980, MC appointed Ron to an admissions counselor position. Larry West, director of admissions, said that during Ron's service to MC he "... made a positive contribution to the admission office's efforts. All of us will miss Ron and extend our sympathy to his loved ones."

Ron was the son of Mrs. Lois L. Jeske of Cleveland, Ohio.

The death of such a promising and enterprising individual is not borne easily. That such a person should die at such a bright time in his life is a loss that we all deeply regret; the College community will dearly miss Ron Jeske.

RESOLUTION OF THE
MARYVILLE COLLEGE ALUMNI BOARD
WITNESSETH:

WHEREAS, it has recently come to the attention of the Maryville College Alumni Board that the Maryville City Council has endorsed the construction of a connector road, which is to be built with state and local funds; and

WHEREAS, the currently proposed route for said connector road will result in the State's condemning a portion of the Maryville College Campus; and

WHEREAS, said road will adversely affect Maryville College's use of its remaining property and will adversely affect the College's overall environment for students, and specifically will adversely affect the College by passing within approximately 165 feet of the Fine Arts Center, destroying one of the College's main entranceways, causing safety problems for students, and further isolating the College from the Community; and

WHEREAS, this Board firmly believes that the adverse effects upon the College of said road require formal opposition;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT UNANIMOUSLY RESOLVED by the Maryville College Alumni Board that it hereby formally declares its opposition to the Tennessee 73 connector road as currently proposed and urges the Maryville City Council and State of Tennessee to reconsider the necessity and location of said road.

AND BE IT FURTHER UNANIMOUSLY RESOLVED that the Mayville College Alumni Board hereby requests that the Maryville College Administration take a public stand, as many of its students and faculty already have, against the currently proposed connector road.

Earlier last week, the Highland Echo received this letter from the Alumni Board condemning the proposed highway and summoning the Administration to do the same. In response the executive committee of the Maryville Board of Directors passed a resolution last Friday expressing its "deep concern" about the connector road.

In a meeting last week with the Department of Transportation the committee raised a series of questions concerning whether the road can be moved farther away from the school what the noise level will be and how it could be cut down, and why promised pedestrian overpasses are not included in the drawings. The committee also requested another meeting to further discuss these matters.

Neither the Executive Board nor the College Administration has taken or plans to take an official stand on the highway. Ray Dirkson, the College's representative in an interview Friday, said that the Board feels it is their obligation to protect the school to the best of their ability, and this they are trying to do. He also stated that many of the members do not live in Maryville and, thus, do not know the needs and problems of the city.

The resolution passed last Friday grew out of various meetings between members of the College's Board and Administration with DOT officials over an approximate two-month period.

Dennis C. Graham

Administration VP Named

Dennis C. Graham has been named vice-president for administration and treasurer at Maryville College effective Nov. 17, MC President Wayne Anderson announced Friday at the fall meeting of the College's board of directors.

Graham, 34, currently is administrative services director for the Peabody Institute of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md.

At Maryville he will oversee the College's business office, physical plant, computer services, financial aid, personnel, food services, bookstore, post office and print shop operations.

Graham succeeds Raymond I. (Brick) Brahams Jr. who died this past March after 23 years of service to the College.

As chief administrative officer of Johns Hopkins' Peabody Institute, Graham has been responsible for all fiscal and business operations related to the multi-campus Conservatory of Music and Preparatory School.

His responsibilities included supervising and directing accounting services and personnel, managing all auxiliary operations, serving as liaison with various groups and the public for all financial inquiries and implementing investment policies and strategies for endowment and temporary investment funds.

Graham previously had served at Johns Hopkins as assistant controller, general accounting manger and senior accountant over a four-year period.

He received his master's degree in higher education administration from Johns Hopkins in 1977.

A Certified Public Accountant, Graham earned his undergraduate degree in accounting from the University of South Florida in Tampa. He was awarded an associate's degree in accounting from Monroe Community College in Rochester, N.Y. Graham is a member of Delta Sigma Pi business administration professional society and Beta Alpha Psi honor organization. He and his wife, Patricia, have one child, Candice.

Playhouse Begins Season

The Maryville College Playhouse is now in rehearsal for the first play of its '81-'82 season. The play, WHOSE LIFE IS IT ANY WAY?, is a modern, psychological drama concerning the right of a terminal patient who wishes to end her life. The doctors say, "No!" and courts are called upon to make a decision.

While the play originally was written for a man, Tom Conti who won the Tony Award for his performance, the version MC Playhouse is producing is the feminine re-write, tailored for Mary Tyler Moore who won a special Tony for her portrayal.

Kathy Long, MC junior from Fort Lauderdale, Fla. is playing the part of Claire Harrison, the patient. Others in the cast include Heidi Warner, Tim Fitzgerald, Tom Hudson, Angela Murphy, Pamela Nelson, Trevor Nelson, Jean Plant, Lee Lord, Frank Fiore, Teresa Lawson, and Tommy Brown. Directing the play will be MC Theatre Director, Donald Thomas assisted by Tim Fitzgerald and Pamela Nelson. Those working on technical aspects of the play include Mark Beyer (Technical Director), Sharon Crane (lighting), Kevin Crothers (sound), Jina Radozycki (properties), and Beth Manire (costumes).

WHOSE LIFE IS IT ANYWAY? opens on Friday, November 6, at 8:15 for an expanded six performance run. Other evening performances are Saturday, November 7, and Thursday, Friday, Saturday, November 12,13, and 14. A special Dollar Matinee will be presented on Wednesday, November 11 at 2:45.

Ticket prices are $4 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens. Reservations may be made by phoning the College during business hours.

Teacher's Market Opens Up

(CPS)

A new baby boom, an accumulation of bad press clippings and a rash of "burnouts" have revived the job market for what was once the most pitied of college majors–the education student.

School district demand for new teachers is way up in some areas of the country and in some academic areas, especially math. The demand is expected to become national soon.

The Association for School, College and University Staffing predicts in its 1982 annual report "that in the next one to three years there will be a critical shortage of teachers in all teaching areas."

Penn State education placement officer Dante Scatzi claims there are already "dire shortages" of teachers in the South and Southwest. Scatzi also expects the shortages to be nationwide by the mid-eighties.

Broward County (Fla.) School District staff chief Roger Beaumont had to visit 84 campuses last spring to fill the teaching vacancies he had. Los Angeles advertised nationally and installed two toll-free long distance telephone lines in an effort to dig up math teachers last year. Before last year, out-of-state recruiting was extremely rare.

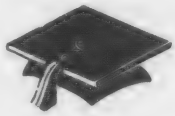
Indeed, teaching jobs were extremely rare. As the post-World War II baby boom passed through school levels, enrollments declined and left school districts with an oversupply of teachers. When vacancies opened, education grads inundated school districts with applications. By 1978, there were two education grads for every teaching job in the United States, according to the National Education Association (NEA).

In response, job-conscious college students simply stopped enrolling in education courses. Penn State handed out 62 percent fewer teaching degrees last year than in 1972. Education enrollment at North Dakota State has fallen five percent a year since 1970.

The National Center for Education Statistics (NCES) says that, nationwide, the number of students preparing to teach after graduation fell to 159,000 in 1980, down from 284,000 in 1970.

At the same time, the U.S. birth rate is climbing again after a long period of decline. The first wave of the new baby boom is expected in elementary schools in 1985. NCES researcher Martin Frankel predicts that by 1995 enrollment may surpass the record 51.3 million students at all grade and college levels in 1971.

While there will soon be more students to teach and fewer grads to teach them, current teachers are leaving the field in significant numbers.



The increasing number of older people in the population has "no obvious incentive to vote to increase taxes or pay teachers more," explains Illinois' dean of education Joe Burnett. "We have a voting bloc that seems to be turning off to education."

"In the old days," Burnett recalls, "(teachers) would take time out, but they would return. Now, they're just staying away."

The shortage isn't universal yet. Some geographic areas still have a teacher surplus. "Not all these places (where there are jobs) are desirable places to teach," explains Dr. Patricia Murphy of North Dakota State.

An Association of School, College and University Staffing study last fall found demand highest for math, industrial arts, physics, special education, agriculture, chemistry, science and speech was high.

But physical education, art, health education, home economics, foreign language and most kinds of elementary school teachers still face a tight job market, according to the survey.

HOBGOBLIN SPECIALS

Ghostwritten by

Joe Wynne

Andrew Jackson was a man of adventure, so when he had a chance to see for himself the Bell Witch of Tennessee, he went in style. He rode a buckboard pulled by four horses followed by a host of men on horseback. As he made site of the Bell mansion at the end of the dirt road, the buckboard suddenly stopped cold. The horses screamed because they couldn't lift their legs. A terrible stench filled the air and only when it was gone could the procession continue. "Alice" had struck again. This time President Jackson had seen it for himself.

I stood on that spot. Like "Old Hickory, " I was fascinated by the stories I had heard. I had gone to the Nashville Public Library and seen the report (by one of the men on horseback) in the Daily American an old 19 century Nashville newspaper now on microfilm.

I travelled to Clarksville where the stories are still told. While there I talked to a storeowner who directed me to the Bell mansion and family cemetery in a town smaller than its name. It was in that town that I got a book, written by a local, which I read underneath the giant graveyard monument to the prominent Bell family...

It was late summer when Mrs. Bell asked a slave to go to the garden for some vegetables. He was frightened, because "Alice", the ghost who had been a nuisance to the Bell family for decades, had been at it of late. The maid knew what to do, though, and made him a "witch -ball",. This was a conglomeration of hair, fingernails, herbs, etc. held together by an incantation. With it the witch couldn't get him.

As soon as he reached the garden he saw what he later described as a giant rabbit-with-a-dog's-head. It was her! The thing scared him so much he dropped the witch-ball. Unprotected, he was turned into a mule. He ran back into the house, smashing the door down, slipping along the wooden floor, finally knocking over a table. It was some time before the spell wore off and, since such occurrences had happened many times in the Bell home, he was told simply to fix the door.

Andrew Jackson wasn't the only famous person to come in contact with those who inhabit the Halls of Ghostdom. Some men who were famous for ther things were mediums (those who mediate between the spirit world and the real world) : Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who wrote The History of Spiritualism as well as the Sherlock Holmes mysteries; William James, the philosopher; Russel Wallace, the biologist; and Franz Mesmer, the first hypnotist, from whom we ger the word "mesmerize".

John Wesley's home in England was haunted by a poltergeist, which is the kind of ghost that makes noises, or follows you around, knocks over things at the table, and loses your keys, ID, etc.- just an all around nuisance.

Those of you who are people of action like Andrew Jackson and would like to meet up with a ghost this Halloween should try three places recommended by resident Ghostologist Sharon Crane. In Pearsons Hall, a poltergeist believed to be the spirit of a suicide many years ago goes bump in the night on the third floor. Anderson Hall is prowled by the ghost of a night watchman who had his leg amputated. The story goes that he asks those that he sees if they have seen his leg, because he cannot rest until he has it. And finally, in Townsend a headless horseman reeks havoc on the countryside every Halloween. See you there.

Another favorite haunt of the ghosts is popular jargon. When someone sneezes and you say"God bless you, "you are continuing a practice that began when people used to think sneezes were evil spirits flying out of the body.

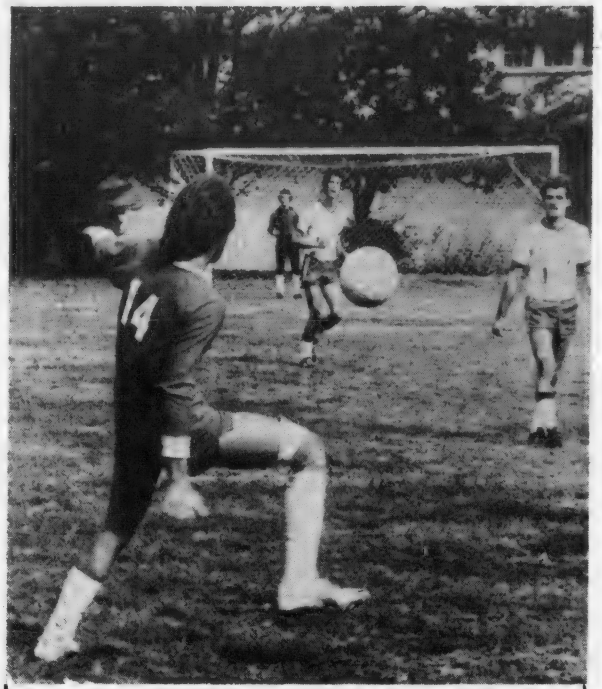
I have also found the origin of the phrase "raising cain". Joe Cain was an Indian who started the first Mardis Gras parade in Mobile, AL. After he died, a parade in his honor was started from the city cemetery. Everyone showed they were having fun by screaming and making enough noise to "raise Cain" so he could join in. The parade is run to this day on the Monday before Fat Tuesday.

Soccer: Success And Setback

By Mike Weiss

Fernando Delfino, playing with a badly injured right knee, nonetheless scored an incredible six goals as the Scots clobbered Milligan College 9-1, in Maryville.

The match was no contest right from the start. Ken Davidson began the romp when he took a pass from midfield and beat the Milligan goalkeeper for his second goal of the year. Delfino netted 4 in the first half, while brother Eddie watched from the sidelines, suffering from an injured foot. Freshman striker Mack Paschall added another score on a fancy assist from David Luzzader, leaving the Scots up 6-0 at the half.



In the second half, Delfino capped off his performance with two scores and Corey Alder nudged one in to give the Scots their ninth goal. Milligan managed to break through for one and rob goalie Eric Deziel of a shutout.

The Scots suffered a heartbreaking 1-0 defeat to Eastern Mennonite on a frigid Saturday morning last week. It was a tough defensive struggle, with both teams left scoreless until the last minute of the match. With 45 seconds to go, the visitors from Virginia knocked in the game's only and deciding goal from a corner kick.

MC goalkeeper Eric Deziel was the star of the match, again narrowly missing a shutout. The entire Scots' defense played very well.

The loss left MC with a disappointing 2-7 record. The Scots play their final match at home on Saturday, October 31, against Tennessee Tech.

Fernando Delfino displays his skill which won the Scots six goals in their match against Milligan College.

In the long run it's an accomplishment

By Steve Arnold

As stated last week when the gun fires all that stands between you and the finish line is 26 miles. Well, last Sun. the gun fired and 3 hours 49 min. and 40 seconds later Charles Melton crossed the finish line of the N.Y. Marathon. Due to doctors orders John Sanders had to withdraw the day of departure due to a stress fracture in his right leg. For his first trip to N.Y. Charles toured the city the hard way—Rising at 5:30 to catch a bus to the race by 7:30 all runners had to lie around in provided tents until the race started at 10:30. Due to the helicopters, airplanes and the Goodyear Blimp, not a gun was fired but a cannon. "Running through over 2 million people was a big boost" Charles said. In asking Charles how he felt right before the start he replied,"Relaxed, felt like I would have no trouble and knew I had a long run in front of me." At the 15 mile mark Charles had an 8 min/mile pace with no problem. I asked him if at any time during the race did he want to quit. He replied, "Yes. At the 20 mile mark my body hit the wall. What runners call using up all the glycogen in the muscles. My body just didn't want to go any farther." "At this point is when I told myself I never want to run again. Personally, I hit the wall everyday climbing those 4 flights of stairs to my dorm room." After going 2 more miles, Charles stopped, walked 1/4 mile, stretched, then finished the race with support from the crowd which at times encouraged him to pace faster than he wanted. But not long after that, Charles crossed the finish line with one huge feeling of accomplishment. And exhastion. Charles did mention ever so slightly that his time would have been faster had he not paced along beside this 22 yr. old blonde. Only kidding. Congratulations Charles and take those 2 weeks and rest up. Maybe when you rest up you can teach me how to pace and I may go next year with pencil and address book in hand.

Intramurals Kick Off

By Kenny Martin

The intramural program at Maryville College is alive and well. The program provides friendly competition, recreation, and relaxation for the MC community.

Football is the only sport being offered at the present. The Talliwackers are leading the field of three teams with a 2-0 record. They are followed by the 69ers with a 1-1 record, and Shaved Fish with a 0-2 record.

The program is headed by Mr. David Cooper, with Kim Allen, Jeff Guillaume, and Sandy Rabun acting as student assistants for this year.

The next sport being offered is volleyball. Rosters are available in the building, so get a team together and have some fun.

Scots Suffer Major Defeat

By Steve Arnold

No Hickory Dickorys this week, no comeback paragraphs and no jokes about the Scots looking like they have returned from competing in a Demolition Derby without the use of cars. The Scots returned home last Sat. pretty banged up with injuries after losing only their second game of the year; this one to highly ranked Millsaps by the score of 33-6. Only one comment concerning the course offered winter term by the defense has been cut to only a half credit. Not a bad first half for the Scots though as they trailed by only 3-0 with only 7 seconds left before half. The Scots were very much still in the ballgame. What may have been a lift for Millsaps was scoring a TD in those last seconds on a 25 yd. pass to put them ahead 10-0 at intermission. Sure, the Scots have come from further behind than this but this was not to be the case Sat. as Millsaps scored 16 pts. in the third period and added seven more in the final period. In taking the victory by 27 pts. the Scots did manage a TD in the final period as Moyer completed a 29 yd. pass to Wheatley; the 2 pt. conversion failed giving the Scots their only pts. of the game. Statistics wise the Scots didn't fair too well either. MC had only 7 first downs, threw 5 interceptions and only had the ball for 18½ minutes. Positive aspects from Ogden for the Scots saw linebacker Adair having 24 tackles (14 unassisted), Bob McQuade having 26 tackles (11 unassisted) and Alex Albert having 15 tackles (10 unassisted). Coach Ogden state that "Alex played the greatest game he has ever played for us. He was all over the field and firing everybody up." Ogden stated after the game, "Anytime you have a team as young as ours, you can do some things on pure talent, sooner or later youth or inexperience catches up with you though." After the game Ogden said that "the team's attitude was about as positive as you could expect it to be." "Nobody quit." Coach also stated that "After the game in the dressing room after their prayer and the talk by the coaches, we (coaches) asked them if they had anything to say." The reply was, "Yeah, let's go get Randolph Macon." Now even with this loss the Scots still stand in second place with W&L in the O.D.A.C. race with both teams at 3-1. Millsaps is not in the O.D.A.C. Guess who is in 1st place at 2-0. Right. R.M. Now a Scot win Sat. would clinch at least a tie for the O.D.A.C. championship. Help the Scots give R.M. their Halloween treatment MC style by giving the Scots your support Sat. at 1:30.

Lady Scots Ranked Fourth Second Week

By Robin Rimmer

The Lady Scots were ranked fourth in the nation again this past week among NCAA Division III schools. This poll is decided weekly by the National NCAA Division III Volleyball Committee.

Last Wednesday, the Lady Scots defeated King College by scores of 15-5, 15-7, and 15-11. On Thursday, they traveled to Dayton, Tenn. to play Bryan and Covenant College. The Lady Scots defeated Bryan in the first match by scores of 15-12 and 15-13.. In the second match, they defeated covenant by scores of 15-4 and 15-11.

Coach Sharon Brown was pleased with the team's victories this past week. Coach Brown said, "the team was looking a lot better, especially in the match against Bryan."

This week, The Lady Scots will travel to Johnson City to play ETSU. Friday they will leave for Milligan College for the Milligan Invitational Tournament. The Lady Scots won the tournament last year. Good luck this weekend, Ladies!!

Soccer Club Triumphs Saturday

The Women's Soccer Club defeated the Knoxville Women's Soccer League (KWSL) 5-4 in their first victory of the season Saturday.

Mary Hughes, performing a "hat trick" kicked in three goals to be the team's high scorer. Lori Winiarski scored two goals, and Beth Neil assisted on two goals. The first half was dominated by Maryville with the Ladies scoring four goals, and KWSL gaining only one goal. In the second half, KWSL turned around and came back with three goals.

Refereeing the match were James Hamilton and Glenn Stout.

After the match, Cathy Angell talked about the Women's performance. "We played really well in the first half—had a real tight defense. We tired in the second half, which is when the other team really came alive. This made for a close game."

The Women's Soccer Club meets UT Wednesday at 4:30. In their last game, the Ladies are pitted against Georgia Tech on Sunday at 2:00

For The Record

By Kevin Crothers

Genesis—isn't that Phil Collins' backup group? Longtime Genesis fans may wonder whether the group that has survived the loss of three founding members can cope with the massive commercial success of Collins' solo project. After the poor reception given their abysmal last album, "Duke," many thought that Genesis would go the way of the $3.99 lp. Thankfully, Genesis has re-emerged with an often-brilliant new album, "Abacab."

The album opens with the title tune, featuring punchy bass, prominent drums, flashy keyboards and the distinctive vocals of Phil Collins—typical Genesis. Unfortunately, the album hits rock-bottom on the next song, "No Reply At All," a flagrant rip-off of Collins' "Missed Again," that features the Earth, Wind and Fire horns. While Genesis has occasionally had mid-chart success, never have they aimed so blatantly at the heartstrings and pursestrings of Mid-Western housewives. Thankfully, the rest of the album maintains the usual Genesis high standard. Highlights include the aforementioned "Abacab," "Dodo" and "Lurker," a seven-and-a-half minute suite, and "Who Dunnit?" which is possibly the most bizarre song that Genesis has ever recorded. One should hope that Genesis continues to produce fine music without blatant attempts at A.M. airplay.

market from profits in the regulated market).

The Federal Communications Commission, responsible for oversight of the regulated portions of the communications industry, has been proceeding independently with AT&T reorganization. A 1980 FCC order to restructure along the same lines as the Senate bill is now scheduled to take effect in January 1983. In the absence of Congressional action the FCC conception of Baby Bell could be tied up by court challenges over conflict with the 1956 consent order.

The General Accounting Office, an agency of Congress, has criticized the FCC decision favoring the subsidiary form of organization. The GAO believes the FCC would have difficulty effectively monitoring relations between the regulated parent and the unregulated subsidiary. (Wall St. J., 23 Sep 81). The possibility exists that AT&T would develop the subsidiary's lines while allowing its own to deteriorate. This could force competitors to use inferior lines of regulated AT&T while the unregulated, more progressive and efficient subsidiary would not be required to give access to competitors. All profits go into the same pockets.

Still another facit of the AT&T story is found, perhaps unexpectedly, in the government's ongoing seven year antitrust suit against AT&T now in federal district court. While the White House has said it would drop the case if Congress enacted a measure substantially like Sen. Packwood's (Wall St. J., 8 Sep 81, p.3), Judge Harold Green seized the occasion of a recent company motion for dismissal to indicate the evidence "tends to show"...the "Bell System has violated the antitrust laws in a number of ways over a lengthy period of time." (Wall St. J., Sep 81, p.4).

This story has no conclusion. Rep. Timothy Wirth (D., Colo.), chairman of the Telecommunications subcommittee in the House of Representatives, is expected to introduce a slightly different House bill later this month.

For Better Energy

Knock On Wood

By Allison Perry

Innovations in energy use are being presented by Maryville College's new wood-fired boiler system. We will convert our present gas and oil fueled system to one using wood, a renewable energy resource.

According to Ray Dirkson, engineer and affiliated with Maryville College's Business Office, this new system will save the college one hundred thousand dollars per year in energy cost.

The wood being burned is scrap wood-waste material that would otherwise serve no purpose. In the state of Tennessee there is enough wood of this sort to supply over 500 institutions with a wood burning system.

On October 28th, a "Wood Energy Project Preview" was presented at the project site. President Wayne Anderson presided with guests such as Charles "Chili" Dean, TVA Chairman and Robert P. Kennel, Ultra systems representative. A close analysis of the program and its importance were the gist of the presentation. "Maryville College's new wood-fired boiler system is expected to reduce significantly energy costs at the Tennessee College and will serve as a model for use of wood energy by other institutions of similar size," stated Congressman John J. Duncan. Maryville will be one of the first colleges in the nation actually to use wood energy in its regular heating operations.

For the past four years through assistance from TVA, MChas studied various wood energy heating systems. President Anderson said the cost savings and the ability to use a renewable evergy resource from local business encouraged the college to make the conversion.

This is an opportunity to develop a model energy conservation project that is worthy of emulation by a variety of organizations. Our new wood energy system will be open to visitors during next year's 1982 World's Fair being held in Knoxville.

The project involves installation of a new wood fired boiler in the steam plant building, construction of a 50 foot storage silo and covered shed, and upgrading of present steam lines on campus. The entire system is set to be completed and in operation by early next year in order to realize savings during the 1981-82 heating season.

Ultrasystems, Inc., specializing in planning, design, engineering and construction of wood energy systems, is under contract to TVA in assisting MC with the wood-fired boiler system. The system has been approved by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Ray Dirkson stated that the total amount of pollutants will be less than with our current system using gas and oil. Wood burning does not produce the hazardous sulfur and acid rain of the fossil fuel we are now using in our heating system at Maryville College.

MC EXPOsed To The World's Fair

By Jeff Hayes

Energy Expo '82 will certainly benefit Knoxville by bringing in millions of people from the world over. MC also stands to benefit in certain areas.

MC is an application distribution satellite station for employment in the Fair. Applications will be available after February 1 with job openings ranging from vendors and waitresses to technicians.

All employees will receive the same orientation so that all will be able to answer basic questions about the Fair and direct tourists. This session will be at the end of April just prior to the May1 opening date.

The Expo will run from May1 to October 31 and be open from 9 am to midnight.

Students and faculty will be able to buy season tickets at a cut price for groups of ten or more. The price will be $55.00 as compared to the standard $60 and the at-the-gate price of $9.95 per day. These tickets will be nontransferable and must be personalized with the owner's photograph. They will be available from the Continuing Education Department during November and December.

MC hopes to use the Expo for recruiting new students. The college will not have proper space in the Expo (there were only two remaining lots at the time of this interview and they were $75,000 per lot). Brochures and printed information will be the principle means of MC visibility, yet with the number of people expected we should contact many prospective students.

While neighboring colleges are cancelling their summer programs and renting their summer space for Fair prices (UT is charging $38 per night), MC is continuing with its summer programs of band camps and conferences. The College feels that their "Friends of the College" are more important because they are the ones who will be returning to the campus year after year.

The College has however, reserved a dorm for June to be available for Alumni and parents of students. MC is offering a package of 3 days and 3 nights plus breakfast on each morning for an appropriate price.

For ticket information dial 971-1600 at the Bank of Maryville. If you have further questions contact Ms. S. M. Atchley in the Continuing Education Department.

Other Opinions Cited In Controversy

The Highland Echo has printed this editoral in full from the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times. It is our hope that you will think about the arguments which are lodged here and will respond to them.

Quite naturally, we have recieved many letters relative to the merits of the proposed highway Tenn. 73 connector from Morganton Road at Circle Drive to Washington Street at Maryville College. Many of these have stated their opinions just as we have and some have had very vituperative comments not related to the issue at hand.

Just for the sake of clarity, let us look at some of the points brought up by the opposition just as they did some of the factors with which we examined the project.

The 18-wheeler complaint. A two-hour survey found none of these on any of the route leading into this area. Parkways highly discourage trucks and these will be minimized on other parts of State Highway 73.

The Fort Craig access for student pedestrians. A survey found only two elementaty school students walking to school across the route of the proposed road. One of these was nearly hit on a morning of the survey by a car because there wer no traffic signals there. There were three Maryville College students or walking across the route to the college.

The cut-off from downtown Maryville. Another survey was taken of the pedestrian traffic. On College Street, seven went to Maryville and 11 came into the college 3:32 to 4:30p.m., the most active part of the day. At the same time, six persons walked toward town, two went toward the college on Court Street and four students went down the railroad tracks which will be crossed by the parkway.

Too much noise. Modern road-building techniques involving sound barriers have reduced such noise to a minimum, especially when 18-wheelers are not involved. Cuts, trees, shrubbery and other means can be utilized for an effective reduction.

Displacement of people. Between 22 and 25 percent of the American families move their place of residence each year. While no move can be made that is not traumatic to someome, moving has become an accepted practice of modern society. Ask any of the real estate firms here about the authenticity of these figures.

Five-lane hurdle. There are now two four-lane roads (Highland and Harper) and one three-lane between that section of Maryville and Alcoa. These traffic barriers have not disturbed long-standing patterns of people movement. Why should a five-lane road with well-designed pedestrian signalling do any more?

Closing of roads. No road will be closed, only an exit. Several streets affected are already over their traffic limit at certain times of the day and flow at these points will be greatly improved with signalling.

High level of opposition. We have received no letters in support of this project but, when we read what has been written to us, we can understand the reluctance of anyone to stick their necks out. One college professor whose walk to work will be disrupted stirred up the college and a school teacher also personally involved had her class write and distribute flyers against the proposal. Such reaction are suspect to a true evaluation of support as are petitions whose signatures often reflect a desire to get rid of the petition circulator.

The Maryville College board has determined there are certain factors about the road it dislikes but there areothers that are appealing. The state has told college officials that it will take care of some of these by road design and that reasonable efforts will be made to overcome others. Until the extent of these are known and what impact they will have on the college determined, no action will be taken.

It would be nice to avoid controversy but, as we stated in a previous editorial on this subject, nothing constructive was ever done without opposition. We do not condemn those who oppose this project because their homes or businesses are threatened buy the case against the connector is weakened with arguments that simply will not bear close examination.

Playmakers Debate Question Of Life

Orderly Tommy Brown clowns for the amusement of Kathy Long in th Maryville College Playhouse production of Whose Life Is It Anyway?

The Maryville College Playhouse is scheduled to open this fall on Friday, November 6. The play selected is a modern drama entitled WHOSE LIFE IS IT ANYWAY? Claire Harrison, the main character, confined to a hospital bed unable to move her body from the neck down, will touch the hearts of many Maryville College playgoers.

WHOSE LIFE IS IT ANYWAY?, written by Brian Clark, deals with the tears and laughter experienced by sculptor Claire Harrison whose wpinal cord is severed in a car accident. Harrison whose spinal cord With no prospect of recovery, Claire conducts a rebellion against her doctors by demanding to be released from the hospital upon which she will certainly die. But in her battle to choose death over a life of immobility, Claire releases a barrage of wit and cynicism as seen in her flirtations with John, the hospital's southern "punk" orderly, her jokes about her sexual incapacity with the young, tender-hearted student, Miss Sadler and her request of the hospital "cheerer-upper" social worker Mrs. Boyle for a reading machine book entitled SCULPTING WITH NO HANDS.

Perhaps the success of WHOSE LIFE IS IT ANYWAY? is due, according to New York Times critic Richard Eder, to the fact that it "is a battle of ideas and a battle for life." After a successful run in London with Tom Conti playing the lead role in the original male version, it arrived with him in New York at the Trafalgar in April 1976 as "a rare successful effort to fuse a tense and provocative argument...with a play that lives and moves" by Eder's standards. Although the male leading role was changed to a female one with actress Mary Tyler Moore in the role of Claire, the play has not lost its appeal. As playwright Clark concludes the final scenes with Claire's hospital room converted into a courtroom scene with doctors, lawyers, and a judge deciding on the right to die, the audience must leave with a host of complex and feeling questions: Is life a right or a duty? Do doctors have the right to usurp our decisions for what they consider our own good?

The Maryville College Playhouse has chosen to present the feminine rewrite with Maryville College junior Kathy Long as the leading character. Several old and several new talents of Maryville College both under the lights and in the shadows of this play make it a unique dramatic experience for Maryville College and for the audience.

WHOSE LIFE IS IT ANYWAY? runs two weekends, opening Friday, November 6 at 8:15p.m. Other evening performances are Saturday, November 7, and Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, November 12, 13, and 14. One matinee is scheduled for Wednesday, November 11 at 2:45. Matinee tickets will sell for $1. Evening performance prices are $4 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens. Reservations may be made by phoning Maryville College during business hours.

Circle-K Is Well Rounded

By Brad Gore

Have you noticed the reclaimed picnic area in the college woods or have you wondered who did that great job of painting the endzones for Homecoming? Perhaps you've asked yourself who helped clean out the Alumni Gym and helped with the Craft's Fair. Well the organization responsible for all of these activities is the Circle-K Club.

The Circle-K Club is sponsored by the Kiwanis Clubs of Alcoa and Maryville with representatives Dr. Ramger and Major Larry Martin respectively. The Circle-K Club, with special thanks to Bill Slater, cleaned the picnic area and refurbished it with picnic tables and fireplace for college and community use.

They are also now activily involved with the Big Brother/Big Sister program. This program enables foster children to spend time with someone they can relate with and share their concerns.

Last year Circle-K took, as a group, some of their children to the zoo and a dairy farm as well as spent time with the children on a one-to-one basis on weekends.

The Circle-K Club is looking for interested people who would like to help with on-campus projects and perhaps enjoy becoming a Big Brother/Big Sister. For those who wish to become active with Circle-K please contact: Ed Welch or Don Xiques.

Where There's Smoking There Could Be Fire

By Traci Fraser

"Because of the fire hazard, no smoking will be allowed..." - this note is rapidly becoming familiar to students attending activities in the Alumni Gym. Although it is an inconvenience to smokers, it is important that this policy be observed.

The fire hazard comes not only from the fact that the gym is constructed of wood, but also because Maintenance parks their trucks beside the building. If it should catch fire, it could spread to those trucks. Until further precautions are taken, the no smosmoking policy will remain in effect.

Student Programming Director Sharon Crane pointed out that the policy was not made to annoy smokers, but for everyone's protection. She said that an art student is needed to design a No Smoking sign for the gym that is both decorative and functional. Students with ideas should contact her regarding the project.

Scots Turn Tricks On Macon

By Steve Arnold

Did you ever think that the MC Scots could be so courteous as they were Saturday? The team must have known that R-M could not get home in time to go trick or treating, so the Scots gave them some of their own "tricky treaties" before they left.

From the start though it looked as if R-M might end up with the bag of goodies when, with 4:03 left in the first period, they struck with a 76 yard TD pass from Tate to Ganny. The point after was good and R-M led 7-0. Moving into the second period it was ; who wants the football? After several plays Evangelesti fumbled and R-M took over with the ball still on the 25. Both teams exchanged punts, and R-M started their second scoring drive on their own 45 yard line. 11 plays later RM kicked a 30 yard run by Surrency, a 20 yard pass to Scotti, and a10 yard run by O'Brien. Moyer then came in for the injured O'Brien, and with 3:01 left fired a 10 yard pass to Scotti for the first Scot TD. The Scots, still having trouble converting points afters, missed again and found themselves trailing by a 10-6 score.

Forcing RM to punt from their own end zone, MC's Bob Mc Quade soared over the line, blocked the punt and when the ball came down, the Scots John Watson fell on it in the end zone and the Scots had struck again. Again the attempt for 2 points failed and the Scots took momentum and a 12-10 lead into the locker room at the half. The Scots opened up the an 8 point margin with 9:06 left in the third period Mike Surrency ran in from 3 yards out for a Scot TD, the point after missed again and the Scots led 18-10. RM did not quit though. They marched right back down the field in 18 plays, and with 3:12 left in the third period, a 4 yard run by Tally made the score 18-16 MC. Going for 2 points and an 18-18 tie. The Scots started off the final period on a scoring note when Surrency ran 25 yards for another Scot TD; you can guess about the point after and the Scots led 24-18. RM then drove 82 yards to the MC 16 yard line, where they fumbled, and Carbonneau for the Scots recovered. MC could have put the game out of reach after driving to the RM 5 yard line, but the Wasps recovered a Surrency fumble and with 4:45 left in the game, RM started their final drive. RM drove to the MC 48 yard line with 50 seconds left. A pass to the 15 yard line was knocked down by the Scots' Anagnostis, and RM still had a chance. Anagnostis gave them their last chance for the last time as he picked off the next pass on the 20 yard line to put the victory away for the Scots and assured them of at least a tie for the ODAC championship.

Scots Shine In Soccer Final

By Mike Weiss

The Scots' soccer program, which has suffered from growing pains in its first full varsity season, got a big boost last Saturday as the MC squad soundly defeated Tennessee Tech in the season's finale, 4-1.

The early segment of the match was marked by lethargy on the part of both sides. But Eddie Delfino turned the key in the Scots' ignition when he carried in his fourth goal of the year from twenty-five yards out on right wing, putting MC in front, 1-0. Ken Davidson got his third score of the season when a long throw-in from Mark Burnett was relayed by Fernando Delfino. Fernando blasted his tenth goal of the year in to give Maryville a 3-0 halftime advantage.
